Tennessee, Springfield, September 29-October 2.
Pennsylvania, Williamsport, September 29-October 3.
Montana, Kalispell, October 1-4.
Washington (East), Spokane, October 3-6.
Maryland, Walkersville, October 4-6.
New York, Gloversville, October 5-9.
Kansas, Salina, October 10-13.
Oregon, McMinnville, October 10-13.
Delaware, Smyrna, October 11-13.
Oklahoma, Enid, October 12-16.
Nebraska, Lincoln, October 13-17.
Indiana, Wabash, October 13-16.
Connecticut, New London, October 17-19.
Colorado, Pueblo, October 17-19.
Massachusetts, Hyannis, October 17-19.
Alabama, Albany, October 17-19.
Illinois, Decatur, October 17-20.
Ohio, Findlay, October 17-20.
South Dakota, Mitchell, October 18-23.
Vermont, Burlington, October 24-26.
Iowa, Ostaloosa, October 24-27.
Arkansas, Paragould, October 25-27.
New Jersey, Camden, November 9-10.

WHICH WILL YOU BE?

This little woman went to the primary,
This little woman stayed t' hum,
This little woman talked dry,
This little woman kept mum,
This little woman cried vote, vote, vote, all the way home.

L. A. Woodford,
Wisconsin S. T. I. Superintendent.

In tolerating, abetting and adopting an attitude of flippancy toward any law we are giving the forces of law and order an undercut from which they will not recover for a generation, and we as a people shall suffer the consequences. Let us not deceive ourselves; if the fiddler plays the dancers pay.—Lafayette (Ind.) Journal.

For God and Home and Every Land

Time of Prayer—Noontide

"It is always noontide somewhere,
And across the awakening continents,
From shore to shore, somewhere,
Our prayers are rising ever more."

Prayer

Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee. —Isa. 26:20.

There is a place where thou canst touch the eyes
Of blinded men to instant perfect sight;
There is a place where thou canst say, "Arise,"
To dying captives bound in chains of might;
There is a place where thou canst reach the store
Of hoarded gold and free it for the Lord;
There is a place upon some distant shore
Where thou canst send the worker or the Word;
There is a place where God's resistless power
Responsive moves to thine insistent plea;
There is a place, a simple trysting place,
Where God himself descends and fights for thee.
Where is that blessed place? Dost thou ask where?
O soul, it is the secret place of prayer!

We pray, O Lord, that we may find a place in thy vineyard where we can do something for thee day by day! We seek from thee the willingness to toil, the ability to watch, the power to pray. Amen.—Record of Christian Work.

Change of Address

Miss Lella M. Sewall, national superintendent of Flower Mission and Relief Work, has changed her residence. Her new address is 1683 Beacon St., Brookline, Massachusetts.

Mrs. Martha M. Allen, national superintendent of Medical Temperance, has appointed Mrs. G. A. Droll, state superintendent of the department for Missouri, to fill the place made vacant by the death of her associate in the work, Miss Bertha Bradley. Mrs. Droll's address is 2301 E. 14th St., Kansas City, Mo.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. HEADQUARTERS

GENERAL OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL.
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, FARGO, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA.
TREASURER
MRS. MARGARET C. MUNNS, EVANSTON, ILL.

1730 Chicago Avenue, Evanston, Ill.

REST COTTAGE

RED LETTER DAYS

September 28—Children's Harvest Home (Birthday of Frances E. Willard).
October 29—World's Temperance Sunday.

SUBJECTS AND RULES FOR PRIZE ESSAY AND POSTER CONTESTS—1922-1923

DEPARTMENT OF SCIENTIFIC TEMPERANCE INSTRUCTION IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES

Mrs. Elizabeth O. Middleton, National Director

It is conceded that the foundation for the Eighteenth Amendment was laid in the school room, through scientific temperence instruction given during the years preceding the passage of this Amendment. This foundation must not be weakened. The children of this generation must be taught that alcohol is present in beer, wine and home-brew, and that alcohol, wherever found, is a poison. Nicotine is a poison. Habit-forming drugs are dangerous. In addition to the regular physiology and hygiene text book teaching, we recommend the essay and poster contests method for inculcating temperance truths.

COLLEGE CONTESTS

Subjects: (a) Best methods of Meeting the Wine and Beer Propaganda.
(b) The Menace of Narcotics.

Number of words: Maximum 1500; minimum 1000.

Markings: The essay shall be graded on clearness of thought, accuracy of statement and originality of presentation.

Prize: $100.00. Requirement: Not less than ten colleges in competition.

In a contest for a college prize, a local contest is held with a local prize offered, and the prize essay entered, together with the winning essays from other colleges in the state, for a state prize, the essay winning state prize being entered in the national contest. If there can be no state contest, the local prize winning essays are entered directly in the national contest.

TEACHERS' CONTESTS

(Open to school principals and experienced teachers.)

Subject: Best Methods of Teaching Temperance Scientifically. (Correlating health and temperance teaching according to present-day methods.)

Number of words: Maximum 1500; minimum 1000.

Markings: Essay shall be graded entirely upon presentation of subject.

Prize: $50.00.

NORMAL AND TRAINING SCHOOL CONTESTS

(Open to students in Normal and Training Schools.)

Subject: Best Methods of Teaching Temperance.

Number of words: Maximum 1500; minimum 1000.

Markings: Essay shall be graded entirely upon presentation of subject.

Prize: $50.00.

In both Teacher and Normal and Training School Contests essay should conform to the state law which requires that "Physiology and hygiene, with special reference to the effects of alcoholic drinks and other narcotics and stimulants on the human system" must be taught in all public schools.

Rules of entrance same as College Contest.

HIGH SCHOOL CONTESTS

Subjects: (a) Why There Should Be No Wine and Beer Amendment to the Volstead Act.
(b) The Cost of Cigarets—Financial, Physical, Mental, Moral, Social.

Number of words: Maximum 1000; minimum 700.

Markings: Essay shall be graded three-fourths on subject matter and one-fourth on style and grammatical excellence.

Prizes: Senior-Junior $30.00; Sophomore-Freshman $20.00.

SEVENTH AND EIGHTH GRADES

Subjects: (a) Why the Sale of Wine and Beer Should Not Be Legalized.
(b) The Advantages of a Non-Smoker Against a Smoker.

Number of words: Maximum 700; minimum 500.

Markings: Essay shall be graded one-half on subject matter and one-half on originality, grammatical excellence and general appearance.

Prize: $15.00.

FIFTH AND SIXTH GRADES

Subject: (a) The Danger in Wine and Beer.
(b) The Danger Rolled Up in a Cigaret.

Number of words: Maximum 500; minimum 300.

Markings: See Seventh and Eighth Grades.

Prize: $10.00.

NOTE: In high school and grade school contests, every pupil in the room is ex-

(Continued on Page Twelve)

Over-match the A. A. P. A.

Every New Member for the W.C.T.U. Is That Much More Power Registered in Defense of Prohibition

TO GAIN MEMBERS POSTERIZE YOUR COMMUNITY WITH THESE STRIKING NEW POSTERS

(Size 19 x 25. Price, each, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00.)

For Their Sakes Enforce the Law.
Booze Stands Between —.
Forge a Chain.

HAVE YOU SEEDED DOWN THE FIELD IN YOUR VICINITY WITH THESE NEW MEMBERSHIP COMPELLERS?

IF NOT, DO IT NOW!

The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment Appeals to Millions By Way of the Printed Page
Do Thou Likewise

We List Herewith SPECIAL HELPS

Order in quantities, enclose in envelopes with membership cards and a personal note of invitation, and hand or mail to the women of your church, missionary society, club, lodge, etc.

Titles of Leaflets and Prices. Each Leaflet a Winner.

(Leaflets, 2 cents each)

Why You Should Join the Half-Million Women of the W. C. T. U. Price, per 100, 50 cents; per 50, 30 cents.

Why I Am a White Ribboner Today.

Why a Million Members?

Price, per 50, 25 cents; per 100, 45 cents.

OTHER LEAFLETS:

W. C. T. U. Co-operation the Community Keynote.
Jubilee Membership Campaign Songs.
Mobilize a Million Members.

Price, per 50, 35 cents; per 100, 60 cents.

Declaration of Principles.
Purpose and Scope of the W. C. T. U.
Recruiting for Membership.

Price, per 100, 20 cents; per 50, 15 cents.

PLEDGES AND CARDS

Membership Appeal card, with vignette and autograph signature of Anna A. Gordon. Per 100, 50 cents.

W. C. T. U. Coupon Pledge. Per 100, 45 cents.

Y. P. B. Invitation Card. Per 100, 50 cents.

Order in quantities, enclose in envelopes with membership cards and a personal note of invitation, and hand or mail to the women of your church, missionary society, club, lodge, etc.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE,
Evanston, Illinois

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

DECREASED DRINKING AMONG STUDENTS SHOWN BY SURVEY

The Rev. Franklin C. Southworth, president of the Meadville Theological School, alarmed by rumors about the increase of drinking among students, four months ago addressed a letter of inquiry to the deans of 486 American colleges and now publishes a resume of replies received from 308 of them, including all the leading eastern universities. He says:

"The tenor of the replies received was overwhelmingly in favor of the proposition that instead of an increase in the number of students addicted to the use of intoxicating liquor since the passage of the prohibition amendment, there had been a marked decrease.

The main findings may be tabulated as follows:

No. of Institutions	No. of Students	Reply
111	125,960	No increase
133	181,009	Decrease
16	6,929	No drinking ever
13	44,741	Increase
35	?	Noncommital

As has been pointed out before in these columns, an exaggerated interest in drink because of its prohibition and the difficulty of obtaining it was manifest in the first year of the law's enforcement and has since diminished. Mr. Southworth says:

In the vast majority of American colleges the drink problem has ceased to exist. It will continue to be a problem in some of the metropolitan colleges until the law is more successfully enforced in the cities themselves. Sporadic cases of drinking by college men attract far more attention than formerly and are, on account of the poorer quality of liquor consumed, attended by worse results. These cases, however, are becoming increasingly rare, and the sentiment of college students throughout the country is setting more and more strongly against the illicit use of liquor.

—The Survey, August 15.

North End Italian Y. P. B. Flying Squadron

N. Louise Rand, Director

The legislature of Massachusetts at its last session passed a concurrent law enforcement bill, which was duly signed by the governor, but the wets have secured 15,000 names to a petition for a referendum; consequently it goes to the people at the fall elections. The North End Italian Y. P. B., realizing the struggle that is ahead, felt it their duty and privilege to do all in their power to arouse the dormant temperance people to the situation, and for that purpose formed a Flying Squadron. Seven meetings have already been held, and more are planned for the fall. The enthusiastic singing and speaking of these young folks have undoubtedly stirred some of the indifferent members of the audiences. The educational value to the young people themselves of this effort can hardly be estimated, and other Branches are urged to adopt similar methods. The leader of the Branch takes her "Henry Ford" and has ridden over thirty miles to attend some meetings. On these trips the car is placarded front and back:

"Y. P. B. Flying Squadron
"18th Amendment"

This, of itself, we know must have set to talking thousands of people, and agitation is one of our most effective weapons.

DEANS OF WOMEN IN INSTITUTIONS OF HIGHER EDUCATION BELIEVE IN PROHIBITION

Never Revert to Old Order

Irma E. Voigt, Dean of Women, Ohio University

There can be no doubt in the mind of any fairminded person that the home life is far better for the women and children since prohibition has been effective. I have never heard an expression from any woman of my acquaintance against the Amendment. My personal opinion is that society will never revert to the old order. It may take a few years just as with any other world movement to bring into line that group of people who seem to find greater joy in law-breaking than law-keeping, but even in this short time the effect has been so marked on the health and prosperity of the American people that the sane-minded leaders will never be willing to destroy that effect.

Liquor Traffic Saps Life of the Nation

Jessie S. Ladd, Dean of Women, The University of Minnesota

According to my limited observation, women and children are much happier, and a load of misery has been lifted from many homes by the passage of the Eighteenth Amendment. I know of only one woman who does not heartily endorse prohibition.

Every year of my life I feel more strongly that the liquor traffic is responsible for most of the crime and wretchedness in the world. The estrangement of father, mother, and children, with its consequent wrecking of the home, saps the very life of our civilization.

Women, Law-Abiding and Loyal

Katharine S. Alvord, Dean of Women of DePauw University

The effect of prohibition on the home life of the working people has been distinctly to improve it. More homes are owned, more children receive schooling, and wives are better cared for. I believe that prohibition will promote prosperity, health and happiness. We may expect violations of the law for the present but it is the duty of intelligent people to uphold the Constitution.

Prohibition Promoter of Health

Thyrsa W. Amos, Dean of Women, University of Pittsburgh

My profession does not put me in close contact with classes where I could study the effect of prohibition. From the little I have observed, however, I am convinced that the condition of women and children is much improved by it. So far as I have heard women express themselves, no one has uttered a criticism of the Eighteenth Amendment. There is a strong feeling, however, that its enforcement is inadequate. There is a feeling at the same time, I think, that no one could expect any such radical amendment to be perfectly enforced—at least not for a decade or two. Personally, I feel that national prohibition is a promoter of health, prosperity and happiness, not only in the family, but for society generally.

I lived too long in the state of Kansas and observed too closely the effect of prohibition there not to be unqualifiedly for it.

For the Sake of the Children

Mrs. Elizabeth Harrison, President Kindergarten College of Chicago

Almost every woman I know, including our entire faculty, with one exception, and all our students, signed the petition for prohibition and have continued faithful to it. So far as I have had any opportunity to talk with members of the Chicago City Woman's Club, the Chicago Woman's Club, and the Kindergarten Club, each and all have favored national prohibition. I have known many homes made wretched by drink and many lives ruined by it, but never have I seen a home or an individual injured by prohibition.

The Women of My Race Believe in Prohibition

Mrs. Booker T. Washington, Tuskegee Institute, Alabama

The home life of the people I know has been greatly and wonderfully improved since prohibition went into operation. I was on the train the other day and a very prominent man said to me that since the women helped to bring about prohibition, colored men are buying homes and treating their families with far more respect. I am constantly visiting homes, and I am sure I make no mistake in saying the absence of liquor is a Godsend. The women of my acquaintance, by whom I mean the women of my race, believe absolutely in the Eighteenth Amendment and will stand by it.

To Help You Gain Members and Over-match the A. A. P. A.

Hand-to-Hand Work Is Best
Use These Helps
(Price 2 cents, except as noted)

LEAFLETS:

Purpose and Scope of the W. C. T. U.
What the W. C. T. U. Has Accomplished.
Help Those Women.
The Door of Opportunity.
Church Women and the New Day.
Declaration of Principles.
What Shall I Render?
Price, per 100, 20 cents; per 50, 15 cents.

As Thrilling as Romance.
The Story of the Crusade.
Why I am a White Ribboner Today.
Obligations of Victory.
Our Extension Program.
The Advantages of Organization.
Is It Right?
Handpicking.
Be a Million-aire.
Price, per 100, 45 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

Why You Should Join. (In colors.)
Price, per 100, 50 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

How to Prepare the Way for a Speaker.
How to Route Speakers.
An Organizing Institute.
Price, per 100, 35 cents; per 50, 20 cents.

Topical program for local Unions. Good for five months of 1922. Per copy, 5 cents; 25 copies, 75 cents; 50 copies, $1.25; 25 copies and package of helps, $1.25. (Please send remittance with order.)

The Woman of Today Studies Citizenship, Law, and Parliamentary Usage

You will find these helps satisfactory.

Gleason's Parliamentary Digest.
Price, paper, $1.50; cloth, $2.00.

Gleason's Parliamentary Digest Booklets for Beginners. Nos. 1 and 2. Price, each, 50 cents; per set of two, 85 cents.

Chart upon all Classified Motions.
Price, per dozen, 40 cents.

Drill on Precedence of Motions.
Price, per copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 30 cents.

PAMPHLETS:

A Manual of Law Enforcement.
Price, per copy, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00.

Studies in Government.
Price, per copy, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.50.

BOOKS:

The Woman Voter's Manual.
Price, $1.00.

The American Government.
Price, $1.50.

Course in Citizenship and Patriotism.
Price, $2.00.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

Subjects and Rules for Prize Essay and Poster Contests

(Continued from Page Ten)

pected to write. The teacher decides upon the best ten essays. A local contest is held and a local prize awarded the writer of the best essay. In the larger cities a second contest may be held between the different schools and a second local prize awarded. The prize essay of the city is then entered for the county prize or else forwarded to the state superintendent of Scientific Temperance Instruction for competition in the state prize essay contest. The state prize essay is forwarded to the National Director for entrance in the national contest.

POSTER CONTESTS

College or High School

Subject: Alcohol or Tobacco.
Size: 12x15 inches. Bristol board.
Prize: $10.00.

Grades

Subject: Alcohol or Tobacco.
Size: 12x15 inches. Bristol board.
Prize: $10.00.

NOTE: Grade essays must be in pupil's own handwriting. Other essays may be typewritten.

NOTE: Not more than one-fourth of essay should be copied from other writers, and where copied quotation marks must be used.

NOTE: Local prizes should be presented at a public meeting and where possible essays read.

NOTE: All essays and posters competing for national prizes must pass through the hands of the state superintendent of Scientific Temperance Instruction and be sent by her to the National Director not later than August 15, 1923.

HELPS FOR PREPARATION OF ESSAYS

Alcohol

Alcohol and the Human Body, Sir Victor Horsley, $1.25.
Gulick Hygiene Series of Physiologies, or any good text book on physiology.
Set of twelve posters, "Why America Went Dry." $1.50.
Graded Scientific Temperance Manual, 50 cents.
Package of leaflets, 25 cents.
Late copies of the Scientific Temperance and Law Enforcement edition of THE UNION SIGNAL, 5 cents per copy.

Tobacco

Physical Effects of Smoking. Fisher-Berry, $1.00.
Nicotine. Dr. Roman, 15 cents.
Graded Scientific Temperance Manual, 50 cents.
Posters: College Smokers and Non-Smokers, 15 cents; Cigarets Condemned, 10 cents; How the Smoker's Heart is Affected, Wm. McKeever, 2 cents.
Package of leaflets, 25 cents.

Law Enforcement and Benefits of Prohibition

Package of leaflets, 25 cents.
Late copies of the Law Enforcement edition of THE UNION SIGNAL, 5 cents.

Method of Teaching

Graded Scientific Temperance Manual, 50 cents.
A Course of Study for the Grades, 10 cents.
Tinling Booklets, set of 6, 95 cents.
Package of leaflets, 25 cents.
National W. C. T. U. Department of Scientific Temperance Instruction in Public schools and Colleges

This article will be printed in leaflet form. Order of
NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

Federal and State Co-operation for Law Enforcement

(Continued from Page Five)

I believe it is very important to constantly preach the doctrine that the people of the community are still responsible for the morals of that community and the law-abiding conduct of that community. If we can move on in that way, with the forty-eight smaller wheels within the one big wheel, I see no reason why all of these laws should not be thoroughly and properly enforced, just as laws have been enforced in the past. When, in the performance of their duty, these state officers find some very bad violation which comes within both the state and the Federal law, let them gather the evidence carefully and submit it to the Federal authorities, and let the case be brought into the Federal court and the offender be severely punished. On the other hand, let the Federal officials go ahead in the performance of their duty and the enforcement of the Federal laws to the best of their ability, giving their attention, in a large measure, to the source of the wrong.

It stands us in hand to be very careful to put honest men into public office, and we must be particularly careful about whom we put into positions for the enforcement of the liquor law, because they are surrounded by unusual temptations on account of the bribes offered by those who want to violate the law. These prohibition enforcement officers ought to be selected with great care and have at least some training to prepare them for their work. We need men of ability, but the very first quality needed is integrity and no man should be considered for a position in connection with the enforcement of the prohibition law who cannot furnish a history of a life of complete and unquestioned integrity.

5. There isn't any question in my mind but that we must concede that the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Law have brought into the courts as law violators a few men and women who would probably never have been in a criminal court if these laws had not been enacted. Those I particularly have in mind are some of our foreign people who are very fond of intoxicating liquor and actually think that it is necessary for their health and ability to do a good day's work. I am sorry about that phase of the matter; it is one of the things which disturb me. I think they are coming to a correct understanding of the situation and that, in time, we are going to be relieved of a large proportion of this class of offenders. The wrong which flows from this class of offenses is not the great big wrong which the law was aimed at and there is nothing about it which, in any degree, offsets the large measure of good which the law is doing.

6. The large majority of the men who are manufacturing whisky to sell, who are smuggling whisky into the country, and who are bootlegging whisky, are the very same men who were doing some unlawful things before this law was passed and would be engaged in unlawful things if we did not have this law now. They are the kind of men who are naturally dishonest and looking for some way of making a living by dishonest methods.

7. If a law is a good law and we thoroughly enforce it, then the people will find it out, be satisfied with it, and want to keep it. In the same way, if we enforce it thoroughly and it is a bad law, they will find out about it and want to get rid of it. If we have a law and do not enforce it, it is pretty difficult to have the people find out anything about it and no one can tell what they are likely to do with it. They may keep a very poor law on the statute books for many years if it is not enforced; or they may be disgusted with a very good law if it is not enforced, and repeal it. Therefore, if I were to name some one thing to be done for the best interests of the present law, I would say enforce it thoroughly; and in conclusion I repeat that in my judgment there is only one way to thoroughly enforce these laws which overlap the police power of the state, and that is by complete co-operation with the state authorities.

SEVEN!

The Perfect Number!

A Series of Seven New Leaflets for Immediate and Persistent Campaign Use Presenting

FACTS—FACTS—FACTS

TITLES OF LEAFLETS:

Women Want Prohibition.
Educators Commend Prohibition.
Labor Leaders Outspoken for Prohibition.
Manufacturers Approve Prohibition.
Bankers Believe in Prohibition.
Family Life Benefited by Prohibition.
Health Experts Favor Prohibition.

Price 2 cents each; per 100, 30 cents; per 1,000, $2.50.

NOW READY

New Temperance Day Program

For Public Schools. The Best Ever.

Order and place in your schools. Will help make temperance sentiment.

Price per copy, 5 cents; per doz., 45 cents; per 100, $3.00; per 1,000, $25.00. Less than 100 at dozen rate.

Patriotic Motion Song

"Loyal Temperance Soldiers." For L. T. L.'s, National Prohibition Guards, Sunday schools, and children everywhere. For immediate use during the summer campaigns.

Price, per copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 35 cents; per 100, $1.00.

Special

TWO NEW PROGRAMS FOR L. T. L.'S, NATIONAL PROHIBITION GUARDS, AND SUNDAY SCHOOLS

Uncle Sam's Prohibition Quiz. Testimony of ten noted Americans (Exercise for 11 boys or young men). Price, five cents per copy; per dozen, 50 cents.

Aunt Columbia's Prohibition Quiz. Testimony of ten noted American women. (Exercise for 11 girls or young women.) Price, five cents per copy; per dozen, 50 cents.

National W. C. T. U. Publishing House Evanston, Illinois

Twenty Years of Temperance Instruction

(Continued from Page Four)

minute talk on the subject. Next year, we think that we shall have high school students prepare some of these talks, and give them in each of the higher rooms of the elementary school.

The essays selected by the teachers to be submitted in the medal contest are signed by pseudonyms and sent to the W. C. T. U., to be graded by judges selected by the W. C. T. U. and the school, in consultation. The results are announced in the school and in the papers.

A public meeting is held in the assembly room of the high school where the winning essays are read, and the medals presented. The teachers get up a little program of songs, recitations, and drills to break the monotony of so many essays. This public meeting is always well attended and has value in encouraging teachers and pupils to continue the work. It also enlists the interest of the audience in the cause of temperance and the teaching of temperance in the schools.

Our long experience with co-operation between the schools and the W. C. T. U. in scientific temperance instruction has convinced us of its value.

1. The knowledge that the children receive through the lessons, and in writing the essays, year after year, is valuable protective knowledge. Health instruction, and the teaching of accident prevention, are coming to be regarded as more and more important and securing a prominent place in school programs. Instruction in the effects of habit-forming drugs is an important part of teaching, which is intended to safeguard health and life and form character.

2. The writing of the essays by all the children of the elementary and the high school gives a definiteness to the instruction required by law that it would be difficult to get in any other way. The medal contest arouses interest, and spurs effort. The public meeting, at which the winning essays are read and the medals presented, carries the interest over from year to year. It is educative to the community in the way of making stronger the sentiment against the use of harmful drugs, and in strengthening public support of the liquor and cigaret laws.

3. Improvement in composition throughout the school is an important by-product of the work. Here is one essay that has to be written every year, which is made much of and which is to be the student's best effort. For two or three weeks each year, the attention of every pupil in the school is focused upon a problem in composition. We take advantage of this situation to give all the children a summary and review of the principles of composition suitable to their various stages of advancement.

No Vacation for the Wet Forces

(Continued from Page Three)

adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment, and its prime mover was once a wet candidate for governor of a western state. In Ohio, it is reported that the petitions for a referendum to the people in November asking for an amendment to the Constitution for modification of prohibition—which has been refused by the secretary of state—were generally left in soft drink places and pool rooms for signatures. In Illinois, petitions have been circulated asking for the restoration of wine and beer. A correspondent of the Chicago Daily News calls attention to the fact that upon watching two people obtaining signatures to the petition, he noted that the physical characteristics of those approached were those of drunkards, entirely

The state of Kansas is watching the campaigns in the other states with much interest, it is said, as reminiscent of the "old days" of from twenty to forty years ago, when that commonwealth went through many of the same experiences she now beholds her neighbors undergoing. The liquor lobby; the liquor press, which repeatedly stated that prohibition was a failure and published news of all the violations possible to prove its contention; most dangerous of all, perhaps, the influences on elective officials,—all these tactics were used constantly, and Kansas has still to "watch out" for her public officials, since there are from time to time decided derelictions of duty in connection with law enforcement. Nevertheless, there is no one who will not admit that Kansas is practically a "bone-dry" state and has prospered thereby. And it remains for the other states in the Union to "hold fast" to the policies of Maine and Kansas, with prospect of like victory.

THOSE FOUR BEAUTIFUL SONGS

Are spreading through the land. Already thousands are singing them. They are "Hidden," "That City O'er the Sea," "May the Fire Fall," "We Shall Join the Shouting By and By." All for only 10 cents. Four lots of them for 25 cents. Or make it 35c and to the four lots we will add the fine 25c patriotic sheet song "The U. S. A. For Me."

REV. L. L. PICKETT, Wilmore, Ky.

Meet the Challenge with Facts

At the close of an editorial analysis of the Literary Digest's poll on prohibition the North American of Philadelphia says:

"The Literary Digest's canvass should bring high encouragement to the supporters of prohibition. It not only clearly demonstrates that repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment is impossible, but it reveals that there is only one dangerous issue to be met—the agitation for changing the Volstead Act so as to permit the sale of light wines and beers. Prohibitionists should promptly accept this challenge of the brewers and bootleggers, and meet it with facts and irrefutable arguments, the only weapons with which they have ever won.

"Let them impress upon the public mind that legalized sale of light wines and beers would bring back the licensed saloon, and that the licensed saloon inevitably would become a vast distributing agency for the bootleggers."

The Manufacturers' Record, in an editorial completely discredits the postal card vote being taken by the Literary Digest. It declares it is utterly untrustworthy for one reason because no organized effort is being made by anybody to get the questions answered by supporters of prohibition, and on the other hand several powerful wet organizations are making desperate efforts to get in every possible wet vote.

No Better Campaign Document

Than Our New Fan

Blue and white, with dry map, and eight pertinent quotations from eight prominent Americans. Each quotation a vote winner.

Use Them Liberally

At your Fairs, Open Air Meetings, in Waiting Rooms, Lodge Rooms, Churches, Rallies, Re-unions, etc., etc. Let our Campaign Fan talk for our Dry Law. Price, per 100, $5.00; per dozen, 70 cents. Please send remittance with order.

New Patriotic Prohibition Campaign Stickers

NOW IS THE TIME TO USE THEM HERE ARE THE TEXTS:

The 100 Per Cent American Respects and Obeys His Country's Laws.

Without Reverence for Law Nations Perish.

Prohibition Does Not Make Law Breakers, It Simply Reveals Them.

Obedience to Law Is an Essential Element in Patriotism.

These stickers are of different colors and shapes. Use them wherever stickers can be used, on packages, letters, etc. Price, per 100, 25 cents, of one kind, or assorted.

New Campaign Poster

Especially for Women

Title: VOTE RIGHT.

Attractively illustrated. Order in quantities, and use in all available places. Price, for single copies, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00; per 100, $7.50. Please send remittance with order.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

CROUP OR WHOOPING COUGH
ROCHE'S HERBAL EMBROCATION
Relieves promptly and safely. Effective in Bronchitis, Lumbago and Rheumatism.
All druggists or
W. EDWARDS & SON London, England E. FOUGERA & CO. 90-92 Beekman St. N.Y.

Stories, Poems, Essays and Plays Wanted

We teach you how to write; where and when to sell. Publication of your work guaranteed by new method. Walhamore Institute, Dept. J, Lafayette Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

To the friends of prohibition the name of Dr. William A. McKeever is a household word. He has long been a strong partisan of the cause of temperance, and his pen has contributed freely thereto. It is, therefore, with interest that his appointment as editor of the Golden Rule Magazine is noted. A college faculty man, educational writer and lecturer, and promoter of all phases of child welfare, Dr. McKeever has always wielded a large influence on the minds of thinking people, and through this magazine will no doubt be enabled to reach and help a still larger circle.

SEND FOR CANDY

To sell for us. Churches, Societies, Sunday Schools, Lodges, Schools, etc., make liberal profits handling our very popular assortments of 5c Chocolate Bars, etc. Send for Illustrated Circular, Price-list, Order Blank and full particulars. Our goods sell quickly. Prompt Express shipments.

FRED D. LESURE COMPANY
6 Broad St., Fitchburg, Mass.

Approaching Primaries

Arizona—September 12.
Colorado—September 12.
Louisiana—September 12.
Massachusetts—September 12.
Michigan—September 12.
Vermont—September 12.
Washington—September 12.
New York—September 19.

A Tarkington Story For 15c

$1000 Prize Book "Alice Adams" Sells at $2, But Here's a Chance to Get It For Almost Nothing.

Washington, D. C. (Special).—The enterprising editor of the Pathfinder has again drawn a real prize in securing for his million readers the rights to publish Booth Tarkington's newest and most wonderful $1000 Pulitzer Prize story "Alice Adams," of which hundreds of thousands of copies have already been sold, at $2 each. This amazingly beautiful story of present-day American life, written in Tarkington's most fascinating style, will begin in the Pathfinder Sept. 23 and be published complete in thirteen issues of that splendid paper. The editor says he will send the paper for this period—13 weeks—to new subscribers who write to The Pathfinder, 251 Langdon Station, Washington, D. C., and inclose 15 cents in coin or stamps. You can also order for your friends, at 15 cents each; but send at once so as not to miss the start of the story, Sept. 23. It costs the editor a lot of money to do this, but he believes the fact that the Pathfinder is growing so fast proves it pays to invest in new friends.

That Good-Citizenship Committee

Flora Swetnam

The young people of Surreyville were stirred to the uttermost. One of their number, a young man apparently of great promise, had suddenly been found to be a secret drinker and, in a moment of intoxication, had struck, and severely injured, his own father. Of course, people were shocked beyond measure. The Good-Citizenship committee of the young people's society promptly held a meeting to discuss the situation. They spoke of a time when Robert Carey had been a fellow member and then sorrowfully traced his downward course, as day after day he had drifted away from them.

"I don't believe Bob ever would have come to this," declared John Tilson, "if his father hadn't agreed to have him assist the wharfmaster during his leisure time."

"That's it," seconded James Fisher. "Mr. Cartmel wanted me for that place, but Dad set his foot down. He said there was too rough a crowd down there at the river front."

"I remember," chimed in Zeph Hall, "that Bob's father said that he had enough confidence in his son to risk the danger of evil surroundings."

"I guess Father knew better than I did," smiled James, "though at the time I was awfully disappointed. Now I have work in the bank for my spare hours, and I make fully as much and under better conditions."

"But we have called this meeting," said Burt Hardin, "to discuss some way of assisting the mayor and council to keep law and order. Has anyone a suggestion?"

"This is mine," Harry Dunn spoke up, holding high a prohibition poster for their inspection.

"That's fine," cried John. "You mean, of course, to put it up somewhere."

"I'll make a dozen if you fellows will help me," replied Harry. "I want to get folks to stop to think. You know what the sermon last Sunday was about—that if we could make the right kind of sentiment, our problems would all be solved."

"Go to it," encouraged James. "We'll do all we can to assist and you are some artist."

"We'll put them in the post office," said Zeph. "Nearly everybody goes there, and will be sure to read what they have to say. They may wake up the public."

"I'll tell you," proposed John, "let's call on the mayor, in a body, and see if he won't help. I like Mr. Hartman. He's a good man, but many of the people have been so indifferent about supporting him he's about ready to give up trying to enforce the dry law."

"We mustn't let him do that," said Burt. "When shall we make that call?"

"Right now," replied James. "He's home Wednesday evenings, I think."

So the committee paid the visit. Mr. Hartman listened earnestly, then replied:

"I'm more than anxious, boys, to stop this illegal liquor traffic, but there's a bunch engaged in it that are slicker than eels. You think you've got one of them—then he's gone!"

"But if we'll get you some information, will you push things?" asked Burt.

"Now look here," said the mayor, "it would be better if you young people didn't get mixed up in this thing. Take my advice and let the matter be managed entirely by older heads."

"Well," said Harry, "it can't do any harm for me to put up my posters."

"Not a bit," agreed the mayor.

"And it won't hurt anything for us to keep our eyes peeled," added Zeph.

"If we learn of violators and bring you some sure-enough facts, will you do your part?" asked John.

"Yes, sir," was the hearty reply. "If I don't, I will resign from the office of mayor and they can get somebody else."

"All right, we'll see you again," and the boys took their departure at once.

Early next morning the five members of the committee filed into the editor's office. He greeted them pleasantly, but could not conceal his surprise.

"What can I do for you?" he inquired.

"We've come to ask a favor," replied Harry.

"And we hope you won't refuse," said John, "because we can't carry out our plans without your help."

"I think I can guess what the favor is. You want me to donate space for some purpose or other."

"That's it," laughed Burt. "Will you?"

"It depends on the amount you want and what you want to do with it."

Then the committee explained their purpose, each member doing his full share of the talking, and after some consideration, the editor agreed to try their plan for a time. They thanked him and left.

A half-hour later, Robert Carey, as he sat on the porch reading, had his turn at being surprised, for the five were bearing down upon him. At first, he acted as if he couldn't get away fast enough, but evidently decided to stand his ground. He greeted them coldly and motioned them to seats.

"Well," he said rather sarcastically, "I suppose you have come to reform me."

"Not on your life," replied James. "That's Robert Senior's and Robert Junior's job. We'd be glad to see it done, though," he added.

"Well?" queried Robert as they waited, hardly knowing where to begin.

"We want you to tell us who brings liquor to town," blurted out Burt.

Robert stared for a moment, then flushed. "Say, you fellows aren't wanting in cheek," he muttered.

"You can't get through the world without a proper amount of it," said Zeph. "What we really did think, however, was that you'd let us in on it for old times' sake."

"Do you want to get some?" sneered Robert.

"No," they shouted with one voice.

"Then why do you come to me for advice?"

"Don't say 'advice,'" counseled John. "Call it information. That's what we're after."

"And you expect me to tell you?"

"We hoped you would."

"Hope is a vain thing," said Robert.

"I guess your mother thinks so," agreed John, "but perhaps you'll tell the grand jury."

Unexcelled for repairing china, glassware, earthenware, furniture, vases, books, etc. Famous since 1876. Major's Rubber and Leather Cements are good.

Three kinds, 20c per bottle at dealers, or write us.

MAJOR MFG. CO., NEW YORK

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY

Do you want more money than you ever possessed? If so, learn to make nut and fruit bonbons—the business will net you $90.00 to $300.00 per month. You can work from your own home; all who sample your bonbons become regular customers. Mary Elizabeth started her candy kitchen with $5.00, and has made a fortune. Cannot you do likewise? I will tell you all about the business. Now is the psychological time to make big money. Write today. Isabelle Inez, 511A Morewood Building, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

"Will I? That's interesting."

"Say, Bob," appealed Harry, "do you im to keep this up?"

"What I intend to do is my own con-ern," answered Robert, coldly.

"Let's go, boys," said Harry. "I want o get to work on my posters."

Robert started up as if to stop them, ut smothered the impulse. They walked art of the way together, discussing their lans, then they separated, Harry going ome, the others to their different occu-ations. Each one had pledged himself o keep his eyes and ears open, and ain all possible information in every egitimate way.

A few days passed uneventfully, but ne leaven was working. Several times a ay groups gathered about the posters nd talked of the situation in Surrey-ille. The prohibition talks in the eekly paper made many people ashamed iat they had been so slow in backing o the law enforcement officers. They esolved to do better, and some even fered their services in bringing of-nders to justice. The committee saw id heard it all—and rejoiced.

About this time a real estate company lvertised a big sale of town lots at uction. The streets had been decorated r the occasion and a large crowd was pected. This was to be the opportunity r a testing of both sides. Many good tizens announced their intention of aving town for the day, in order to keep it of trouble, for it was known that he gang" had been promised plenty of nisky.

The Good-Citizenship Committee re-lved to thwart the plans of the wets. neir posters and articles had paved the ay for what they now intended to try, d it was easier to get help. They ped to give liquor a black eye.

On the morning of the day before the le, James was going to his work in the nk when he noticed Robert walking pidly toward the bridge. He thought thing of it at the time, but an hour or later, Robert entered, plainly intoxi-ted. He tried hard to be natural as called out,

'Hey, James, still on the job?"

"Yes," answered James significantly, nd so are you."

Robert lowered his voice confidentially. Iy father is as good a man as ever led, but — — I don't care if I —"

Just then the entrance of Zeph and rt interrupted Robert, and he turned d left but not before they had noticed is condition. They exchanged glances th James.

"Be quick," James whispered, "and aybe you'll find out something. I can't it away from here, but you must ask '. Hartman to send an officer to watch e bridge. Tell him that I noticed bert there about an hour ago, and en he came back as you saw him."

They sauntered out as if nothing had ppened, and at once went to hunt the yor. They found him at the court-use. Seeing by their faces that they d news, he joined them at once.

'Please just walk along quietly with " suggested Zeph.

As they went their way, the boys told him what James had said.

"I'll send an officer—perhaps there'd better be two—with orders to search every car that passes," he promised. "I'll tell them to keep the toll gate shut till search has been made."

"Now that James has put our noses on the scent," said Zeph, "I am wondering if the man who keeps the gate isn't as rotten as any of them, because I saw him and Robert meet on the street, one day, and they were laughing a lot about a basket of eggs somebody had brought; he called them duck eggs and said they were the kind for him."

"Fine!" exclaimed the mayor. "We'll stir up something yet. I'll send my men, and later, I'll have the toll house gone over thoroughly."

The officers casually strolled down toward the bridge, as if they were merely out for a walk, but it wasn't long before a half-dozen good citizens were making their way in the same direction. Once upon the scene, the officers hid themselves in convenient places, to be ready in case their assistance was needed. The boys kept quiet and waited, but somehow, in spite of all precautions, an air of expectancy began to pervade the crowd, which had now gathered. Men stood in little groups and talked in low tones. Several members of the "gang" who were hanging around, scented mischief and began to look uneasy.

The onlookers had not long to wait. Soon a car was seen speeding from the neighborhood of the bridge. A short distance behind it, an officer followed on a bicycle.

"Look there," cried one, "I'll bet my hat against a peanut that there's liquor in that car."

"Let's try to stop it," called several men, beginning to run forward excitedly.

The crowd was now just in front of the bank. James came to the door in time to see a rough-looking man deliberately trip up a good citizen, who was making an effort to stop the car. Like a flash of lightning James understood. A loaded truck stood near the curb, its engine still running. With one dash, James mounted it, threw in the gear, and turned it across the street.

"Shoot him," shouted a voice, but it was too late. With a muttered oath, the driver of the fleeing car put on his brakes and stopped. He jumped out and started to run, but a dozen pairs of hands caught and held him fast, while others quickly searched the car and found jugs and bottles. The officer rode up on the bicycle, perspiring freely.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I 'stole' a boy's wheel to follow this fellow. It was the only thing I could lay hands on."

"How'd he get by the gate?" asked Burt.

"The keeper gave him the wink and let him through. I left the other officer to take care of him. He has plenty of help, I assure you."

Just then, Robert came and stood staring. The man in custody appealed to him.

"Bob, you know me," he called familiarly. "Tell these fellers—"

Robert looked from the man to the group of determined citizens who surrounded him. He shook his head.

"It wouldn't do any good, Jim," he said. "Besides, I've just been talking with my mother. I've taken a solemn oath to stop drinking, so help me, God."

Somebody started three cheers for Robert and the Good-Citizenship Committee, and they were given again and again.

1000 Eggs in Every Hen

New System of Poultry Keeping—Get Dollar A Dozen Eggs—Famous Poultryman

TELLS HOW

"The great trouble with the poultry business has always been that the laying life of a hen was too short," says Henry Trafford, International Poultry Expert and Breeder, for nearly eighteen years Editor of Poultry Success.

The average pullet lays 150 eggs. If kept the second year, she may lay 100 more. Then, she goes to market. Yet, it has been scientifically established that every pullet is born or hatched with over one thousand minute egg germs in her system—and will lay them on a highly profitable basis over a period of four to six years' time if given proper care.

How to work to get 1,000 eggs from every hen; how to get pullets laying early; how to make the old hens lay like pullets; how to keep up heavy egg production all through cold winter months when eggs are highest; triple egg production; make slacker hens hustle; $5.00 profit from every hen in six winter months. These and many other money making poultry secrets are contained in Mr. Trafford's "1,000 EGG HEN" system of poultry raising, one copy of which will be sent absolutely free to any reader of this paper who keeps six hens or more. Eggs should go to a dollar or more a dozen this winter. This means big profit to the poultry keeper who gets the eggs. Mr. Trafford tells how, if you keep chickens and want them to make money for you, cut out this ad and send it with your name and address to Henry Trafford, Suite 1044P, Herald Bldg., Binghamton, N. Y., and a free copy of "THE 1,000 EGG HEN" will be sent by return mail.

Advertisers have discovered that only a small proportion of readers see an advertisement the first time that it appears and a smaller percentage read the advertisement. Each insertion in a magazine is read by a larger number of persons but it is necessary for it to be repeated a large number of times before all subscribers have noticed it. Some are having their attention attracted to the stickers for the first time. As the time is getting very short, let us make up for lost opportunities and order a generous supply of them to use in the many ways possible to let everyone know that we believe that the Eighteenth Amendment has been incorporated into the Constitution of our United States to stay and that we are going to have a WORLD'S CONVENTION of the WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION in one of the wettest sections of our land.

Three dollars per thousand; two dollars for five hundred; fifty cents for one hundred. Please remit with order to

Mrs. James B. Scott, 503 S. 46th St.,
Philadelphia, Pa.

CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT

THE UNION SIGNAL ..... $1.50 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance (monthly).....50c a year
Single Copies, 5c each; per 100 .....$2.75
Club rate for ten or more Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition subscriptions, 40c a year. No other premium allowed.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER ..... 35c a year
Single Copies, 3c each; per 100 .....$2.00

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES

THE UNION SIGNAL .....$2.00 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (monthly) .....62c a year
THE YOUNG CRUSADER .....47c a year

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL Evanston, Illinois

TRIO TEAM COUNTY HONOR ROLL

1. Jackson County, Iowa.
2. Grady County, Georgia.
3. Boone County, Illinois.
4. Barton County, Kansas.
5. Harper County, Kansas.
6. LaPorte County, Indiana.
7. Norfolk County, Mass.
8. Jewell County, Kansas.
9. Washington County, Kansas.
10. Ohio County, West Virginia.
11. Dukes County, Mass.
12. Dubuque County, Iowa.
13. Shawnee County, Kansas.
14. Big Stone County, } Dist.
15. Stevens County, } No. 12
16. Traverse County, } Minn.
17. Winnebago County, Wisconsin.
18. Walworth County, Wisconsin.

41. Deuel County, South ...
42. Mills County, Iowa.
43. Union County, Iowa.
44. Dakota County, } Dist.
45. Goodhue County, } No. 26
46. Rice County, } Minn.
47. Olmsted County, } Dist.
48. Dodge County, } No.
49. Steele County, } 2
50. Waseca County, } Minn.
51. Crawford County, Kansas.
52. Cass County, Iowa.
53. Polk County, } Dist.
54. Marshall County, } No.
55. Pennington County, } 14
56. Norman County, } Minn.
57. Edmunds County, South Dakota
58. Mower County } Dist. No.
59. Freeborn County } 30, Minn.
60. Bell County, Kentucky.
61. Chippewa County, Wisconsin.
62. Eau Claire County, Wisconsin.
63. Blair County, Penna.
64. Ness County, Kansas.
65. Blue Earth County, Minn. (District No. 21)
66. Dawson County, Nebraska.
67. Ellis County, Kansas.

Has Your State Gained?

On August 1, the twenty states having the greatest number of subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL were as follows:

THE BIG TEN

New York	1837
Pennsylvania	1408
Iowa	1008
Illinois	935
Indiana	893
Wisconsin	820
Kansas	810
Ohio	782
Minnesota	743
New Jersey	705

THE NEXT TEN

Massachusetts	620
California (North)	573
Missouri	533
California (South)	500
Florida	479
Michigan	450
Nebraska	382
Maine	381
Oklahoma	373
Virginia	329

UNION MEMBERS MAKE GOOD MONEY

Selling JERSEY CROWN FLAVORING POWDER (Non-Alcoholic) to their neighbors and friends on our liberal consignment plan. No money down. We furnish the powder and guarantee sales. You pay us when you sell it, or return at our expense. Write at once for our "Special Business Proposition."

JERSEY CROWN VANILLA CO.,
Dept. S, Valparaiso, Indiana

Quiz: Law vs. Personal Liberty

1. Mention some of the matters which are being discussed by Congress.

2. State some of the methods which have been used by the wet forces in their campaign this summer.

3. Why should insurance companies refuse to allow drinkers the liberty of insuring their lives?

4. Discuss the value of scientific temperance instruction in the schools, and suggest methods of carrying it on.

5. Give reasons for the optimism of Mrs. Willebrandt in regard to the future of prohibition.

6. Why should Federal and state authorities co-operate in enforcing the prohibition laws?

7. Why not permit the traffic in beer?

8. What is the real issue of the "wet" campaign?

9. What do some of the prominent women of the country have to say of prohibition and its retention in the United States?

10. Have you held a "campaign tea"?

W. C. T. U. BADGES

Made of mother of pearl in Bethlehem. Price, 25 cents each. Orders must be accompanied by price sent by N. Y. or London draft, cashiers' cheque or foreign postal order. Coin or stamps not accepted. Orders for less than two badges are refused. Address treasurer of W. C. T. U., Jerusalem, Palestine. P. O. Box 443.

A Wonderful Offer

A COMPLETE RADIO OUTFIT will be awarded to the person sending in the largest number of yearly subscriptions—over 20—to THE YOUNG CRUSADER, between June 15, 1922, and September 15, 1922, at the regular price of 35 cents each. No other premium allowed.

Mark subscriptions plainly "Radio Award".

Another Angle on That Worth While Investment

Many a W. C. T. U. home these early fall days is filled with special activity as preparations are made for those who are on the eve of departure for the winter's work at school. The mother-heart looks forward both hopefully and fearfully to the new experiences awaiting son and daughter, she puts many a prayer into the loving work she is doing for them, and wonders how she can help to insure right decisions on various problems bound to arise, one of which is the prohibition question.

It is possible, though unlikely, that the young people will be entertained at homes where wine is served. If so, will the W. C. T. U. training at home prove sufficient as a guide? On the other hand it is quite probable that both son and daughter will come into contact with those who, even in this enlightened stage of American history, scoff at prohibition, say that violators of the law are merely showing a proper independence of thought and action, and are urgent with their invitations to "have a taste," "be a good sport," and the like. The influences of home will not be forgotten, of course, but how may one be sure that into the youthful mind will not creep the insidious suggestion that father and mother are a little "old-fogeyish," and need the broadening that would come by being more of the world as well as in the world?

How much easier will it be for your young folks to "show their colors" if each week is received THE UNION SIGNAL with its reliable information showing that not only is it right to stand against drink, but that it pays from the standpoint of health and efficiency, and that the really "best" people are neither bootleggers nor customers of such law violators, but believe in the law as a protection for themselves and for others.

Tell your dear ones that you are subscribing for them, and make the suggestion that they place the papers on file as they arrive week by week. Besides being a safeguard, and a reminder of the home and of the expectations of father and mother that they will "make good" along moral as well as scholastic lines, this periodical will prove valuable for reference in essay and debate work, and for furnishing sidelights in economics and other subjects. Many times will your young folks bless the foresight that provided the material which others had to "dig out" at the library at the cost of considerable time and trouble.

Perhaps there will be a Y. P. B. in the college and of course they will join—if there is none, THE UNION SIGNAL may prove the opening wedge for the formation of such an organization to enrich their whole future.

Is it not an investment worth while

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN

NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly | Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year in Advance

Entered as second class matter at the Postoffice at Evanston, Illinois

Vol. XLVIII | EVANSTON, ILLINOIS, SEPTEMBER 11, 1922 | No. 37

Packingtown Day Nursery

This nursery in the Stock Yards District of Chicago is built on the site of ten saloons that before national prohibition were located on what was known as "Whisky Row." Two of the saloons were remodeled to make the present building, which is owned and supported jointly by the big packing companies. Forty children are cared for each day.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

INDEPENDENT CITIZENSHIP MEASURE FOR WOMEN SOON A LAW—SENATE ACCEPTS BILL FOR PROVIDING ADDITIONAL JUDGES — SENATE PASSES BURSUM GENERAL PENSION BILL—NEW SUPREME COURT APPOINTMENT PROMPTLY CONFIRMED BY SENATE—ANTI-PROFITEERING AND FACT-FINDING MEASURES PASS SENATE — MORE ADEQUATE PROTECTION RECOMMENDED FOR CHILDREN BORN OUT OF WEDLOCK

LENNA LOWE YOST, National W. C. T. U. Legislative Representative, Washington, D. C.

Much proposed legislation which has been pending for many weeks is nearing completion. Tariff and compensation for soldiers measures are at this date in conference, but even before this reaches our readers these will probably be before the House for final consideration.

Independent Citizenship for Women Measure Soon a Law

From the Senate Immigration Committee the Independent Citizenship Bill, which passed the House June 20, has emerged and has its place on the Calendar. Senator Curtis, of Kansas, who sponsors the bill in the Senate, is hopeful of securing its passage by the Senate early in the week.

Senate Accepts Bill Providing Additional Judges—House Must Agree

The long delayed bill providing twenty-five additional Federal judges finally was completed by the Senate and upon action by the House, probably early next week, the bill will go to the President. The bill has been urged by the Department of Justice and the American Bar Association as necessary to relieve congested Federal Court Calendars.

Welfare Legislation for District of Columbia Comes to the Front

Without a dissenting vote the Senate passed the Capper Bill providing compulsory school attendance, a school census and creation of a department of school attendance and work permits. The bill provides compulsory attendance at school of all children in the District between the ages of seven and sixteen years. The existing law requires the attendance only of children between the ages of eight and fourteen years. Another feature of the Capper Bill is the authority it gives school officials to take a census of all children in the District between the ages of three and eighteen years.

The bill also provides for better regulation of child labor in the District, in that it creates a department of school attendance and work permits, to operate under supervision of the board of education. The Juvenile Court, which now has jurisdiction over certain cases arising under the compulsory education law, is given jurisdiction in all cases under the Capper Bill. To carry out the provisions of the bill, the Senate ordered an appropriation of $30,000. Indications are that the House will give early consideration to this educational bill.

Model Juvenile Court Bill Proposed by Representative Goodykoontz

The Juvenile Court Bill introduced by Representative Goodykoontz, of West Virginia, is creating much interest in welfare circles. Its passage would enlarge the powers of the District of Columbia Juvenile Court by giving it concurrent jurisdiction with the Supreme Court of the District and power to enforce its judgments, orders and decrees in matters pertaining to the adoption of chidren, proceedings relating to divorce, annulment of marriage, maintenances, custody, legitimacy of children, etc. "The great advantage of bringing matters pertaining to domestic relations before such a court would be that they might be adjusted and those who desire legal relief could obtain it without expense incident to such suits in other courts," said Mr. Goodykoontz. "Let's make the Juvenile Court law in the District a pattern for such courts throughout the United States." Prominent jurists are praising this proposed legislation.

Senate Passes Bursum General Pension Bill

The General Pension Bill authorizes an increase in the pensions of veterans of the Mexican and Civil Wars to $72 a month, an increase in the pension of widows more than 62 years of age from $30 to $50, and an increase in the pensions of army nurses from $30 to $50 a month, all effective the first day of the month after approval of the act. The bill goes to the House for consideration.

New Supreme Court Appointment Promptly Confirmed by Senate

The nomination of former Senator George Sutherland of Utah by the President to be associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States to succeed Justice Clark, who recently resigned, was confirmed by the Senate in ten minutes after the name was received and in open executive session. The promptness with which the Senate acted indicates the cordial approval of members of the Senate, with many of whom he served for two terms. Senator Nelson, of Minnesota, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, to which judicial nominations ordinarily are referred, immediately asked unanimous consent for consideration of the nomination, saying that Mr. Sutherland was so well known to all members that no other course was necessary. Those who know the new member of the Supreme Court best declare that his is not a petty mind, always looking for technicalities. On the contrary, his tendency is to take the broader viewpoint of issues that arise.

Anti-Profiteering and Fact-Finding Measures Pass Senate

The first of the emergency coal bills designed to check profiteering and control of distribution of coal, and which originated in the House and passed that body last week, passed the Senate Thursday with only seven negative votes recorded against the measure. The following day the Senate passed the "fact-finding" Coal Commission Bill which provides for a body of five members to investigate the entire coal industry and report recommendations. The bill as passed by the House fixed the membership at nine. Another Senate amendment specifies that the commission shall make separate and distinct inquiries into the bituminous and anthracite industries.

Both bills have gone to conference for adjustment of differences between the Houses.

Would Limit Campaign Expenses if Passed

The Pomerene Bill regulating campaign expenditures of candidates for election to the Senate and House was passed after brief discussion and without a roll call. This bill is applicable to the general election only, and not the primaries, limiting the expenditures of a senatorial candidate to $10,000 and to the House $5,000. It now goes to the House.

More Adequate Protection Recommended for Children Born Out of Wedlock

The movement for securing a greater measure of justice for the more than 32,000 children born out of wedlock in the United States each year has just received the sanction of a legal organization of the highest authority. The National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, at its thirty-second annual meeting held in San Francisco the first week of August, approved a uniform illegitimacy act and recommended it to the states for adoption. Professor Ernst Freund of the University of Chicago Law School, was chairman of the committee which drafted the proposed law.

The action of the commissioners was the outgrowth of a series of regional conferences held in 1920 under the auspices of the Children's Bureau and the Inter-City Conference on Illegitimacy, to consider standards of legislation and protection for children of illegitimate birth. In discussing the proposed law Miss Grace Abbott, Chief of the Children's Bureau, pointed out that it deals almost entirely with the obligation of the parents for the child's support, and leaves open the questions of status and inheritance rights. She stated that it is in proceedings for determining paternity and compelling support that uniformity of state legislation is most essential. The difficulty of bringing to trial a father who lives in another state from that in which the mother resides or who absconds to another state to escape his obligation has been one of the principal obstacles in the way of legal action.

With few exceptions, illegitimacy laws now in force in American states date back many years and in the opinion of Miss Abbott are very defective by reason of low maximum age limits to which support can be required, small amounts authorized, limitations as to jurisdiction, possibility of settlement for extremely inadequate amounts, or ineffective means of enforcing compliance with the judgment of the court.

Legislative Headquarters, Bliss Bldg., Washington, D. C., September 9, 1922.

American Legion of Cook County Not For Wine and Beer

The introduction of Captain G. E. Inco :o those who attended a recent mass meeting of the National Association Against he Prohibition Amendment at the Coli-seum in Chicago, as a representativo of he American Legion, was not authorized by that organization, according to the following statement by Secretary William G. Wood of the Cook County American Legion Association, appearing in the Chicago Tribune:

"The Cook County American Legion Association, which is the central organization of all the American Legion posts of this county, has not, either as a body or through its executive committee, taken any stand on the beer and light wines question, nor has it authorized any one to speak for it at the Coliseum meeting."

It was reported by those who attended he meeting in the Coliseum that there were 2,000 chairs roped off in front for legionaries, but when the hour arrived or opening the program not a single soldier was in the seats and the ropes were then lifted. One noticeable characteristic of the crowd was the absence of young men. Those in attendance were li middle-aged or old men.

The Alta Post of the American Legion, according to the Dinuba (Cal.) Sentinel, recently adopted a resolution in which t endorsed the Wright Bill as a moral nd not a political issue, and pledged it upport.

A Reply to Ex-Governor Dunne

A few days ago a crowd of "the faithful" gathered in the Coliseum of Chicago to celebrate the finish of the drive for signers to a petition to secure a referendum at the November elections on amending state and Federal laws to permit the manufacture of light wines and beer. The principal speaker was former Governor Dunne, who endeavored to show from the Bible, the Illinois state bill of rights, and crime statistics, that prohibition is wrong in every way. "Prohibition has made us a nation of hypocrites and law-breakers. It is a scandal and disgrace that must be blotted out," said Governor Dunne, as quoted by the Chicago Daily Tribune.

In commenting upon the speech of the former governor, Chicago's law enforcement commissioner, Dr. John H. Williamson, calls attention to the facts in the case in the following words:

"'Prohibition has made us a nation of hypocrites and law-breakers'? To whom is ex-Governor Dunne referring when he speaks of 'us' as having been made 'hypocrites and law-breakers'? I hope he does not mean the 3,942 members of the state assemblies who voted for the ratification of the Eighteenth Amendment—and I hope he is not talking for all the 1,058,785 church members in Chicago, nor for a large number of people who are not affiliated with any church, but who in all sincerity believe in the Volstead Act, and who respect the Constitution of the United States sufficiently to obey the law.

"There is no objection to the constitutional right of any citizen to agitate for a modification of any existing laws, but such loose talk as that falling from the lips of a man like ex-Governor Dunne should not go unchallenged. And it is such language that gives every bootlegger encouragement to defy the law and brings our constituted authorities, Federal, state and municipal, into disrepute."

Educational Standard Set for Policewomen

At the International Convention of Police Chiefs, held recently in San Francisco, resolutions were adopted recognizing the policewoman as a necessity to organized police departments, her primary function being the carrying out of a program for the community that will include the social safeguarding of women and children. The minimum standard set, below which educational qualifications of applicants may not fall, is as follows:

(a) Graduation from a four years' course of a standard high school or the completion of at least fourteen college entrance units of study and not less than two years' experience, recent and responsible, in systematic social service or educational work.

(b) Graduation from a recognized school for trained nurses requiring a residence of at least two years in a hospital giving thorough practical and theoretical training.

(c) The completion of at least seven college entrance units of study, or of two years' work in a standard high school, and not less than two years' responsible commercial work involving public contact and responsibilities tending to qualify the applicant to perform the duties of the position, with the equivalent of the college education through experience, such as secretarial work.

A resolution was also adopted by the convention requesting that universities introduce courses of study as theoretical training for policewomen.

The Wets Attempt to Educate The People

"It is necessary to understand that the liquor traffic is not constituted by a few barrels of beer, wine or whisky, but that it is a well-organized commercial enterprise managed by men and women who for their own material gain cater to the appetites of the victims of alcohol and instill the thirst for alcoholic beverages into the youth of the land in order to rear a crop of customers for tomorrow."

The above words are a part of the introduction to an eight-page pamphlet, written by a man of foreign extraction, now being widely circulated by the Board of Home Missions of the M. E. Church, and they define the difference between the proponents of the liquor traffic, who are using the baser tendencies of man to promote their own material prosperity, and the temperance hosts, who are working to safeguard the nation.

Since lack of space forbids our giving any exhaustive report of the activities of the wets over the United States, we shall merely touch upon their work in a very few of the larger cities—representative of their endeavors in the rest.

It is well known that throughout the summer months the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment has been busy in an attempt to get up a petition for a referendum to bring back wines and beer, to be submitted to the voters of several states in November. In Chicago paid workers were stationed at the street corners, personal appeals were made, and it was at last announced that the desired result had been obtained. A great mass meeting was then advertised, a letter being sent out from brewers' headquarters, to drum up a good attendance, as part of an extensive publicity campaign. This letter invited "all lovers of liberty" to be present at the meeting, appealing to societies, clubs, lodges and civic organizations in these words:

"The courageous, patriotic men who have so unselfishly labored toward supplying correction for the evils growing out of the present prohibition farce, ask you individually and collectively to lend your support to this great movement."

On the thirtieth of August a truck went through the streets of Chicago, carrying the petition, reported by the wets to contain 550,000 names. At night, there gathered at the Coliseum several thousand men and women, the majority, as was apparent, being of Chicago's great alien races, while on the platform were others of foreign extraction. Among the invited guests on the speakers' platform were saloonkeepers and officials of former breweries, among them Ernest Kunde, for years head of the Illinois Liquor Dealers' Protective Association, and Anton Landt, treasurer of the Atlas Products Company (formerly the Atlas Brewery). Regrets and best wishes were read from E. S. Broussard, U. S. Senator, Governor Edwards of New Jersey, Samuel Gompers and Irvin S. Cobb.

An effort was made to show that the American Legion, as well as organized labor, was with the moderation campaign. Judge Barasa, one of the speakers, referred to the great number of foreign born in the United States who "would vote not dripping wet," but so that beer and wine could come back again. He added that it was the duty of every foreign man and woman in the country to become an American citizen as soon as possible.

At the present time the A. A. P. A. is concentrating much effort upon the development of a great organization in Missouri, with the special aim of sending representatives to Washington to vote for the modification of the Volstead Act. This association openly hopes to change Missouri's quota from four to nine wet Congressmen this fall, and in its efforts toward this end claims that already working organizations have been established in 37 cities of the state. A reporter from the Christian Science Monitor was told by a representative of the A. A. P. A. that upon going into a community the association first seeks out the most prominent anti-prohibitionist and invites him to join. "In St. Louis," he said, "we have several men out getting memberships in the industries. Usually our workers get the head of the concern first, and then obtain permission to meet the employes inside the plant at the noon hour. We have secured about 50,000 names in this way." It would be impossible, in his opinion, to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment, therefore in Missouri the A. A. P. A. is seeking for legislation by Congressmen allowing a larger content of alcohol in beer and wine. "After that," he concluded, "I think something needs to be done to keep light wines and beer once they are voted back, or else the public will raise a lot

(Continued on Page Twelve)

MAINE'S AMERICANIZATION CENTER

Charlotte B. Fraser

The worker in the field has a chance to learn the real value of the rank and file of our women. Every state I have visited has the "chosen elect" who do not get into the limelight, but are, nevertheless, the foundation of our organization.

I am glad to write of Mrs. Arthur Craig of Wilton, Maine, a willing worker in our great Americanization field. In September, 1921, I had the privilege of meeting her and visiting the Americanization center, which was then in its beginning. It is called the "Community Americanization School" with Mrs. Craig in charge. Mr. George Goodspeed, one of the leading business men, gave the use of rooms in the section where the foreigners live. At his expense they are fitted with every essential. When the school was opened, the women could hardly speak a word of English, much less a sentence; they were timid and rather backward. Ten months later, imagine my surprise when I again visited the school, to find the pupils eager to talk. One woman told me in good English about the expected coming of her sister from Poland to America. They study arithmetic, geography, history and spelling, their latest accomplishment being the mastery of the diacritical marks. I was more than pleased with the wonderful improvement in the whole environment of the school. These women, a year ago, were sad and homesick looking but the expression on their faces is completely changed. One of them is called the "Woman with the halo," such joy does she bring into the class-room every time she enters it.

One evening the teacher found a stranger present and inquired if she was a new pupil. Some one replied, "She is visiting me; she is my husband's uncle." Later, the lesson of father, mother and relative was gone over most carefully.

The class-room affords these pupils much enjoyment in the way of recreation. They sing the homeland songs in the mother tongue and relate stories of days gone by. The way they sing "Our America," and other songs, and repeat the Lord's Prayer thrills the heart. The children share in all the good things, and the men are not forgotten, as a class for them has been formed with prominent business men of Wilton as teach s. There has been no lack of interested ol- unteer teachers for both classes, as m ıy as fourteen responding to Mrs. Cra 's call.

This work cannot be done without n- tiring effort, patience and love, all of which stand to the credit of this o- worker, in her field of service.

And there is great reason to rej ce that we have such fine, consecrated w k- ers, not only in Maine, but in all ıe various states of the Union.

Story Hour at the Kansas City (Missouri) W. C. T. U. Neighbors

"Tell us a story" is the universal request made by children. At the Kan s City W. C. T. U. Neighbors, once a week a large group of foreign little ones gat r to hear wisely selected tales, the tiny tots listening as attentively as do the ol r boys and girls. Handwork is taught the children, and they sing lustily between e stories.

The principal aim is to teach foreign mothers the English language, and ne teachers, including two paid instructors, are retained. Mrs. Esther Moffett is e permanent resident.

On Wednesday and Friday afternoons are held the classes for mothers, ad sewing lessons are also provided.

Assisting with the children's work are Miss Edna Sperry, Miss Genevie Hobson, and Miss Mida Brandon.

America's Children Must Be Prepared for American Citizenship

[From Address Delivered Before National Education Association Convention by Albin M. Owsley, Director National Americanism Commission.]

The education of American children must be an American education. It must prepare the children of America for American citizenship, and the supreme goal of American citizenship has not yet been reached. We Americans must know the details of our government and our history as well as we know the details of our daily lives, before we can fully and rightfully arrogate to ourselves the management of our national affairs. For that, if for no other reason, must we have civil government and American history established as compulsory studies in our schools, and we must compel the study of these subjects till every American citizen-to-be has acquired a full knowledge and complete realization of the rights and privileges and duties of American citizenship. The schools of America should be set apart, as well in the minds of men, as in the streets of the cities—set apart from and above the office building and the factory, in recognition of this, their mighty function for the development of American citizens.

My heart's desire is that every schoolhouse in this broad land shall fly from its staff, from dawn till set of sun, the flag of America, as its privilege and its distinction in recognition of its high estate. This mighty flag—this emblem of human liberty—must float over every schoolhouse as the symbol of that bright American ideal of which the school is the living spirit and the vital source—the symbol of a united nation, a sign of America made visible. This brings with it as naturally as the sunrise follows dawn, the establishment of one language in all the schools, for the expression of the soul of America. As the flag is America made visible, so the language of Jefferson and Lincoln is America made audible.

Community of language is the strong fastener of the ties that bind mankind. The use of a common tongue establishes a strong union of the minds of men that overleaps political boundaries. When ancient Greece was divided into free states by the hundreds, still the soul of Greece was one; and in Athens or in Argos, in Corinth or in Syracuse, the command of the language of Homer and Demosthenes distinguished the Greek from the barbarian. When the ordered Legions brought the great western - tions under the rule of Rome, it was te Latin language that fused alike the G l and Briton, the Bavarian and the Sp - iard into the Roman citizen and the - holder of the laws of the Roman state

The Declaration of Independence a our Constitution comprise our great t national heritage; they are the tw sources of the great current of Americ life today. Shall these epoch-maki documents ever be studied in our scho and interpreted by our children in a language but the original? It cannot . It must not be. One flag above o schools and one language in our schoo the flag and the language of America, America one and indivisible—

"Until God loosen over sea and land
The thunder of the trumpets of t dawn."

Department of Child Welfare

Elizabeth A. Perkins, National Director

EVERY YOUNG MOTHER A MEMBER OF THE W. C. T. U.

"The mission of white ribbon women is to organize the motherhood of the world for peace, and purity, the protection and exaltation of the home."—Frances E. Willard.

EVERY YOUNG MOTHER A MEMBER OF THE W. C. T. U.

"Mother-love works magic for humanity, but organized mother-love works miracles."—Frances E. Willard.

EVERY YOUNG MOTHER A MEMBER OF THE W. C. T. U.

"Organized motherhood is a force, the strongest, the most deeply rooted, the most steadily enduring, that this planet knows."—Frances E. Willard.

* * * * * * * * * * *

These messages telling of the great mission of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, given to the world years ago by Frances E. Willard, still thrill our souls and beckon us forward. MOTHERS form a FIRST LINE OF DEFENSE for the welfare of children. No organization but the Woman's Christian Temperance Union has been termed "Organized Mother Love."

It is because we are Organized Mother Love that in the very beginning of our organization we began our child welfare activities; that during the period of war we took part in the work of the government to save and protect children; and that we are now carrying forward a great program of research, of education and of service for them.

It is because we are Organized Mother Love, that for almost fifty years a campaign of prayer, and agitation, and education, and sacrifice was carried on, that National Prohibition—the greatest blessing to child life and to the home, which can ever be brought through any single measure—might be written in the Constitution of the United States.

It is because we are Organized Mother Love that we are praying and working and voting for the continuance and enforcement of the Volstead Act, and that the Eighteenth Amendment may forever remain in the Constitution of the United States.

* * * * * * * * * * *

WE NEED

EVERY YOUNG MOTHER A MEMBER OF THE W. C. T. U.

We need EVERY YOUNG MOTHER today to stand with Organized Mother-Love against the enemies of children and the home; mothers who shall say: "The legalized liquor traffic, in any form, under any guise, SHALL NEVER RETURN."

WE MUST CONTINUE TO TEACH THE PRINCIPLES OF TOTAL ABSTINENCE, in the home, the school and the church. Our children of today, will, tomorrow, be the guardians of the Constitution of our country. THERE MUST BE NO LAPSE IN PROHIBITION TEACHING.

WE HAVE MUCH TO GIVE

EVERY YOUNG MOTHER A MEMBER OF THE W. C. T. U.

Our organization standing as a bulwark of protection for child life and for the home—our great program of child welfare, for health, for education, for protection from child labor, for moral safeguards, for spiritual training—our research work through our gift to the Iowa Child Research Station—our educational exhibits—our friendship and help for expectant mothers—our literature—our Special Papers each month for home or class study—our Child Study Classes—our Mothers' Meetings, all these we have to give to the Young Mother.

EVERY YOUNG MOTHER A MEMBER OF THE W. C. T. U.

NATIONAL PROHIBITION AS THE FOREIGN-BORN RESIDENTS OF OUR CITIES REGARD IT

It has been stated by an authority on the subject that eighty per cent of the violation and defiance of the National Prohibition law is by persons who are not citizens of the United States. This is due, somewhat, to the fact that for centuries drinking has been a folkway among many of the nationalities largely represented in the foreign sections of our big cities. While native Americans have had from childhood the benefits of teaching in the public schools, the home and the Sunday school, on the truths of science concerning alcohol, foreigners of many nationalities have grown up in an environment favorable to drinking, and in the majority of cases have never heard the custom criticized or condemned.

After prohibition had been in operation about two years a student of the Chicago University, Norman Sylvester Hayner, undertook to make a survey of the situation in Packingtown, the neighborhood of the big packing plants of Chicago, almost entirely foreign in population, to discover how this industrial group, with its alcoholio history and tradition, felt about prohibition. As the result of this study, he submitted to the faculty, in candidacy for the degree of Master of Arts, a dissertation, "The Effect of Prohibition in Packingtown." He found the Slavic people, because of the customs of the homeland, generally antagonistic to prohibition, with exceptions, such as a Slav shoe dealer, who declared, "Prohibition is wrong. I am against it. Eating may be just as bad as drinking. People should be educated to temperance. Prohibition has not raised the standard of morality. Look at the Turks. BUT I SOLD MORE SLIPPERS THAN EVER BEFORE LAST CHRISTMAS. IT WAS PROBABLY BECAUSE THE SALOONKEEPERS DID NOT GET IT."

In his closing summary Mr. Hayner gives the following cases showing the breakdown of the drinking folkway, adding his conclusions suggesting possible future disintegration of this folkway:

Cases Showing the Breakdown of the Folkway

The first five cases in this section show prosperity attributed to prohibition. Attention should be called to the fact that four of these cases are Irish American, Irish, Scandinavian and native American respectively. Only the last case of the five is Slavic:

Irish American family. Five children all nervous and high strung. Father a printer and got high wages but drank. Lived in a five room apartment and tried to maintain a standard of living beyond their ability. A year before prohibition a daughter contracted T. B. They wanted to take her to California but social settlement workers urged them to stay here and rent more rooms. Six months after prohibition, met the man on the street car. Almost the first thing he said was, "Have bought a home." He put the roof on himself. "Since prohibition we have been doing all right," he said.

Mrs. Vaughn, mother of eight children, came to settlement to make a request for a summer outing. Drinking never stopped the husband from work but always injured his family. Employer had to help every year. Now did not need to worry—liquor too expensive. Brought home all wages. Seldom drinks.

A Scandinavian family north of settlement—girl better in appearance, getting along better now. "Don't you know we are living under prohibition now," she said. They are buying their own home.

Woman whose husband is a carpenter came for advice about insurance policy. Since prohibition, really for the first time (in four or five years) had clothing, rent paid and husband home.

The following case is very short, but it tells quite a little:

Kalata—Rented saloon and bought a farm. His dance hall closed. Very happy.

The next case seems quite remarkable. In part at least the folkway has been sublimated through attendance at the movies.

Both husband and wife were hard drinkers. After prohibition gave up their saloon and became sober people. Neighbor says instead of going after the booze they go to the movies together.

The next three cases show a change in the attitudes of husband or wife or both.

Mother says it is "like another life" to her since prohibition. Attitude of husband toward her and toward the children has changed. Before children did not have shoes.

Man used to drink. Quieted down since prohibition. His six children and his wife were afraid of him. Wife tickled to death on account of prohibition. Never did smile before; smiling all the time now. Change in the man. Since he don't get the stuff, is in his right senses. There was always an argument in the house before.

Until two years ago man was heavy drinker. Several years ago, he was brutal to his family but of late years has straightened up, is a good worker and kind at home. The Mercy Hospital advised outdoor work for him. He is now junking with horse and cart, making $22.00 to $25.00 a week.

Cases Showing Revolt of Children Against the Folkway

Two older and five or six younger children. Father a switchman and maker o moonshine. The two older children, a boy and girl, objected and broke the still They bored holes in it with an awl. Whe the father found it in this condition h stood and looked at it for about fifteen minutes. He was stupid and had no "ge up" to him. "What's the matter?" asked his wife, who knew what the children had done. But to her surprise, he blamed himself for it. He said he had set i down on nails in a board.

"The Checota Club (an organization o young men using an old saloon on a corner near the settlement as their club house) was planning to give a dance Johnny O'Brien (alias 'Buck'), the champion prize fighter of the district said, 'Joe, we are going to have "Dago Red" at the dance.' Then I said, 'Fine then we will all get drunk.' But Buck asked, 'What do you think of it? Every body would get shot up in the meeting, and said, 'Boys, I don't think——wants us to have it.' Immediately Thibaut, a fellow who drank, said: 'We would make $150. 'I will buy it all myself,' I said, for I knew I could raise the money some way. They did not call my bluff but the club confined itself to the sale of soft drinks and sandwiches. They made money, for the girls also partook of refreshments. On the same night a rival club having the same understanding with the police sold 'Dago Red.' In the course of the evening the police came and drank up all the profits."

Conclusions Suggesting Possible Future Disintegration of the Folkway

In several cases drinking habits were given up with the advent of prohibition. Those reporting these cases tell of decided changes in the attitudes of husband and wife or both toward the home and the family.

According to the records of the United Charities there has been a marked change in the character of dependency cases, since the coming of prohibition. During this period intemperance has been the major cause of poverty in very few instances.

Prosperity of the individual family in some cases has been attributed to prohibition.

Several cases indicate a new sense of independence of women through their reliance upon the prohibition law to support them in their opposition to the manufacture and consumption of alcohol by their husbands.

Children have revolted against the "moonshine" activities of their parents, probably influenced in large part by teaching in the public schools.

There has been a decrease in the number of "low" dance halls in the vicinity of the University of Chicago Settlement.

Many native Americans in Packingtown, who are engaged in business, professional or social work, remain firm in their belief that prohibition is "right" and the folkway of drinking is "wrong." They ask for better enforcement of the law and more time in which to judge its effect.

Hope for the Children of the Foreign Citizen

In an interview with Rev. Warren N. Clark, pastor of the Community Church in Packingtown, he said, "The hopeful thing about the situation, as I see it, is that the children of these foreigners will not form the drink habit. I have been for ten years a resident of this section, and looking back over that period I find that there is no comparison in the conditions. I recall the days when we had in this section of Chicago a 'Whisky Row,' with 239 saloons within five-eighths of a mile. I see three marked improvements under prohibition: First, a decrease in drunkenness; second, in the last two or three years the people have made great improvement in repairing and keeping up their homes, and thirdly, there has been an increase in savings deposits in the banks of the neighborhood, and this increase represents the savings of hundreds and thousands of these foreign working people."

CONTINENTAL EUROPE TO BE WELL REPRESENTED AT WORLD'S W. C. T. U. CONVENTION

Fraulein von Blucher, Great-Grand-Niece of the Famous Field Marshal, to Be One of the Delegates

Fraulein von Blucher

White ribboners of Europe are studying the map of the United States in anticipation of the journey they are soon to take across the Atlantic, to attend the World's W. C. T. U. convention, at Philadelphia, November 11-16.

Finland is sending one of her gifted daughters, Miss Maria Stenroth, an author of repute, and a national organizer and field secretary for the W. C. T. U. of Finland. While Finland is one of those progressive countries that have achieved prohibition, Miss Stenroth is eager to study the enforcement machinery of our big republic and carry back information for use in her own land. She brings with her credentials from her government which has commissioned her, as its special representative, to investigate and report. Up to the time of the Philadelphia meeting, she will be doing special welfare work among her own people, of whom there are a large number in this country.

News has been received from Miss Fanny von Hertzen of the purchase of national W. C. T. U. headquarters for Finland, at Helsinki, Suomi.

Noted German Women to Attend Convention

From Germany are coming three noted women. One is Fraulein Gustel von Blücher, the president of the Deutscher Bund Abstinenter Frauen (German Women's Total Abstinence Union), affiliated for many years with the World's W. C. T. U. Fraulein Blücher is the great-grandniece of the famous Field Marshal Blücher, who came to the help of Wellington at the battle of Waterloo. Especially valuable work is being done by Fraulein Blücher and her white ribbon comrades in establishing high class restaurants and cafes where good foods are served with no alcoholic drinks, demonstrating to the people the possibility of having an appetizing meal sans alcohol.

Moving Spirit of Bielefeld Straw Vote on Her Way to America

Miss Wilhelmina Lohmann, of Bielefeld, is another delegate expected at the World's convention. Fraulein Lohmann was the moving spirit of the recent semi-official test vote taken in her town of Bielefeld, which returned the unusual number of 12,621 votes for prohibition out of a poll of 14,064. This remarkable result was obtained through publicity in the press, the distribution of literature and holding of street meetings, and was the first in the interests of the prohibition cause ever taken in Germany.

Another representative from Germany is Miss Marta Kuppersbusch of Cologne, who is studying at the University of Cologne for a degree in Political Science, taking as her subject "Prohibition." While in the United States, Fraulein Kuppersbusch expects to gather additional data for her thesis.

The Norway W. C. T. U. is to be represented by Dagmar Prior, who has been prominent in the W. C. T. U. work in Denmark and Norway.

Belgium White Ribboners Very Active

It is hoped, although not certain, that the Baroness de Laveleye, president of the W. C. T. U. of Belgium, will attend the convention. She was a delegate to that meeting in Brooklyn, New York, in 1913, and the one in London, in 1920. She belongs to one of the leading families of Belgium. Her father was a professor in the University of Liege, a friend of William Ewart Gladstone, and of wide reputation as a scholar. The Baroness suffered as the result of the war, her ancestral home in Liege being invaded by the Germans and used for the housing of their troops. Before the war, with her sister, she maintained several sans-alcohol restaurants in Liege, and an effort is being made to re-establish them. The W. C. T. U. work in Belgium is growing.

Mrs. Elizabeth Jacqmain, who is spending something over two years in Belgium, because her husband has a position under the government, is giving some very fine help in W. C. T. U. activities in Brussels.

In a letter just received she says that "The Tramp," a film created by a Frenchman, is being given at the High Life Theatre. It shows a chain of ruined lives that follow in the trail of the whisky serpent. She says she is surprised at the interest shown. The theatre managers are putting it on in epochs which bring the crowds each night to see that part of the film. It is extremely well played in French style, bringing in the suffering and humiliation of women and children.

Miss Maria Stenroth

The school cabinet has given the W. C. T. U. the privilege of going into the schools again next year and has expressed its appreciation of the work Mrs. Jacqmain is doing. The white ribboners are outlining a hygienic code which they will present to the cabinet to consider having used in the schools next year. She hopes they will be well enough pleased with their work by next February to create a budget for the coming year for national temperance work.

The W. C. T. U. had a meeting recently where the Commander of the Brussels Salvation Army gave an address and Dr. Cafart, an outstanding scientist of Belgium, read the responses from many colleges and universities of the United States that had been collected by the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association.

Not long ago Mrs. Jacqmain arranged a demonstration, or street temperance parade, in which she marched at the head of a band of mothers, bearing a banner, "Mothers, Attention. Alcohol is a Poison to your Children."

A Local Union in Every City in the World

Mrs. Lydia B. Johnson, who has been speaking in the referendum campaign in Sweden, and is to be at the World's Convention, writing of the generous hospitality extended to her by white ribboners of that country, says: "Never did I realize how much every local W. C. T. U., no matter how small it may be, signifies in a struggle like this. Let us have local unions in every little village in the United States, nay, in all the world, so that the women all over the world may be united in this great service of love."

1922	NOVEMBER					1922
Sun.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thurs.	Fri.	Sat.
			1	2	3	4
5	6	7	8	9	10	11
12	13	14	15	16	17	18
19	20	21	22	23	24	25
26	27	28	29	30

Don't forget these dates for World's and National Conventions

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union
Evanston, Illinois

Editor-in-Chief - - - Miss Anna A. Gordon
Managing Editor - - Miss Julia F. Deane
Associate Editor - - Miss Vida I. Thompson

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors of The Editorial Department, The Union Signal, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittance of $1.50 or under.

Notice of Expiration is sent to the subscriber two or three weeks before renewal is due, so that by immediate attention to this reminder not an issue need be missed. RENEW PROMPTLY.

Remittances should be made by draft on New York or Chicago, or by Post-office Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

Change of Address. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE, $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
Foreign Postage, 52 Cents Additional

Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (Monthly) 50c a Year
Foreign Postage, 12 Cents Additional

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., post-office as second class matter. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized August 20, 1918.

Evanston, Illinois, September 14, 1922

Constitution Day—How Will You Observe It?

"Constitutionalists, not prohibitionists, should be our name now that prohibition is in the Federal Constitution of the United States," declared John G. Woolley, speaking as an American only a few weeks before his death, to a London audience.

Constitutionalist—the term is significant, connotes loyalty, patriotism, belief in, and allegiance to, the principles of true democracy upon which the United States of America is founded.

It is an opportune time to enlarge and enrich our vocabulary with this new name—constitutionalist—for September is the birth month of our Federal Constitution; on September 17 that sacred document will be one hundred and thirty-five years old, having been adopted September 17, 1787.

Let us, as constitutionalists, believers in and observers of the Constitution of the United States, from its first to last provision, from Amendment 1, to and including Amendment 19, celebrate the occasion and get our friends and neighbors to unite with us. It ought to be easy to interest the teachers in the public schools and colleges to include, that week, special lessons or talks, on the Federal Constitution. The editor of your local paper would undoubtedly be grateful to you for suggesting so timely a topic for editorial comment, with special reference to the Eighteenth Amendment and its enforcement, and if he is wise in his generation, he will publish a telling birthday story relative to the honored Constitution.

Your young people will only need to be told about that remarkable pageant, impersonating the nineteen Amendments, given at the time of the International Congress Against Alcoholism, in Washington, D. C., in 1920, to be spurred on to arrangement for something similar, if not quite as pretentious.

It would, indeed, be an admirable idea to make your September meeting a constitutional occasion. Invite all the women of other societies, have a peppy quiz on the Constitution, all members being prepared to respond.

Let us become worthy the new name, Constitutionalists, by informing ourselves regarding the provisions of the document, that we may bring intelligently to the attention of others its wonderful history.

William Ewart Gladstone said of our Constitution, "It is the greatest document of its class that ever sprang from the mind of man." Shame be upon the would-be vendors of alcoholic liquors who are making the first organized attack upon this venerated magna charta of our liberties. Let us, as Constitutionalists, rise in our might and check this movement to nullify the Constitution.

RESOLUTION

SUGGESTED FOR ADOPTION BY CHURCHES AND OTHER INFLUENTIAL ORGANIZATIONS

W. C. T. U. speakers are urgently requested to secure from all meetings which they address the adoption of this resolution:

RESOLVED: That we declare against any modification of the Volstead Code which would admit wine or beer or otherwise weaken enforcement, and will do all in our power to insure the election November 7, 1922, of members of the United States Congress and state legislatures who will work and vote for the retention and enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Code.

(Through your local papers give wide-spread publicity to the resolutions thus secured.)

A Campaign of Appreciation

If It Should Happen Some Morning——

"Hello, Central, I would like to speak to the law enforcement official? Yes, something important, please. No, never mind my name. Just a citizen. Good morning, Mr.—— I don't want to trouble you, I know you are a very busy man, but I want to thank you most heartily for myself and family, and the community, for the heroic work you are doing to enforce the law. We do appreciate your splendid efforts."

Or

"Central, please give me Judge —. Can't find his number in the phone book. Thank you. Good morning, Judge —. Will you pardon me for calling you to the phone? I couldn't wait for the slow processes of the mail to tell you how great is the appreciation of the W. C. T. U. of the way you are handling the bootlegging cases in our community, especially the flagrant one that came up yesterday. We are so proud of you, and so grateful for your just verdicts. We wish there were a million like you in the country."

Or

"Is this the office of the chief of police? If he's busy, I'll call again. Is it a complaint? No, tell him it's quite the contrary. Good morning, Chief. I don't wonder you are surprised to get anything except complaints. I confess I've been quick enough to enter those, but this time it is most hearty commendation, and I'd like to make it emphatic enough to cover a good many sins of omission in the past along that line. I want to register not my protest but my appreciation and gratitude for the way you are cleaning up this town, and trying to make it a decent place for the youngsters. I know it's a hard job with a lot of criticism even when you do your best. Count on me to help whenever I can."

Or

"Good morning. Is this the editor of the News? I know this is probably your busy morning, and I'll only take a second, but I want to pass on to you the high commendation I have heard on every hand of your strong, logical editorial on prohibition that appeared in yesterday's paper. So many people have spoken of it, and we are very grateful to you for expressing the sentiment of the best people of this community through your paper."

To Do Much Good

Perhaps you recall the story of the professor who wished to demonstrate to his classes the power of persistent force. An iron ball was hung from the ceiling of his classroom. It was not easy to move even with a strong arm, but a bit of cork was hung beside it, and repeatedly swung against the iron ball. The pupils laughed at the apparent futility of the action, but the professor persisted. After some time had passed, a quiver went through the iron ball, then it began to sway, and by and by it was swinging in time to the blows of the cork. Then the professor stopped the cork, and at once the heavy ball lessened the length of its path, little by little again becoming motionless.

Temperance workers have employed a like method, with like results. At first their efforts seemed puny, feeble, useless, even foolish, but they kept on—and on—and on—until today's attainment has been reached.

Much has been accomplished, but not enough. The blows must be continued if public opinion favoring prohibition is not to die. Education of sentiment must proceed steadily until every man, woman and child in our land, and in all other lands, knows that alcohol is a poison and that it must be kept out of the human system if it would do its best work. Even then we dare not cease our endeavors to retain the knowledge gained.

What is the sentiment of your community toward law enforcement? You may be a single individual, alone in the stand you take, but remember that if a cork can sway a massive iron ball, you "in your little corner" can deliver telling blows against the hosts of evil, and that simply by force of your continued efforts. Talk, write, work and pray, remembering that "If you would do much good, keep doing a little,." How greatly we need to impress such a truth upon our minds and hearts!

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA, NOVEMBER 11-16, 1922

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA, NOVEMBER 17-19, 1922.

W. C. T. U. OF IOWA DEDICATES HEADQUARTERS

Ella M. Hill, State Vice-President

On July 6-July 7 occurred a red letter event in the annals of the Iowa W. C. T. U., for on these days our state headquarters was formally opened.

Last March we purchased a beautiful residence located at 25th Street and Kingman Boulevard, Des Moines. With some changes, the house is admirably adapted to our needs. On the first floor is our headquarters, consisting of a private office for our president, a general office, reception room, dining room, kitchen, two bedrooms and bathroom. Our president makes her home here. On the second and third floors are beautifully appointed apartments, which are well rented and will bring a tidy sum to help the work.

A series of receptions was held and an impressive dedicatory service.

Several years ago, a beautiful, large Bible, lettered in gold, "W. C. T. U.," was presented to the state W. C. T. U. for its headquarters to be, by one of our dear faithful workers, Mrs. M. J. Blake, now past eighty years of age. At her request the ninety-first Psalm was read from it. Our own Ida B. Wise Smith, state president, gave the address and our loved Mrs. L. D. Carhart voiced the dedicatory prayer.

Club women, missionary women, and all women interested were invited, and on the evening of the first day, honorary members and ministers and their families were our guests. The second evening state and city officials were present. A stringed orchestra of Filipino boys, who are in the city attending Drake University, rendered beautiful music throughout the receiving hours. The Garber quartet, one of the most celebrated musical groups, and children of our own Mrs. M. P. Garber, treasurer of the Des Moines federation, delighted our guests both evenings with their wonderful singing. All said they were glad to give their services to the W. C. T. U. Refreshments were served. In the receiving line were all of the state officers and the board of trustees. Dining room and parlor hostesses were officers of the unions of Des Moines.

The occasion was a decided success in every way. The W. C. T. U. was congratulated upon its fine home and the surroundings. Some said they could not see how it happened that Iowa W. C. T. U. found two such beautiful spots as Benedict Home and our new headquarters. We replied that it was in answer to prayer.

An appropriate and happy conclusion was one of the unplanned events that are the joy of W. C. T. U. meetings—the reception of a white ribbon recruit. Mary Elizabeth Hagen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Hagen (the mother, daughter of Mrs. A. M. Edworthy, state Legislative superintendent, having had the ribbon tied on her wrist by Frances E. Willard), was presented by father and mother, grandfather and grandmother and surrounded by "organized mother love." The dedication of this dear child exemplified the work to which the headquarters is pledged—to make the world safe for the little folks.

Members of England's Royal Family at Meeting to Consider Memorial to Lady Henry Somerset

Friends of Lady Henry Somerset in England are planning to perpetuate her memory by the continuation of her work at Duxhurst. At a drawing room meeting recently held for the promotion of this enterprise, there were present Her Royal Highness, Princess Christian, and Her Highness, Princess Marie Louise. The Earl of Shaftesbury was chairman of the meeting. He appealed for generous support for the perpetuation of the Duxhurst home for suffering women and children, that it might continue to be a living and permanent memorial to the noble personality and devoted service of Lady Henry Somerset, its founder.

Try It In Your Church

One of the officers of the big women's Bible class in the Lake Avenue Baptist Church of Rochester, N. Y. (of which Helen Barrett Montgomery is president), was given a copy of the leaflet, "Why a Million Members?" and asked to make a canvass of the class and endeavor to get its members to join the W. C. T. U. This was done, and the latest report is to the effect that fifty women have enrolled and paid their dues. The movement spread and women from other churches asked for and ordered quantities of the leaflet and are campaigning for members in their respective Bible classes. What has worked so well in Rochester, will work in your town. Why not try it?

Please note the change of residence of Mrs. Blanche Read Johnston, honorary secretary World's W. C. T. U. Her new address is 2 Slade Ave., Toronto, Canada.

State Conventions

Maine, North Berwick, September 20-22.
North Dakota, Fargo, September 21-25.
Kentucky, Covington, September 22-24.
Virginia, Danville, September 25-28.
Rhode Island, Newport, September 26-28.
New Hampshire, Lancaster, September 26-28.
Washington (West), Tacoma, September 26-29.
Wisconsin, Rice Lake, September 28-October 1.
Tennessee, Springfield, September 29-October 2.
Pennsylvania, Williamsport, September 24-October 3.
Montana, Kalispell, October 1-4.
Washington (East), Spokane, October 3-6.
Maryland, Walkersville, October 4-6.
New York, Gloversville, October 5-9.
Kansas, Salina, October 10-13.
Oregon, McMinnville, October 10-13.
Missouri, St. Louis, October 10-13.
Idaho (South), October 10-13.
Delaware, Smyrna, October 11-13.
Oklahoma, Enid, October 12-16.
Nebraska, Lincoln, October 13-17.
Indiana, Wabash, October 13-16.
North Carolina, Spencer, October 14-18.
California (North), Modesto, October 16-20.
Connecticut, New London, October 17-19.
Colorado, Pueblo, October 17-19.
Massachusetts, Hyannis, October 17-19.
Alabama, Albany, October 17-19.
Illinois, Decatur, October 17-20.
Ohio, Findlay, October 17-20.
Georgia, Douglasville, October 17-20.
South Dakota, Mitchell, October 18-23.
South Carolina, Newberry, October 20-23.
Vermont, Burlington, October 24-26.
Iowa, Oskaloosa, October 24-27.
Arkansas, Paragould, October 25-27.
New Jersey, Camden, November 9-10.

For God and Home and Every Land

Time of Prayer—Noontide

"It is always noontide somewhere,
And across the awakening continents,
From shore to shore, somewhere,
Our prayers are rising ever more."

Then shall we know, if we follow on to know the Lord.—Hosea 6:3.

Thy Will Be Done

This is the safest prayer to pray,
"Thy will be done,"
Along the world's unlighted way,
Where unseen dangers run;
So, though for all the saints we pray,
Or but for one,
Upon this rock our hearts may stay;
His will shall yet be done.

This is the surest prayer to pray,
"Thy will be done,"
Along the world's uncertain way,
Where crowding terrors run;
For though our dearest plans may fail,
Our hopes die, one by one,
Though heaven and earth shall pass away,
His will shall yet be done.

—Annie Johnson Flint.

O God, cleanse our souls from sin! Fill us with the love of Christ! Teach us how to serve thee, how to give ourselves to the doing of thy will, how to deny self, how to follow our Lord! Help us to enter into the liberty of the children of God! For Christ's sake. Amen.

—Record of Christian Work.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. HEADQUARTERS

GENERAL OFFICERS.

PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL.
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, FARGO, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA.
TREASURER
MRS. MARGARET C. MUNNS, EVANSTON, ILL.

1730 Chicago Avenue, Evanston, Ill.

REST COTTAGE

RED LETTER DAYS

September 28—Children's Harvest Home (Birthday of Frances E. Willard).
October 29—World's Temperance Sunday.

TRANSPORTATION NOTES

WORLD'S AND NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTIONS, NOVEMBER, 1922

Tour No 1. For those who wish to spend Saturday, November 11, in Washington, D. C., and who do not plan to go to Toronto.

A train on the Pennsylvania Railway will leave the Union Station, Chicago, Friday, November 10, at 10:30 a. m., arriving in Washington at 8:00 a. m. The day will be spent sightseeing, and the trip to Philadelphia will be resumed at 4:30 p. m., arriving in the convention city at 7:30 p. m. The return trip can be made at the delegates' pleasure as no special arrangements will be made by the transportation committee. Apply for reservations to W. E. Blachley, Division Passenger Agent, Pennsylvania Railway, 323 South Wells Street, Chicago.

Tour No. 2. For those who wish to attend the World League against Alcoholism meeting in Toronto, Canada, November 25-29.

A train on the New York Central will carry special cars for delegates leaving Chicago, Friday, November 10, at 5:00 p. m., connecting at Buffalo with the Lehigh Valley road. No change of cars will be necessary. Arrival at Philadelphia will be at 8:08 p. m. Apply for reservations to Mr. C. Hartigan, Ass't. Gen. Pass. Agt., New York Central Railroad, La Salle Street Station, Chicago.

Tickets on the going trip will be available on the Pacific Coast November 7 to 13 and in all other parts of the country and Canada, November 8 to 14. By either route, the one way fare, Chicago to Philadelphia, is $29.46. The return trip will be one-half of the regular fare. The Pullman fares are as follows from Chicago, either route: Lower berth, $8.25; upper, $6.60; drawing room, $30.00; compartment, $23.25.

The trip from Philadelphia to Toronto will be made on the Lehigh Valley road, leaving Philadelphia, Tuesday, November 21, at 8:40 p. m. Several hours will be spent at Niagara Falls, arriving in Toronto at 9:43 p. m., November 22. Tickets must be deposited at Buffalo by all delegates who hold tickets to any point east or west of Buffalo.

An agent of the railroad will be at the convention November 15 and 18 for the purpose of validating tickets. Immediately on arrival in Philadelphia tickets should be left at convention headquarters, the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, with Miss Elizabeth Newman, secretary of the transportation committee. On the return the final limit for leaving Philadelphia is December 1. Delegates must arrive at starting point December 3 for all but Pacific Coast points.

The fare from Buffalo to Toronto is $3.67. The pullman fare from Philadelphia to Toronto is as follows: lower berth, $5.25; upper, $4.20; drawing room, $19.50; compartment, $14.75. Reservations for this trip may be made at the convention.

The Pennsylvania and New York Central railroads have prepared a special letter covering details of trips mentioned, which may be obtained on application to the railroads.

It is very important that reservations for either tour from Chicago to Philadelphia should be made as soon as possible. If a sufficient number make reservations, either or both roads will run a special train for the exclusive use of the delegates.

Parties living east of Chicago may join either tour at the most convenient point; western delegates will join in Chicago.

Be sure to secure a certificate from your railroad agent at the time of purchasing your ticket. Do not make the mistake of asking for a receipt. No refund of fare will be made because of failure to secure certificate.

N. B. In order to secure reduced fare, tickets must be purchased going and returning over the same route.

Posters Will Win Votes—Give Them a Chance

Lincoln on Reverence for Law.
The Eighteenth Amendment. (Stand by the Flag and the Constitution.)
Guard Their Future.
Forge a Chain.
For Their Sakes Enforce the Law.
Booze Stands Between—
Total Abstinence Must be Taught.
Milk or Beer?
The Destroyer.
Successful Men.
Lincoln's Prophecy (Portrait of Abraham Lincoln with prophecy).

Price, 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00. (One kind or assorted). Please send remittance with order.

New Campaign Poster "Vote Right"

A Woman's Appeal to Women. Attractively illustrated. Order in quantities. Use in every available place where it will reach the eyes of women. Price, single copy, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00; per 100, $7.50. Please send remittance with order.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois

Over-match the A. A. P. A.

Every New Member for the W.C.T.U. Is That Much More Power Registered in Defense of Prohibition

TO GAIN MEMBERS POSTERIZE YOUR COMMUNITY WITH THESE STRIKING NEW POSTERS

(Size 19 x 25. Price, each, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00.)

For Their Sakes Enforce the Law.
Booze Stands Between —.
Forge a Chain.

HAVE YOU SEEDED DOWN THE FIELD IN YOUR VICINITY WITH THESE NEW MEMBERSHIP COMPELLERS?

IF NOT, DO IT NOW!

The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment Appeals to Millions By Way of the Printed Page
Do Thou Likewise

We List Herewith SPECIAL HELPS

Order in quantities, enclose in envelopes with membership cards and a personal note of invitation, and hand or mail to the women of your church, missionary society, club, lodge, etc.

Titles of Leaflets and Prices. Each Leaflet a Winner.

(Leaflets, 2 cents each)

Why You Should Join the Half-Million Women of the W. C. T. U. Price, per 100, 50 cents; per 50, 30 cents.

Why I Am a White Ribboner Today.

Why a Million Members?

Price, per 50, 25 cents; per 100, 45 cents.

OTHER LEAFLETS:

W. C. T. U. Co-operation the Community Keynote.
Jubilee Membership Campaign Songs.
Mobilize a Million Members.

Price, per 50, 35 cents; per 100, 60 cents.

Declaration of Principles.
Purpose and Scope of the W. C. T. U.
Recruiting for Membership.

Price, per 100, 20 cents; per 50, 15 cents.

PLEDGES AND CARDS

Membership Appeal card, with vignette and autograph signature of Anna A. Gordon. Per 100, 50 cents.

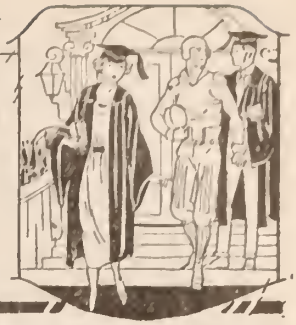
W. C. T. U. Coupon Pledge. Per 100, 45 cents.

Y. P. B. Invitation Card. Per 100, 50 cents.

Order in quantities, enclose in envelopes with membership cards and a personal note of invitation, and hand or mail to the women of your church, missionary society, club, lodge, etc.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE,
Evanston, Illinois

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE



SHAKESPEARE AND LAW ENFORCEMENT

Laura Bell Everett

Cast of Characters:
ANTONIO, the Merchant of Venice, the HOME.
BASSANIO, his friend, BUSINESS INTERESTS.
PORTIA, ENFRANCHISED WOMAN.
SHYLOCK, the LIQUOR INTERESTS.
BELLARIO, MODERN SCIENCE.
THE DUKE, the GOVERNMENT.

Enter the Duke, Antonio, Bassanio, and others.

Duke. What, is Antonio here?

Antonio. Ready, so please your Grace.

Duke. I am sorry for you. You are come to answer
A stony adversary, an inhuman wretch,
Uncapable of pity, void and empty
Of any dram of mercy.

Antonio. I do oppose my patience to his fury and am armed
To suffer with a quietness of spirit
The very tyranny and rage of his.

Duke. Go one; let Shylock come into the court.

Messenger. He is ready at the door; he comes, my lord.

Duke. Make room and let him stand before our face.
Shylock, the world thinks and I think so, too,
That thou knowest not the evil thou dost scatter;
That when thou seest it in its magnitude
Thou'll show thy mercy and remorse more strange
Than is thy strange apparent cruelty.

Shylock. I have possessed your Grace of what I purpose:
I'll have the due and profit of my license.
If you deny it let the danger light
Upon the vaunted freedom of your country.
A country free is this and I, a free man,
Am free to do what pleaseth with mine own.
What if my house be troubled with a rat
When plague bubonic stalks from land to land?
I would defy those officers of law
Who fain would kill the rat that haunts my house.
What if my cows be scattering the seeds
Of fever you call typhoid in the land?
I'll sell their milk as I have done before;
I do defy you and your ordinance.
A man may do what pleaseth with his own.

Bassanio. This is no answer, thou unfeeling man,
To excuse the current of thy cruelty.

Shylock. I am not bound to please thee with my answer.

Bassanio. Do all men kill the thing they do not love?

Shylock. Hates any man the thing he would not kill?

Bassanio. Every offense is not a hate at first.

Shylock. What, would you have a serpent sting you twice?

Antonio. I pray you, think. This is the Liquor Traffic.
You may as well go stand upon the beach
And bid the main flood bate its usual height;
You may as well use question with the wolf
Why he has made the ewe bleat for her lamb;
You may as well do anything most hard,
As seek to soften that—than which what's harder?—
The Liquor Interests in their heartless course.

Duke. Upon my power I may dismiss this court
Unless Great Science, a learned doctor
Whom I have sent for to determine this,
Come here to-day.

Salerio. My lord, there stays without
A messenger with letters from the doctor.

Duke. Bring us the letters. Call the messenger.
[Enter Nerissa]

Duke. Come you with messages from Science?

Nerissa. I do, my lord.

Bassanio (to Shylock). Why dost thou whet thy knife so earnestly?

Shylock. To cut the very heart from out the home.

Bassanio. Not on thy sole, but on thy soul, fell fiend,
Thou makest the knife keen, but no metal can—
No, not the hangman's ax—bear half the keenness
Of thy insidious blade that layest low
Who lovest thee best.

Shylock. Till you can rail the seal from off my license,
You but offend your lungs to speak so loud.
I stand here for the law.

Duke. This letter from great Science does commend
A young and learned doctor to our court.
Where is he?

Nerissa. He attendeth here hard by.

Duke. Go, give him courteous conduct to this place. Meantime the court
Shall hear the letter.

(Nerissa reads.) You shall understand that I, Modern Science,
Have put the facts that all the race should know
Into the hands of Doctor Balthasar.
I beseech you, let his lack of years in public life
Be no impediment in your estimation,
For I never knew so young a body with so old a head.

Duke. You hear the learned Science, what he writes,
And here, I take it, is the doctor come.

[Enter Enfranchised Woman as Portia, now known as Balthasar.]

Duke. Give me your hand. Came you from Science?

Portia. I did, my lord.

Duke. Antonio and old Shylock, both stand forth.

Portia. Are you the Liquor Interests?

Shylock. I am the Liquor Interests. Shylock is my name.

Portia. Of a strange nature, truly, is your business
Yet in such rule that this our law
Can not impugn you as you do proceed.
You stand within his mercy, do you not?

Antonio (The Home). Ay, so he says.

Portia. You recognize his license?

Antonio. I do.

Bassanio. I do beseech you
Wrest once the law to your authority.
To do a great right, do a little wrong
And curb this cruel devil of his will.

Portia. It must not be. Or many an error by the same example
Will rush into the state. It can not be.

Shylock. A Daniel come to judgment! yea, a Daniel.
O wise young judge, how I do honor thee.

Portia. I pray you, let me look upon the license.

Shylock. Here 'tis, most reverend doctor, here it is.

Portia. Why, lawfully by this Shylock may claim
The right to buy, to sell, to give, to offer
To whom he will, but you will wreck the homes,
And injure manhood. Be merciful
And bid me tear the license.

Shylock. When it is used according to the tenor.
It doth appear you are a worthy judge;
You know the law, your exposition
Has been most sound; I charge you by the law
Whereof you are a well-deserving pillar
Proceed to judgment; by my soul I swear
There is no power in the tongue of man

(Continued on Page Twelve)

To alter me; I stay here on my bond.

Portia to Antonio. You must permit this business to continue.

Shylock. O noble judge, O excellent young man!

Portia. For the intent and purpose of the law
Has full relation to the penalty.

Shylock. 'Tis very true, O wise and upright judge.

Portia. Therefore submit yourself unto this traffic
That stabs the very bosom of the home.

Shylock. So says the license; doth it not, noble judge?

Portia. It is so. Can you assurance give
That harm will not result, nor grief, nor sorrow
To those who use the beverages you offer?

Shylock. Is it so nominated in the license?

Portia. It is not so expressed, but what of that?
'Twere good you do so much for charity.

Shylock. I can not find it; 'tis not in the license.

Portia. A pound of flesh, close to the heart of home;
The court awards it and the law doth give it.

Shylock. Most rightful judge, a sentence, come, prepare.

Portia. Tarry a little; there is something else.
The law doth give thee here no souls or bodies.
The words expressly are to sell, to purchase.
Take then thy license, buy and sell and offer,
But in the traffic, if thou wreck the home,
Thy lands and goods are by the law confiscate
Thereby unto the state.

Shylock. Is this the law?

Portia. Thyself shall see the act.
Thou shalt have justice, soft, no haste;
Therefore prepare to buy and sell and offer;
But in the traffic, wreck no home or heart.
Cause thou no drinker's hand to be less steady,
No drinker's eye to see what is not there,
Or, seeing it, to see it warped or double.
Nay, if the home be wrecked, if fathers turn
To beat the children they should clothe and feed;
If young men lose the clearness of their eyes,
The keenness of their brain, the power to think;
If mothers shrink in bitterness of grief
From him who vowed to love and to protect;
If they who drink have redness of the eyes
And woe and sorrow, thou, thou diest;
Thou diest, and thy goods are confiscate.

Shylock. Give me my holdings then and let me go.

Portia. The law has yet another hold upon you.
If it be proved against an alien
That by direct or indirect attempts
He seek the life of any citizen,
He shall deported be. It now appears
That indirectly and directly, too,
Thou hast contrived against the very life
Of sacred home, the heart of our fair land.
Down therefore; of the Government beg mercy.

Antonio. O Government, no malice moves my asking.
No vengeance do I ask, but only freedom
From all I suffered at his hands aforetime.
Save, save the home from all the blighting evils
That liquor brings on babes and maids and women.
O banish drink with its attendant evils.
Exile the curse that fills the land with sorrow.

Duke. Shylock of the age,
No longer shield we this nefarious traffic;
From this fair land begone with all your horrors.
Remove from us this curse, the curse of liquor.

[Exit Shylock]

And now I call on men for law enforcement;
Let not the hidden sale of drink continue;
Let not the rich evade with well-stocked cellars;
Let not the poor dare death by rankest poisons;
Let all the people rise for law enforcement.

The Wets Attempt to Educate the People

(Continued from Page Three)

of money, carry on a campaign, and knock them out again. The people must be educated to see that beer and wine are not intoxicating, and constitute true temperance."

In California, the efforts of the wets have been two-fold—the nomination and election of wet candidates for state and national legislatures, and the defeat of the Wright Act at the November polls. It is said that the hardest campaign ever made by the liquor interests in this state is now being directed against the Wright Act, "publicly, secretly, politically, commercially, and socially," because, if it is conscientiously and efficiently enforced, it will put an end to bootlegging. The fight is being waged in every town, large and small, and is carried even to the farmhouses. It has been found that there has been deliberate misrepresentation of the meaning of the Act. In Berkeley, a dry city, a center of education, thirty-seven men in the business district were asked the question, "What is the Wright Act?" Eight answered correctly, 29 were of the opinion that it "is a law to make California dry forever." In Oakland, 59 gave this last answer, nine had read the Act, and three were "not interested," and other towns were similarly uninformed.

In New York it is stated that the women up-state are solid for prohibition and that no one doubts that the majority of the women in the state are dry. The women of the Democratic state committee declared at their convention that a wet plank in the party platform would mean the loss of thousands of votes. Nevertheless, the wets are doing their utmost to win the women over. They have the names of a few well-known New York women as a committee, and with these as bait expect to win some who hope thereby to advance themselves socially. Others are approached with the argument that the anti-prohibition campaign offers an opportunity for association with wealthy New Yorkers which will further the business success of their husbands. But there is no question that the great majority of members will be gained from the alien population.

Frederick William Wile reminds us in one of his series of articles that New York is 75 per cent foreign-born, Italians predominating, with low-class Jews from Russia, Poland, and Galicia a close second. Many a foreigner is lured here by tales of easy fortunes. When he arrives he is taught bootlegging and makes his pile and goes back to his native land before American laws can reach him.

Prohibition is so important a topic that most magazines and papers are devoting to it much time and attention. Alson Secor is writing a series of articles for Successful Farming on "Bamboozled by Booze," in the second of which he makes the following pertinent suggestion: "You who have struggled for fifty years to create and build up a co-operative marketing plan, do you think we should give up the struggle for national prohibition after two years' attempt to mop up all the booze on hand and sent in since we decided to swear off? Shall we be quitters? That is the question for every citizen to answer one way or another. Don't be bamboozled by booze. The story is not all told. The boozers are doing their best to create a sentiment against the Volstead Act. Their side gets plenty of publicity. The other does not."

500 THINGS TO SELL BY MAIL
Remarkable new publication. Workable plans and methods. Loose-leaf, cloth binder. Prepaid $1.00. Walhamore Company, Lafayette Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.

W. C. T. U. Badges. Made of mother of pearl. Price 25 cents each. Address treasurer W. C. T. U., Jerusalem, Palestine. P. O. Box 443.

The "Money Earning Plan"
EARN MONEY FOR YOUR UNION, CHURCH, SOCIETY OR SCHOOL
For details write to
CHAS. R. DAVIS
184 Ward St.,
NEWTON CENTER, 59, MASS.

$1,000 PRIZE STORY FOR 15c
You must not miss reading Booth Tarkington's "Alice Adams," the story the whole country is talking about

Washington, D. C., Special—Announcement has just been made by the editor of the Pathfinder, that, in keen competition with other publishers, he has paid the highest price for the right to publish "Alice Adams," the great story for which Booth Tarkington recently received the famous $1000 Pulitzer prize. Hundreds of thousands of copies of this novel have been sold in book form at $2 each. This amazingly beautiful story of present-day American life, written in Tarkington's most fascinating style, will begin in the Pathfinder Sept. 23 and be published complete in thirteen issues of that splendid paper. The editor says he will send the paper for this period—13 weeks—to new subscribers who write to The Pathfinder, 218 Langdon Station, Washington, D. C., and inclose 15 cents in coin or stamps. You can also order for your friends, at 15 cents each; but send at once so as not to miss the start of the story, Sept. 23. It costs the editor a lot of money to do this, but he believes the fact that the Pathfinder is growing so fast proves it pays to invest in new friends.

W. C. T. U. Annual Field Day at Old Orchard, Maine, Memorable Occasion

Special Correspondence

The Maine W. C. T. U. held its annual field day at Old Orchard, August 16. The platform was beautifully decorated by Miss Allen in memory of her mother, Mrs. Charles F. Allen, the first president of the Maine W. C. T. U. Mrs. Althea G. Quimby presided and spoke on law enforcement, which was the keynote of the meeting. Hearty welcomes were extended by Miss Clara H. Meserve, president of the hostess county, and Mrs. Sophia Harvey, long-time president of the local union. The consecration and devotional hour was of deep interest. The remainder of the morning was given over to departmental work with a stirring address by Mrs. Gertrude Stevens Leavitt, editor of the Star in the East, and Mrs. Vena L. Johnson, state treasurer. At 1:30 came the children's hour, led by Miss Clara H. Meserve. An address on Christian citizenship was made by Mrs. Geo. H. Bass, state superintendent. A unique feature was a ministers' medal contest on the subjects, "Law Enforcement" and "No More War," conducted by Mrs. Julia E. Wells, state superintendent. This number was of special merit and greatly appreciated by a large audience. In the evening, there were readings and music by Mrs. Shaw and Mr. and Mrs. Kimball of Old Orchard. The crowning event of the day was the address by Dr. Valeria H. Parker, national director of the Social Morality department. The music throughout the day was in charge of Mrs. Ruth E. Walsh, state musical director, and was greatly enjoyed.

California on the Firing Line

The Northern California W. C. T. U. is asking the women to take this pledge:

"California must support the Constitution of the United States. Therefore, I promise, God helping me, to work, to sacrifice, to give and to fight, cheerfully and to my utmost, as if the whole issue of this Wright Law campaign depended upon me alone."

A Precinct Service Card which reads as follows is being signed by the women of San Francisco county:

"You may count on me for definite work in my precinct to assist in securing 100 per cent registration and vote of our law-respecting citizens for the Wright Anti-Bootlegging Law.

"Name .....Address.....Phone....
"Church .....Precinct....."

Campaign conferences are being held all over California, writes the President of California (South). Each local union of the larger towns in the county appoints a committee of strong women. They make a list of all women's organizations in the city. Each member of the committee takes her share of the list and secures the pledge of one woman of each society to attend an all-day conference. A box lunch is planned. The morning is given to discussion of campaign plans, answering objections to prohibition, discussing what the wets are doing, learning what the Wright Law is and what can be done to sustain it. In the afternoon, there is a speakers' training class, a ten or twenty minute Wright Law speech is outlined, and condensed information and method of appeal given. Every woman uses her note book and pencil throughout the day. The object of these gatherings is to prepare every woman present to make a speech to every society of which she is a member; then to secure her written pledge that she will do this.

For Distribution at Your Fairs
OPEN AIR MEETINGS
and Every Place Where People Congregate
FACTS! FACTS!! FACTS!!!

A Series of Seven New Leaflets to Put in the Hands of Voters. You are THE ONE to Distribute Them!

TITLES OF LEAFLETS:

Labor Leaders Outspoken for Prohibition.
Bankers Believe in Prohibition.
Health Experts Favor Prohibition.
Educators Commend Prohibition.
Women Want Prohibition.
Family Life Benefited by Prohibition.
Manufacturers Approve Prohibition.

Special price, per 100, 30 cents; per 1,000, $2.50. Order in quantities and use now! Please send remittance with order.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois

W. C. T. U. Activities

The Ithaca (N. Y.) W. C. T. U. pays at the rate of $5 per week for space in the local papers, in which are published news, facts and arguments on the prohibition question. Mrs. Mary B. Wood is president of this very large, enterprising union.

Mrs. Cornelia T. Hatcher, president of the Alaska W. C. T. U., writes that Mrs. John B. Marshall, wife of the Federal prohibition director for the territory, has been appointed W. C. T. U. organizer for Alaska. She is touring the territory and meeting with marvelous success in securing new members. At Ketchikan, the first town visited, she enrolled eighty recruits for the W. C. T. U. In four towns, two of them only small villages, she gained a total of 285 members.

Members of the Atascadero (Calif.) W. C. T. U. recently arranged a pumpkin festival, which proved a great success. Caladero pumpkin flour was the basis of the many delicious articles of food served or sold at the demonstration counter in the Mercantile Building. Eighty pies were consumed and the crowds clamored for more. The variety of ways in which the pumpkin flour was used was astonishing, but pumpkin ice-cream, of very unusual and delicate flavor, tasted, perhaps, best of all. Pumpkin candy was another novelty. A good-sized audience assembled in the evening to enjoy an attractive program, which included catchy pumpkin rhymes given by children, and instrumental and vocal music. The union cleared $100.

Most inspiring was the convention of Crawford county (Pa.) W. C. T. U., held recently at Springboro. Among the items of interest which brought joy to the hearts of the delegates was the announcement that the county had added to its enrollment list, through the efforts of Mrs. Azuba Jones, national and state organizer and lecturer, one-hundred-twenty new members.

The convention was enlivened by the presence of Mrs. Viola D. Romans of Columbus, Ohio, organizer and lecturer, who won all hearts by her pleasing personality, beautiful voice and forceful and convincing logic. Mrs. Romans may always expect a hearty welcome and capacity audience in Crawford county.

Mr. Joseph Bohn, a talented violinist of Pittsburgh, rendered a violin solo that was greatly enjoyed.

Prepare for October 29, World's Temperance Sunday

Order All Supplies in Ample Time
Note Helps Here Named
(All leaflets 2 cents unless otherwise noted)

Quarterly Temperance Lesson of the International Sunday School Series, October 29. Should be early in the hands of every teacher. Prepared especially for teachers and officers. Price, per 100, 20 cents; per 50, 15 cents.

ENVELOPE LEAFLETS FOR STUDY AND DISTRIBUTION:

Duty of a Christian Citizen.
Clean Hands.
Marion Lawrence on Pledge Signing.
Beware Wine!
Listen, Boys!
Counting Fingers.
God's Bottles.
Why Sign the Pledge.
Lincoln's Appeal for Law.
Beer and Home Brew.
What Uncle Sam Says.
An Elder Sister's Advice to Boys. No. I.
An Elder Sister's Advice to Boys. No. II.
An Elder Sister's Advice to Girls. Nos. 1, 3, 4.
Safety First, Boys!

Price, per 100, 20 cents; per 50, 15 cents.

RECITATIONS FOR PRIMARY AND JUNIOR CLASSES:

Two Offerings.
Look Not Upon the Wine.
Where There's Drink There's Danger.

Price, per 100, 25 cents; per 50, 15 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois

Playlets Will Help to Make Sentiment and Votes—Use Them

Temperance Day Program for Public Schools. New, unique and attractive. Can be used in Sunday schools or for an evening program as well as in public schools. Price per copy, 5 cents; per doz., 45 cents; per 100, $3.00; per 1,000, $2.50. Less than 100, at dozen rates.

World-wide the Joy. A Prohibition Hymn with pantomime. May be used with or without the latter. Price, 5 cents, single copy; per dozen, 25 cents.

The Binnybakers. Amusing and instructive; the plot centers about "home-brew." Easily arranged. Per copy, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00.

Lester Brown's Battle. (Total Abstinence and Anti-Cigaret). Per copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 35 cents.

The Eighteenth Amendment Forever. A very attractive playlet exactly suited to present needs; could be used on Temperance Sunday. Per copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.

A New "Alice in Wonderland." (For seven children). Exceedingly appropriate to present needs. Can be used in Public Schools, Sunday Schools, or as part of an evening's entertainment. Per copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 40 cents.

A Sick Baby. (For 12 little girls and one boy). Attractive as an interlude for a county or local institute meeting, club meeting, etc. Per copy, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00.

A Lark at Nonotuck Hall. An amusing and instructive exposé of the true character of "patent medicines." Suitable for a group of young women or high school girls. Per copy, 20 cents.

Order promptly and use above Playlets to advantage before election. Please send remittance with order.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

Perfection
NON-ALCOHOLIC FLAVORS
Taste Better
Flavor Does Not Bake Out

A combination of pure fruit and flavoring oils with vegetable oils, which carries and distributes the flavorings as well or better than alcohol, and instead of being harmful, has more food value than an equal amount of butter. Wonderful Vanilla and eleven other flavors. Representatives wanted. A permanent source of income for Unions, Church Societies, and individuals. 100% profit. No money required under our consignment plan.

Fletcher Production Co. Ext.
Dept. 429 E. 69th St., Chicago.

Special Helps for Sunday School Officers and Teachers, October 29

(All leaflets 2 cents unless otherwise noted)

How can the Superintendent Promote Temperance Teaching in the Sunday School?
Problems of the Physical Awakening.
Temperance Teaching.
The Temperance Sunday School Lessons.
A Study of the Pledge. (For Primary Class Workers).
Pen Points.
The Teachings of the Divine Savior Concerning Wine.
The Pledge. What Is It? Why Sign It?
Thorough Temperance Teaching the Demand of the Hour.
Temperance Instruction in the Sunday School. Its Need from a Bible Standpoint.
Price, per 100, 45 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

BLACKBOARD EXERCISES:
Prohibition in the United States.
The Total Abstainer on Safe Ground.

TEMPERANCE TALKS FOR PRIMARY AND JUNIOR WORKERS:
Look Not Thou Upon the Wine.
Beware of the Wine Cup.
Watch! The Thief Is Alcohol.
Destruction.
Sin in the Heart.
Price per 100, 45 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

LEAFLETS:
World's Temperance Sunday—Citizenship Recognition Day.
The Sunday School Pledge Flag (Method Leaflet).
Temperance Sunday—Program for Sunday Schools.
Sunday School Recognition of Young Voters.
Responsive Reading (Christian Citizenship).
Responsive Reading (Bible Temperance).
Responsive Reading (Signing the Pledge).
Responsive Reading (Bible Wines).
Responsive Reading (Bible Total Abstinence).
Posters in the Sunday School.

Citizenship Questionnaire.
The Sunday School and Law Enforcement.
Sunday School National Prohibition Guards.
The Forward Look of the Sunday School Department.
The Sunday School and Social Service.
Price, per 100, 45 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

Program—Recognition of Young Voters. Four pages. Price, per 100, 75 cents; per 50, 40 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

Whose Was the Sin?

Mary B. Tyrrell

The bell was tolling from the nearby steeple. Twenty-four strokes tortured the summer air.

"Yes," said my motherly landlady, in answer to the look of inquiry that I, a stranger in the town, gave her, "there's a funeral today, and I am hoping many another thing may be buried along with the poor child who has gone to her heavenly Father."

That evening, as we sat in the moonlight, she told me of the town tragedy the last chapter of which had that day been written.

"It was over twenty-five years ago that Julius Hawes came here to be book-keeper for our bank, and brought his bride with him. They lived in a cottage next door to us (it's only lately he moved to a fine house over on the hill), so I know all that anyone living next door could know of the happenings in the Hawes house. The little home he remodeled two or three times as the years went by but I can still picture the scenes of the last twenty years there. Julius was a good fellow, over-serious, rather pompous, but as well-meaning as a man could be, just the sort to figure as the 'prominent citizen,' and he soon acquired that title in our town. I often wonder why such men marry the women they do.

"Clara was of the butterfly sort, but he did not give her a chance to show it, as he never went in for the kind of things she liked.

"She could talk easily and with the help of dictionary and encyclopedia could put together a deep sounding paper. Since she chose the subjects that seemed too heavy for the other women, she soon gained a reputation for intellect that I never thought she deserved. She had had good housekeeping practice in her mother's home, and she liked to tell just how things ought to be done, which, of course, did not make friends for her.

"She brought up her children in the same superior fashion, though regarding them as something of an inconvenience. There were Rose and Louise, then Robert, born when the girls were eight and six. Before Rose was out of long dresses, Clara made club talks on the training of children and picked up a catchword that governed her whole life from that time on, something about 'the unhampered individuality of childhood,' which she interpreted to mean that every youngster should do exactly as its own conscience or lack of conscience might suggest.

"I've had children of my own, four boys and a girl, good children, too, but there never was one of them who didn't need to be 'hampered' more or less, mostly more, while they were learning the way to live with other folks.

"She was a willful, venturesome child who had a natural inclination to all sorts of experiments in naughtiness. My Susan was just like her, but Susan was prayerfully disciplined for the same things Rose did. Rose's little sister, Louise, was as placid as a May morning, and her mother frequently held her up as an example of successful child training.

"I always loved Rose the best, though, in spite of her tantrums, for she would be penitent before they were hardly over, and would run across to my house to tell me all about it. I am sure I knew a lot more about her thoughts and feelings than her own people did. Her mother would never 'hamper her individuality' by inviting her confidences.

"Clara was too busy, by the time the girls were old enough for school, to pay very much attention to them. She had a hand in all the duties that fall to the wife of a leading citizen, for Julius was cashier of the bank by this time. She got him elected to the school board, then committed her club to a 'policy' of half baked notions of school reforms that drove the teachers frantic, but she did not a thing to reform her own little savage.

"Rose came to my house from school one afternoon in her first year. 'Aunt Anne' she said, 'I don't do any more what I usually do! The teacher sends me into the coat closet if I bite the little girl that sits with me!'

"A few such experiences made Rose, to outward appearances, a fairly law-abiding member of society, but she never lost her smouldering spirit of revolt, and by the time she was twelve the volcano began to rumble. 'Boy struck,' censorious ladies call a girl like Rose, but I conclude that any real girl has something of the same spirit in her, though, as my Susan said when we were talking one day of Rose's latest escapade, and I was thanking the Lord my own dear girl wasn't the least bit like her, 'Well, Mother, why should I be—with my four brothers; boys are no treat to me!'

"Rose's intense, self-centered 'unhampered individuality' made her wild for good times and forward in seeking to win the attention of those who could give her the fun she craved. The school boys of her age were still scornful of girlish charms and blandishments, so she threw herself in the way of men, who were only too ready to notice the pert young girl.

"Something of this came to her father. He learned of meetings on the depot platform, of evenings in dark corners at the park, of doubtful amusements with more doubtful company. He thundered at Rose and made her more furtive, more venturesome, and he demanded of her mother that she should keep watch over the girl. Clara tried to chaperone her wayward daughter, but the girl evaded her mother's half hearted attempts.

"One evening Clara came to me to ask me if I was going down town. Rose was determined to spend the evening at the skating rink, and some one should take her there and call to bring her home. As for herself she had a club committee meeting that evening.

"I went with Rose, and I stayed with her, watching the slim figure, in its tight black dress with audacious scarlet touches, flash provocatively in and out of the throng on roller skates. The music machine ground on, the lights glared garishly. The company was not the choicest, but the girl seemed drunken with the thrill of it, and threw inviting glances at utter strangers, unconscious, I truly believe, of her allurement. Next day I tried to talk with her, but while she heard my words of warning I could see she had no sense of danger, nor could I rouse her. A father helpless, a mother heedless, a young girl not at all aware of the risks she ran. I wondered, 'Who did sin, that she was born blind?'

"It was the summer, just before she was sixteen, that the crash came. An automobile was found wrecked in a ditch near town. There were evidences in the abandoned car of a wild orgy, but the occupants had vanished. The story gained headway that Rose Hawes and an older girl of doubtful reputation were the women of the party. I could have confirmed Rose's emphatic protests that she knew nothing of the affair. The car had been ditched after midnight; passersby had seen no sign of the wreck there up to that time. An hour before midnight, Rose had come sauntering home under the elms with Joe Hardy, a worthless town loafer. I heard them laugh softly and caught snatches of their conversation; I could not be mistaken. But to clear the girl of one charge by proving another would not mend the situation, for Joe Hardy was not the companion for a night ramble. I told her father what I knew, but we agreed that I would better keep silent.

Unexcelled for repairing china, glassware, earthenware, furniture, vases, books, etc. Famous since 1876. Major's rubber and Leather Cements are good.

Three kinds, 20c per bottle at dealers, or write us.

MAJOR MFG. CO., NEW YORK

"Rose realized then, as she never had done, what she was forfeiting, and when her father proposed that she be sent to a distant boarding school she assented eagerly, anxious to begin all over again. Her mother made elaborate preparations, and talked so much of her plans for Rose, that some of her intimates were goaded to whisper, 'Boarding school! Mm-m! Better send her to a Rescue Home!" An over critical lady who visited one of those homes in the city, brought back a murmur that she had caught a glimpse of Rose Hawes in its corridors, and so the story, all of foul air, grew and grew. When the girl came home the next summer, the falsehood had been strengthened to the absolute truth and all the denials her friends had made could never overtake the fast flying rumors.

"There was a sweet, patient womanliness about her that warmed my heart, and with her gentleness at home, she came very close to her sore-hearted father. She sharply warned Louise of some overboisterous companions and kept closer watch over the younger girl than their mother had ever done. I saw to it that my boys and Susan included her in all their plans that summer, and their circle of young folks took her into all their good times, though there were protests from some of the parents.

"She had developed a beautiful voice, and could have given us such music as we seldom heard in our town, but little if a chance was given her. She took the implied rebuke with lovely meekness, walked softly that summer before her critics, and in the fall went up to the state University, her heart set on accomplishing something worth while.

"Some gossiping tongues spread the stories that had been afloat in her home town, and she soon was aware of them. Nice girls' snubbed her, the sororities ignored her, and in six weeks she came home, her spirit broken, beseeching her father to send her away from the scorn he had met. He would have given her what she wished but her mother, vain and futile, insisted on keeping her at home and launching her in society. She issued invitations for a 'coming out party' but so many of the guests sent regrets that the affair fell rather flat.

"Next day the girl was gone. From bits of conversation that reached me from the house next door, I gathered that she had taken considerable money her father had in the house, and left without any farewells. He must have traced her, but he made no effort, that we knew, to bring her back. His pride was too shattered. Soon we heard, from Clara, that Rose was studying music in New York.

"A New York paper came the next winter, and some scantily clad chorus girls looked out from a flaming page of the Sunday supplement.

"In Rosamonde Robbins we could not help but recognize our old time Rose. My husband, the editor, brought home that paper from his pile of exchanges, unfolded it so I could see the horrid picture, then dropped it on the glowing grate. Sometimes the small town newspaper, for all its trivialities, is a graveyard for the family skeletons of the town's folks, and the editor deserves a halo for the things he never tells.

"We heard of Rose often in the next few years; her mother said she was a concert singer, and began to tell stories of her triumphs that the town folk, and even I, doubted. Last winter Louise was married to a classmate at the university, a fine young fellow. Clara planned a grand church wedding with invitations to more than fill the house, secure in the belief that no one would ignore her invitations, this time. The boy, Robert, had been in the hands of the police several times that winter, but even that could not ruffle his mother's calm assurance.

"Rose came the day before the wedding, though I doubt if she had sent word ahead of her visit, and few of us had seen her until she entered the church as maid of honor. Her dress, or lack of it, reduced us unsophisticated souls to gasping astonishment. Clara was rather enjoying the sensation, but I did wonder what the staid, portly banker father thought as he came down the aisle, the bride on his arm, her sister showing that awfully uncovered bare back and the gleaming shoulders.

"Before she vanished from the town, as suddenly as she had come, Rose came to see me, the same dear girl I had loved, when I could see the heart of her, but her face was flinty hard, and there was a note of abandon in her laughter.

"If you have been reading the papers, no doubt you have kept up with the latest chorus girl scandal. I wished I could ignore it, but I followed it through in our New York exchanges, and had my fears as to the leading woman in the sickening details of 'the last act.' But the story Clara has given out, of Rose's sudden death of pneumonia, is the gentlest thing we can think of the poor girl.

"I saw her today, in the peace of death, all the hard lines gone from her dear young face, and I have been wondering, wondering with an awful ache in my heart, what I might have done, what we might have done, and did not do, to bring the careless young girl past the dangers that beset her. And because it is too late for any of us to serve her now, the thought haunts me that there may be other girls coming up through those danger years to whom I might stand in place of some mother so careless she hardly deserves the name. The good Lord lay not the wreck of Rose Hawes to my charge, though maybe He ought to."

Before and After

Mr. A. Major, one of our valued advertisers, a staunch prohibitionist for forty years, sends us the following items showing the transformation wrought by prohibition:

"I enclose a leaflet of a furniture store of Redbank, N. J. It is a real credit to the city. Let me tell you that before prohibition it was one of the worst slum places in the whole town. It was a common occurrence to see the big room with a long line of people, colored as well as white, lined up at the bar. Now that city is free from the saloon and is very much improved.

"The LaFayette Hotel at Asbury Park is owned and run by Mrs. Frost and son. My wife and daughter stopped there eleven or twelve years ago, one season. The hotel was obliged to have a liquor room to accommodate the guests who insisted on having wine and liquor, but since we have prohibition, Mrs Frost told me, they do not ask for it any more. She was very glad to do away with the business and Asbury Park is cleaner than ever. They all appear to be doing a good business. If the weather had been good this season, it would have been one of the best."

All summer I have been traveling! I have climbed to the top of mountains, I have sojourned beside the sea; I have traveled by train, by steamer, by automobile, by horse. I have appeared in many strange places, but wherever you took me, I told the same story about the great event that is to take place in the "City of Brotherly Love" next November. Now, I am home again but I am not satisfied to remain in Philadelphia, because I have a mania for traveling; although I have been all around the world, there are still a few places where I have not been seen—yes, some cities right here in the United States have not yet invited me to visit them. Be hospitable, and give me an invitation to your town and introduce me to your friends. I ask only my expenses, and will take the next train to help you publish the good news to your folks. Send $3.00 and a thousand like me will hasten to your side; for $2.00 five hundred will come; for fifty cents, one hundred.

Please send remittance with order to
Mrs. James B. Scott
503 South 46th St.
Philadelphia, Pa.

CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT

THE UNION SIGNAL ..... $1.50 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance (monthly).....50c a year
Single Copies, 5c each; per 100 .....$2.75
Club rate for ten or more Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition subscriptions, 40c a year. No other premium allowed.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER ..... 35c a year
Single Copies, 3c each; per 100 .....$2.00

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES

THE UNION SIGNAL .....$2.00 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (monthly) .....62c a year
THE YOUNG CRUSADER .....47c a year

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL Evanston, Illinois

Thinking

Della F. Withers, Circulation Manager

It is evident everyone is thinking something all the time. The question is, is the thinking true or is it false? Some of us may be like the old farmer in a very isolated part of the country, who, when asked by strangers what he did all winter, replied, "Well, sometimes I set and think and sometimes I just set."

If we are "just setting," or if our thoughts about the prohibition question are false ones, it's time we commenced to think aright.

The first and best way to begin this progressive thinking is to get the facts about the subject, and these can easily be obtained through the regular reading of THE UNION SIGNAL.

If you are a member of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and think it unnecessary to keep informed on results already obtained through prohibition; think it not worth while to have facts to refute the many arguments going around these days; think it too much trouble to learn who are the right individuals to put into office election day; think it useless to acquaint your neighbors, friends, and community with the true situation, right this minute you should change your false way of thinking.

It is a critical period. This is not the time to "just set." You must think and act rightly.

Subscribe for THE UNION SIGNAL for a friend, pastor, library; be sure your own subscription is sent in; be faithful in passing your copy to others; appoint yourself a committee of one to send in at least one subscription for this valuable paper.

THE UNION SIGNAL (Weekly)...$1.50
THE UNION SIGNAL (6 Mos.)..... .75

An Ideal Union

Every Member Maywood Union, Oklahoma City, Okla., a UNION SIGNAL Subscriber

There is a very unique plan in operation in the Maywood union, one of four W. C. T. U. organizations in Oklahoma City, situated geographically east of the business center. THE UNION SIGNAL goes to every member in the union, about thirty in all, including honoraries, and also to every pastor on the east side of the city, ten in number. Mrs. Ellen Edwards is the progressive president. This union puts on a high class musicale once a year and has a fund of two or three hundred dollars to pay the state quota, furnish SIGNALS and do many other helpful things.

Go thou and do likewise.

TRIO TEAM COUNTY HONOR ROLL

1. Jackson County, Iowa.
2. Grady County, Georgia.
3. Boone County, Illinois.
4. Barton County, Kansas.
5. Harper County, Kansas.
6. LaPorte County, Indiana.
7. Norfolk County, Mass.
8. Jewell County, Kansas.
9. Washington County, Kansas.
10. Ohio County, West Virginia.
11. Dukes County, Mass.
12. Dubuque County, Iowa.
13. Shawnee County, Kansas.
14. Big Stone County, } Dist.
15. Stevens County, } No. 12
16. Traverse County, } Minn.
17. Winnebago County, Wisconsin.
18. Walworth County, Wisconsin.
19. Strafford County, N. H.
20. Wayne County, Ga.
21. Dunn County, Wisconsin.
22. Faribault County, Minn. (District No. 27)
23. Winnebago County, Iowa.
24. Hamilton County, Kansas.
25. Ottawa County, Kansas.
26. Woodson County, Kansas.
27. Martin County, } Dist.
28. Watonwan County, } No.
29. Jackson County, } 3
30. Cottonwood County, } Minn.
31. Cheyenne County, Nebraska
32. Kimball County, Nebraska
33. Norton County, Kansas.
34. Clark County, Kansas.
35. Marion County, Kansas.
36. Highland County, Ohio.
37. Upshur County, W. Va.
38. Payne County, Oklahoma.
39. Stanislaus County, California.
40. Merced County, California.
41. Deuel County, South Dakota.
42. Mills County, Iowa.
43. Union County, Iowa.
44. Dakota County, } Dist.
45. Goodhue County, } No. 26
46. Rice County, } Minn.
47. Olmsted County, } Dist.
48. Dodge County, } No.
49. Steele County, } 2
50. Waseca County, } Minn.
51. Crawford County, Kansas.
52. Cass County, Iowa.
53. Polk County, } Dist.
54. Marshall County, } No.
55. Pennington County, } 14
56. Norman County, } Minn.
57. Edmunds County, South Dakota
58. Mower County } Dist. No.
59. Freeborn County } 30, Minn.
60. Bell County, Kentucky.
61. Chippewa County, Wisconsin.
62. Eau Claire County, Wisconsin.
63. Blair County, Penna.
64. Ness County, Kansas.
65. Blue Earth County, Minn. (District No. 21)
66. Dawson County, Nebraska.
67. Ellis County, Kansas.
68. Woodbury County, Iowa.

Just From the Press for Your Schools

Outlines for Health and Temperance Teaching for the Grades of the Public Schools

New Pamphlet for Scientific Temperance Instruction in the Schools. Just what you want for your teachers. See that they are supplied. Price, per copy, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.25.

Order now for immediate use as the school year opens.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

UNION MEMBERS MAKE GOOD MONEY

Selling JERSEY CROWN FLAVORING POWDER (Non-Alcoholic) to their neighbors and friends on our liberal consignment plan. No money down. We furnish the powder and guarantee sales. You pay us when you sell it, or return at our expense. Write at once for our "Special Business Proposition."

JERSEY CROWN VANILLA CO.,
Dept. S, Valparaiso, Indiana

Quiz: Educating the People

1. "Because we are organized mothe love"—we have done and should do what
2. What is, according to the pastor o the Packingtown Community Church, th most hopeful thing about the present pro hibition situation?
3. How do foreign-born residents o Packingtown regard prohibition?
4. Give incidents illustrative of th attitude of children of foreign parentage toward prohibition.
5. Mention some noted women o Europe who are to attend the World's W C. T. U. Convention.
6. Using items concerning the work o various W. C. T. U.'s as a basis, suggest ways by which your union may help pro mote prohibition sentiment.
7. What is the greatest duty and heritage of the American school?
8. Give the story of the Maine Americanization center.
9. Show how the liquor forces are attempting to educate the people to bring back the traffic.
10. How may you help some one to think aright on the prohibition question?

No Better Campaign Document Than Our New Fan

Blue and white, with dry map, and eight pertinent quotations from eight prominent Americans. Each quotation a vote winner.

Use Them Liberally

At your Fairs, Open Air Meetings, in Waiting Rooms, Lodge Rooms, Churches, Rallies, Re-unions, etc., etc. Let our Campaign Fan talk for our Dry Law. Price, per 100, $5.00; per dozen, 70 cents. Please send remittance with order.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Ill.

Department of Child Welfare

OCTOBER PAPERS ARE READY

These papers are for individual study, Child Study Classes or Mothers' Meetings.

1. "The Pre-School Laboratory of the Iowa Child Research Station."
2. "Better Homes for America."

In many states the second week in October has been proclaimed as Better Homes Week. Better Homes mean better housing conditions, better sanitation, more sunshine, more fresh air, easier conditions for the housewife, happier, healthier children, more books, better pictures, more home spirit, more spiritual education.

Every superintendent of Child Welfare, state, county and local, is urged to initiate and help Better Homes Week. Have room demonstrations, window demonstrations of furnishings, pictures and posters. Study the paper, "Better Homes for America."

Send four cents for the two papers.

ELIZABETH A. PERKINS
ANN ARBOR, MICHIGAN.

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly — Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year in Advance

Entered as second class matter at the Postoffice at Evanston, Illinois

Vol. XLVIII — EVANSTON, ILLINOIS, SEPTEMBER 21, 1922 — No. 38

Members of the Shanghai Temperance Students' Alliance, from kindergarten to college. The picture was taken in the Pang Sung garden in Shanghai, China. Frances Willard Wang is seen in the center of the group.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

MANY PRAYERS OFFERED FOR MRS. HARDING'S RECOVERY—SENATE'S SPEED KEEPS CLERKS ON QUI VIVE—INDEPENDENT CITIZENSHIP BILL PASSED—MASSACHUSETTS AND SHEPPARD-TOWNER BILL—STATUS OF MATERNITY AND INFANT WELFARE ACT

LENNA LOWE YOST, National W. C. T. U. Legislative Representative, Washington, D. C.

Many Prayers Offered for Mrs. Harding's Recovery

Mrs. Harding's condition, which has been such as to cause the greatest apprehension during the past week, is now so improved as to encourage the hope that she will soon recover her health.

The announcement of her critical illness caused nation-wide sorrow, and elicited messages of sympathy for her and the President from every part of this and other countries.

Mrs. Harding's beautiful devotion to the duties that come to her as the first lady of the land have endeared her to all whose privilege it has been to meet her. Since becoming mistress of the White House more than a year and a half ago, she has given unstintedly of her time and strength almost daily, meeting large or small groups of plain or famous folk from all parts of the United States.

The public has learned many touching stories of prayerful devotion to Mrs. Harding. A rose for Mrs. Harding, who once gladdened his heart by her kindly sympathy in sending him flowers when he lay ill in a Wisconsin Avenue hospital, was purchased by Julius J. Jones, a poor, crippled, colored man. The fact was brought to light by a man living at one of the leading hotels, who said, "The poor old man asked me where the best flower stores were located. He said he wanted the best rose procurable for Mrs. Harding, who had given him flowers when he was sick in the hospital. When he had selected his flower and was on his way to the White House, he showed me a treasured card with Mrs. Harding's signature, acknowledging a previous presentation of flowers and expressing Mrs. Harding's kindly interest in him."

Richard L. Riddle, fifteen-year-old page in the United States Senate, went to the White House executive offices soon after Mrs. Harding was taken ill, with a printed copy of the one hundred and twenty-first Psalm, encased in a gift frame, with the following note to the President:

"I believe God is going to let Mrs. Harding live. My mother and I are praying for her recovery. I am giving you the one hundred and twenty-first Psalm. My dear father, who was a Methodist minister, repeated it just before God called him suddenly, and he dropped dead in the harness, as he wished.

"This Psalm has sustained us in many trials and I know it will sustain you now."

"I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help," the Psalm begins.

The physicians declared that Mrs. Harding's wonderful pluck and courage inspired their greatest measure of hope. Her solicitude for her husband and the attending physicians has been most remarkable. While Brigadier-General Sawyer, the President's family physician, was holding a consultation with his son, Dr. Carl W. Sawyer, Dr. John T Boone and Dr. John M. T. Finney of Baltimore, Mrs. Harding called to her husband:

"Warren, be sure to have one of your cars take Dr. Finney to the station."

At another time, when the President, his face furrowed with lines of grief and anxiety, was at her bedside, Mrs. Harding smiled up at him and asked if he had played golf. "Don't worry, Warren, I am going to get well. I want you to go right on with your work. Your health is more important than anything else just now."

Men and women of every creed and church, who know the meaning of the family tie, joined in a great prayer service at noon one day at Keith's Theatre, praying that those who were ministering every relief known to medical science might be divinely directed, that the life of this gracious woman Washington had learned to love be spared.

Senate's Speed Keeps Clerks Tip-Toed

Speed seldom seen in the passage of bills by either house of the National Legislature was shown by the Senate last Saturday, when it passed 165 bills in about three hours. The Senate was moving under an agreement for the consideration of unobjected bills, many of which had been pending on the calendar for months, not a few having been objected to many times. However, there were comparatively few senators on the floor and the measures were put rapidly through the successive parliamentary stages and passed, keeping the clerks busier than they had been for months.

A number of bills relating particularly to the District of Columbia were passed.

Independent Citizenship Bill Passed

On Saturday afternoon last, the Senate passed, without amendments, the Cable Independent Citizenship Bill. This completes congressional action and the bill now goes to the President.

Massachusetts and the Sheppard-Towner Act

A petition has been filed by Massachusetts in the United States Supreme Court in which permission is asked to bring an original suit against Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, the Chief of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, the Surgeon General of the Public Health Service, and the Commissioner of Education, who, under the act, constitute the Board of Maternity and Infant Hygiene.

The proceeding, as reported by the Associated Press, was instituted by order of the General Court of Massachusetts, and would restrain those charged with the enforcement of the law from carrying its provisions into effect, especially by prohibiting the expenditure of any public funds. Massachusetts contended that the act was unconstitutional and void, because it would impair and violate her sovereign rights and the rights of her citizens.

In the next issue of THE SIGNAL, we will give a memorandum showing whether Massachusetts and other rich states are being unduly taxed for the benefit of other states.

Present Status of the Maternity and Infant Welfare Act

The Sheppard-Towner Act for the promotion of the welfare and hygiene of maternity and infancy was approved by the President, November 23, 1921. It authorized appropriations for the existing year and for each of the five subsequent years to carry out its purpose, but the actual appropriations must be made in separate acts. A deficiency appropriation bill, not enacted until March 20, 1922, provided $490,000 for the remaining portion of the fiscal year ending June 30, and an appropriation act for the year ending June 30, 1923, makes available the full $1,240,000 authorized.

Anticipating the enactment of the bill, six legislatures accepted its provisions prior to its final passage by Congress. One of these acceptances was good only in case the pending Federal Act was passed without change and another was technically inadequate. Oregon accepted at a special session. Of the eleven state legislatures having regular sessions in 1922, seven have accepted the Act, and four, Louisiana, New York, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island did not accept the benefits. Hence to date a total of twelve states have accepted through legislative action. Of the thirty-three states remaining, provisional acceptances have been received from the governors of thirty-one, pending the next regular sessions of their legislatures, Washington and Maine being the two states which have not acted. Although the New York legislature rejected the Federal measure, it created as a result of the women's campaign for acceptance a Division of Maternity and Infancy in the State Board of Health and increased its previous child hygiene appropriation of $30,000 to $150,000, so that the mothers and babies of New York profited by the Sheppard-Towner Act. In Massachusetts $15,000 was appropriated for the balance of the year, and the Governor of Maine set aside $5,000 of his contingency fund for maternity and infant welfare work.

The Act provides that the states accepting shall present their plans for the use of the funds apportioned them to a "Board of Maternity and Infant Hygiene" which shall consist of the Chief of the Children's Bureau (Miss Grace Abbott), the Surgeon General of the U. S. Public Health Service (Dr. Hugh S. Cumming), and the U. S. Commissioner of Education (Dr. John J. Tigert). The board met and organized on April 18, 1922, electing Miss Abbott as the chairman, and approved the plans of twenty-three states, or all those which had up to that time presented their plans for the initial period of three months ending June 30. Later, sixteen more states were certified to the Treasury for payments from the 1922 appropriation, and thirty-five states have been certified for payments from the 1923 appropriation. Not all of these certified, however, have made sufficient appropriations of their own to receive the full amounts allotted them under the Act.

The contemplated activities vary in each state according to local conditions and are largely dependent on previous local development in the field of child hygiene. Included in the plans are such general fundamental projects as the establishment of prenatal and infant health centers, increased numbers of public health nurses to give care and instruction, improved milk supply and more complete birth registration.

In states having well organized child hygiene divisions, where the necessary pioneer stages have been passed, an increase in the numbers of county or community public health nurses, whose duties are to be extended to include surveys of facilities for maternity care and prenatal instruction to mothers in classes or in the home, is contemplated. State and district supervisory prenatal nurses are in several states an innovation which will ensure high educational standards and approved nursing technique.

Legislative Headquarters, Bliss Building, Washington, D. C., September 15, 1922.

Abolition of Hotel Bars a Benefit

Voicing his own views and those of other executives of the chain of hotels with which he is connected, Louis Wiggins, manager of the Hotel Rochester, Rochester, New York, is quoted in a recent issue of the Rochester Times-Union as saying:

"The hotel bar was a convenience to guests but, at its best, a necessary evil to the hotel. At its worst it brought the hotel into disrepute. Even when conducted in strict accordance with the law it drew to the hotel an undesirable clientele which used the bar and the hotel lobby as a loafing place and which spent little money elsewhere in the place. The abolition of the hotel bar has not only placed the hotel business upon a higher plane in the business world; it has made it financially more profitable."

G. O. P. Women of Pierce County, Wash., Stand for Dry Law

A resolution endorsing the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution and the Volstead Law, and cheerfully accepting any additional tax burden necessary to make up the amount formerly received by the government as revenue from the organized liquor traffic was passed unanimously by the members of the Pierce County, Washington, Women's Republican Club at their last meeting, in Tacoma.

School of Government

In co-operation with Radcliffe College, the Boston League of Women Voters will conduct a School of Government and Politics, October 18-20, it is reported. Fifteen members of the Harvard-Radcliffe faculty are expected to speak, including the men at the head of the departments of government, economics, history and education. Mrs. Maud Wood Park, Dr. Alice Hamilton, Mrs. Walter B. Cannon and Mrs. Jessie D. Hodder are the women members of the faculty.

Beginning October 25, Boston University and the League will offer a course of twenty lectures, to be given Wednesday mornings, on "Laws Every Woman Should Know."

Prohibition Law Must Be Obeyed By All Employes of Ford Motor Company

A statement has been issued by Henry Ford to the seventy thousand employes of the Ford Motor company that all forms of intoxicants are to be barred at all times under penalty of immediate discharge. It is said that Federal and state authorities have not been able to wholly enforce the prohibition laws, and that drinking among some of the employes has caused accidents.

"From now on it will cost a man his job, without any excuse or appeal being considered, to have the odor of beer, wine or liquor on his breath or to have any of these intoxicants on his person or in his home," Mr. Ford's notice to the employes said. "The Eighteenth Amendment is a part of the fundamental law of this country. Politics has interfered with enforcement of this law, but so far as our organization is concerned, it is going to be enforced to the letter."

"I have always been opposed to all forms of intoxicants," said Mr. Ford. "Liquor never did anybody any good, and has caused incalculable suffering and misery in the world."

Spokane Labor Union Refuses To Back Petition For Wine And Beer

Persistent attempts have been made to gain the support of organized labor in Washington for a petition calling for a referendum vote on amending the Volstead Act to allow wine and beer. To the proposition the Spokane union has returned a decided negative. "The Spokane council will take no part in any such movement," states Secretary O. A. Dirkes.

New York a Center For Wet Propaganda

"We shall support at the polls this autumn all wet candidates for all political offices irrespective of party affiliations and use our whole energy to defeat dry candidates. The moral issues do not concern us."

In this enlightening statement, which was made early in the summer, to a representative of the Christian Science Monitor by an official of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, may be seen the explanation of the bitter fight that is being waged to maintain prohibition. The boast has been made by the liquor adherents that, unless a marked upheaval takes place in the two major political party conventions occurring this month, there will be sent to Congress from New York county a solid wet delegation.

Those who have studied the situation in this, the largest center in the United States, say that the liquor interests have, to the utmost of their ability, used the politicians as cats-paws, succeeding through them, in many cases, in appointing to posts as prohibition officers grafters," who, by raking in tribute from bootleggers, have facilitated the buying and selling of "booze," obtaining of withdrawal permits, and other shady transactions.

Since New York is not only a cosmopolitan city, but the headquarters for so many national movements, and for leading dailies and periodicals which find their way to all parts of the country, and to their share toward forming the sentiment of the nation, the situation there of wide importance.

The statement of The Restaurateur, the publication issued weekly in the interest of the restaurant owners and allied trades, that the members of the national society of the restaurateurs must get into the campaign fight this fall and help those who are attempting to repeal the Volstead Act and the Eighteenth Amendment, has already been published in our columns. This organization, whose headquarters are in New York, has ramifications throughout the country, and is endeavoring to mold the sentiment of the nation. The disinterestedness of its president is shown, perhaps, by the story finding its way into the papers that $25,000 worth of liquor was seized in the Hofbrau House, owned by him. And because of considerable dissatisfaction with certain phases of activity of this organization, such as alleged violations of the prohibition laws, the managing director of the Hotels McAlpin, Waldorf-Astoria, and others, Mr. Boomer, recently sent in a letter of resignation of membership.

"Light Wines and Beer Next Summer" is the heading of a recent article in The Restaurateur, which deals with the coming referendums in Illinois, Massachusetts and California, "at which the wets will attempt to bind Representatives and Senators to vote for a modification of the Volstead Act in favor of light wines and beer. Resolutions to the same effect will be introduced in several state legislatures, probably including that of New York. A general convention of representative wets from every state in the United States will be called this fall, according to Ransom H. Gillett, general counsel of the Association [The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment], and an organized fight will be made against dry candidates in nearly all Congressional districts. The displacement at the polls of fifty dry Congressmen by the wets this fall would be sufficient, according to Mr. Gillett, to bring about a dramatic revision of the Volstead Act by next summer."

If modification of the Volstead Act is once obtained, the wets can carry out plans which are already laid, such as a chain of "soft drink parlors," or "coffee shops," extending from coast to coast, where, to quote another official of the A. A. P. A., "a girl could order ice-cream soda, and her escort could obtain eight per cent beer." It is reported that one of the strong proponents of this plan is Herbert C. Pell, New York state Democratic chairman, who sees therein a restoration of the oldtime convivial drinking which would result in a great deal of "pleasure" that is now lacking.

This proposition of soft drink parlors is the correct explanation for the retention of choice locations by the wets. It is said that in New York City businesses plainly temporary have been set up in many corner stores where the old saloon fixtures are still intact. Those who are pushing the scheme say that a far greater number of prospective customers could thus be reached than would be possible by a restoration of the oldtime saloon. New places also are being fitted with swinging doors, obstructing shades, and various fixtures, in anticipation of the coming back of wines and beer.

Another side to the situation may be seen, however, in the fact that many so-called soft drink places, formerly saloons, are going out of business con-

(Continued on Page Fifteen)

THE MAGNET OF MANCHURIA

Christine I. Tinling

Properly speaking, Manchuria is the Land of the Manchus. It was in the sixteenth century that they began to attract attention, for then the strong chieftain, Nurhachu, consolidated under his own sway the various tribes and also defeated his nearest Chinese neighbors. In the time of his grandson, an opportunity occurred for a vast extension of Manchu power. China was over-run by robber bands and there was no leader capable of opposing them. The emperor committed suicide and the robber chief leapt upon the throne. Then the Chinese called over the Wall to the Manchus and begged for their assistance. The regent who was acting during the minority of the chief, promptly responded, brought a well-disciplined army, defeated the robbers and entered Peking in triumph. To return home after so signal a success was far from his thoughts. He proclaimed himself emperor, removed his capital from Mukden to Peking and commanded all men to produce a pig-tail in token of submission to his rule. Thenceforth, for nearly three hundred years, China was governed by the Manchu Dynasty, which fell at last in the revolution of 1911.

The traveler who visits Manchuria in the expectation of seeing a people quite different from the Chinese is speedily undeceived. For the Manchus today form only about ten per cent of the population. Those who went to China at the time of the conquest settled down there and became absorbed into that nation. Many others subsequently migrated, attracted by the offer of civil appointments, and large numbers of soldiers were sent to garrison the cities. It was not long before the Chinese began to stream northward into the new country where there was so much more room than at home. So today Manchuria is for the most part Chinese. The Manchu women, however, stand out with picturesque prominence by reason of their remarkable coiffure, which is nearly a foot high and brilliantly decorated with flowers, and also on account of their unbound feet. But for them, one would think oneself still in China proper.

The Greatest Wheat-Producer in the East

As all the world knows, however, it is not only or chiefly the quiet, industrious Chinese settler who is attracted, as by a magnet, to Manchuria. Great powers both of the east and the west are gravitating towards this El Dorado and looking with eager and greedy eyes upon its wealth. Russia in the north and Japan in the south remind one of those words of Isaiah the prophet, "The Syrians before and the Philistines behind, and they shall devour Israel with open mouth."

Southern Manchuria is exceedingly rich in iron and coal, and Japan is exploiting these right and left. In fact, no one except a Japanese is allowed to open a mine. The coal basin covers thousands of square miles, the center being not far from Mukden. Copper and gold are also said to exist but have been little developed as yet. Greater in all probability than the mineral wealth of Manchuria are the rich resources of her soil. It is the same black loam that has made Canada so fertile. Mr. Putnam Weale says "Manchuria is destined to become the greatest wheat-producer in the East."

One's own impression of the country, gained chiefly from long days on the Japanese and Russian trains, is of a vast brown plain. For it is early spring and the tender blade is only just beginning to appear. The trees are ahead of the crops and dotted over the landscape are patches of palest green, for the lithe young willows have put forth their leaves and are waving them over the graves in silent salutation to the dead. The family burying-place is usually in the field. Small though the plot of land may be for maintaining the household in food, a bit of it is set aside for the departed, and here may be seen a group of conical mounds with a few trees bending over them. The great plain is thus diversified and the eye finds a welcome relief from monotony. While to the eye of the mind, this close connection between granaries and graves is a reminder that "in the midst of life we are in death."

The Chinese grow wheat chiefly for export; their own staple food is millet, of which there are several kinds. The big millet or kaoliang is used for various purposes, in addition to being the mainstay of men and animals. One contiually sees fences made of its long stalks. These also form the fuel for cooking and for warming the kang. The little bridges over streams are built of a few logs with millet stalks thrown across them and mud on top of all. The stalks form the lower layer of the roof of many houses. The tough rind or sheath of the plant is made into matting for the kang and into baskets for containing the grain and other needfuls. Thus, given enough mud and millet, and a few logs for rafters, one can have a house and heat, food and even furnishings.

Millions of Dollars for Beans

Another product that compels attention in Manchuria is the little soya bean. The quantity exported is amazing. Ranged along an extensive railway station and far beyond its limits are to be seen stacks and stacks of bean-sacks, each as high as a two-story house. One tries to count them but gives up in despair. Bean-cake, too, is everywhere in evidence, big yellow wheels of it, used as food for cattle. The Chinese are particularly fond of bean-curd, a soft white substance made by crushing the beans between stoue rollers and pressing the resultant liquid into semi-solid cakes. It is very nourishing as well as, to the Oriental palate, appetizing. The bean-oil is used in lamps and for lubricating purposes and is also an important article of food. Millions of dollars pour annually into the Three Provinces in return for their bean and its derivatives.

So Manchuria is a wealthy land and destined to become much more so, when her agricultural and mineral resources have been fully developed. Small wonder that she is today the magnet of the East.

Wealth Brings Temptation

But where there is money there is apt to be the more temptation to evil in various forms, and here we see opium, morphine and alcohol all used to a considerable extent. Apropos of the first-named, it was interesting to meet Dr. Dugald Christie, the missionary founder of the Mukden Medical College and Hospital, just now returning home to Scotland after forty years of service. He could tell of the days when almost all well-to-do persons smoked opium, especially those of the official class, and when little children went into the fields to suck the juice that was left upon the withered flowers. Then came the Imperial Edict prohibiting the cultivation of poppy and Chao Er Sun, the good old governor of Manchuria, put it down with a firm hand. Whole fields of it were torn up by the roots and burned, and production was completely stopped. Obstinate offenders were sent in chain-gangs to mend the public roads in the view of passersby. One wished there might be some such punishment meted out to those who defy our Eighteenth Amendment. It would certainly be more effective than any fine and more salutary for the prisoner than lounging in jail. Chao Er Sun's law enforcement was so thorough that Manchuria was among the earliest provinces to be cleared of native opium and so closed to the Indian product. Ever after his time things were kept fairly clean until the military governors came in, when there was observable a slackening of the hand of law. Nowadays poppy growing is being to a certain extent renewed, though by no means so largely as in several provinces of China proper. It is restricted chiefly to the Russian border and to remote districts among the hills where few except robbers live.

Manchus Often Victims of Opium

While not grown in Manchuria to any great extent, opium is yet largely consumed. It is quite evident that considerable quantities are smuggled in. Those who can afford the luxury are in many cases smoking without shame and offering it to guests. Ladies in the official families sometimes frankly acknowledge that they cannot get along without the daily pipe. I heard of a married couple who were addicted to the drug; they had twelve children and every one of them died. The mother finally broke off the habit and later had one child who lived. A hospital cook, well-liked by the missionaries and a regular attendant at church, was found to be taking opium and selling the food supplies in order to get it.

It is noticeable that Manchus are often victims. While they form only a small fraction of the population, in some sections they retain possession of the lands and lease them out to others. So they are frequently well off and as one result they are inclined to use opium, which the poorer people cannot afford.

Use of Morphine Frequent

Everywhere one learns of the ravages of morphine. The hypodermic needle came into common use after the Anglo-Chinese agreement, looking to the eradication of opium. The Japanese pushed the morphia traffic with deadly success. At Chang Chun, well-known as a commercial center, thousands of newly-made addicts found themselves face to face with death when the cruel Manchurian winter came on. They belonged to all classes, some being educated men who had held good positions. As many as from one to two hundred died night after night in that one city. They were actually expiring on the streets, until a philanthropic business man, with the help of missionaries, opened a refuge for them. Those who could not be saved were helped to die decently, while such as were still capable of rescue were taught mat-weaving and match-making while breaking off the habit.

The Japanese pedlars who sneak around the country, offering morphine in-

(Continued on Page Thirteen)

PROHIBITION A POPULAR THEME ON PACIFIC OCEAN VOYAGE

Mary Harris Armor

The meetings in California for a month preceding my sailing for New Zealand were full of interest. The W. C. T. U. and the Anti-Saloon League are working in perfect harmony and with splendid enthusiasm for the Wright Act. "Wright is Right" without a doubt, and I believe that "Wright the day shall win." I cannot refrain from telling of the splend work the women are doing in San Francisco. Think of having the chance to speak to 1,500 people in a prayer meeting in San Francisco, as I did one evening at Dr. J. L. Gordon's church, the First Congregational. They cheered until the speaker had to come back and make her best bow.

Think of a meeting for women in the concert room of the Palace Hotel in San Francisco, when the room was filled, and all so eager to help that when at the close a call was made for precinct workers, each one to take a book and canvass from house to house for the Wright Act, the response was so great and the way the women tried to get those books, in order to begin their task, so insistent, that one was reminded of a bargain sale.

Then how I would love to tell about that wonderful spiritual and exceedingly inspiring and informing Congress of Reforms at Pacific Grove, and of the lovely reception to Kathleen Norris and myself by the Women's Club in their beautiful club house. I never enjoyed a reception quite so much, for at the end we adjourned to the audience room, and Mrs. Norris and I spoke straightforwardly to a large and enthusiastic company, about the Wright Act. As we finished, it was heart-warming to hear the interested comments and the eager queries as to where literature could be obtained and how best to get to work effectively. O, I believe we can count on the women, God bless them!

Dropped My Cares Into the Pacific

The "Maunganui" sailed out of the Golden Gate at 11:20 a. m., August the fourth, and immediately my daughter-in-law and I found ourselves surrounded by so much loving kindness and amidst such novel scenes that we could not indulge in any sad thoughts about leaving the dear old U. S. A. There had been times before that when I thought I could not go, but at the Golden Gate I dropped all my cares into the Pacific and God gave me a perfect rest of faith about everything and everybody.

Crossing the Pacific is so very different from crossing the Atlantic. The sea is so calm, the air so balmy. There is a bar on this ship, and it seemed very strange to me to sit at table with people of seeming refinement who ordered wine or beer, or whisky and soda, as the case might be, as a matter of course, just as I would take tea or coffee. And I guess you may think it even more strange that I held my peace.

I had told my daughter-in-law that she must keep still, not let a soul know upon what errand we were bound, or that I could talk. This for two reasons: First, I am on this boat to REST mind, voice and body. Second, I wanted to hear what people holding views different from mine would say about prohibition when expressing their free, untrammeled opinions.

Saw Only Nine Intoxicated Men in Two Months

I have not heard a word of ridicule of the dry law on this boat for these two weeks. One day as I stood quietly gazing out to sea and thinking long, long thoughts, a gentleman from Wellington, New Zealand, came and stood by me. I do not think he had the faintest idea that I was a lecturer or that I was going to New Zealand in the interests of prohibition. In the course of his conversation he said:

Mary Harris Armor

"I have been to the United States to investigate with regard to prohibition. We are going to vote on that question in our country this fall. I assure you I went with a mind entirely unbiased. I went to see for myself. After spending a little more than two months visiting San Francisco, Chicago, Pittsburgh, Dayton, Ohio, New York City, and observing closely, I am convinced that PROHIBITION IN THE UNITED STATES IS 95 PER CENT EFFECTIVE."

"I talked with men of large affairs, who have great numbers of employes," he continued. "They all say that without a doubt it is a great thing economically. One man who is in big business with many hundreds of men employed, said to me, 'I like my drink. I was never a prohibitionist, but if it were to come to a vote again in the United States, seeing what it has done for my men and my business I would certainly vote for prohibition.' In the two months I spent in the United States I saw only nine drunken men. There are scores of public houses in Wellington and I could show you at least nine drunken men for every one of these public houses at closing time (six o'clock p. m.) every day of the week."

This gentleman asked me not to use his name, as he is in a business where he cannot publicly take sides. His testimony is all the more remarkable and valuable in that he is not a speaker or a writer. "O, you can do so much good in the campaign," I said, but he replied that he could only use his knowledge in a private way from man to man.

They All Praise Results of Prohibition

Another gentleman from Christ Church, New Zealand, says he takes his glass when he likes but he believes prohibition is a good thing for the country and he is going to vote dry. He says they will surely win this time. But the other man says it will be a bitter fight.

There is a very fine young man on board, hardly more than a boy, who lives in Auckland. He says his father and mother are strong prohibitionists and that we must surely come to see them.

Then there is an American gentleman who is very pleasant. He and I had quite a little talk about prohibition. He declared he never stood for it, that he always thought there ought to be some way to stop the drink other than by law. He said, also, that it is too dreadful the way the law is broken, etc. (you know all that story) but added that no one can deny the great economic value of the law. "I am in a large manufacturing business and we employ a great number of men. They used to be always getting hurt in the machinery, a finger cut off or a hand or an arm or a leg crushed. Those accidents have been enormously reduced. The men do better work and are better off in every way. But the best thing about it is that if we hold the prohibition law for ten years, we will raise up a generation that will not know what drink is."

While many on this boat drink some, and half of them are women, there are just as many who abstain. We sit at the table with the third officer, a very agreeable gentleman who never drinks. The captain's table is right next to ours, and I have watched closely and have never seen him touch liquor.

One Drink Makes a Drunk

I asked a splendid gentleman from Australia, who has traveled much and to whom almost everyone on the boat seems to look up if the captain ever indulged. He replied very emphatically, "O no, none of the ship's officers do. You know a man on duty is considered drunk if he has had one drink." So far has scientific temperance brought us, even on this side of the world.

Another time I will try to tell something of beautiful Tahiti. My love and thanks to so many of our blessed women who have remembered me so kindly both in my joy and in my sorrow, and God be with you till we meet again.

Lady Rhondda Congratulates United States on Dry Law

Lady Rhondda of England, who claims she is entitled to a seat in the House of Lords, has been spending some time in the United States. The day she sailed on the "Olympic" she discussed the prohibition question and said:

"The United States has made a magnificent experiment with its prohibition amendment. You led the world in a wonderful way. What you have done makes everyone realize more clearly the importance of temperance and the vital nature of the drink question."

Noted Scotch Educator Praises Prohibition

The federation of labor is behind the movement for prohibition in Scotland, says Charles W. Thomson, a noted Scotch educator and author, who is visiting in America. He paid tribute to the success of the Eighteenth Amendment by stating that he had been in the United States over three weeks without seeing a single drunken person. Asked by a reporter for the New Britain (Conn.) Herald what he thought of a modification of the dry law, Mr. Thomson said such action would open the flood gates of intemperance, and was too great a risk for this country to take.

PROHIBITION THE SETTLED POLICY OF THE STATE OF IOWA—LEADING CITIZENS TESTIFY TO ITS VALUE TO THE HOME, BUSINESS AND SOCIETY GENERALLY (WET PAPERS PLEASE COPY)

The following statements from prominent citizens of Iowa were furnished for publication at the request of Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, president of the Iowa W. C. T. U.:

This is the Statistical Story Told By Des Moines Police Department

John MacVicar, Superintendent Department Public Safety

In order to more intelligently answer your inquiry as to whether or not my experience or observation had led me to discover any benefits growing out of prohibition, I referred the matter to our chief of police, John B. Hammond. The chief answered my inquiry by submitting certain statistics, showing the relative arrests made by the police department for offenses presumably chargeable to the liquor traffic during the year 1914 (the last year in which the saloons were in operation) and in the year 1921, just passed.

These figures are as follows:

Assault and Battery:
1914	1921
222	159
Disturbing Public Quiet:
1914	1921
423	221
Intoxication:
1914	1921
4434	1949
Total Arrests:
1914	1921
10866	8722

In this connection it is well to know that the city of Des Moines has, during this period, made very rapid growth in population, increasing approximately from 100,000 in 1914 to 135,000 in 1922.

The chief states further:

"While the arrests for drunkenness for 1921 were considerably less than half of the arrests for intoxication during 1914, I wish to remind you that in the earlier period, the saloons being in operation, the cases of drunkenness were many more than shown on the record, on account of the saloons being able to conceal many of these drunks and large numbers of them were taken to their homes or concealed in other safe places, while in the last year, arrests have been made of all drunks that appeared in public places and on the streets and they were booked at the station.

"I also wish to remind you that during the present year with two big strikes on hand, at the same time, there has been but very little disturbance. In fact, I have not heard of a single instance of 'assault and battery' arising out of a strike controversy whereas in all strikes before prohibition, when liquor was freely in use, assaults were ordinary affairs.

"You will note that the question of disturbing the public quiet, which is largely due to the liquor business, has been reduced one half, and the total number of arrests for the year was reduced 2144 as compared to 1914."

So much for statistics.

My experience and observation lead me to believe that conditions in Des Moines have already been improved by the enactment of and conscientious efforts to enforce the prohibition laws. However, the real benefits will naturally materialize somewhat slowly. In years to come, if sincere efforts are continued to enforce these laws, inestimable benefits will surely accrue.

Consult the Records of the Court as to Effect of Prohibition

Judge F. F. Faville, Supreme Court of Iowa

You asked me to send you a brief statement of my estimate of prohibition in Iowa.

Prohibition has been the settled policy of the state of Iowa for many years. The law has been well enforced in this state. It has resulted in a very marked decrease in crime, as evidenced by the records in the courts of the state. It has improved, in a large measure, the condition of laboring classes who spent their earnings in the open saloon. It has materially decreased suits for divorce. It has been of very great benefit to business generally, in the prompt payment of bills by wage-earners and the greatly increased amount of money expended for home and household affairs.

Since the war and the passage of the National Prohibitory Amendment, our state, with others, has suffered from the quite persistent efforts to evade the law. The temptation to indulge in the illicit manufacture and sale of liquor, because of the exorbitant gain that may be made, has tempted many to become bootleggers. I do not think this condition is by any means a permanent one. We are passing through an era of readjustment and of stabilizing of many affairs of the nation. The present tendency to violate the prohibitory law is only one instance of this readjustment. It will take time, patience and a large degree of faith to get us back to normalcy in this and many other matters, but it will surely come.

We've Passed the Argument Stage, Declares Banker

J. F. Hardin, President Citizens Savings Bank, Eldora, Iowa

You ask me to make a short statement of the benefits of prohibition or law enforcement.

Yesterday I read on the editorial page of the Times-Republician of Marshalltown, Iowa, the following:

"No use to argue prohibition. It is like religion. Even the anti knows down in his heart that it is a good thing to have."

The above expresses my sentiment.

20 Per Cent Increase in Business Say Business Men

That prohibition is highly esteemed by the business men of Iowa is indicated by the results of a questionnaire sent out by the Anti-Saloon League to every line of industry, covering the following points:

Has prohibition increased the earning capacity of your employes? How much approximately?

Has prohibition decreased earning capacity?

Has prohibition caused an improvement in the home life of your employes so far as you know?

Has prohibition stimulated business generally?

Replies were unanimous in their opinion that the Eighteenth Amendment had been a boon to business. All reported increased efficiency of employes, estima ing the percentage all the way from to 25. In no case was a decrease in earn ing capacity recorded.

Prominent manufacturers in man cases enclosed personal notes with thei reply to the questionnaire.

A. H. Head, Waterloo Gas Engine Con pany: "Prohibition has undoubtedl been a benefit to workers' families a well as to the majority of citizens of th country."

Horace D. Campbell, Campbell Heatin Company: "When a man doesn't spen his money for booze it stands to reason h has more to spend for groceries an furnaces."

H. N. Straight, Adel Clay Product Company: "This company and practicall all of the employes are strong for proh bition."

Makes Better Workmen

H. Litchfield, Litchfield Manufacturin Company of Waterloo: "We believe tha the manufacturing business generally ha been made more efficient by at leas twenty-five per cent. Employes are bet ter men at their work and better me away from their work."

W. H. Johnson, Dart Truck and Tracto Company of Waterloo: "Without questio prohibition is a success."

C. W. Monroe, Albia Packing Company "Let the good work continue."

The Relation of Social Problems And Drink

Horace S. Hollingsworth, General Secretary Associated Charities of Des Moines

The Associated Charities made an un biased study of the question of liquo drinking some years ago and I submit th following statement regarding it:

The year before the eighty-six saloon were closed, at the request of the Minis terial Association, we analyzed our case to see what percentage of the social prob lems were due to liquor drinking, directl or indirectly. The percentage was twen ty-six. After the saloons had been close a full year, in making our annual state ment we again analyzed our cases fo the various causes of poverty in ou midst and with no special thought as t the outcome regarding liquor drinking We were amazed to find that the per centage of cases due directly or indirectl to the use of intoxicating beverages wa only nine and six-tenths.

The above figures tell the story of th benefits of prohibition at the end of th first year. Since then while the war ha come and brought with it the terrible consequences of the conflict, with mount ing poverty on every hand, yet liquo drinking as a cause has been reduced until it is almost negligible.

With all the social unrest, with all the difficulties arising in the readjustment period, it would indeed have been a calamity had we been compelled to deal with the open saloon and its baneful effects.

We will continue of course for a long time to have trouble with violators of the prohibitory law. But what law is not violated? Yet we do not stop passing good laws. I am sure that the thing which is needed in this country is a reawakening on the question of law enforcement and special adherence to the Eighteenth Amendment.

PHILIPPINES, CUBA, AND THE CANAL ZONE WILL HAVE A VOICE AT THE WORLD'S CONVENTION AT PHILADELPHIA

When the roll is called at the World's Convention, at Philadelphia, there will be delegates from the Canal Zone, the Philippines and Cuba to respond for those countries and to tell of the healthy progress of the anti-alcohol movement.

The president of the newly reorganized W. C. T. U. in Cuba, Mrs. E. J. Simonds, will have a story of exceeding great interest to tell. This will be re-inforced and emphasized by Mrs. Florence Atkins, national organizer, who the first of this year spent several weeks in Cuba, speaking, organizing and enthusing the women in the W. C. T. U.

The W. C. T. U. of the Philippines is sending as its representative Miss Consuelo Valdez, a talented young woman, twenty-two years of age, an honor student of the University, and an excellent platform speaker. Following the death of Miss Josefa Abiertas, the gifted young president of the Philippine Islands W. C. T. U., a memorial fund of 1,400 pesos ($700) was raised at a memorial mass meeting to be used in sending someone to the United States to prepare herself for organizer and national leader, and Miss Valdez was chosen. She is expected to reach the United States this month.

Mrs. E. J. Simonds, President W. C. T. U. of Cuba

From the Canal Zone comes Miss Elsie J. Keyser, an L. T. L. worker, and teacher in the Sea Wall Methodist missionary school. Miss Keyser has done some remarkable work in organizing into Loyal Temperance Legions nearly four hundred children of the Panama Canal district, in Ancon and Panama City. She has the unique honor of being the first and only policewoman in Panama City. The parents beat the children unmercifully and, although there is a law against it, the native policeman will not enforce it. In order to prevent cruelty to the children Miss Keyser was commissioned as an officer of the law, with full authority. She had a father arrested and tried and fined, and this incident had a wholesome effect and prevented similar offenses.

GOOD WORK IN CEYLON

Flora E. Strout, World's W. C. T. U. Organizer

Beginning with the New Year the members of the W. C. T. U. of Ceylon found themselves very busy in planning for the first medal contest ever held in the island, which proved to be a most enjoyable affair, and a help to the temperance cause not only in an educational way, but also financially. Then followed our course of Health lectures, each one given by a government specialist. Unless one has tried it, she could have no idea of the work involved in arranging dates, securing subscribers, procuring hall, chairs, a chairman, etc. But we survived and were congratulated on all sides on the success of our plans. The lectures proved very popular and our exchequer was considerably benefited thereby, but best of all was the helpful information given and temperance was not forgotten, as two of the doctors got in a word against alcohol.

Perhaps our best, at least our most spectacular work, was done in connection with the All-Ceylon Exhibition, where we had a very good display. The committee had very courteously given us a shed, several of our friends lent us furniture, and we had a most attractive rest room. In another part was our exhibit—posters, striking object lessons as to the result of drink upon the body and also upon the pocketbook. Our members were on duty from eight a. m. to eight p. m. every day for two weeks, and thousands of people heard convincing lectures in English and the vernaculars upon the evil effects, not only of alcohol, but of tobacco as well. Sometimes there were hundreds standing about the exhibit and the lectures went on all day. We sold and distributed gratis, thousands of leaflets.

Our first plan included refreshments, but the contract was given out to a man who sold alcoholic drinks, and we were refused the privilege of serving anything in competition with him. There were temperance men on the committee, and the chairman, a keen temperance worker, was expelled from his society for permitting drinks to be sold. He was not a Christian.

I cannot conclude this account without announcing the death from double pneumonia, of our splendid worker, Miss Grace Nathanielsz. She was a girl of unusual ability, very attractive of manner, and a sweet, devoted Christian. She had been under special training with me the past year and was in a position to do her best work. The loss of this gifted young woman is a great tragedy not only to our society, but to all Ceylon.

After helping our new worker, Miss Netta Peterson, to get a start, I shall leave for Burma, reaching there the last of July.

The Grange, Union Place, Colombo.

Let the Church of Christ Say So!

A telling arraignment of the liquor traffic was delivered at the general assembly of the United Free Church, which met in Edinborough, by the newly elected Moderator, Dr. Donald Fraser of Livingstonia. He decried the drink trade in Africa which is ruining tribes, trade, progress, and immortal souls. "The liquor traffic must stop," he said. "Colonial secretaries have said so; governor after governor has said so; many trading houses of West Africa have said so; the London, Liverpool and Manchester chambers of commerce have said so. Let the church of Christ say so, and it can be stopped!"

Sweden's Women Not Discouraged, Writes Emilie Rathou

The advisory poll on national prohibition taken in Sweden on August 27, resulted in a sufficiently large dry vote to show that sentiment for a dry law is strong. According to press reports, the wet vote was approximately 938,000 and the dry 900,000. There were dry majorities in the country districts but these were overcome by big wet votes in Stockholm and other cities. Writing of the plebiscite, Miss Emilie Rathou of the W. C. T. U. of Sweden says that the present restrictive system had tended to popularize the drinking habits. The social democratic government is against prohibition and it is supposed that a secret order had been sent out to the laboring classes to vote against prohibition. The opposition was well organized and almost the entire press favored the continuance of the present system. Many were influenced to vote against prohibition by the widely circulated propaganda of illegal traffic and increased taxes that would result. This explains the large wet vote. The Sweden W. C. T. U. will continue its work of education, will organize new unions, and continue its campaign until victory comes, as come it surely will.

India Says "Thank You"

The Representative Council of Missions for the United Provinces of India at its last meeting at Lucknow adopted the following resolution:

"We feel constrained to commend and thank the Woman's Christian Temperance Union for the help and leadership it is giving to this cause throughout India, and especially for the efficient and acceptable service its World's and National organizer, Miss Mary J. Campbell, is now giving in various parts of this province. When at all practicable we believe missionaries will do well to affiliate their temperance activities with the various departments of W. C. T. U. work."

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union
Evanston, Illinois

Editor-in-Chief - - - Miss Anna A. Gordon
Managing Editor - - Miss Julia F. Deane
Associate Editor - - Miss Vida I. Thompson

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors of The Editorial Department, The Union Signal, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanics the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittance of $1.50 or under.

Notice of Expiration is sent to the subscriber two or three weeks before renewal is due, so that by immediate attention to this reminder not an issue need be missed. RENEW PROMPTLY.

Remittances should be made by draft on New York or Chicago, or by Post-office Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

Change of Address. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE, $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
Foreign Postage, 52 Cents Additional

Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (Monthly) 50c a Year

Foreign Postage, 12 Cents Additional

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., post-office as second class matter. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized August 20, 1918.

Evanston, Illinois, September 21, 1922

RESOLUTION

SUGGESTED FOR ADOPTION BY CHURCHES AND OTHER INFLUENTIAL ORGANIZATIONS

W. C. T. U. speakers are urgently requested to secure from all meetings which they address the adoption of this resolution:

RESOLVED: That we declare against any modification of the Volstead Code which would admit wine or beer or otherwise weaken enforcement, and will do all in our power to insure the election November 7, 1922, of members of the United States Congress and state legislatures who will work and vote for the retention and enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Code.

(Through your local papers give wide-spread publicity to the resolutions thus secured.)

Not a Prophecy But a Pointer

Are the friends of prohibition lying awake nights worrying over the Literary Digest poll, as the pro-liquor press intimates? Indeed they are not. We have yet to discover that the optimism of a single believer in prohibition has been dampened in the slightest degree by this poll. There are far more reliable methods of feeling the pulse of the people than a "postcard-minus-signature" ballot. The results of the primary elections the country over positively and emphatically negative the findings from the Digest vote.

No one except the most superficial thinker will regard this poll in the light of a prophecy. But, on the other hand, one would be lacking in common sense if he failed to see in it a warning against over-confidence.

In the women's poll, 48,485 registered enforcement, and 39,914 for modification, a very small proportion, to be sure, of the 2,200,000 ballots sent out. But what about the 39.000 women who registered for modification? They were led, no doubt, by the propaganda of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment to believe that lawlessness may be cured by giving more power to interests notoriously lawless, and that intoxication may be lessened by legalizing a traffic in such well known intoxicating liquors as wine and beer.

Whence came those 39,000 women who voted for modification? Did they come, any portion of them, from your state, from your community, from your circle of acquaintance? Would they have so voted had there been brought to their attention evidence as to the actual benefits of the present prohibition law, testified to by the best authorities? Do they know that Kansas, and other dry states which have passed through the law-violation period, esteem the law so highly that no candidate for office who favored its repeal could have a chance of nomination, much less election? Do they know that all the great national women's organizations, comprising in their membership the substantial, intelligent, worthwhile women of this country, have gone on record for the present prohibition law and its enforcement?

It is beyond belief that any true-hearted, home and child loving woman will deliberately vote to legalize the traffic in wine and beer, to be sold promiscuously and thus made accessible to young people. Let us strive earnestly to clear the atmosphere for the women who are being misled and confused on this question. Let us work definitely to get those who voted in the Digest poll for modification and repeal, to change from Column 2 and 3 to Column 1, by turning on these issues the searchlight of truth.

Strikes Minus Liquor

It is a matter of common comment among the men who have been closest to the situation in the coal mining regions during the recent strike that there has been a most remarkable absence of violence. Why is this, they are asking. And the invariable answer is: Because they could not as in the old days easily secure liquor; because there was not as in the old days a central rallying point in the place where liquors were sold. Approximately a million men are said to have been involved in the big strikes. The strike had lasted for weeks, large numbers of strikers had been evicted from their homes, and with their families suffered great privations. They might well have grown desperate and resorted to violence and it is a matter of history that under similar circumstances in the past they did do such things. The comment of The Patriot, of Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, a newspaper published in the state where these strikes were most serious, analyzes the situation in the following sapient fashion:

"As the strike in the hard coal district comes to a close, even the casual observer must have been struck with the absence of the disorder which in the past so often attended such industrial conflicts. The strike was the longest in the history of the region, but not once was it necessary even to consider calling out the guard and the work of the state police was largely routine.

"Miners themselves and their friends have no hesitancy in saying that the one big factor in this becoming example of industrial deportment was the prevalence of prohibition. Many visitors to the coal regions say booze is easy to get there and hence prohibition played no part in the good order during the strike. But that does not change the fact that however easy it was to get liquor, the saloons were not the rallying point of the men on strike. Liquor did not incite to riot and bloodshed.

"No more impressive demonstration of the value of prohibition need be asked than that revealed in the coal regions To the scoffers and doubters as to the benefits of the embargo on booze, the hard coal strike is difficult to explain away.'

From the Viewpoint of The Traveler

If any of the anti-prohibitionists are honest doubters as to the value of our dry laws, and are really convinced in their own minds that these laws only lead to more drinking and to lawlessness in general, they would become broadened in mind should they travel in Europe.

The Lake County Times, of Hammond (Indiana), prints a lengthy interview with Dr. J. A. Graham, who has recently returned from twelve months of research work abroad. Commenting upon the evils of drink across the waters, the doctor states: "After a year spent in Europe, I see I have a better perspective of prohibition than before I left and I cannot see how any man would wish to have the saloon back. We are so much better without it."

The well-known novelist, Fannie Hurst, just back from her tour of European countries, says that "We don't see the benefits of prohibition until we go abroad and compare our country with others. Prohibition is one of the greatest sociological reforms the world has known."

Those who would bring back light wines and beer, because "prohibition has caused bootlegging" would perhaps see things in a different light if they were to visit Belgium. Arthur W. Forbes of New Bedford, Massachusetts, is quoted by the Standard of that city as writing: "Here in Belgium they have banished hard liquor. They have wine of reduced alcoholic content and beer, but the bootlegger plies his trade and sells brandy, Scotch, and whisky, and is doing fine."

On the other hand, that real prohibition is gaining ground in the United States is seen even in foreign countries. Fannie Hurst said she noticed that even the American people who talked against prohibition in Europe, did more talking than drinking. "Lots of them make up for lost time in a drinking way," she stated, "but I noticed most American men talked about cocktails and drank water."

And this opinion agrees with others regarding conditions at London hotels. "Our American patrons," said the manager of one of the biggest hotels in London, "are an exceedingly nice kind of people, but they are observing their national custom. They are not drinking nearly as much wine as they used to." And the dispatch which quoted this manager added, "A visit to a well-known 'American bar' seemed to bear out what the hotel manager said. Americans by the score were in the near-by lobby, but at the bar were only four customers, and they were unmistakably British."

Prohibition is working!

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA, NOVEMBER 11-16, 1922

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA, NOVEMBER 17-19, 1922.

FRANCES WILLARD ON HOME PROBLEMS

Jane A. Stewart

"One swallow does not make a summer and one parent by the hearthstone does not make a home. We need to stop singing the old ditty, 'What is home without a mother?' unless we add, 'The father alone can make the house home.'"

Over twenty years ago, Frances Willard uttered these words before the National W. C. T. U. convention in Baltimore, during her splendid annual address. Frequently, before that time, in her public speeches and in her writings, she voiced her views on the problems of home, with special emphasis on the part that man should have in it.

"Does anyone suppose we have found out what man might be in the home?" she once asked. "He has been thus far an embryonic figure there, a mere sketch or outline, dim and shadowy." "Immeasurable has been the loss to men," she declared, "that in the age of force, of war and pioneering they were so much shut out from the holy ministries of home's inmost sanctuary, where Madonna and child are evermore enshrined. * * * The nearer the father approaches to the cradle, and the more frequently, the happier for him and for his home and for the state. * * When the hand that rules the world shall also rock the cradle, the millennium will no longer be far off. When the father builds his life and thought into his daughter as the mother has hitherto built hers into the son, the world will see her grandest women and her kindliest men."

Miss Willard firmly believed that "boys and girls should be trained very much alike and have the same toys." In this way girls would get needed outdoor exercise.

"There are cogent reasons," she once said, "why the fatherly instinct is less strong in boys than is the motherly in girls, and nothing more beneficent could happen to men or to the world than that they should have this sacred, home-conserving instinct more strongly accentuated in heart and life. If either is to play chiefly with dolls, by all means let it be the boy."

"Man needs home more than woman does," she observed, "though without it, either is at best but a jewel torn from its setting. He is in more danger without its anchorage than she, for the centripetal forces of her nature will always draw her strongly toward the light even though its beacon shine from some happier woman's fireside, while the centrifugal forces of his nature will drive him far off into darkness."

She looked on home problems in a most practical way. "At the present rate of improvement, two generations will not have passed before the outgrowth of invention will have reduced to a minimum housewifely cares, and the wholesale will have supplanted the retail in household economics," she predicted. "Thus set free from accustomed occupations, the average woman will enter more largely into her husband's pursuits and share more constantly her children's studies and recreations. The desideratum will be found when the house becomes a unit not by such extinguishment as makes 'husband and wife one and that one the husband,' but by such recognition as makes one-half the property the wife's in fee simple, and associates the husband with her as equal partner in the rearing of their children."

That man in the home will have a larger place in the proportion that woman gains standing room in the constantly growing world, was Miss Willard's opinion. Motherhood, she felt, would not be less, but "fatherhood a hundredfold more magnified." She thus announced "the approaching beatitude of man": "When to the splendor of their intellectual powers and the magnificence of their courage shall be added the unselfish devotion that comes of 'child-ward care' we shall see characters more Christlike than the world has known save in the calendar of saints."

For God and Home and Every Land

Time of Prayer—Noontide

"It is always noontide somewhere,
And across the awakening continents,
From shore to shore, somewhere,
Our prayers are rising ever more."

Hymn of Action

Not in dumb resignation, we lift our hands on high;
Not like the nerveless fatalist, content to do and die.
Our faith springs like the eagle's, who soars to meet the sun,
And cries exulting unto thee, "O Lord, thy will be done."

When tyrant feet are trampling upon the common weal,
Thou dost not bid us bend and writhe beneath the iron heel.
In thy name we assert our right, in truth by tongue or pen.
And even the headman's ax may flash thy message unto men.

Thy will! It bids the weak be strong; it bids the strong be just;
No lips to fawn; no hands to beg; no brow to seek the dust.
Whenever man oppresses man beneath the liberal sun,
O Lord, be there; thine arm make bare; thy righteous will be done.

—John Hay.

Refined Intoxication

Mr. Burton W. Currie of the Ladies Home Journal, in an editorial in the September issue, makes the positive statement, "It is all buncombe that you never see a drunken person in Europe. If you know a drunk when you see one, there are numbers to be seen in London, Paris, Rome and all through the Baedeker. In London I saw a dozen drunks all at one time in a 'pub,' and I saw almost as many later in the evening about the lobby of an exclusive hotel. On the Continent it was common every day to encounter an alcoholic breath that would devarnish a near-mahogany sideboard. One evening in Naples, at one of the best hotels, I sat near two middle-aged gentlemen in the uniform of generals of some still royal army, who were unable to navigate at the conclusion of a highly vinous meal and had to be assisted to the lobby. This interesting proceeding was conducted with such dignity and deftness that it attracted scarcely any notice. I suppose this might be catalogued as refined intoxication, an art that we in our crudeness never learned." * * * "The whisky, wine and beer interests of Europe are deeply concerned over our prohibition experiment. They denounce it as a farce and a failure. They are spending more and more money every year on propaganda to promote the booze habit. They see all about them an ever-increasing number of water drinkers, both in the British Isles and on the Continent. You constantly hear that it is dangerous to drink water abroad unless you buy the bottled brand. This isn't in the least degree true today. There are very few cities and towns abroad that are not well provided with perfectly safe public drinking water."

Final Returns on Literary Digest Prohibition Poll

A poll of 1,000,000 votes out of a voting strength of 20,000,000 leaves large room for speculation, says someone in commenting on the published results of the Literary Digest poll. And a poll of 922,383 votes out of 12,000,000 ballots sent out certainly leaves room for speculation, especially in view of the fact that many who received ballots, considering the propositions not proper subjects for a vote as they related to a provision of the Federal Constitution, refused to use their ballots.

The summary of the 922,383 ballots received, as given in the Literary Digest of September 9, is as follows:

	For Enforcement
Main Poll	306,255-(38.5%)
Women's Poll	48,485-(44.5%)
Factory Polls	1, 53-(8.4%)
Totals	356,193-(38.6%)
	For Modification
Main Poll	325,549-(41.1%)
Women's Poll	39,914-(36.7%)
Factory Polls	10,871-(62.1%)
Totals	376,334-(40.8%)
	For Repeal
Main Poll	164,453-(20.4%)
Women's Poll	20,448-(18.8%)
Factory Polls	4,955-(29.5%)
Totals	189,856-(20.6%)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. HEADQUARTERS

GENERAL OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL.
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, FARGO, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA.
TREASURER
MRS. MARGARET C. MUNNS, EVANSTON, ILL.

1730 Chicago Avenue, Evanston, Ill.

REST COTTAGE

RED LETTER DAYS

September 28—Children's Harvest Home (Birthday of Frances E. Willard).
October 29—World's Temperance Sunday.

TRANSPORTATION NOTES

Delegates whose shortest route to the Philadelphia conventions does not take them through Chicago should buy a one-way ticket to Philadelphia, securing convention certificate (not a receipt) showing full fare paid. This certificate will be turned over to Miss Elizabeth Newman, secretary of the transportation committee, on arrival. The railroad agent will be at the convention Nov. 15 and 18 for the purpose of validating all certificates. This will permit the delegates to buy a return ticket for one-half the regular fare.

The World League Against Alcoholism meeting in Toronto following the Philadelphia conventions hopes to secure a convention rate but that has not yet been announced. Delegates may buy tickets at Philadelphia for Toronto and must return to Philadelphia by Dec. 1 which is the last date for leaving on the convention rates.

The convention rate of one fare going and one-half fare returning applies to all parts of the United States and Canada except California and Nevada. Delegates from California may take advantage of the nine months' round trip ticket or they may buy tickets to the first point in the Western Passenger Association and there secure a ticket and certificate to Philadelphia.

State Conventions

Maine, North Berwick, September 20-22.
North Dakota, Fargo, September 21-25.
Kentucky, Covington, September 22-24.
Virginia, Danville, September 25-28.
Rhode Island, Newport, September 26-28.
New Hampshire, Lancaster, September 26-28.
Washington (West), Tacoma, September 26-29.
Wisconsin, Rice Lake, September 28-October 1.
Tennessee, Springfield, September 29-October 2.
Pennsylvania, Williamsport, September 24-October 3.
Montana, Kalispell, October 1-4.
Washington (East), Spokane, October 3-6.
Maryland, Walkersville, October 4-6.
New York, Gloversville, October 5-9.
Kansas, Salina, October 10-13.
Oregon, McMinnville, October 10-13.
Missouri, St. Louis, October 10-13.
Idaho (South), October 10-13.
Delaware, Smyrna, October 11-13.
Oklahoma, Enid, October 12-16.
Nebraska, Lincoln, October 13-17.
Indiana, Wabash, October 13-16.
North Carolina, Spencer, October 14-18.
California (North), Modesto, October 16-20.
Connecticut, New London, October 17-19.
Colorado, Pueblo, October 17-19.
Massachusetts, Hyannis, October 17-19.
Alabama, Albany, October 17-19.
Illinois, Decatur, October 17-20.
Ohio, Findlay, October 17-20.
Georgia, Douglasville, October 17-20.
South Dakota, Mitchell, October 18-23.
South Carolina, Newberry, October 20-23.
Vermont, Burlington, October 24-26.
Iowa, Oskaloosa, October 24-27.
Arkansas, Paragould, October 25-27.
New Jersey, Camden, November 9-10.

Just From the Press for Your Schools

Outlines for Health and Temperance Teaching for the Grades of the Public Schools

New Pamphlet for Scientific Temperance Instruction in the Schools. Just what you want for your teachers. See that they are supplied. Price, per copy, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.25.

Order now for immediate use as the school year opens.

New Campaign Poster "Vote Right"

A Woman's Appeal to Women. Attractively illustrated. Order in quantities. Use in every available place where it will reach the eyes of women. Price, single copy, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00; per 100, $7.50. Please send remittance with order.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

Change of Address

Please note the change in the address of Dr. Valeria H. Parker, national director of the department of Social Morality, from 1800 Virginia Avenue, Washington, D. C., to 370 Seventh Avenue, New York City.

Over-match the A. A. P. A.

Every New Member for the W.C.T.U. Is That Much More Power Registered in Defense of Prohibition

TO GAIN MEMBERS POSTERIZE YOUR COMMUNITY WITH THESE STRIKING NEW POSTERS

(Size 19 x 25. Price, each, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00.)

For Their Sakes Enforce the Law.
Booze Stands Between —.
Forge a Chain.

HAVE YOU SEEDED DOWN THE FIELD IN YOUR VICINITY WITH THESE NEW MEMBERSHIP COMPELLERS?

IF NOT, DO IT NOW!

The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment Appeals to Millions By Way of the Printed Page
Do Thou Likewise

We List Herewith SPECIAL HELPS

Order in quantities, enclose in envelopes with membership cards and a personal note of invitation, and hand or mail to the women of your church, missionary society, club, lodge, etc.

Titles of Leaflets and Prices. Each Leaflet a Winner.

(Leaflets, 2 cents each)

Why You Should Join the Half-Million Women of the W. C. T. U. Price, per 100, 50 cents; per 50, 30 cents.

Why I Am a White Ribboner Today.

Why a Million Members?

Price, per 50, 25 cents; per 100, 45 cents.

OTHER LEAFLETS:

W. C. T. U. Co-operation the Community Keynote.
Jubilee Membership Campaign Songs.
Mobilize a Million Members.

Price, per 50, 35 cents; per 100, 60 cents.

Declaration of Principles.
Purpose and Scope of the W. C. T. U.
Recruiting for Membership.

Price, per 100, 20 cents; per 50, 15 cents.

PLEDGES AND CARDS

Membership Appeal card, with vignette and autograph signature of Anna A. Gordon. Per 100, 50 cents.

W. C. T. U. Coupon Pledge. Per 100, 45 cents.

Y. P. B. Invitation Card. Per 100, 50 cents.

Order in quantities, enclose in envelopes with membership cards and a personal note of invitation, and hand or mail to the women of your church, missionary society, club, lodge, etc.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE,
Evanston, Illinois

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

GLIMPSES OF TEMPERANCE WORK AMONG CHINESE STUDENTS

Frances Willard Wang

Following our National W. C. T. U. Convention, the World Students' Christian Federation held its eleventh conference in Tsing Hua College, the very spot which reminds Chinese of the genuine friendship of our beloved friends across the sea. I refer to the Boxer uprising in China and the return of the surplus of the indemnity fund from the American Government, which made possible the founding of this beautiful school and the training of hundreds of young men.

As the student secretary of our organization, I was asked by the president, Dr. Mary Stone, to attend the conference. Not to speak of the joy of hearing many good addresses, renewing friendship with those whom I met years ago, and making many new acquaintances, I was especially happy to see the new president of the W. C. T. U. in Manila. She informed me concerning the progress of the work there, but the news of the death of dear Miss Abiertas, former president, gave me a great shock. While traveling in the Philippine Islands, I had my picture taken with Miss Abiertas and her sweet likeness is now a great comfort to me.

On rushing back from Peking, a cry for help for the starving Russians was everywhere heard in Shanghai. At the appeal of Mr. Wong Cha Shan, the general secretary of the Russian Famine Relief Society and former senator from Chili province, I at once pledged my assistance to relieve the suffering of the poor humanity up north in the cold regions. For about one week, during the afternoons and evenings, I went out to speak for them in colleges and high schools, pleading with the students to help. As very few girls will allow themselves to speak in public, my work was considered unique and successful. As a by-product, I introduced many influential college students to our organization. One of them is now president of the Shanghai Temperance Students' Alliance.

Boys and Girls From Kindergarten to College

Ever since my return from America two years ago last April, I had been going from one place to another up to the New Year, when the doctors suggested that less traveling would be better for my health. Unacquainted with the local work, I at once felt the difficulty of staying in Shanghai. I was informed, however, that there, as in other places in China, are many members. And that is all! Then I began to investigate the students' activities and found hardly any! Consequently I reasoned why. But at last I discovered the trouble. It was the lack of "joint." So at once I planned to organize a Shanghai Temperance Students' Alliance and, thank the dear heavenly Father, I have succeeded!

Early in May I called a students' delegation meeting at the headquarters and there planned to hold a students' rally in one of the beautiful gardens in Shanghai. Besides the main speaker that I was asked to invite, each school was requested to give a stunt. On May 13 at 2:00 p. m., the time for the proposed rally, about three hundred boys and girls, from kindergarten to college, assembled at the Pang Sung garden gate. It was the most wonderful sight one ever saw in China! The old Chinese custom prohibits boys and girls coming near each other, but here we found the expression in favor of co-education. Two by two they went in, and after the blowing of a whistle, all came to assemble in a newly built oriental straw tent, which was surrounded by beautiful willow trees and artificial lakes and mountains. Every item on the program was snappy and enjoyed by everyone to the utmost. Even the pleasure-seekers attended our meeting, standing beyond the rails. The meeting adjourned at 5:30 p. m.

Young People at the World's Convention

The young people's work in England, Scotland, Australia, New Zealand, India, China, Japan, the Philippines, Argentina and Uruguay will be represented by delegates from these countries at the World's W. C. T. U. Convention at Philadelphia, November 11-16.

A demonstration of unique interest by the young people is planned for one evening of the Convention.

Students' Alliance Planned

Again, a delegation meeting was held on the beautiful lawn of the garden, which is rarely seen in China. I presided at the meeting and after I had made a few remarks, one of the college boys, Mr. Chang Tsai Ysio, presented a plan for organizing the different school unions into a students' alliance. This was voted for unanimously. Before the close of the meeting four persons were elected to draft the constitution.

On the third of June, ratification and election took place. Mr. Charles K. L. Woo of the Institute Franco-Chinois d'Industrie et de Commerce was elected president of the alliance, and Miss Huang Fong Trau of the Bridgman Girls' School was elected president of the Body of Councilmen. It is the rule of the organization that no matter what the president of the alliance does he must get the consent of the president of the Body of Councilmen, so that no abuse of power will ever occur. The organization is of a most perfect type. It has three departments—social service, lecturing, and investigating—and each presents a budget to the president and is responsible for its own work. Four big meetings are to be held each year, two in the spring and two in the fall.

The organization is only two and a half months old, but it has achieved already some striking things. About a week ago the students who are living in Shanghai started a temperance campaign among the children in the fifty summer schools, opened by the Christian students in the city. Instruction was given by myself, Miss Tinling's story-telling method was used, and we found it very interesting and successful. "Golden Apples" and "Green Spectacles" are now known by hundreds of little ones in Shanghai. The result of this campaign is an increase of L. T. L. members.

Another good thing that our student members are doing in Shanghai is to render some really good social service to the poor. Thus a Chiao Yong Yuan (Poor Relief House) is now in planning. Ten or twenty of the poorest among the poor will be taken in during the winter. The aged will be cared for and the little ones sent to school.

Possible Y. P. B. Among the Soldiers

As I was writing, a call came from one of our college student members, Mr. Tso, from Honan, where the good General Teng is. About a month ago he went back from Shanghai for the summer and got all his friends to join us. As he knew how well worked out is our Students' Alliance in Shanghai, he urged me to organize the same in his home town and he has unselfishly promised to give a vacant room in his own home for our office use. As they are practically all boys, I felt the inconvenience to go. Not to discourage him, I have asked the president, Mr. Charles K. L. Woo, of the Shanghai Temperance Alliance, to represent me. Not only is he a good speaker and organizer, but he is well acquainted with the work. It is possible that they will get General Teng's consent to organize a Y. P. B. among his soldiers. As Mr. Woo starts for Honan, three days' journey from here, shall we not pray for his safe journey and a successful time?

Beside the local work, I had also the opportunity to visit the nearby cities such as Soochow, where I spoke in the Y. M. C. A. conference, Liu Ho, etc.

This has been a wonderfully blessed year to me. I have never enjoyed my work as much as I did this spring. As I write, my heart is full of deep appreciation of those whose spirit of sacrifice has made possible the work in China.

What You Need Just Now

Manual of Law Enforcement. (Plain and explicit so all may understand). Per copy, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00.

Studies in Government. (Pamphlet) by Deborah Knox Livingston. Price per copy, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.50. Each woman needs her own copy of each of the above named pamphlets.

To Combat The Wine and Beer Propaganda

Give the People the Truth

(All leaflets 2 cents unless otherwise noted.)

Primary Lesson on Beer.
Beer is Drunk for Its Alcohol.
He Was Not Drunk But——.
Alcohol an Ally of Pneumonia.
Wine as a Cause of Alcoholism.
Beer as a Cause of Alcoholism.
When is a Man Intoxicated?
Behind the Bars for Life.
Price per 100, 20 cents; per 50, 15 cents.
The Persistent Beer Fallacy.
Wine—What Is It?
Beer Quantities of Alcohol Injurious.
What Benjamin Franklin Said About Beer.
Dangers in the Use of Fermented Drinks.
Is Beer Intoxicating?
Pre-Natal Effects of Alcohol.
Is the Moderate Drinker a Safe Citizen?
Are Beer and Wine Harmful?
Drinking to Avoid Drunkenness is Not the Whole Story.
Man or Beer?
Per 100, 45 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

A BARGAIN

"All the world loves a baby" and we might add all women (and men, too,) love a bargain. It has been decided to continue summer rates on the stickers, so do not let the price deter you from ordering a plentiful supply. Let us advertise our great WORLD'S CONVENTION whenever and wherever possible. Ask your pastor to allow you to stick one on each church calendar some week before they are distributed. They always invite comment whenever they are presented. Be sure to have a generous supply for your Campaign Teas. They will start a discussion which may be the means of converting any who are not already enthusiastic for temperance.

$2.00 for one thousand.
$1.25 for five hundred.
50 cents for one hundred and twenty-five.

Send remittance with order to

MRS. JAMES B. SCOTT,
503 South 46th St.,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Virginia Branch of American Legion Defeats Motion for Light Wines and Beer

Faith T. Parrott

Like most of the states, the Old Dominion is now busy concluding the year's work, holding county conventions, summing up reports, and "calling up" the unthinking who are one year late in the payment of their dues. While hoping for advance in the work of the state, many forward steps have already been taken. For example, at the annual convention of the Virginia branch of the American Legion in Charlottesville, a motion was made that that patriotic body go on record as favoring the return of light wines and beer. After a lively discussion, it was defeated by a large vote.

In one circuit where moonshine and bootlegging have caused many murders and a full docket, the presiding attorney, Judge N. E. Clement of Chatham, has boldly announced his intention to see that those committing violations shall be punished to the full extent of the law. His continued brave stand (and revenue officials and all law enforcement officers are now in constant danger of their lives) has made a profound impression. President Roosevelt's saying that publicity is a great cure, was recently forcefully illustrated when another undaunted son of Pittsylvania county, Prohibition Officer W. T. Shelton (as kind as he is cool) went to a small place with armed men to arrest breakers of the whisky law. The public became annoyed and frightened after detectives and officers had fled for their lives, and sent telegrams to all parts of the state in an endeavor to ameliorate conditions.

Times move on! White ribboners are to assemble for their convention this year in the city of Danville, where, during the Civil War, Neal Dow, the "Father of prohibition," was for some time a prisoner. The records speak of kind attentions shown him by his captors.

Danville, a flourishing city upon the Dan river, has many churches and clubs, and one of the largest and most modern cotton mills in the world. Through the efforts of various ladies in the town, its girl operatives are housed in a comfortable building, with reading rooms, and all of the conveniences. Flowers and shrubbery make the exterior attractive. Every visitor to Danville is shown this home, called Hylton Hall.

That the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be welcome is shown by a front page article in The Methodist, which said: "It should be an honor to have such a band of Christian women meet in Danville. The influence of the W. C. T. U. was an all-important factor in the banishing of the saloon, and it now stands four-square for law enforcement, as it did for securing legislation to keep the victory for God and home and native land."

Georgia to Have Temperance Day in Public Schools

Special Correspondence

After five years of persistent, prayerful effort on the part of the W. C. T. U., Temperance Day in the Public Schools is to be observed in Georgia the fourth Friday in March, the House having passed the bill August 24, and the Senate the last day of the legislative session.

Of the fifteen bills sponsored by the Woman's Legislative Council of Georgia, only five were passed—Temperance Day in the Public Schools, the Children's Code Commission, the Child Placement, Equal Guardianship, and an appropriation bill for the Georgia Training School for Girls.

Mrs. August Burghard, director of Publicity for the Georgia W. C. T. U., is an indefatigable worker, furnishing each week to the woman's section of nine dailies, among them the Atlanta Constitution, material pertaining to prohibition and W. C. T. U. activities.

Georgia is rejoicing in the splendid work accomplished by Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins, national organizer and lecturer, on a recent tour of her home state. Despite the handicap of exceedingly hot weather and other adverse conditions, which sometimes made her audiences small, she proved a tower of strength to the cause and so impressed upon her audiences the fact that all are needed in the great battle of the W. C. T. U. against organized opposition to the national prohibition law, that 147 gave their names as members. She also organized local unions and Y. P. B.'s, paid all expenses, and left a goodly balance in the state treasury.

Sacramento W. C. T. U. Holds Candidates' Meeting

From the president of the Sacramento W. C. T. U., Retta Parrott, comes word of the part that city is taking in California's battle for a state prohibition enforcement law. She writes: "Our candidates' meeting was quite a success, eight appearing in person to express their sympathy with our declaration of principles. A number of others sent written messages.

"An interesting interlude was the speech of Miss Uta Hayashi, president of the Osaka branch of the W. C. T. U., the largest in Japan, having over a thousand members. She is making a tour of the coast and has already spoken in a number of California towns. Miss Hayashi is a delegate to the World's W. C. T. U. Convention in Philadelphia and is on her way thither. Her words were interpreted by Mrs. Watanabe, who has recently become a member of the Sacramento Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

"Mrs. Sara J. Dorr, for fourteen years president of the California W. C. T. U., was also a guest at the meeting. She has spent about twelve days here helping in the organization work of the Wright Act Campaign Committee. A number of trips were made to the smaller towns of Sacramento county, and it is believed that much good will result.

"The well known novelist, Kathleen Norris, is to speak at a meeting in Sacramento. This will be under the auspices of several of the women's societies. She has been speaking before women's clubs of the state with very good effect."

Special

TWO NEW PROGRAMS FOR L. T. L.'S, NATIONAL PROHIBITION GUARDS, AND SUNDAY SCHOOLS

Uncle Sam's Prohibition Quiz. Testimony of ten noted Americans (Exercise for 11 boys or young men). Price, five cents per copy; per dozen, 50 cents.

Aunt Columbia's Prohibition Quiz. Testimony of ten noted American women. (Exercise for 11 girls or young women.) Price, five cents per copy; per dozen, 50 cents.

National W. C. T. U. Publishing House
Evanston, Illinois

Use Playlets and Programs For The Campaign

For Sunday Schools, Y. P. B.'s, Y. P. C. E.'s, Y. W. C. A.'s, W. C. T. U.'s, Public Meetings, etc. These will help create sentiment and win votes.

Temperance Day Program for Public Schools. New, unique and attractive. Can be used in Sunday Schools or for an evening program as well as in public schools. Price per copy, 5 cents; per doz., 45 cents; per 100, $3.00; per 1,000, $25.00. Less than 100, at dozen rates.

World-wide the Joy. A prohibition Hymn with pantomime. May be used with or without the latter. Requires seven girls, a soloist and pianist. Price, 5 cents, single copy; per dozen, 25 cents.

The Binneybakers. Amusing and instructive; the plot centers about "home-brew." Requires three women and one man, young or old. Easily arranged. Per copy, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00.

Lester Brown's Battle. (Total Abstinence and Anti-Cigaret). Four girls and two boys. Per copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 35 cents.

The Eighteenth Amendment Forever. A very attractive playlet exactly suited to present needs. Can be used in public schools, Sunday Schools, or as part of an evening's entertainment. For seventeen men, young or old, and a number of children. Very effective. Per copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 40 cents.

A New "Alice in Wonderland." For three girls and four boys. Can be used on Temperance Sunday or in public schools. Price, 5 cents; per dozen, 40 cents.

Bible Reasons for the Eighteenth Amendment. For one man, one woman and 13 boys and girls. Price, 3 cents each; per dozen, 15 cents.

Patriotic Prohibition Drill. For seven boys and girls. Per copy, 3 cents; per dozen, 15 cents.

Who Was to Blame? Monologue by Josiah Allen's Wife. Price, 10 cents.

A Sick Baby. (For 12 little girls and one boy). Attractive as an interlude for a county or local institute meeting, club meeting, etc. Per copy, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00.

A Lark at Nonotuck Hall. An amusing and instructive exposé of the true character of "patent medicines." Suitable for a group of young women or high school girls. Per copy, 20 cents.

Order promptly and use above Playlets to advantage before election. Please send remittance with order.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

Law vs. Lawlessness

The wets know no party; they are not bound by allegiance to any organization. They regard the obtaining of a drink as the only right guaranteed by the Constitution, and in talking of Constitutional rights they ignore the Eighteenth Amendment which is now a part of the Constitution. The real issue is LAW versus LAWLESSNESS. No man who appeals to the underworld for votes can be trusted to represent a law-abiding constituency. The drys must be as much interested in the enforcement of the law as the wets are in the violation of the law. That means that the drys must make the liquor question the supreme issue wherever there is a candidate who stands for intoxicants.

—W. J. Bryan in The Commoner.

The Magnet of Manchuria

(Continued from Page Four)

jections for a few coppers a prick, are in the habit of using the same syringe for all and sundry. Medical missionaries can tell of people dying from the effects of the contagion thus spread, quite aside from the morphine itself. Cases come to them covered with septic abscesses, the whole body a mass of putrefaction. A doctor told me of a man and wife who were patients in the mission hospital. While they were actually there, it was found that a Japanese man was smuggling morphine to the one and a Japanese woman to the other. The temptation followed them even when they had fled from it.

Indeed, for those who have acquired the habit, it is difficult to walk safely along the streets. The newspaper stands often keep morphine on sale; so also do the pawn-shops. A notice that "So-and-so buys bones" means that one can get an injection from him, while many drug-stores sell on the sly. A Chinese friend told us of a gang of brick-layers who left their work twice a day to go and get their hypodermic. An evangelist came across a boy of twenty who had been the unfortunate possessor of house and land and had sold both to purchase morphine. He was buying twelve dollars' worth of the drug every three days.

Women receive injections in their heads, using their hair as a covering for their sin. A little fellow of nine attending a Christian school looked so white and miserable that the teacher examined him to ascertain the cause. Finding marks upon his arm he questioned him, and elicited the confession that he had been a morphine user for two years and had learned the habit from his mother.

In one of the smaller towns I heard that many families had sold their homes to procure the drug and at the same time it was stated that conditions were even worse in the neighboring villages from lack of any supervision at all. Some people destroy their houses by degrees, taking down tiles and rafters and selling them piecemeal, to satisfy the craving, just as they did in famine time in order to obtain food.

The morphine fiends are known as inveterate thieves. They will take the palings from the garden, or steal in through the window and seize bedding. The dressings and towels of the hospital will be snatched if the nurse's back is turned. One addict stole the new matting round a coffin in which a young girl had just laid her father. The ground in Manchuria is frozen from six to twelve feet down in winter time and funerals have to wait till spring, so the casket must stay out in the yard until it is practicable to dig a grave. But a morphine fiend cannot let even that remain undisturbed; no sense of decency or sympathy for the mourners deters him from an evil deed. His moral nature has been blighted and he is hardly conscious of any distinction between right and wrong. After perhaps three years of this abject slavery, he escapes from his passions into a dishonored grave.

Drinking is more common in Manchuria than in China proper for two simple reasons, the actual abundance of grain and the comparative abundance of money, more particularly in the north. Up on the borders of Mongolia, where there are no railway facilities, it is not surprising that the wheat which cannot be sold should be turned into liquor. More than fifty years ago Mr. Williamson, in his book entitled, "Journeys in North China" made the following statement concerning Manchuria: "The only manufactures we saw were those of oil and whisky, the latter, being esteemed an economical mode of using up surplus millet and maize, is extensively carried on; we came upon distilleries covering large areas, employing many men and supporting huge colonies of pigs. Distillation was objected to by some of the first Emperors of the present dynasty, as a waste of food; but it has outlived all interdicts, and is more flourishing than ever. The mode of conveying whisky is curious; it is carried in huge wicker baskets lined with a thick paper. The baskets are squat, and several being carefully roped on each cart, they are rattled safely over hill and valley, stream and swamp."

The same liquor is made today, and as in China proper, it is drunk hot in little cups about as large as a salt-cellar. These are filled from the pewter vessel which is kept warm in the ashes of the stove. When a feast is spread for, say, a hundred persons, twenty-five pounds weight of native whisky is usually included in the menu. Those who employ a journeyman carpenter or joiner are under an obligation to provide him with liquor. Almost everybody in Manchuria drinks this liquor and many people use it at every meal. They believe that it helps digestion, and it certainly does give a flavor to their very monotonous fare. It is rare for a Chinese to be demonstrably the worse for drink, so it is not necessary to waste words on the subject of its excessive use. What they have yet to learn is that the most moderate quantity regularly taken has injurious effects on body and mind.

It is not to be concluded, however, that drunkenness is unknown. Judging from the cases that have come under one's own notice in a short visit, there must be more than is usually realized. But when people drink in the privacy of their own house, the effects are not as evident as when men congregate in saloons. Assuredly the Chinese drink far less than the western nations; but on the other hand they drink more than the casual observer would suppose.

I heard of one woman who was in the habit of consuming a pound of whisky every day, until she died from its effects, and now in the same town there is another woman known to be taking regularly the half of that amount. Unfortunately, it is very cheap, a pound of liquor only costing the equivalent of ten cents of our money. One day I was returning from a meeting in company with a missionary, when a Chinese soldier the worse for drink used bad language to us. My friend reproved him, and the man

For Distribution at Your Fairs
Open Air Meetings
and Every Place Where People Congregate

FACTS! FACTS!! FACTS!!!

A Series of Seven New Leaflets to Put in the Hands of Voters. You are THE ONE to Distribute Them!

TITLES OF LEAFLETS:

Labor Leaders Outspoken for Prohibition.
Bankers Believe in Prohibition.
Health Experts Favor Prohibition.
Educators Commend Prohibition.
Women Want Prohibition.
Family Life Benefited by Prohibition.
Manufacturers Approve Prohibition.

Special price, per 100, 30 cents; per 1,000, $2.50. Order in quantities and use now! Picase send remittance with order.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois

Sell Your Snapshots at $5.00 Each

Kodak prints needed by 25,000 publishers. Make vacations pay. We teach you how and where to sell. Write WALHAMORE INSTITUTE, LAFAYETTE BLDG., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Unexcelled for repairing china, glassware, earthenware, furniture, vases, books, etc. Famous since 1876. Major's rubber and Leather Cements are good.

Three kinds, 20c per bottle at dealers, or write us.

MAJOR MFG. CO., NEW YORK

THOSE FOUR BEAUTIFUL SONGS

Are spreading through the land. Already thousands are singing them. They are "Hidden," "That City O'er the Sea," "May the Fire Fall," "We Shall Join the Shouting By and By." All for only 10 cents. Four lots of them for 25 cents. Or make it 35c and to the four lots we will add the fine 25c patriotic sheet song "The U. S. A. For Me."

REV. L. L. PICKETT, Wilmore, Ky.

No Better Campaign Document

Than Our New Fan

Blue and white, with dry map, and eight pertinent quotations from eight prominent Americans. Each quotation a vote winner.

Use Them Liberally

At your Fairs, Open Air Meetings, in Waiting Rooms, Lodge Rooms, Churches, Rallies, Re-unions, etc., etc. Let our Campaign Fan talk for our Dry Law. Price, per 100, $5.00; per dozen, 70 cents. Please send remittance with order.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Ill.

Educate for Obedience to Law

Law Enforcement Decalog.
Representative Volstead in Defense of the Enforcement Code.
Undergirding Law Enforcement.
How Most Effectually to Promote Law Enforcement.
Let us Make our Victory Secure.
Lincoln's Appeal for Law.
He That Keepeth the Law.
Per 100, 20 cents; per 50, 15 cents.
A Vision of American Sovereignty.
But One Common Ground.
What Can We Do to Bring Enforcement of the Prohibition Law?
Today's Imperative Task.
How Women Can Help Enforce the Law.
The Eighteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution.
The Eighteenth Amendment an Expression of the Will of the People.
Prohibition Progress as Portrayed by Decisions of the United States Supreme Court.
Reasons Why the Prohibition Law is not Properly Enforced and Suggested Remedies.
Stabilize Public Sentiment.
Crusading in the Court Room.
Up and At It.
The Fight Is Still On.
How They Put It Over On Us While We Were Over There.
Per 100, 45 cents; per 50, 25 cents.
Quiz on National Constitutional Prohibition.
Questionnaire on Federal Prohibition Code.
Per 100, 75 cents; per 50, 40 cents.
Constitution of the United States. Complete in pamphlet form, 16 pp. Price, 5 cents; per doz., 50 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

snatched his sword from its scabbard and threatened to stab the foreigner. Thank God, he did not actually do it, but it made one realize the danger of having hordes of undisciplined soldiers, within reach of cheap whisky, let loose, weapon in hand, among a civilian population. This was in Northern Manchuria, where the drinking customs are much more pronounced than they are in the south.

Dr. Christie told me that for the first twenty years of his residence in Mukden he saw very little drinking. There was no fighting in the streets and policemen were not needed. But when southern Manchuria came into touch with the west during the Russo-Japanese war, the liquor problem assumed serious proportions. The Chinese adopted Russian ways and began to think that hospitality was incomplete without the foreign vodka and whisky. Moreover they felt obliged to empty the glass each time a toast was proposed and very often it was drunk in spirits unmixed with any water. The doctor on one occasion at a semi-official banquet saw a man fall into a stupor from which he never woke.

The Japanese grow vines extensively on slopes of their leased territory and they are flooding the country with cheap wines. They are themselves great drinkers. The new-fashioned stores, which have glass fronts, instead of being open to the street, display bottles in the windows along with the various other foreign products which have recently come into vogue, such as canned goods and imported fruits. As no license is necessary any store can carry wine.

There is a good deal of drinking among the foreign railroad officials in Manchuria, sometimes with lamentable results. Marshal Joffre recently visited China and took a run up to Mukden. On each section of the journey the company had two of its representatives appointed to ride with him as a special safety measure. Among them was a young Englishman who had acquired distinction in the war. He escorted the French hero to a certain southern city and returned the same evening after drinking in the interval. That night he fell off the train and was killed, adding one more to the fatal tragedies of the liquor traffic. Temperance work is clearly needed in the East as well as in the West, needed, too, among all the races that mingle there.

Now for a glance at a few places visited during my spring tour. That conglomeration of races was nowhere so strikingly illustrated as in Harbin, the mushroom city which boasts the largest foreign population in the entire Orient. When there I felt as though I were living in three foreign countries at once. Besides being in China I was in Russia and Denmark. We drove through the streets in a Russian droschky, and the signs on the stores were mostly in that unpronounceable language. The letters are much like English ones turned upside down and wrong way about, so while they are tantalizingly familiar, there is no making head or tail of them. I was entertained in the Danish mission and slept under that peculiar Teutonic article which belongs to the feather-bed genus and takes the place of sheets and blankets. It is an exasperating experience to spend a night under one of these things for it is like having a big ball for bedclothes and one has the uneasy feeling that the said ball may bounce at any moment.

Harbin is an impromptu sort of city, which seems to have grown up by chance and to be governed in much the same way. In fact the center of gravity of the "wild and woolly west" would appear to have shifted to the Far East. We called a carriage at the station, but two young soldiers jumped into it while we were attending to baggage and they refused to budge. When the decent driver insisted on keeping his engagement with the foreign ladies, one of the soldiers struck him on the face with a leather strap, drawing blood. But no policeman interfered; they are said to be afraid to do so. We had to drive a long way round, because the short cut to the mission was dangerous after dark. Travelers were liable to be robbed if nothing worse.

Before we reached our destination the cabman explained that he could proceed no further, the reason being that the road was no better than a bog. Right in the midst of this modern city were several of these sloughs, and occasionally cutting across the street were little gullies over which not even a rickshaw could take a passenger. Sometimes one had to go along a board-walk consisting of but two planks, raised a couple of feet above a sea of slime, and suddenly in the dark, on this rickety road-way, one would have to pass coolies with their heavily laden poles or a beggar or even a bicycle!

But in the midst of all this mess and muddle there rise some good solid buildings and fine modern stores, two of them boasting revolving electric signs. The latter both belong to Christians. The Danish mission is meeting with great success in an effort to reach business men. It has no less than eight Bible classes in as many different stores, aside from those conducted in the church and the Y. M. C. A. In the largest we had a temperance meeting one night when the day's work was done and the doors closed. In the back of the big store there gathered over a hundred young men, with their employer, to hear about alcohol and tobacco and their relation to business efficiency. Another good gathering was held in the Y. M. C. A. which in Harbin, as elsewhere, is vitally interested in the temperance question and ready to co-operate with the W. C. T. U.

The Volstead Act, finally passed nearly a year after the armistice by a more than three to one vote in both houses of Congress, merely carries out the plain meaning and intent of the Eighteenth Amendment ..... One hardly need add that, apart from the constitutional question, a legalized traffic in beer and wine would be a cover under which it would be impracticable to enforce prohibition of the traffic in other intoxicating liquors.

—Lewis Jerome Johnson.

Drunkenness from beer was responsible for many of the offenses that made the people demand prohibition. With the return of the beer traffic would come a return of all the evils that follow in its train. "When I was dean of the Cathedral of Chicago," said the Right Reverend Walter T. Sumner, bishop of Oregon, recently, "the men found lying around drunk all day in my neighborhood were drunk on beer. They didn't drink whisky, they drank beer."

ROCHE'S HERBAL EMBROCATION
RELIEVES SAFELY AND PROMPTLY
CROUP OR WHOOPING COUGH
Also wonderfully effective in Bronchitis, Lumbago and Rheumatism.
All druggists or
W. EDWARDS & SON, London, England
E. FOUGERA & CO., 90-92 Beekman St. N. Y.

SEND FOR CANDY
To sell for us. Churches, Societies, Sunday Schools, Lodges, Schools, etc., make liberal profits handling our very popular assortments of 5c Chocolate Bars, etc. Send for Illustrated Circular, Price-list, Order Blank and full particulars. Our goods sell quickly. Prompt Express shipments.
FRED D. LESURE COMPANY
6 Broad St., Fitchburg, Mass.

Women Preachers Hold Convention

At beautiful Winona Lake, home of many conventions, there recently assembled the members of the International Association of Women Preachers, in a gathering full of promise for the future. The Winona reporter, writing for the Daily Times, said that seldom in any company would there be found such eloquence and persuasiveness. Interest centered upon the address of the president, the Rev. M. Madeline Southard, who, speaking on the subject, "Not a Sphere but a Hemisphere," declared that the age-old idea that men and women have different spheres of interest and activity, mutually exclusive, is rapidly passing, and that life will be far better and happier when it is understood that neither men nor women are equal to directing any phase of life alone, but as two eyes give perfect sight, so the blended view of men and women gives complete human vision.

The Rev. Lida Herrick preached on the theme, "Called to Be Saints." Her address was in the spirit of the recent student conference at Shanghai, "Agreed to differ, but resolved to love." One of the happy things about this association of preaching women is that while some sixteen denominations are represented in its membership, there has never been the slightest friction on doctrinal questions. With so many things in common the women find no need of introducing minor differences.

A most polished and scholarly address on the Bible was given by the Rev. Lee Anna Starr, D.D., of Pittsburgh, Pa. The Rev. D. Willa Caffrey, from the state of Washington, spoke with characteristic earnestness on intercession and the need of a world-wide revival. The Rev. Ella L. Kroft of Indianapolis stirred all hearts as she told of the providence of God and the consolations of the inner life.

Business sessions were felt by all to be very fruitful. It was agreed to put out a small paper, The Woman's Pulpit. The following officers were elected: President, M. Madeline Southard, Winfield, Kansas; vice-president, Lida Herrick, University Place, Nebraska; general secretary, Marie Burr Wilcox, Nelson, Nebraska; recording secretary, Carolyn Hosford, Springfield, Massachusetts; treasurer, Ella L. Kroft, Indianapolis, Indiana; auditor, Jessie M. Monsor, Decatur, Illinois. The officers will be glad to hear from women ministers or others who are interested.

The Cause in Nova Scotia

Mrs. Lora S. La Mance, National W. C. T. U. organizer and lecturer, who has recently completed a ten weeks' trip through the "Land of Evangeline," writes as follows of the conditions she found:

"Nova Scotia is one of the seven dry Canadian provinces. Her law is not as far-reaching as the American prohibition law, but nevertheless it has proven a great blessing and will be kept. More than that, she will try and strengthen the weak places. The members of the W. C. T. U. are not strong in numbers but they are earnest, capable women. The society does a much greater work than we in the United States in the way of traveler's aid. The W. C. T. U. has at most principal stations somo one to meet the trains and look after young girls or elderly women. We might pattern after them to advantage. They do much work for soldiers and sailors. Of course, Nova Scotia is a maritime province. That makes a difference. It is only a short journey to Labrador. That makes a difference, also. But nearly every working union does something in the line of making comfort bags, and nearly every union gathers up a box or barrel of clothing and sends to the Labrador missions.

"It was my happy lot to put in six new unions and to obtain a goodly number of members. An unusual experience was the opportunity to speak to an audience composed entirely of fishermen. The next day, at Lunenburg, we saw 1,500 fishermen start for the banks of Newfoundland in one great fishing fleet. Another out-of-the-ordinary experience was to utilize a couple of days, unexpectedly left free, in making a hurried trip to Newfoundland and back. (Much of the travel in Nova Scotia is by water.) It was a pleasure, also, to find so many Y.'s in this province. But whenever I tried to speak to a Y. or an L. T. L., it always rained!"

Physicians Condemn Smoking by Women

"The outstanding fact is that though there is a divergence of opinion among medical men regarding the danger from nicotine if inhaled in excess by men, there is one question upon which there is the fullest accord: Cigaret smoking is injurious to women; it induces increased pulse rate, heightened blood pressure and irritable hearts."

This is the statement made by Harry Burke in an article in the Ladies' Home Journal.

Dr. Samuel Lambert, physician to the late Theodore Roosevelt, says that cigaret smoking among women is intolerable and a menace to their health. "Intemperate smoking causes nervousness and may lead to something worse. Women who use cigarets cannot be temperate. At best it is a horrible weed and should be let alone. It fouls the breath and makes women unwomanly."

Dr. Samuel A. Brown, dean of Bellevue Hospital, New York City, says that smoking is much more injurious to women than to men. "Nicotine is a muscular depressant and lowers the muscle tone. Cigaret smoking in excess decreases the muscle activity and vitality and is very objectionable. Men take more exercise than women, and the effect is not so noticeable or injurious. Women who smoke cigarets usually sit around, ride in their motors, attend teas, dinners or social affairs, and get very little real exercise. Their mode of life is entirely different from that of men.

"Women smoke nervously. They cannot smoke moderately. Their nervous condition develops anaemia and other ills to which the sex is susceptible. From the standpoint of health, cigaret smoking among women is very objectionable and, on the other hand, it is a let-down of moral standards. Among growing girls, particularly those developing mentally and physically, the habit is extremely dangerous."

W. C. T. U. Badges. Made of mother of pearl. Price 25 cents each. Address treasurer W. C. T. U., Jerusalem, Palestine. P. O. Box 443.

New York a Center of Wet Propaganda

(Continued from Page Three)

stantly, their owners having used up available cash paying large attorney's fees, putting up bail bonds, perhaps paying fines, and even when not convicted for illegal liquor selling, bearing court expenses so heavy that all profits were lost.

The way of an official who attempts to be "straight" in New York is beset with numerous difficulties. The story is told of one auditor in the income tax unit of the Internal Revenue Bureau who found that a certain distillery had claimed exemption on account of capitalized excess income which would lose the government almost a million dollars. He refused to allow it, and consequently the wets used means to have him removed from office. This is only one of many instances which might be given to show that public officials find it more difficult in New York City, perhaps, than in any other part of the country, to enforce the law. The statement has gone the rounds that at any hour of the day any officer of the law can "clean up" numberless times as much as his weekly, or monthly, or even his yearly income. He has to be made of iron to withstand the temptations in this line which come to him.

"New York," says Mr. Wile, a well known newspaper correspondent, "is the wettest spot in America for a variety of reasons. It is the money center, and bootlegging calls for and runs into big money. It has the largest population, including millions of aliens. It is steeped in traditions of graft—occupying, of course, no lone distinction in that regard. It is the country's principal harbor and natural distributing point for traffic so largely dependent on over-sea smuggling. And finally, New York is an avowedly wet community."

Shall New York (which is said to hold the key to the situation), with a large proportion, if not a majority, of its citizens of foreign birth, and knowing little and caring less of the history of this great country, be allowed to dictate to the rest of the United States what laws shall be obeyed?

The Senate's Longest Legislative Day

On Wednesday, August 2, when the Senate adjourned out of respect to the memory of Senator Crow, the longest legislative day in the history of the Senate came to an end. The legislative day began at 12 o'clock noon April 20, the hour of the taking up of the tariff bill, and continued for 104 calendar days, or 2,475 hours. August 3 the chaplain was present to offer prayer at the opening of a daily session, the first since April 20, recesses having been the order.

CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT

THE UNION SIGNAL ..... $1.50 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance (monthly).....50c a year
Single Copies, 5c each; per 100 .....$2.75
Club rate for ten or more Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition subscriptions, 40c a year. No other premium allowed.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER ..... 35c a year
Single Copies, 3c each; per 100 .....$2.00

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES

THE UNION SIGNAL .....$2.00 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (monthly) .....62c a year
THE YOUNG CRUSADER .....47c a year

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL Evanston, Illinois

Attention! Aim! Fire!

Della F. Withers, Circulation Manager

Comrades in this battle, our weapons will be deadly to ignorance, indifference, inaction.

Get a piece of writing paper and a pencil. At the top of the page write "Working list." Make a list of names, five, ten or twelve, of men and women who may be a trifle skeptical about the ultimate good from the Eighteenth Amendment; those who believe and repeat, "There is just as much drinking as before prohibition; one can get liquor anywhere," etc. Include the persons wholly ignorant on the subject and those who are "for prohibition" but are inactive because their affairs do not seem to be immediately touched by the problem.

Now, you have your list, make it your special duty to telephone, personally meet, or write to everyone on the list. Explain the situation, the truth about which you may get weekly from THE UNION SIGNAL. Ask them if they wish the saloon back. Point out to them how needful it is for them to become acquainted with present conditions. Tell them by what method they may inform themselves, none better than by subscribing for THE UNION SIGNAL. Suggest they send in a subscription to THE UNION SIGNAL for six months, only 75 cents. Perhaps you can do it for them.

One need not be a great speaker, need not even leave her home to do this work. Think of someone now! Telephone right away! Did you get them? If not, try again. If out of the twelve aroused, two should become really interested, think of the good gained, if every W. C. T. U. member would make this effort. Please do.

FIGHT WITH FACTS

Glad to get a few subscriptions for I do not see how W. C. T. U. women can fight this battle as it must be fought with facts, without THE UNION SIGNAL.

Mrs. W. A. Lawson,
Honorary President, Wisconsin W. C. T. U.

GOOD ADVICE

"Come prepared to subscribe for THE UNION SIGNAL at the state convention," advises The Union Worker, the state paper of the Nebraska W. C. T. U.. "Take it for yourself, your trio teams, your pastors, your high school, your town library, and see your work grow."

REAL APPRECIATION

The Dallas (Ore.) W. C. T. U. has decided to give THE UNION SIGNAL to its Trio Team. We already have one copy for the president and have found it so helpful we want more.

Mrs. L. G. Miller,
Dallas, Ore.,

TRIO TEAM COUNTY HONOR ROLL

1. Jackson County, Iowa.
2. Grady County, Georgia.
3. Boone County, Illinois.
4. Barton County, Kansas.
5. Harper County, Kansas.
6. LaPorte County, Indiana.
7. Norfolk County, Mass.
8. Jewell County, Kansas.
9. Washington County, Kansas.
10. Ohio County, West Virginia.
11. Dukes County, Mass.
12. Dubuque County, Iowa.
13. Shawnee County, Kansas.
14. Big Stone County, } Dist.
15. Stevens County, } No. 12
16. Traverse County, } Minn.
17. Winnebago County, Wisconsin.
18. Walworth County, Wisconsin.
19. Strafford County, N. H.
20. Wayne County, Ga.
21. Dunn County, Wisconsin.
22. Faribault County, Minn. (District No. 27)
23. Winnebago County, Iowa.
24. Hamilton County, Kansas.
25. Ottawa County, Kansas.
26. Woodson County, Kansas.
27. Martin County, } Dist.
28. Watonwan County, } No.
29. Jackson County, } 3
30. Cottonwood County, } Minn.
31. Cheyenne County, Nebraska
32. Kimball County, Nebraska
33. Norton County, Kansas.
34. Clark County, Kansas.
35. Marion County, Kansas.
36. Highland County, Ohio.
37. Upshur County, W. Va.
38. Payne County, Oklahoma.
39. Stanislaus County, California.
40. Merced County, California.
41. Deuel County, South Dakota.
42. Mills County, Iowa.
43. Union County, Iowa.
44. Dakota County, } Dist.
45. Goodhue County, } No. 26
46. Rice County, } Minn.
47. Olmsted County, } Dist.
48. Dodge County, } No.
49. Steele County, } 2
50. Waseca County, } Minn.
51. Crawford County, Kansas.
52. Cass County, Iowa.
53. Polk County, } Dist.
54. Marshall County, } No.
55. Pennington County, } 14
56. Norman County, } Minn.
57. Edmunds County, South Dakota
58. Mower County } Dist. No.
59. Freeborn County } 30, Minn.
60. Bell County, Kentucky.
61. Chippewa County, Wisconsin.
62. Eau Claire County, Wisconsin.
63. Blair County, Penna.
64. Ness County, Kansas.
65. Blue Earth County, Minn. (District No. 21)
66. Dawson County, Nebraska.
67. Ellis County, Kansas.
68. Woodbury County, Iowa.
69. Kingman County, Kansas.
70. Lincoln County, Montana.

UNION MEMBERS MAKE GOOD MONEY

Selling JERSEY CROWN FLAVORING POWDER (Non-Alcoholic) to their neighbors and friends on our liberal consignment plan. No money down. We furnish the powder and guarantee sales. You pay us when you sell it, or return at our expense. Write at once for our "Special Business Proposition."

JERSEY CROWN VANILLA CO.,
Dept. S, Valparaiso, Indiana

Quiz: The World and the Work

1. Show that much of the wet propaganda comes from New York.
2. Give two or three items of news proving that prohibition is gaining ground.
3. What statistics are given by the Des Moines police to show the value of prohibition?
4. Quote from statements of business men of Iowa in regard to the effect of prohibition on business.
5. Summarize the history of Manchuria's experience with drugs and drink.
6. Paint a word picture of Harbin and Miss Tinling's work there.
7. Tell the story of Mrs. Armor's ocean voyage.
8. Who are Mrs. Simonds, Miss Valder and Miss Keyes?
9. How is sentiment for prohibition being promoted in Ceylon?
10. What results have been apparent in "strikes minus liquor"?

Two notable books—"Jennie Casseday," a sketch, and "The Message of the Lord's Prayer" for the needs of today, both written by Mrs. Fannie Casseday Duncan. Fine gift or anniversary books. Price $1.00 each. Address Mrs. Duncan 834 Second St., Louisville, Kentucky.

When You Have to Make a Collection Speech

"There are three kinds of givers," says someone, "the flint, the sponge, and the honey-comb." To get anything out of flint, you must hammer it, and then you get only chips and sparks. To get water out of a sponge you must squeeze it, and the more you squeeze the more you get. But the honeycomb just overflows with its own sweetness."

The way some people give is illustrated by Farmer Bronson's cow.

As he was milking, a summer boarder asked: "How much milk does the cow give in a day?"

"Wal," replied the farmer, "ef ye mean by voluntary contribooshun, she don't give none. But ef ye kin git her cornered so' she can't kick none to hurt, an able-bodied man kin take away about eleven quarts a day from her."—Exchange.

Maternity Apparel

With No Maternity Look

LANE BRYANT Maternity Clothes enable you to dress stylishly during all stages of maternity—and after baby comes, as well. Very latest modes, cleverly designed to conceal condition. Patented adjustments provide expansion.

76-page Style Book, picturing latest styles in Maternity Coats, Suits, Dresses, Skirts, Corsets. Sent Free. Write for it today.

Style Book FREE

Lane Bryant Address Dept. U1 38th St. at Fifth Ave. New York

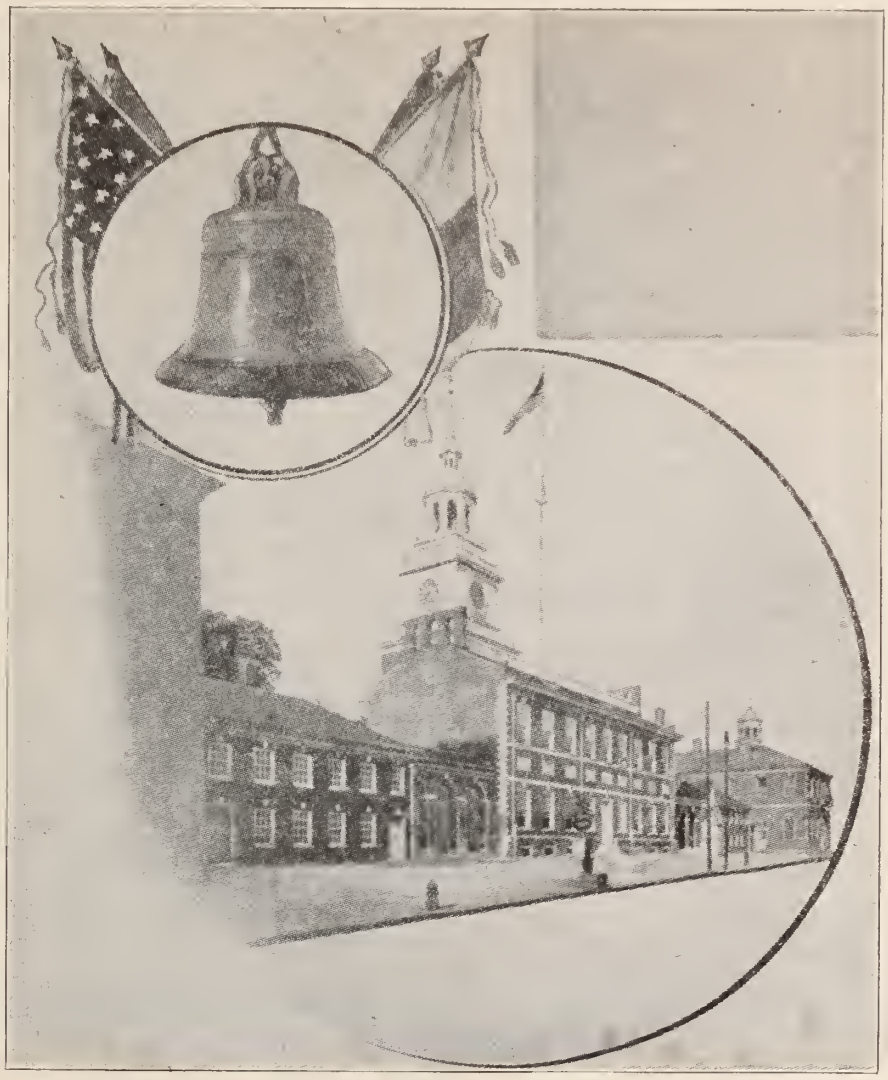
The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly | Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year in Advance

Entered as second class matter at the Postoffice at Evanston, Illinois

Vol. XLVIII | EVANSTON, ILLINOIS, SEPTEMBER 28, 1922 | No. 39



ATTRACTIONS OF CONVENTION CITY

Independence Hall, Philadelphia, the birthplace of American Liberty. In one of the rooms of this building the delegates from the American Colonies met and issued the Declaration of Independence, which was passed on July 4, 1776, and publicly proclaimed from a platform in the Square on July 8. In the main corridor is the Liberty Bell, shown above, on which are inscribed the words found in Leviticus (25:10), "Proclaim liberty throughout all the land, to all the inhabitants thereof."

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

SIXTY-SEVENTH CONGRESS ADJOURNS SECOND SESSION—DONATION BY CONGRESS TO SOLDIERS WITHOUT PLAN FOR FINANCING DISAPPROVED BY PRESIDENT—NEW TARIFF LAW IN FORCE—APPOINTMENTS MADE UNDER NEW JUDGESHIP LAW—MILITARISTIC AND PEACE PROGRAMS DO NOT HARMONIZE

LENNA LOWE YOST, National W. C. T. U. Legislative Representative, Washington, D. C.

Final touches were given to last moment legislation and to rounding up long-time pending legislation, and the Sixty-seventh Congress adjourned its second session sine die Friday afternoon at two o'clock. Members were happy to be released for the election campaigns and home affairs until the probable call by President Harding for a special session about November 15.

Donation by Congress to Soldiers Without Plan for Financing Disapproved by President

The Soldiers' Compensation Bill during the past week has been hurried from one legislative journey to another and at last gone down in defeat. The bill, passed by both Houses but vetoed by the President, got a big vote in the House—two hundred and fifty-eight to fifty-four over the President's veto—but met its final defeat in the Senate, where the vote gave forty-four yeas to twenty-eight nays, or four less than the necessary two-thirds to enact a measure over the President's disapproval. The House gave fifty more votes than the required number.

The House vote on the first passage of the bonus last March 23, was 333 to 70, or 4.75 to 1, as compared with 4.77 to 1, today. The Senate vote today compared 47 to 22, by which the measure was first passed on August 31. Most of the House votes to sustain the President were cast by members from eastern and southern states, with western delegates voting almost solidly for the bill.

The President's veto of the Compensation Bill was largely foredetermined. The people who consider seriously the affairs of state will, when they read the veto message, where the reasons for the veto are clearly given, applaud the President's course. Senator Bursum of New Mexico, soon after the defeat of the bill under consideration so many months, introduced in the Senate another soldiers' bonus bill, defined as "The Veterans' Refund Adjusted Compensation Act." The measure would provide for payment of $20 for each month of service together with the refund of all compulsory allotments made by the service men and payments on account of Government insurance between April 5, 1917, and July 1, 1919. No provision is made for financing the bonus. Where the amount due a veteran did not exceed $50, it would be paid in full on October 1, 1923. In all other cases, fifty per cent would be paid October 1, 1923, and the remainder on October 1, 1926, together with interest at four per cent.

New Tariff Law in Force

This week completed legislative action on the tariff bill, which has been more than a year and eight months under consideration by the Congress. It is the first Republican protective tariff law in nearly ten years. The Underwood Democratic tariff, enacted in 1913, was the tariff preceding this. Here is a midget story of the newest tariff progress in the two Houses:

House Ways and Means Committee began hearings, January 6, 1921.

Bill introduced in House, June 29.

Formally reported by Committee, July 6.

Passed by House, July 21.

Referred to Senate Finance Committee, July 22.

Hearings started, July 25.

Hearings concluded, January 3. 1922.

Reported to Senate, April 11.

Passed by Senate, August 19.

Referred to conference, August 22.

Reported out of conference, September 11.

Sent back to conference by House, September 13.

Reported back to House and approved, September 15.

Approved by Senate, September 19.

Signed by President, September 20.

Effective, September 22.

American tariff making enters a new phase. For the first time in history, Congress has relegated part of its authority over taxes at the customs, conferring broad powers upon the President to increase or decrease rates or to change from foreign to American valuation as the basis of assessing ad valorem duties on imports.

Appointments Made Under New Judgeship Law

Under the new Federal law for extra judges, three new ones have been appointed as follows: Walter C. Lindley, as an additional Federal judge in the eastern Illinois district, Elisha H. Brewster and James Arnold Lowell, as additional judges in the Massachusetts district.

Militaristic and Peace Programs Do Not Harmonize

Some of our members who co-operated with the National Council for Reduction of Armaments in its "No More War" day demonstrations, may have been disturbed by newspaper editorials inspired by propaganda sent out by certain militaristic groups which are opposed to the movement to rid the world of war. One of the methods used in an attempt to discredit this movement was the bringing of a charge of Bolshevism against the National Council, its officers and its organizations.

Ralph M. Easley, chairman of the Executive Council of the National Civic Federation, attacked the movement against war as "war against patriotism," which led to Chief Justice Taft's resignation from that body. An anti-labor organ and a former anti-suffrage paper lined up with the opposition. On the other hand, a great bulk of the press, from the four leading papers of Maine to the Los Angeles Times, was better informed, and supported the movement in news and editorials.

These attacks will undoubtedly again occur as the campaign to end war progresses and grows more and more effective. Do not let them disturb you. They are the surest sign of success. Nothing is easier than a campaign of misrepresentation. Be prepared to answer it by giving your newspapers the facts concerning the organization and the program of the National Council for Reduction of Armaments, of which our organization is a participating member and in the shaping of whose policies we have a voice. This program is three-fold-world organization (under any name), world-wide reduction of armaments to police status, and education for world peace. It is only by organizing all our forces in co-operation that we can put an end to war.

Legislative Headquarters, Bliss Building, Washington, D. C., September 23, 1922.

Improved Conditions in Chicago

Federal Prohibition Commissioner Roy A. Haynes, who recently completed a personal survey of enforcement conditions in Indiana, Illinois and Michigan, expresses himself as particularly pleased with improved conditions in Chicago, "due, in great measure, to the whole-souled spirit of co-operation displayed on the part of the state enforcement officials. All of which impresses the people, especially the bootleg element, that the government is in earnest and flagrant violations no longer will be tolerated. The result is that today scarcely any real liquor is legally available, and the product being peddled is of such character that even those, heretofore unafraid, now dread to drink it. I learned that there is an alarming rate of deaths in the city of Chicago, as reported by physicians, caused by liquor redistilled from so-called body rubs. Inexperienced operators, in attempts to withdraw poisonous ingredients from rubbing compounds and wood alcohol, only partially succeed, and the dangerous product, containing concentrated lye, etc., is not only bottled in fraudulently labeled bottles but is injected into near-beer. Drinking of the same has developed a disease, according to hospital officials, wherein respiration is interrupted and victims die of suffocation.

"I also learned that the home brew fad is rapidly dying out in Chicago, due, principally to the fact that careless, inexperienced methods caused an epidemic of acute indigestion, attended by many deaths, a natural development of immatured yeast, which taken into the stomach and coming in contact with certain articles of food, creates gases and resultant acute indigestion."

INTERESTING FACTS IN REGARD TO THE WET AND DRY SITUATION

DRY TRIUMPHS

"Big Grumbling Period Over"

"The 'big grumbling period' of those unfavorable to enforcement is over," said Prohibition Director R. A. Day of New York, recently. "The American people are accepting prohibition as an indisputable fact, although, true to American characteristics, especially in reference to any proposition which appears to them to curtail personal liberty, some at first argued the question and fought the provisions of the act. However, they have accepted the inevitable and transferred their active and militant efforts to other fields."

Bootlegging Has Ceased to Be Profitable

Assistant Federal Prohibition Director N. T. Jones of Georgia reports that bootlegging has ceased to be a profitable business in that state. "Two men recently told me," he said, "that they had lost $65,000 in the illicit business during the past three years. One of them is now doing time in the Federal prison at Atlanta, and the other is serving six months in the county jail at Chattanooga. Both are now penniless and disgraced. I have yet to know of a single man who has ever cashed in a profit in playing the game."

Mr. Jones declared that where it was possible several months ago to discover a dozen stills a day, it is impossible now to locate that number in a week. "We not only have the moonshine problem under control, but have practically stopped shipments of liquor as baggage, freight or express through the state," he said. Doctoring of liquor is now being conducted to such an unscrupulous extent that even that which is smuggled ashore is rectified and adulterated."

A Record Collection of Liquor Fines

The story is told by the San Francisco Chronicle of an unequalled record recently made by Federal Judge Frank H. Rudkin, who in forty-seven minutes of time fined thirty-seven liquor handlers the amount of $7,750.

In ten days the judge has disposed of over eight hundred cases, and for that time, the fines collected, added to the bond forfeitures, would exceed $100,000, it is said. Four hundred and fifty other cases were dismissed for lack of evidence.

According to the assistant United States Attorney, in charge of the Volstead prosecutions, had the defendants elected to go to trial, it would have taken more than five years to have heard the calendar, which was thus disposed of in ten days.

Fine Co-operation of State and Municipal Officers

There will be no let-up in the activities the Pennsylvania dry agents, according State Prohibition Director John T. Davis. "Perhaps the greatest aid to enforcement is the splendid co-operation we receive from the state police and county and municipal officers generally. Heavy penalties imposed by courts are having a wholesome effect. In one case a woman was fined $1,000 and sentenced to serve one year in the workhouse, while the man connected with the case was fined $2,500 and sentenced to the workhouse for two years.

"I feel that the pleas of 'gullty' of more than nine-tenths of those arrested during the past year in the middle district of Pennsylvania, indicate that the organizations at Harrisburg, Wilkes-Barre and Williamsport have shown effective work and have been sure that they had sufficient evidence before presenting cases."

Enforcement of Law Demanded by Catholic Abstainers

"Should Germany pass a prohibition law every German through love of the fatherland would become an abstainer," was the thought-compelling statement made by the president of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union at the closing session of its recent convention held in Philadelphia, as he urged that educational work be continued along temperance lines, since the final solution of the drink problem must come from force of example and moral influence rather than legal restrictions. Resolutions were passed urging maintenance of law and order as a civic duty, and the law of prohibition as a part of the law of the land, as well as temperance instruction to teach the harmfulness of drink to the foreigners who come to this country.

Arkansas Stands for Rigid Enforcement of Dry Law

"Splendid co-operation of the general public and the improvement in public sentiment has helped this year to show progress far beyond the expectations of the most ardent supporter of enforcement," says Prohibition Director Thad W. Rowden of Arkansas. Penalties assessed for violation of prohibition laws in the state during the year amounted to more than a million and a half dollars. All enforcement agencies in the state are lending unqualified support and have been of invaluable aid, as has the press, which has been in full accord with the methods of enforcement employed.

Jail Population of Massachusetts Decreases Under Prohibition and Family Life Improves

Denial of reports that have been put into circulation that the number of inmates of Massachusetts prisons has increased materially since prohibition became effective, was recently made by Sanford Bates, state commissioner of correction, according to the Christian Science Monitor. Mr. Bates asserted that these statements have no foundation in fact and it is believed that they are set on foot by organizations opposing prohibition, with an intent to mislead and distort. During the past two years decrease in prison population has been general; In some cases the smaller prisons have been almost depleted. One county jail is now being used as a shoe factory. While there may have been an increase in the number of prisoners since 1920, when the low-water mark was reached, it must also be noted that there are only about one-half as many persons in jail as there were before prohibition.

A comparison of the number of families receiving aid from welfare associations, in which intemperance was formerly a source of difficulty, during the years of 1921 and 1917 respectively, showed a decrease in Boston of 93.1 per cent.

WET ACTIVITIES

A New Organization

The Rational America League has recently come into existence, with headquarters in Washington, D. C., branches in several states, and a membership already estimated at over twenty-two thousand, and growing rapidly, according to the statements of officials. Mr. Robert R. White, the president, asserts that the object of the league is to find out what the people want and see to it that they get it, and he therefore appeals to the voters for support in the effort of the league to put into Congress men who "will accurately represent the will of the people upon this question" (the weakening of the Volstead Act), for, "we believe," he says, "that the American people want beer and light wines and that their will should prevail."

Mr. White advances the novel theory that the Volstead Act was put through by the brewing interests, who "knew that there was no surer way to make the people demand a drastic revision of the law and repeal of the whole Eighteenth Amendment than to make the restriction so absolute that they would chafe under its impossible provisions."

The members of the league pay annual dues of a dollar, and sign a pledge to support its "principles," outlined as follows: "To foster and uphold the Constitution of the United States of America, to encourage 100 per cent Americanism, to promote respect for law, to encourage the enactment of good and statesmanlike legislation, and to discourage the enactment of shortsighted and ill-considered legislation" by working for an "amendment to the Volstead Act so as to permit the manufacture and consumption of beers and wines of moderate alcoholic content, the most practical and necessary step toward the establishment of law enforcement, respect for the law, and the practice of temperance." The league has an official organ, the Rational American, to which the leaders of the wet forces in Congress, among them John Philip Hill of Maryland, and George H. Tinkham of Massachusetts are contributors, and it is doing its utmost to "find out the will of the people" by telling them that they want the law modified.

Chain Letters

One of the latest methods used by the wets to promote sentiment is the sending out of a chain letter which reads "This is a chain letter to make the country wet again. The only way to do it is to register and vote. That is how the reformers jammed prohibition through. Every voter counts, so see that you are registered and vote for anything that means a wet United States. Vote against prohibition and vote in prosperity. Send this letter to five wet friends. If you fail to keep up this chain, no harm will befall you but you will continue to pay a big price to bootleggers for bum hooch."

"Smash the Wright Act"

Another effort of the wets is found in the publication of Liberty, a four page paper published in California. The first issue was put out in the late summer, with the announcement that it would be printed twice a month and that the subscription price would be

(Continued on Page Fifteen)

PROHIBITION AND INDUSTRY

Laura Miller, National Director Women in Industry Department

You do, each of you, want prohibition to be an accomplished fact, don't you—whether you're the newest member, or an old war-horse state president? But you wonder sometimes whether all the departments are worth the time and enthusiasm they seem to draw off from the main job, don't you? I know I do. I think you ought to question. Law-enforcement these days is too big a task to have any dallying by the wayside picking flowers.

But some wise old grandmother once discovered that "the longest way round's sometimes the shortest way home." Granted that women in industry work is a long way round. Is it a genuine "way home" to the goal?

If you don't agree with me that it is, when you've read this article, I wish you would write me frankly why.

Prohibition is not a fact while great sections of city and country are wet. Pick out those wet sections. Aren't they mainly industrial in character? Aren't the industrial sections typically those where law observance by judges and juries, as well as by the "scum" of the population, is low? Doesn't the need for an aroused woman vote for cleanliness and order, for an all-the-year woman enthusiasm for law enforcement seem the white hope of this generation in those sections? There are just two chances to get that woman vote on your side soon. Catch the girls in school with a vitalized, up-to-the minute scientific temperance program in the public schools. Follow that up with a vigorous campaign among the most flexible, most educable, most reachable group of voting age—the employed women.

Count on Americanization, social morality, child welfare, hospital and jail work, publicity, women in industry, welfare work—all these and many others to work, slowly but surely, to the desired end. But go after the workingwoman's vote, now!

Intensive Pre-Election Campaign

You have nearly six weeks to work in. That's plenty of time. Use a week—or two weeks—even at a pinch three—to get your campaign in shape. Find your leader. Let it be a woman who knows election issues and candidates thoroughly. If she hasn't enough magnetism to hold a group together, find a class leader who has the magnetism, and make the election specialist a teacher only. Plan on the group of women you want to reach. Use every sort of publicity, newspaper, movie card if available, telephone, personal call, etc.

Invest Fifty Cents in a Good Cause

Write to the National W. C. T. U. Publishing House, Evanston, Illinois, for five Vote Right posters. (See cut and UNION SIGNAL of Aug. 24-31, page 4.) Ask for an old poster or two free at the same time and use backs, if you want to paste a notice of time and place of meeting at bottom of poster. Don't neglect the church as a source of publicity, but don't depend on it to get this sort of group together. You can find your group as well, or better, if you live in a small town. Each woman's vote counts. And some of those women will be in a city working before the next election and will remember your teaching, when you can't reach them.

Keep Membership in Mind

Don't make membership the aim of this citizenship class. But don't forget about it. Be planning for night meetings, etc., to hold any new members you may secure at the end of the class meetings.

Meanwhile Other Plans

As an organization, you can do wonderfully fine work for women in industry and for your own ultimate goal, in two other fields. Keep them in mind as programs for the winter are being worked out. Urge them upon unions other than your own. If you have a state superintendent, ask her aid. Call on your national director at any time for suggestions or aid. Find out what machinery you have in your state for the protection of women in industry. You ought to have some sort of labor bureau. It may be called the State Labor Commission, the State Industrial Welfare Commission, the Minimum Wage Commission (dealing only with the minimum wage law) or the Industrial Court, as in Kansas. If you have such a bureau, it ought to have at least one woman in an executive position to deal with women's industrial laws. Not half our states have such a woman. Has yours?

Legislation

You have some of the best legislative machinery any woman's organization has ever developed. You're pledged by the industrial creed of 1875 "to labor and to pray" for industrial welfare laws. Is any such law proposed in your state for passage this winter? Find out from the state superintendent, or state labor office, or the national director. Find out, too, if it is a good law endorsed by the right people. If it is, study it, talk it up, get publicity for it, get a meeting devoted to it, and letters sent your legislators for it.

Law Enforcement

Law-enforcement is particularly your watchword. Carry the word into industry in your town. Find out what laws are on the books for the protection of women workers. Find out whether they are enforced. Do this quietly. Avoid publicity. Assume that the employer does not know he is a law-breaker. But see that infractions are reported to the proper branch of the state labor commission. In many states, the labor inspectors can go only when they have a report of violation. Help them and carry the slogan of law-enforcement into the district where you want to make the prohibition law enforcement most telling.

But first: Get your workingwomen's citizens' class organized!

[Until further notice, write Mrs. Laura Miller, national director Women in Industry department, at 119 East Nineteenth Street, New York City.]

Disappearance of Saloons Followed by Erection of Labor Temples

Richard T. Jones, Director Fourth District, United States Employment Service, Kansas City, Mo.
(From Article in Christian Science Monitor)

Members of organized labor generally are in favor of prohibition. They have observed its operation and have come to regard the Eighteenth Amendment as a blessing. Labor temples have been erected in every part of the country as a direct result of the dry law.

The writer campaigned in Michigan in the fall of 1916 when that state voted dry. He found that organized labor in Detroit had been trying for many years to build a Labor temple, a home of its own. Headway was made slowly, when at all. During thirteen years of agitation on the subject, prior to 1916, the group having the temple project in charge had been able to secure a building lot, but little progress had been made toward building the temple until the city was rid of its saloons and the local labor movement was freed from saloon politics.

Chief Patrons of Saloons

As in many other American cities the working classes of Detroit were the chief patrons of the saloon. Meeting places of the unions in many cases were in saloon buildings or else very close by. Because of the "free" rent feature, or rental for a comparatively small monthly amount, it was difficult to interest these local unions in a proposal to build a temple owned and controlled by all unions in the city.

But with the ousting of the saloons from Detroit, things began to take a turn. The temple advocates got busy and the following item taken from a recent issue of the Detroit Labor News, official organ of union labor in that city, tells the story:

"The present revenue of the building amounts to $900 a month, which will meet all operating expenses, interest, payment on mortgage, taxes, insurance, etc., and leave a monthly balance of $100."

The above offers a striking argument in favor of prohibition to those who know the labor situation in Detroit, and Detroit is only typical of the average American city in this respect.

Valuable Property Purchased

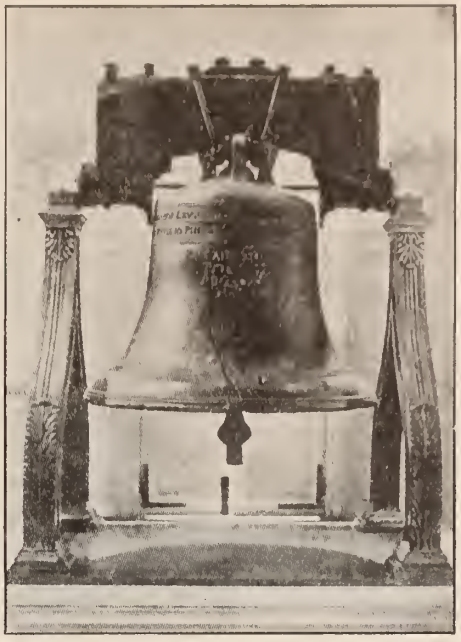
St. Paul, Minn., is another example. Since the adoption of the Elghteenth Amendment the local labor temple

(Continued on Page Thirteen)

PHILADELPHIA—THE CONVENTION CITY

Philadelphia is rich in points of historic interest. It was here that the beginnings of independent government in the United States were made, and here still remain many buildings reminiscent of those momentous days.

Chief among them is Independence Hall. On May 10, 1775, the East Room on the first floor was the meeting place of that staunch body of patriots who formed the Second Continental Congress. In this room, June 15, 1775, George Washington was chosen Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Army. Here, too, on July 4, 1776, the Declaration of Independence was signed; and by this act Independence Hall has become the nation's patriotic shrine. The convention to form a new constitution for Pennsylvania met in the west chamber, July 15, 1776, and adjourned September 28, 1776. This convention unanimously approved the Declaration of Independence and declared that they "would support and maintain the freedom and independence of this and the other United States of America at the utmost risk of their lives and fortunes."



Unpretentious in its exterior, it is yet the most historic spot in America. It comprises three main buildings: A central structure, the State house with wings adjoining, and two buildings, one on Sixth and one on Fifth Street, one erected for the city and the other for the county of Philadelphia.

The central building was designed and built between 1729 and 1734 by Andrew Hamilton, a barrister of Philadelphia. The two others were not built until 1785, after the close of the Revolution.

The East Room in Independence Hall, which was the scene of the deliberations of the Second Continental Congress, still appears practically as it did at the time of that historic meeting. In various parts of the hall are to be found relics of all sorts, a facsimile of the original Declaration of Independence, and many portraits. There are some masterpieces by Benjamin West, and valuable portraits by other noted artists. The chair and table used by the presidents of the Continental Congress are to be seen here, and resting on the table is the original silver inkstand—with its quill box and sand shaker—from which the members of Congress dipped the ink when they autographed the famous document. There are also fourteen of the original chairs used by the delegates from the Colonies.

In Independence Hall still hangs the Liberty Bell—best-loved relic in America—whose tongue first announced the adoption of the Declaration of Independence. It is suspended from its original beam within an ornamental frame in the main corridor, where it may be closely examined, but is carefully guarded from vandalism.

It was strangely prophetic that the Assembly of the Province of Pennsylvania caused a quotation from Leviticus to be cast upon the bell. It reads: "Proclaim Liberty throughout all the land to all the inhabitants thereof."

In August, 1752, the bell was received in Philadelphia, and the following month it was cracked by a stroke of the clapper. It was recast, but it was not done satisfactorily. It was again recast in May, 1753, and in June of the same year it was hung in the State House steeple.

The bell was in use until 1835, when it cracked while being tolled during the funeral of Chief Justice John Marshall. The old bell has been taken from its home in Independence Hall ten times, the most recent tour being at the time of the Liberty Loan parade. Philadelphia is proud to show this splendid old relic now and then to millions of Americans afar. To look upon it is to become a better and a more patriotic citizen. It is America's most beloved relic. The journeys of the Liberty Bell have been:

1777—To Allentown upon the approach of the British Army.
1884—To New Orleans.
1893—To Chicago.
1895—To Havana.
1902—To Charleston.
1903—To Boston.
1904—To St. Louis.
1908—On Founders' Day at Philadelphia.
1915—To San Francisco.
1918—Liberty Loan Parade, Philadelphia.

WHITE RIBBONERS FROM EUROPE, ASIA, AFRICA, SOUTH AMERICA AND THE ISLANDS OF THE SEA TO GATHER AT PHILADELPHIA FOR WORLD'S CONVENTION

The coming World's W. C. T. U. Convention to be held in Philadelphia promises to be a record-breaker. White ribbon comrades from all the ends of the earth are on their way, or planning soon to start for the United States to attend the great meeting.

From England will come Lady Aurea Howard of London, daughter of the World's late president, Rosalind, Countess of Carlisle. She will be accompanied by Miss Christine Roberts, daughter of Lady Cecilia Roberts and granddaughter of Lady Carlisle. Miss Agnes E. Slack, one of the World's honorary secretaries, will be in the party as will several others from England.

Scotland will have a delegation of at least seven, including Mrs. George Milne, of Aberdeen, vice-president of the Scotland W. C. T. U., Miss Jane Darling of Edinboro, Mrs. Helen Barton of Prestnick, Mrs. Jane Gemmill and Miss Daisy Gemmill of Glasgow, Miss Marion Ferguson of Partick, and Miss Wilson. Ireland will be represented by Mrs. Moffett Clow, president of the Ulster Women's Temperance Council.

Miss Maria Stenroth, field secretary and organizer for the W. C. T. U. of Finland, will be the delegate from that country. Miss Dagmar Prior, president of the White Ribboners of Denmark, will also represent Norway, by special request. Mrs. Lydia B. Johnson, who has been speaking in the campaign in Sweden will be at the convention to tell of conditions in that country. It is hoped the Baroness de Laveleye, president of the W. C. T. U. of Belgium, will attend.

Germany is sending three of her prominent women: Fraulein Gustel von Blücher, president of the Deutscher Abstinenter Frauen, Fraulein Wilhelmina Lohmann, of Bielefeld, and Miss Marta Kuppersbusch, of Cologne.

Japan is to send two delegates, Mrs. Kubushiro, national W. C. T. U. corresponding secretary, niece of Madam Kaji Yajima, and Miss Uta Hayashi, president of the Osaka W. C. T. U.

Dr. Mary Cutler of Seoul, Korea, will attend as the representative of the country she has served so many years as a medical missionary.

A former secretary of the Young Women's Branch of New Zealand, Miss Jean Begg, will come from New Zealand.

Senorita Consuela Valdez of Manila, will give a report of the work in the Philippine Islands.

India is to have at least six delegates: Miss Mary J. Campbell, of Lucknow, World's W. C. T. U. organizer; Miss Mabel Archibald, from Madras, editor of the national official paper; Miss Helen I. Root, national secretary of the L. T. L.; Mrs. C. B. Hill, Dr. H. Davies, Mrs. J. Dussman.

Burma will have two delegates: Miss Agnes Ashwill and Mrs. St. John, both from Rangoon.

Mrs. J. S. Nagle of Singapore will be the Malaya representative.

Mrs. Charles Perrine of the American University at Beirut will speak for Syria.

Two of the national officers of the Australasian W. C. T. U. will attend: Mrs. John MacLeod, president, and Mrs. W. H. Carvosso, national corresponding secretary. With them will be Miss Edith M. Bailey, national general secretary of the L. T. L., Mrs. William Park of Kew, Victoria, and Miss Adie Robertson, L. T. L. worker.

The land of the Sphinx and the Pyramids will be represented by Mrs. S. M. Zwemer from Cairo. Mrs. E. J. Simonds, president of the Cuba W. C. T. U., Mrs. E. J. Amsden from the Canal Zone, and Mrs. James Benedict of St. John's, wife of the American consul, are expected.

South America's delegation will include Senora Bernardina Munoz de De Maria, honorary president of the Liga Nacional Contra el Alcoholismo, of Montevideo, Uruguay, and her daughter, Senora Berta De Maria de Santiago, superintendent of the Young People's Branch, Dr. Ernestina Perez of Santiago, Chile, and Miss Hardynia K. Norville and Miss Muriel Ayres from Argentina.

LET THE CHURCHES HOLD FAST

Samuel McCrea Cavert, General Secretary, Federal Council of Churches

"To think without confusion clearly" on an issue so confused as is the prohibition question today is not easy. But amid the welter of propaganda there are at least two fundamental facts that must be kept always in the foreground and in support of which every church in the land ought to be a powerful center of educational influence.

1. The tendency to treat the Eighteenth Amendment as if it were not as integral a part of the Constitution of the United States as the First or the Nineteenth, is fraught with social peril. One wonders, therefore, in what misguided moment a periodical of the dignity and prestige of the Literary Digest could ever have been led to conduct a poll in which people are asked to vote as to whether they are in favor of enforcing the Eighteenth Amendment. Put in synonymous words, it becomes an insult to any loyal citizen: "Do you believe in supporting the national Constitution?"

It is entirely proper, of course, for those who do not believe in prohibition to work for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment (even in face of the fact that it was ratified by the largest vote ever given to any amendment!) but to try to nullify it while it is still a part of the basic law of the nation is elemental disloyalty to America. Suppose we all decide against enforcing the parts of the Constitution that do not exactly suit us at any time—what then? Let the churches sound over the land President Harding's ringing statement:

"Whatever breeds disrespect for the law of the land is a force tending to the general breakdown of the social organization."

To that let them add such words as those of the Judicial Section of the American Bar Association at its last session:

"The people of the United States, by solemn constitutional and statutory enactment, have undertaken to suppress the age-long evil of the liquor traffic. When, for the gratification of their appetites or the promotion of their interests, lawyers, bankers, great merchants and manufacturers, and social leaders both men and women, disobey and scoff at this law, they are aiding the cause of anarchy and promoting mob violence, robbery and homicide; they are sowing dragons' teeth and they need not be surprised when they find that no judicial or police authority can save our country or humanity from reaping the harvest."

2. The appeal in behalf of beer and wine is tantamount to an appeal for the return of the saloon. For how are beer and wine to be distributed? The well-to-do could buy in quantities for use at home but the ordinary man must buy his daily portion by the glass. And he could get it, so far as we can see, only in one of two ways: either from any store that cares to dispense it, like soda water or groceries, or else from places especially licensed for the business. In the first case, we would be moving back about a hundred years to the period before the rise of the temperance movement, when Abraham Lincoln's store was expected to sell liquor along with sugar and tea. In the second case, we would be face to face again with the outlawed saloon.

Before we are called upon to vote upon beer and wine, let the beer-and-wine folks tell us how they expect to prevent the return of an institution that impoverished countless homes, undermined the public health, fostered crime, corrupted political life and proved itself the enemy of every good influence in American life.

To vote for beer and wine is to vote for the return of the saloon. If the churches will make that as clear as daylight, there need be no fear that the temptation of liquor will waylay our men and boys on every street.

FEDERAL JUDGES EMPHASIZE IMPORTANCE OF LAW OBSERVANCE

Educate the People as to the Purpose and Aim of Prohibition

Judge Samuel H. Sibley, United States Courts, Northern District of Georgia

Georgia having already been a prohibition state, at first was affected by the Volstead law unfavorably, in that the supply of liquors from the outside was cut off and a larger market made, both at home and abroad, for the illicit liquors produced here. The result was a great increase in the price and a great stimulation of the business of making and selling illicit liquors. This effect is now wearing off and I think violations of the prohibition law are on the decrease. My personal experience in the Northern District of Georgia is that second offenses are very rare. I have not yet sentenced a single person in my District for a second offense. I am hopeful that repeated explanation from the Bench of the humane purpose of the prohibition laws and the duty of right-minded persons to observe them, as well as the threats of severe punishment for second offenses, will bear fruit.

As to the necessity of enforcing the law, it is undoubtedly true that an unenforced law produces very regrettable results and leads to contempt for all law. Undoubtedly, this and every other law should be faithfully enforced, or altered, if found incapable of reasonable enforcement as it stands.

The sentiment for prohibition ought to be based on education as to its purpose and aims. People who are accustomed to moderate drinking are unable to see why their right and liberty in this particular should be interfered with. Many of them would cheerfully give up a liberty in this regard if convinced that it was necessary for the happiness and safety of others. It is only because the prohibitionist is thus convinced, that he is a prohibitionist. I think that the attitude of every one should be to give the law a full and fair trial at any cost and personal inconvenience to himself, and this is the view that should be presented to all honest-minded persons who feel otherwise about it. Of course, the man who is losing money by prohibition, or has any unworthy or ulterior idea, will have to be dealt with by force and not persuasion.

Clear Duty of Judiciary to Uphold Dry Law

Judge J. W. Woodrough, United States District Court, Nebraska

Every judge of every court in the land has taken his oath to uphold the Constitution and laws of this country and these laws rest upon constitutional and legislative sanction. There is no duty more clearly, directly and positively imposed upon the judiciary than is the obligation to uphold these laws in the spirit in which they are written and enacted for the complete suppression of the liquor traffic, and I have proceeded in every one of the many hundred cases that have been presented before me in the court with the firm determination to enforce the law in its letter and spirit, without fear or favor, or respect of persons.

In many cases before me claim is made to settled positive convictions and beliefs contrary to the law, but that is no defense, or palliation, for violation of law.

It is the rightful function of such great organs of publicity as THE UNION SIGNAL to ascertain and publish to the world the results that are accruing from these laws, and to find the best ways to the realization of the ideal that has inspired the great struggle to save our country from the menace and curse of the liquor traffic.

But for the courts there is only the one function—to take the law as they find it and with faith, courage and resolution, day by day, in each case as it is made out, honestly and impartially—enforce it.

Marked and Wholesome Growth of Prohibition Sentiment

Judge Frank S. Dietrich, United States District Court, Idaho

In the main, the benefits of prohibition have turned out to be what those who advocated the policy claimed for it. In practice, it is not perfect, of course, and some evils are incident to the first period of its administration, which it is to be hoped will pass in due time, but upon the whole, the good even now greatly outweighs the bad.

As to the desirability of obedience to the law, the right-minded citizen can have but one answer. Those who encourage disregard for this or any other law, or, as officers or jurors, decline to enforce it, because they are not in sympathy with its policy, are disloyal to the first principles of citizenship. The law having been duly passed and its validity declared by the tribunal in which we have vested final authority, for anyone now to decline to obey or to enforce it, is nothing short of anarchy. In this respect, it is thought there has been a marked and wholesome growth of public sentiment. Greatly to their credit, it is to be said that many who doubted, and possibly still doubt, the wisdom of prohibition, and were at first inclined to wink at, if not to encourage, disregard of the law, have themselves yielded to its authority and are demanding obedience on the part of others. And, generally speaking, officers, whatever may have been their personal views upon the merits of the law, are vigilantly and vigorously seeking to enforce it.

FOR THE SAKE OF THE CHILDREN HELP TO KEEP AND ENFORCE THE NATIONAL PROHIBITORY LAW

DECREASED POPULATION IN CHILDREN'S INSTITUTIONS

"There has been a decrease of population in our institutions not only since 1918 when wartime prohibition was in effect, but prior to that date," writes RICHARD W. WALLACE, ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF THE STATE BOARD OF CHARITIES OF NEW YORK. "THIS IS PARTICULARLY TRUE SO FAR AS OUR WORK IS CONCERNED IN INSTITUTIONS FOR CHILDREN. There are undoubtedly several contributing factors. The number of children in institutions was reduced from 36,253 in 1915 to 31,895 in 1920. The REDUCTION CONTINUED THROUGH 1921." (The annual report of the state board mentions prohibition among the factors that have to do with the reduction of the population of these institutions.)

BOYS' BRIGADE LEADER EXTOLS DRY LAW

JOHN F. BURGESS, COMMANDANT OF BOYS' BRIGADE, writing in the Baltimore Sun, said:

"In this work in which I have been engaged for the past fifteen years, I come in contact chiefly with the extreme cases of wretchedness, occasioned by indulgence in strong drink, and I value at their true worth prohibition laws to protect those who have lost inclination or power to control themselves. I who have known men to pay $8 for a quart of liquor while their children were dependent upon the charity of strangers for shoes, am thankful for any law that makes liquor too expensive for those men to buy, or makes it impossible for them to get it at any price. I who have seen thinly clad women go to corner saloons to coax their already drunken husbands home, sincerely hope that the saloon will have no further right to exist.

"I have seen also within the past year the wonderful effects resultant from the closing of the saloons. Two parents whom I know, who for fourteen years previous to the enforcement of the Volstead Act, had never been inside a church, are now enthusiastic church workers. Parents who seldom or never visited Brigade headquarters or the Boys' Brigade summer camp to ascertain under what influences their children are progressing, now take an active interest in the careers of their boys."

RISING GENERATION WILL NOT KNOW TASTE OF LIQUOR

"The rising generation will not know the taste of liquor; they will not see it being consumed in public places; they will not form a taste for it or a habit of indulging in order to conform to group practice, and so they will have no wish for it," says M. V. O'SHEA, PROFESSOR OF EDUCATION IN THE UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN. "But it will take a generation completely to eliminate the desire for alcohol, and the practice of ridiculing prohibition and glorifying alcoholic indulgence. No student of racial psychology believes that prohibition could take full effect at once. It is meeting with greater success than could reasonably be expected. Most of our people are not thinking about liquor; they have no wish to indulge in it. It is only a small proportion of habitues and 'smart alecks' who are indulging and prolonging the reaction against prohibition."

CHILDREN GAIN AS DRINK LOSES

The children are having a better chance under prohibition. In Boston, arrests of minors for all causes fell off slightly in the two prohibition years from the wet years' average; but the average of arrests of minors for drunkenness decreased 34 per cent, according to the report of the Scientific Temperance Federation, recently published in its journal. This report goes on to say that arrests in Boston of children under ten years of age have dropped almost one-half (45 per cent) in the prohibition years; arrests of children ten years old, but under fifteen, fell off 21 per cent. In 1921 the total number of arrests of children under fifteen years of age was the smallest in the ten years. Compared with the wet years' average this represents a saving of about 600 children of this tender age who should be in the home rather than within the arm of the law.

FEWER NEGLECTED AND DELINQUENT CHILDREN

Arrests of the groups known as the "Neglected, wayward and delinquent children" accounted for in Boston police reports are decreasing in numbers. The neglected and wayward reached in 1921 their lowest point in a decade; the number of delinquent children was the lowest since 1912. There were 539 fewer delinquent children on the police records in 1921 than the average for the seven wet years.

The number of neglected children before the Boston Juvenile Court decreased 52 per cent in the prohibition years. There were only 40 of them in 1921, as compared with an annual average of 118 in the wet years, while in the preceding unemployment year—1915—there had been 138 neglected children before the court.

How improved home conditions due to prohibition reacted favorably on the children is shown by the report of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. In 1921 the society analyzed 4,352 cases handled during the year, and found intemperance a factor in only 734 or 16.8 per cent. A similar analysis of 2,056 cases in 1916 had found intemperance a factor in 47.7 per cent. Thus intemperance as a factor in this work has decreased to a little more than a third of what it was five years before.

PROHIBITION HELPS IN MAKING GOOD CITIZENS

WILBUR F. SMITH, PRINCIPAL OF THE BALTIMORE CITY COLLEGE, says:

"As the director of an institution that aims to educate boys and train them for good citizenship, I naturally advocate temperance and obedience to Federal and state laws. I believe that not only has prohibition come to stay, but there will be no sentimental relapse to personal liberty of action in regard to the sale of liquor because men know in their hearts that strong drink is an evil. They will stand back of a law that conscience approves even at some personal sacrifice, it may be, to themselves."

LET THE CHILDREN SPEAK

You can hush every other voice of national and individual complaint; you may silence every other tongue, even of mothers of destroyed sons and daughters, and even of wives of profligate husbands; but let the children speak—the little children, the wronged children, the crippled children, the abused children, the blind children, the imbecile children, the deserted children, the beaten children, the nameless children, the dead children! O my God, this army of little children! Let their weak voices, faint with oppression, cold and hunger, be heard! Let their little faces, pinched by want of gladness, be heeded! Let their challenge, though made by small forms—too mighty for estimate—be reckoned with! Let their writing upon the wall of the nation, although by tiny fingers, as stupendous as eternity, be correctly interpreted, and read that the awful robbery of the lawful heritage of their little bodies, minds and souls and hearts is laid at the door of alcohol.

—EVANGELINE BOOTH in War Cry July 1, 1922.

PROHIBITION A CHILDREN'S LAW

"Many lives, especially of children, have been saved by the diverting of incomes from alcohol to the grocer, baker and milkman," W. J. B. DEACON, DIRECTOR OF THE BUREAU OF COMMUNICABLE DISEASES for the state of Michigan, is reported to have said. "Kansas for forty years a dry state has considerably fewer tuberculous children than Michigan, partly due to open season and partly to better nourishment. When malnutrition is corrected in Michigan our tuberculosis rate will be lowered still further. With the agitation over deaths from alcohol poisoning today it should be remembered that a few years ago legitimate beverages caused more deaths and that more children died of malnutrition and tuberculosis than at present."

"In our family work and our work with children, our visitors no longer find the cases in which alcoholism was formerly such an important cause of distress," writes RICHARD K. CONANT, COMMISSIONER OF PUBLIC WELFARE for the state of Massachusetts.

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union
Evanston, Illinois

Editor-in-Chief - - - Miss Anna A. Gordon
Managing Editor - - Miss Julia F. Deane
Associate Editor - - Miss Vida I. Thompson

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors of The Editorial Department, The Union Signal, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittance of $1.50 or under.

Notice of Expiration is sent to the subscriber two or three weeks before renewal is due, so that by immediate attention to this reminder not an issue need be missed. RENEW PROMPTLY.

Remittances sbould be made by draft on New York or Chicago, or by Post-office Order. Casb is sent at your own risk unless registered.

Change of Address. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a cbange.

PRICE, $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
Foreign Postage, 52 Cents Additional

Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (Monthly) 50c a Year
Foreign Postage, 12 Cents Additional

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., post-office as second class matter. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, autborized August 20, 1918.

Evanston, Illinois, September 28, 1922

Mark them On Your Calendar—World's Temperance Sunday, Registration Day and Election Day

These are history-making days. Great issues are at stake. The women of the nation will have much to do in deciding those issues for weal or for woe. Never was there a time when, in connection with an election, there was greater need for every good woman to give a full measure of devotion to her civic duties.

Three dates of vital significance all women should mark on the calendar: First, the day of preparedness, World's Temperance Sunday, October 29, when there will be opportunity in Sunday school, church and young people's meetings, to press home the responsibility of every Christian voter not only to go without fail to the polls and vote but to see that his or her family, friends, neighbors, business associates and fellow townsmen and women do the same. Secure the co-operation of the Sunday school superintendent, pastor, or leader of the young people of your church, and arrange for a forceful, snappy, earnest, soul-stirring presentation of the issues on which we are to vote November 7.

Mark also Registration Day, which falls on a different date in different cities, and broadcast the information through all the women's organizations, urging the members to see to it that every woman who is eligible to vote is properly registered, that she may not on election day be deprived of her voting privilege. Do not overlook the necessity of getting all the women of your community to register.

All this paves the way for that great day in American history—the first Tuesday after the first Monday in the month of November. Encircle the date in red or gold, or some flaming color that will remind you often of your responsibility in the way of preparing the women for their duty by informing them as to the issues, sending them literature to keep the matter fresh in their minds, and on election day calling for them or providing an escort, so that they may not fail to cast their ballots for the protection of the home and of the family.

RESOLUTION

SUGGESTED FOR ADOPTION BY CHURCHES AND OTHER INFLUENTIAL ORGANIZATIONS

W. C. T. U. speakers are urgently requested to secure from all meetings which they address the adoption of this resolution:

RESOLVED: That we declare against any modification of the Volstead Code which would admit wine or beer or otherwise weaken enforcement, and will do all in our power to insure the election November 7, 1922, of members of the United States Congress and state legislatures who will work and vote for the retention and enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Code.

(Through your local papers give wide-spread publicity to the resolutions thus secured.)

How One Woman Defeated an A. A. P. A. Candidate

Shortly before the primaries, in a certain big state, the president of the state W. C. T. U. learned that the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment had endorsed as a candidate for Congressman one of her fellow-townsmen, a member of her church. She immediately called him up and asked him to repudiate this endorsement. He declined and declared "he would take his chance." Whereupon she began to use her pen and the telephone to make that chance a very small one. She sent to the papers a signed article stating the facts. She aroused the women of the Congressional district, interested the people in the churches, in short, conducted so vigorous a campaign of information on the candidacy of the gentleman who was willing to let his name be used by the wine and beer interests that, on the day of the primaries, he called up the white ribboner and admitted that she had defeated him. Although not at all an unpopular man in the city, he did not carry his own ward, and in the ward in which the W. C. T. U. woman resided, received only 32 out of 175 votes.

What one woman of determination, courage, and tireless energy was able to accomplish in defeating one candidate for Congress endorsed by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, is prophetic of what the united forces of the W. C. T. U. women can do at the November polls, in electing a Congress that shall be superlatively dry and safe in its attitude toward the national prohibition law.

What Can We Do About It?

Says the Daily Express of London: "It is not denied that many, perhaps most, Americans still drink alcohol."

Why such a statement? Had the writer been perusing some "wet" American newspapers?

The well-informed person will discount much of the malicious propaganda being circulated, but many people believe it all, taking it as evidence that prohibition is wanted by only a few and that a popular referendum would show an overwhelming majority for the return to a legal status of intoxicating liquor.

One Chicago daily has for months been holding a so-called referendum on the subject. Inquiry in one building, said by this paper to be over two-thirds in favor of light wines and beer, failed to reveal anyone who would admit knowing that a vote had been taken. In this case, at least, the opinion of all the occupants was not registered.

Again, certain papers reported that 75 per cent of the business men of Evanston, Illinois, favored the return of wine and beer. In refutation, the Chamber of Commerce came out unanimously for prohibition and law enforcement, the Kiwanis likewise speaking enthusiastically in their favor. Notwithstanding this, a similar article later appeared in a Chicago paper. Its headline stated that the majority of Evanston business men were for wine and beer, but the body of the article named only one person, attributing other statements to "another man," "a photographer," etc. Someone said to the one man named: "I was exceedingly sorry, Mr. Blank, to see your statement in the——."

"I've been hearing about that from others," was the reply, "and I'd like to get hold of the person who was responsible for it. I'd swear in court that I never said it."

What can we do? Give as much publicity as possible to the truth, keep on with our work of education, agitation, and organization, remembering that during these last weeks before the elections the foe is tireless and we must be, likewise. "Asleep at the switch" might well cost more than we'd like to contemplate in the election of Congressmen and state legislators who are not in sympathy with our work for the homes of the nation and the world.

Not Done Yet

Did you read, some weeks ago, the report which appeared in the New York Herald of an interview with Colonel Gillett, state organizer of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment? He said that just as the prohibition organizations "worked through the churches," his organization would "work through the fraternal bodies, all of them."

In regard to the length of time it would take to defeat prohibition, he emphatically stated, "I say to all our big contributors: 'Give us $100,000 for four years and we'll plumb ruin the Volstead Act. Give us $100,000 for six years and we'll blow the Eighteenth Amendment clear out of the Constitution.' We'll get the money, too. Make no mistake about that. But we should begin to get definite results in two years."

In other words, the wet organizations are going to "stay on the job." The money will be used for the extension of their propaganda and for the election of wet Congressmen.

Repeat the colonel's statements in your fall meetings as proof that the completion of our task is not a matter of days or even of weeks, but will come only when all opposition to prohibition has ceased and there is no more educational work to do. Use them when making a plea for membership as indicating the vital need for the constructive work of the various departments, and a weighty argument for intensive and extensive cultivation of dry sentiment everywhere.

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA, NOVEMBER 11-16, 1922
NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA, NOVEMBER 17-19, 1922.

WOMAN'S COMMITTEE OF FIVE THOUSAND FORMED AT BIG RALLY IN SAN FRANCISCO---KATHLEEN NORRIS, NOTED WRITER, THE CHIEF SPEAKER

Fifteen hundred women of San Francisco testified to their interest in the campaign for the Wright Act to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment, by attendance at a luncheon at the Palace Hotel, with an overflow at the St. Francis Hotel.

The ballroom and the red room at the Palace Hotel and the ballroom at the Hotel St. Francis were not sufficient to accommodate the luncheon guests, and many were compelled to lunch elsewhere and return for the speeches.

Kathleen Norris, famous author and a San Franciscan of three generations, Rabbi Martin A. Meyer, Chester Rowell, Annette Abbott Adams, former Assistant Attorney General, and other speakers aroused the audience to a high pitch of enthusiasm.

Mrs. Norris said, in part:

"Arguments for or against prohibition have nothing to do with the Wright law. The Eighteenth Amendment is a part of the Constitution of our country, and California should help to carry it out, as the Constitution demands.

"After the San Francisco fire, when I was doing relief work, I was told by a wonderful woman in charge of all the rehabilitation efforts to be sure to find out, in all families applying for relief, who drank. She said: 'Three months after a great catastrophe, whenever an application is made for relief it means that somebody is drinking.'"

Referring to the United States as the greatest country in the world, Mrs. Norris declared that this very fact made obedience to law imperative.

"When you hear women say—and there may be some of you here this afternoon who do say it—'We like our cocktails,' I say to you, 'Californians, more shame upon you.'"

In speaking of the light wines and beer proposition, she said:

"Light wines and beers have nothing to do with prohibition. That movement is a subterfuge on the part of the opponents. Are you women of California going to undo two months from now what it took two generations of patient women to accomplish? We must put ourselves on record as a state whose women will not allow bootlegging and all the viciousness which goes with it.

"America must set an example of respect for the law of the land."

At the close of Mrs. Norris' eloquent speech, a resolution for the formation of a committee, to be known as the Woman's Committee of One Thousand for the passage of the Wright Act, was introduced and unanimously adopted. Mrs. Paul Raymond was named permanent chairman of the Committee.

Law and Lawlessness

Mr. Chester Rowell dwelt on the fact that the Wright law applies only to the enforcement of existing measures.

"It is not wet or dry, but law or lawlessness," he said. "The only argument against the Wright law is that California should continue to defy the Constitution of the United States. Its passage means that whatever law Congress passes, California will enforce."

Dr. James L. Gordon, pastor of the First Congregational Church, was loudly applauded when he declared that he wished to go on record in the battle for the Wright law with all his mind and body. From now until election, he said, he will devote every minute to the success of the Eighteenth Amendment. He declared that the womanhood of San Francisco is registered for sobriety and law enforcement, and that California is not to become the bootlegger's paradise.

"It is not only the foreign-born American citizen whom we can reproach for not obeying the law," said Rabbi Martin A. Meyer, in addressing the assemblage, "but Americans who have lived here from the fourth and fifth generation who fling all respect for American tradition to the winds and flout the law, who must be educated to this cause. Freedom does not lie along lines of disrespect for the law."

At the over-flow luncheon and banquet, Mrs. Anna Marden De Yo, corresponding secretary of the California (North) W. C. T. U., presided.

Miss Annette Abbott Adams, former assistant attorney general, said that those who claim prohibition is a failure are usually paid propagandists of the wet forces. She offered a resolution, which passed unanimously, that the committee of one thousand women be increased to five thousand in the interest of the Wright law.

Assemblymen T. M. Wright and Herbert Jones, authors of the measure, were among those introduced at the meetings. Large numbers of women signed campaign membership cards.

KANSAS WINE AND BEER CANDIDATE A JOKE

Mrs. Lillian M. Mitchner, president of the Kansas W. C. T. U., in a vigorous criticism of the Literary Digest's poll generally, and specifically of the votes that purport to come from Kansas says:

"Take the Kansas vote, for example. The state is represented in the last report as having cast 4,198 votes for modification of the prohibition law, 1,920 for its repeal and only 8,518 for enforcement of the law. The women's vote on prohibition is given thus: For modification 491, for repeal 194, for enforcement 1,006. Now it happens that at the recent primary election, there was a woman candidate who was openly for the wets, and she polled less than two hundred votes in the entire state, out of more than 200,000 votes cast. At almost every election for years there has been a 'booze' candidate. Never has his vote been more than a joke. Tests at the polls, and the expressed sentiment of the people of Kansas, many of whom never saw a saloon and never expect to see one, plainly indicated that not one in one hundred favors the repeal of prohibition. Yet the 'Digest' expects Kansas to believe that its showing of almost half the population against prohibition is accurate. Not in one thousand years will this be believed in the state."

For God and Home and Every Land

Time of Prayer—Noontide

"It is always noontide somewhere,
And across the awakening continents,
From shore to shore, somewhere,
Our prayers are rising ever more."

The Day and the Work

To each man is given a day and his work for the day;
And once, and no more, he is given to travel this way.
And woe if he flies from the task, whatever the odds;
For the task is appointed to him on the scroll of the gods.

There is waiting a work where only his hands can avail;
And so, if he falters, a chord in the music will fail.
He may laugh to the sky, he may lie for an hour in the sun;
But he dare not go hence till the labor appointed is done.

To each man is given a marble to carve, for the wall;
A stone that is needed to heighten the beauty of all;
And only his soul has the magic to give it a grace;
And only his hands have the cunning to put it in place.

Yes, the task that is given to each man no other can do;
So the errand is waiting; it has waited through ages for you.
And now you appear; and the hushed ones are turning their gaze
To see what you do with your chance in the chamber of days.

—Edwin Markham.

Have you ever noticed that magnificent turn which the apostle gives to a certain passage in his second letter to the Corinthians? "I will tarry at Ephesus..... for a great door and effectual is opened unto me, and there are many adversaries!" "There are many adversaries.... I will tarry!" The majestic opposition constitutes a reason to remain! "There are many adversaries;" I will hold on! —J. H. Jowett.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. HEADQUARTERS

GENERAL OFFICERS:
PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL.
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, FARGO, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA.
TREASURER
MRS. MARGARET C. MUNNS, EVANSTON, ILL.

1730 Chicago Avenue, Evanston, Ill.

REST COTTAGE

RED LETTER DAYS

September 28—Children's Harvest Home (Birthday of Frances E. Willard).
October 29—World's Temperance Sunday.

MEDAL CONTEST WORK

Considerable work along medal contest lines is being done in Northern California. Mrs. Mattie Patterson, of San Jose, who is planning to raise her part of the budget money by means of a gold medal contest, already has a second class recruited among the foreign boys attending the College of the Pacific, a Methodist school. "They choose the latest and 'most fashionable' subjects," she writes, "such as 'California and the Volstead Act,' 'My Flag and Country,' 'Americanization,' etc. Oh, they are the very best. Everybody who has heard them says so."

Northern California is fortunate also in having Mrs. Lucretia K. Hanson, a former medal contest superintendent of Washington, D. C., as president of the W. C. T. U. in Mill Valley, a little summer resort just across the bay from San Francisco. She is holding a series of contests, and these have attracted so much attention that the school has invited her to hold them before the whole assembly.

Mrs. Luella S. Minger, state superintendent for Northern California, a teacher, held four contests during the last days of school—vocal, spelling, and two declamatory.

Oklahoma proudly boasts of a recent "double-header" contest, namely a matrons' oratorical gold medal contest, and a young people's vocal silver medal contest, capably conducted by Mrs. Pearl L. Dalton, state superintendent of the department. Mrs. Ida B. Fleenor, state recording secretary, presided, with Professor E. G. Green, president of Oklahoma City College, and Professor Horatio Rench, choir director in the First M. E. church, serving, respectively, as chairman of judges for the oratorical and musical classes. While the judges were out little Miss Florence Mahler gave a beautiful reading, "Shall We Be Less Faithful," and Mr. Wesley Fleenor, son of the recording secretary, sang the popular W. C. T. U. song, "The Women Are Looking After You." Mrs. Alice M. David, state vice-president, presented the medals to the winners, Mrs. Lulu Hanks and Miss Clara Davison.

In foreign fields the contest work is also making progress. "We held an adult medal contest in February," writes from Colombo, Ceylon, Miss Flora E. Strout, World's W. C. T. U. organizer. "It proved such a success in every way that our president was delighted, so we are to add the department very shortly and push the work. I arranged a contest of grown-ups in each of the fields where I worked, and managed to get the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. secretaries and also ministers, besides business men, so we drew a crowd always and got people who otherwise would never have thought of coming to a temperance meeting."

SPECIAL TRAIN

The National W. C. T. U. has made arrangements with the Pennsylvania Railroad to run a "Special Train" on account of National and World's W. C. T. U. Conventions at Philadelphia, carrying all-steel, open section drawing room, open section Pullman and observation car. This will leave Chicago 10:15 a. m., November 10.

Reservations should be made through W. E. Blachley, Division Passenger Agent, 323 S. Wells St., Chicago, Ill.

My Creed

The finest thing beneath the sun
Is brave, right living;
Duty done at stroke of hour,
Kind thoughts bestowed,
A lift to ease a brother's load,
Temptation overcome;
Some cause pushed forward—
And then a restful pause
To let the uprising good
In our own hearts find its little rood
In which to grow.

—Amy Davis Winship.

Do It Now! Time Is Fleeting!

Rally every friend to the standard Each one means that much more power for the right.

TO GAIN MEMBERS POSTERIZE YOUR COMMUNITY WITH THESE STRIKING NEW POSTERS

(Size 19 x 25. Price, each, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00.)

For Their Sakes Enforce the Law.
Booze Stands Between —.
Forge a Chain.

HAVE YOU SEEDED DOWN THE FIELD IN YOUR VICINITY WITH THESE NEW MEMBERSHIP COMPELLERS?

IF NOT, DO IT NOW!

The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment Appeals to Millions By Way of the Printed Page
Do Thou Likewise

We List Herewith SPECIAL HELPS

Order in quantities, enclose in envelopes with membership cards and a personal note of invitation, and hand or mail to the women of your church, missionary society, club, lodge, etc.

Titles of Leaflets and Prices. Each Leaflet a Winner.

(Leaflets, 2 cents each)

Why You Should Join the Half-Million Women of the W. C. T. U. Price, per 100, 50 cents; per 50, 30 cents.

Why I Am a White Ribboner Today.

Why a Million Members?

Price, per 50, 25 cents; per 100, 45 cents.

OTHER LEAFLETS:

W. C. T. U. Co-operation the Community Keynote.
Jubilee Membership Campaign Songs.
Mobilize a Million Members.

Price, per 50, 35 cents; per 100, 60 cents.

Declaration of Principles.
Purpose and Scope of the W. C. T. U.
Recruiting for Membership.

Price, per 100, 20 cents; per 50, 15 cents.

PLEDGES AND CARDS

Membership Appeal card, with vignette and autograph signature of Anna A. Gordon. Per 100, 50 cents.

W. C. T. U. Coupon Pledge. Per 100, 45 cents.

Y. P. B. Invitation Card. Per 100, 50 cents.

Order in quantities, enclose in envelopes with membership cards and a personal note of invitation, and hand or mail to the women of your church, missionary society, club, lodge, etc.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE,
Evanston, Illinois

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

FRANCES WILLARD AND THE YOUNG PEOPLE OF TODAY

SEPTEMBER 28 IS THE BIRTHDAY OF FRANCES E. WILLARD, OBSERVED BY THE WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION AS A RED LETTER DAY

Roberta Carnes, Baltimore, Md.

I never knew Frances Willard in the flesh; yet I do know her, and know her well. To me she is an inspired musician. Her instrument was, and still is, the world. I like to think of her as sitting at a piano, and as she touches the keys of her loved instrument, life—real and pulsating—vibrates from a hitherto soulless frame. In her childhood her hands dwelt upon cadences and light airy melodies. Then one day the musician was weighted down with the crushing blow of a great sorrow. For days the bereaved one could not touch the instrument, and when at last she did, her fingers automatically sought the minor key. The notes were low and tremulous at first, as they poured forth the grief of that noble heart. "A minor" moaned with her heart and trembled with her voice, "E minor" became more steady and sobbed less. Following the gradation she touched at last upon one of the most beautiful of all chords—the first position of "C sharp." The struggle of the broken spirit had ceased for the time being. Melodies made richer through a refining experience expressed what she herself so often said, "I learned to say 'yes' to God."

The chord, in spite of its full, rich harmony, was unfinished. Frances Willard realized that as the years went on, and so she added a seventh here, a ninth there until almost unconsciously her fingers shaped the terminating harmony as "America's Queen," climaxed the whole in the "C major" of this life. Miss Willard had inaugurated her Do Everything policy. The melody resounded throughout the length and breadth of her own land and pervaded the remotest corners of Europe and the Far East. In stately hall and lowly hovel the music floated forth. Tired, weary, plodding peasants, hearing the song, smiled their appreciation and were glad. Men and women in crowded city and busy mart paused to catch the strain, then passed on with new hope. A grateful world voiced its appreciation of the mastermind of the great musician.

Then one day the news was flashed around the world that the musician would never again touch the keys. The hands that once called into service many who otherwise would have been idle and perhaps thoughtless, had closed the case of the instrument. But the melody lives on and on, and shall always live. The world to-day is singing the song of Frances Willard. People everywhere are catching up the broken fragments of their life songs to harmonize them into Frances Willard's immortal chanson—"For God and Home and Every Land." A great soul never dies—cannot die. The influence of such a life is felt down through the ages by generations yet unborn.

Why I Am Proud to Be an American

In June, the national general secretary of the Young People's Branch, Mrs. Maude B. Perkins, announced that a prize of ten dollars would be awarded for the best article, not to exceed 250 words, on "Why I Am Proud To Be An American." Ten reasons were to be given.

The contest is now closed. There were contestants from North and South California, South Dakota, Kansas, Georgia, Colorado, Massachusetts and New York. The judges, the chairman a senior in college, majoring in English, chose as the prize winner Sidney E. Ayres, president of the New York State Federation of Y. P. B.'s. and brother of Muriel Ayres, who has quite recently returned to this country after valiant service among the young people of South America. Second and third honors went, respectively, to Cora Patience Frye, former president of a local Y. P. B., and Francis W. Harper, vice-president of the New York State Federation of Y. P. B.'s. Eleanor Ayres, of Penn Yan, New York, received honorable mention. Mr. Ayres, who was this year graduated from Cornell University, won a scholarship, and in the fall will enter Union Theological Seminary in New York City. He and Mr. Harper are planning to attend the World's and National W. C. T. U. Conventions, in Philadelphia, in November.

The articles written by these young people will appear from time to time in THE UNION SIGNAL.

The story is called to mind of a young woman brought up in a Christian home where Frances Willard's name was a household word. When college days were over, the real test came. She who thought herself so strong, now realized her weakness. Quite a few of the people whom she met after she left the protecting college surroundings served wines at their functions. Church members—people who not only professed the God of Light, but who prided themselves on their good citizenship, partook of the home-made liquors and for the time being the young woman's vision was impaired. She sipped the sparkling fluid. The tiniest drop burned deep into her very soul. She pushed the glass from her, leaving no visible sign of its having been touched. She was so often called an old fogey that she almost came to the conclusion that such was the case. In the midst of all this, there came the realization of something fundamentally wrong. Some weeks later she came across a book whose familiar pages seemed to beg her to read it. It was "The Life of Frances E. Willard." Each page lured to another. Frances Willard spoke to that young woman just as clearly as she would have spoken had she been by her side. The common chord of struggle and sorrow brought the two lives together. The young woman of the twentieth century heard the immortal chanson of Frances Willard's beautiful life. It rekindled the smoldering fire of a once great purpose. That young woman realized as never before her debt to the world and to those who believed in her. She arose, looked the world in the face, and conquered the trial that followed so soon upon the declaration of the new, yet old stand.

There are thousands of young people in America to-day whose experience is much like the one cited. They are not abnormal in any way, shape, or form. They are merely what we term the general run of young manhood and womanhood seeking recreation from the daily routine, yet finding that recreation robbed of its deepest enjoyment because in it there lurks a tempter.

What is to be the outcome? What are you doing to help them? Are you standing by, thinking that the day of the millennium has come and that you can calmly fold your hands from labor? Are you unmindful of the fact that although the truce has been signed, sharp-shooters are still alert in the ambush?

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union is in the midst of a campaign to secure a million members as a memorial to its great leader—a million dollars signifying a million names. But the organization needs more than names—more than dollars. It needs a concentrated work in which the young people may have a part and in which they will be supported by those whose experience is wider than theirs. It needs, too, to solicit the co-operation of men and women whose laxity in the matter of law enforcement has meant and is meaning right now the loss of so many young people from white-ribbon ranks.

We want to help in this great fight to make America in very truth the promised land. We have heard Frances Willard's undying lay and we have attempted to take it up, but some of those who should have led the song have discarded it for the whim of some popular tune. When these people have realized their mistake and once more take up the immortal harmony of the great leader, then we shall come—come a solid phalanx four million strong to join in the swelling oratorio of a nation, which, following the suggestion of the state of West Virginia, founds its citizenship and its policy on Christian ideals.

Special Helps for Sunday School Officers and Teachers, October 29

(All leaflets 2 cents unless otherwise noted)

How can the Superintendent Promote Temperance Teaching in the Sunday School?
Problems of the Physical Awakening.
Temperance Teaching.
The Temperance Sunday School Lessons.
A Study of the Pledge. (For Primary Class Workers).
Pen Points.
The Teachings of the Divine Savior Concerning Wine.
The Pledge. What Is It? Why Sign It?
Thorough Temperance Teaching the Demand of the Hour.
Temperance Instruction in the Sunday School. Its Need from a Bible Standpoint.

Price, per 100, 45 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

BLACKBOARD EXERCISES:

Prohibition in the United States.
The Total Abstainer on Safe Ground.

TEMPERANCE TALKS FOR PRIMARY AND JUNIOR WORKERS:

Look Not Thou Upon the Wine.
Beware of the Wine Cup.
Watch! The Thief Is Alcohol.
Destruction.
Sin in the Heart.

Price per 100, 45 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

LEAFLETS:

World's Temperance Sunday—Citizenship Recognition Day.
The Sunday School Pledge Flag (Method Leaflet).
Temperance Sunday—Program for Sunday Schools.
Responsive Reading (Christian Citizenship).
Responsive Reading (Bible Temperance).
Responsive Reading (Signing the Pledge).
Responsive Reading (Bible Wines).
Responsive Reading (Bible Total Abstinence).
Posters in the Sunday School.

Price, per 100, 45 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

Citizenship Questionnaire.
The Sunday School and Law Enforcement.
Sunday School National Prohibition Guards.
The Forward Look of the Sunday School Department.
The Sunday School and Social Service.

Price, per 100, 45 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

Program—Recognition of Young Voters. Four pages. Price, per 100, 75 cents; per 50, 40 cents.

Special

TWO NEW PROGRAMS FOR L. T. L.'S, NATIONAL PROHIBITION GUARDS, AND SUNDAY SCHOOLS

Uncle Sam's Prohibition Quiz. Testimony of ten noted Americans (Exercise for 11 boys or young men).

Aunt Columbia's Prohibition Quiz. Testimony of ten noted American women. (Exercise for 11 girls or young women.)

Price, five cents per copy; per dozen, 50 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois.

Articles of Interest in Current Periodicals

"Wine-Soaked Europe and Dry America," editorial by Barton W. Currie; "Educating Illiterate America," by Charles A. Selden; "The Influence of Women in Politics," by Gifford Pinchot; "A World League of Women Can Prevent Wars," by Freeman Tilden; "The False Gods of Fashion," by Lady Astor; in Ladies' Home Journal for September.

"What's Wrong With Our Schools?"; and an editorial by Ida Clyde Clarke; in the September Pictorial Review.

"Nothing is more needed at this particular time than a concrete, emphatic statement of woman's position on certain fundamental issues. It has been nearly three decades since women got together and stated a few broad principles upon which they were agreed. They could not vote, and man's world paid little attention to them; yet the tide soon began to turn.

"We asked for temperance and we got the Volstead Act. But some of our ambitions of that day are still unattained. We wanted equal pay for equal work, and a single standard of morals, and better educational opportunities for women; and we still want them and are going to demand them."

"The Greatest Union in the World," by Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, in Good Housekeeping for September.

"Each one of us starts life with the finest machine in the world—the human body. We can never have another. When we wear it out it is done for—and we are done for, with it."

"The Discovery of God," by Basil King; "The Truth About Child Labor," by Raymond G. Fuller; "Students of the World," by Frazier Hunt; in Good Housekeeping for September.

"The New Baby Book," by Dr. Baldwin; "Parents' Association" (the value of partnership between school and home), by Angelo Patri; and "Towns Run by Women," by Genevieve Parkhurst; in The Delineator for September.

"English Undefiled," by Kate Douglas Wiggin; "Channel or Factory," by Zona Gale; "The Good Citizenship Bureau," conducted by Anna Steese Richardson; in the Woman's Home Companion for September.

"Shall We Encourage Athletics for Girls?" by Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, in the Woman's Home Companion for September.

"Sports ought to mean just as much in the life of a girl as in the life of a boy. Health and happiness and the sporting spirit are the rewards which every woman, as well as every man, may win from athletic games. Nothing so quickly develops a clean, healthy comradeship between the sexes as playing games together. There is no reason why boys and girls should not run races, play ball, skate together, play tennis together. The boys insensibly acquire courtesy toward their opponents—an essential part of good sportsmanship."

"How About the Woman's Bloc?" by Helen Ring Robinson; in the Pictorial Review for October.

"The Old School and the New," by Angelo Patri, in The Delineator for October. "Let the new school break the old mold of education."

"Better Homes in America," editorial; "A Nation of Home Owners," by Calvin Coolidge; and "The Home as an Investment," by Herbert Hoover; in The Delineator for October.

We record here the names of friends and comrades who have recently passed to the higher life.

FORMER STATE PRESIDENT OF LOUISIANA, MRS. M. R. GOODALE, CLOSES EARTHLY CAREER

MRS. M. R. GOODALE, president of the Louisiana W. C. T. U., from the year 1889 to 1899, passed to her heavenly home last month. She was a large factor in the success and development of the work of the organization in her state. She came of a distinguished and cultivated family, and was earnestly interested in church and Sunday school activities, serving for twenty-seven years as president of the Ladies' Aid Society of her church. She was also deeply interested in the woman's missionary society, and was elected its honorary president which office she retained to the time of her departure. She became Louisiana's foremost temperance lecturer and was highly esteemed by Frances Willard as a friend and associate.

MRS. LOTTIE FREY, of Baileyville, Illinois, a devoted member of the Forreston W. C. T. U. Although a non-resident and therefore unable to attend the meetings of the union, Mrs. Frey followed its activities with the greatest interest, eagerly reading the monthly reports.

A woman of strong character, she endeared herself to all with whom she came in contact.

ABBIE BEN ADAMS

(Adapted)

Abbie Ben Adams, may her life be spared,
Awoke one night and felt a trifle scared,
For on her shirtwaist box, cross-legged sate
A Vision writing on a little slate.
Exceeding nervousness made Abbie quake,
And to the Vision timidly she spake:
"What writest thou?" The Vision looked appalled
At the presumption, and quite coldly drawled:
"The list of our best people who depart
For watering places sumptuous and smart."
"And am I in it?" asked Miss Abbie.
"No!" the scornful Vision said, "you're poor, you know."

"I know," said Abbie; "I go where it is cheap,
I can't afford mountains of prices steep.
But just jot down before you fade—
I never leave my W. C. T. U. dues unpaid."
The Vision wrote and vanished. Next night late
He came again, and brought his little slate
And showed the names of people really best—
And lo, Miss Abbie's name led all the rest!

—The Baptist.

Just From the Press for Your Schools

Outlines for Health and Temperance Teaching for the Grades of the Public Schools

New Pamphlet for Scientific Temperance Instruction in the Schools. Just what you want for your teachers. See that they are supplied. Price, per copy, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.25.

Order now for immediate use as the school year opens.

"Facts Are Facts"

And Cannot Be Disproved

Refute the statements of the A. A. P. A. with our Seven New Leaflets on "FACTS."

TITLES OF LEAFLETS:

Labor Leaders Outspoken for Prohibition.
Health Experts Favor Prohibition.
Bankers Believe in Prohibition.
Manufacturers Approve Prohibition.
Educators Commend Prohibition.
Family Life Benefited by Prohibition.
Women Want Prohibition.

Special price, each per 100, 30 cents; per 1,000, $2.50. Order in large quantities and distribute everywhere. Please send remittance with order.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE,
Evanston, Illinois

The "Money Earning Plan"
EARN MONEY FOR YOUR UNION, CHURCH, SOCIETY OR SCHOOL
For details write to
CHAS. R. DAVIS
184 Ward St.,
NEWTON CENTER, 59, MASS.

News Value of Exceptions

There has been a lot of loose thinking and a lot more of loose talking about the success of prohibition.

One thing that confuses the mind of the average person is the fact that newspapers make a business of publishing exceptional occurrences. In fact, the contents of newspapers are very largely exceptions, for it is the unusual that is news and not the usual.

Of course, people with judgment understand that the very printing of these exceptions means that as a rule the amendment is pretty well enforced. But then most people are rather deficient in judgment.

If the newspapers were full some morning of instances showing how prohibition was enforced we should probably conclude that it had very generally failed.

The facts in the case are that no law ever passed by a civilized nation has done more to increase the sum of human happiness and to abate crime than has the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.—Frank Crane in The Chicago Daily News.

Worker or Shirker Which?

We have all heard the children ask, "Why is it easier to shirk than to work?" Is it easier? Not for the antis! We read in THE UNION SIGNAL that the forces opposed to the Eighteenth Amendment have been busy all summer. Heat and cold are alike to them; their ardor and activity never abate. The season is advancing and cooler weather is due, but we do not want the enthusiasm of the members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union for the WORLD'S CONVENTION to drop with the thermometer. We want it to remain at summer heat—to mount even to fever heat. We have less than two months in which to tell the news of this great gathering. Send in your orders for stickers! Let us not be weary in well-doing, or over-confident. When we are working for temperance and law enforcement we are helping to uplift mankind, our neighbors across the waters, as well as those in our homeland.

Two dollars for a thousand stickers, $1.25 for five hundred, 50 cents for 125. Send your remittance with order at once to Mrs. James B. Scott, 503 S. 46th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Disappearance of Saloons Followed by Erection of Labor Temples

(Continued from Page Four)

committee asked one day's pay from every member of a trade union. There was no compulsion about it and a valuable property has been purchased which when remodeled will accommodate every union in the city. Here, then, is another instance, common throughout the country, where, with the removal of the saloon influence, the labor movement is left to develop along legitimate lines. St. Paul, too, had many local unions receiving "free" rent.

Ownership of labor temples by the unions in the dry southern states was the rule rather than the exception, and T. J. Greer, president of the Louisiana Federation of Labor, is authority for the statement that these temples were built because of the absence of liquor influence from trade union politics.

Take the case of Denver. Its 128 local unions had been meeting in thirty different halls, most of them located adjacent to saloons. This was during the wet days in Colorado. For twenty years the unions had been trying to get together to build a labor temple, but the saloon influence was always on hand to check the move. When the state voted dry, however, the unions were able to get together with the same result as in Detroit, St. Paul and other cities—a magnificent home of their own.

Local secretaries invariably report prompter payment of union dues under prohibition.

No Cautions Necessary

Nor is it necessary since the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment to caution striking or locked-out workmen to stay away from the saloons. You may think this a small item. But when viewed from the standpoint of a labor official clothed with the responsibility of managing a strike it is of high importance. You might ask any responsible labor official about this phase of prohibition, too. He will likely make you quite a speech about it.

Labor conventions reflect the beneficial effects of the ousting of the saloons and the consequent elimination of their influence from the labor movement. Heretofore a great part of the time and attention of state labor conventions were taken up with issues concerning the liquor business. Until a few years ago the delegate who had the temerity to express his sentiments in favor of prohibition or even in favor of the regulation of the traffic, was marked by the wet interests and from that time forward would be the recipient of every indignity at their hands.

All this is absent from the majority of state labor conventions now. While there are complaints that prohibition does not always prohibit, that the workingman is unjustly deprived of his beer and light wines, defeat usually meets any attempt to adopt resolutions calling for the return of the saloon.

To the observer in the labor movement this refusal is born of a fear that the saloon, or even light wines and beer, would bring back the cheap appeal that the liquor interests have always made to the radical and irresponsible elements in the labor movement, and that baneful influence which has endeavored to use the movement for selfish purposes and caused it to repudiate principles it has adhered to for so many years.

Educate for Obedience to Law

Law Enforcement Decalog.
Representative Volstead In Defense of the Enforcement Code.
Undergirding Law Enforcement.
How Most Effectually to Promote Law Enforcement.
Let us Make our Victory Secure.
Lincoln's Appeal for Law.
He That Keepeth the Law.
Per 100, 20 cents; per 50, 15 cents.
A Vision of American Sovereignty.
But One Common Ground.
What Can We Do to Bring Enforcement of the Prohibition Law?
Today's Imperative Task.
How Women Can Help Enforce the Law.
The Eighteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution.
The Eighteenth Amendment an Expression of the Will of the People.
Prohibition Progress as Portrayed by Decisions of the United States Supreme Court:
Reasons Why the Prohibition Law Is not Properly Enforced and Suggested Remedies.
Stabilize Public Sentiment.
Crusading in the Court Room.
Up and At It.
The Fight Is Still On.
How They Put It Over On Us While We Were Over There.
Per 100, 45 cents; per 50, 25 cents.
Quiz on National Constitutional Prohibition.
Questionnaire on Federal Prohibition Code.
Per 100, 75 cents; per 50, 40 cents.
Constitution of the United States. Complete in pamphlet form, 16 pp. Price, 5 cents; per doz., 50 cents.

To Combat The Wine and Beer Propaganda

Give the People the Truth
(All leaflets 2 cents unless otherwise noted.)

Primary Lesson on Beer.
Beer is Drunk for Its Alcohol.
He Was Not Drunk But——.
Wine as a Cause of Alcoholism.
Beer as a Cause of Alcoholism.
When is a Man Intoxicated?
Behind the Bars for Life.
Price per 100, 20 cents; per 50, 15 cents.
The Persistent Beer Fallacy.
Wine—What Is It?
Beer Quantities of Alcohol Injurious.
What Benjamin Franklin Said About Beer.
Dangers in the Use of Fermented Drinks.
Is Beer Intoxicating?
Pre-Natal Effects of Alcohol.
Is the Moderate Drinker a Safe Citizen?
Are Beer and Wine Harmful?
Drinking to Avoid Drunkenness is Not the Whole Story.
Man or Beer?
Per 100, 45 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

No Better Campaign Document

Than Our New Fan

Blue and white, with dry map, and eight pertinent quotations from eight prominent Americans. Each quotation a vote winner.

Use Them Liberally

At your Fairs, Open Air Meetings, in Waiting Rooms, Lodge Rooms, Churches, Rallies, Re-unions, etc., etc. Let our Campaign Fan talk for our Dry Law.

Price, per 100, $5.00; per dozen, 70 cents. Please send remittance with order.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Ill.

Use Playlets and Programs In The Campaign

For Sunday Schools, Y. P. B.'s, Y. P. C. E.'s, Y. W. C. A.'s, W. C. T. U.'s, Public Meetings, etc. These will help create sentiment and win votes.

Temperance Day Program for Public Schools. New, unique and attractive. Can be used in Sunday Schools or for an evening program as well as in public schools. Price per copy, 5 cents; per doz., 45 cents; per 100, $3.00; per 1,000, $25.00. Less than 100, at dozen rates.

World-wide the Joy. A prohibition Hymn with pantomime. May be used with or without the latter. Requires seven girls, a soloist and pianist. Price, 5 cents, single copy; per dozen, 25 cents.

The Binneybakers. Amusing and instructive; the plot centers about "home-brew." Requires three women and one man, young or old. Easily arranged. Per copy, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00.

Lester Brown's Battle. (Total Abstinence and Anti-Cigaret). Four girls and two boys. Per copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 35 cents.

The Eighteenth Amendment Forever. A very attractive playlet exactly suited to present needs. Can be used in public schools, Sunday Schools, or as part of an evening's entertainment. For seventeen men, young or old, and a number of children. Very effective. Per copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 40 cents.

A New "Alice in Wonderland." For three girls and four boys. Can be used on Temperance Sunday or in public schools. Price, 5 cents; per dozen, 40 cents.

Bible Reasons for the Eighteenth Amendment. For one man, one woman and 13 boys and girls. Price, 3 cents each; per dozen, 15 cents.

Patriotic Prohibition Drill. For seven boys and girls. Per copy, 3 cents; per dozen, 15 cents.

Who Was to Blame? Monologue by Josiah Allen's Wife. Price, 10 cents.

A Sick Baby. (For 12 little girls and one boy). Attractive as an interlude for a county or local institute meeting, club meeting, etc. Per copy, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00.

A Lark at Nonotuck Hall. An amusing and instructive exposé of the true character of "patent medicines." Suitable for a group of young women or high school girls. Per copy, 20 cents.

Order promptly and use above Playlets to advantage before election. Please send remittance with order.

What You Need Just Now

Manual of Law Enforcement. (Plain and explicit so all may understand). Per copy, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00.

Studies in Government. (Pamphlet) by Deborah Knox Livingston. Price per copy, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.50. Each woman needs her own copy of each of the above named pamphlets.

New Campaign Poster "Vote Right"

A Woman's Appeal to Women. Attractively illustrated. Order in quantities. Use in every available place where it will reach the eyes of women. Price, single copy, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00; per 100, $7.50. Please send remittance with order.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

When Dick Stocks Overslept

Fred Marlette

The clock struck two. As the sound rang out, the wife of the section foreman raised herself on her elbow, in bed, and listened intently to a creaking noise.

"That you, Dick?" she called.

A thick voice muttered something that sounded like an oath. Then a chair fell with a crash; and there followed a heavy thud, some loud curses, and silence.

Mrs. Stocks got up, lighted a lamp, and crept out into the dining-room. It was no new experience for her to have her husband come home intoxicated. Romance had long since passed out of her life. Brutality and the love which makes home happy cannot dwell under the same roof. Her one child had died soon after birth. Sometimes friends asked her why she did not leave her husband. To this she usually replied:

"Why should I? I married him for better or worse? He's good to me when sober. Moreover, he needs me." Thus she endured and hid her heartache as well as she could.

In the quiet of the night, she stood for a few minutes looking down at the figure lying on the floor in drunken stupor. Then she closed the door.

"You're too heavy for me to lift, so you'll have to sleep where you are," she thought, and straightway blew out the light and returned to bed.

The little village of Marville awoke on the morning of Thanksgiving day in a happy mood. There was a feeling of peace and contentment in the air. The harvest was over and the first frost had mellowed all nature. Prosperity was apparent and there were few homes in the community that would not have a bird on the holiday dinner table.

The postmaster had arisen early that morning. He was now walking briskly towards the office, cane in hand, and a kindly smile upon his gentle old face.

"Good morning, master," sang out the cheery voice of Jud Watkins, the youngest member of the section gang on his way to the station. The postmaster had been a teacher for many years and in that capacity had brought up most of the men and women in the neighborhood on, "ten figures, twenty-six letters and a birch rod," as he said.

"Good morning, Jud. Fine day for the holiday."

"Yes, master; and I guess a right smart crowd will come on the up train to get a share of them fat birds I've seen lately."

"Those birds, Jud," corrected the master, the habit of early years reasserting itself.

Jud grinned, "You expecting any company?" he asked.

"Yes, Jud, I am. Minnie and her baby are to arrive on the 8:15. I haven't seen her since her marriage three years ago, and the little one not at all," he added half to himself with a far-away look in his eyes.

The passing of a heavy freight train interrupted the conversation. The two men stood in the dusty street and watched the cars go by. Few people do not feel the fascination of a train. The older man looked at his watch.

"The freight is late. The passenger is due in fifteen minutes," he said, and hurried on towards the postoffice.

Mrs. Stocks awoke with a start. It was broad daylight and the heavy freight was thundering through the yards. It seldom stopped: but this time she knew by the decreasing roar and the squeal of the wheels on the rails that it was slowing down at the lower switch. Lightly she sprang out of bed and entered the dining-room. Her husband was still lying where he had fallen. She shook his shoulder.

"Dick," she said, "get up, get up, the through freight has stopped. You'll have to go to work, without breakfast; you're late. I'll send Harry" (a neighbor's boy) "over with some lunch later."

Dick rose slowly to his feet and stretched himself. He looked at his wife and said with an angry scowl:

"Why didn't you help me to bed, you——"

"Look at the clock," said Mrs. Stocks, sharply.

Dick gave one glance. A frightened expression came into his face. He picked up his cap and hurriedly left the house. To his reviving faculties had come the remembrance of a neglected duty. As he and his gang were returning home just at quitting time, the evening before, they had found a cracked rail about two miles south of the village.

"It's too late to put in a new one tonight, boys," he had declared; "there's no train until the morning down freight and we'll get out early and fix this up before she goes through."

"Fifteen minutes," he thought, as he ran. "I hope the passenger is late; not likely, though, or the freight would have gone on. Good thing she wasn't on time or she'd have been ditched, sure."

As he reached the tool house and began feverishly unlocking the door, the freight backed upon the siding. At the same moment, Jud Watkins approached.

"Dick," he said, "the master's daughter Minnie, and her baby, are on the up train."

The foreman gave him one fierce look.

"Run to the station," he roared, "and tell Dave to have them hold that train at Nettleton" (the next station down the line).

Watkins obeyed. The agent was selling tickets when the section man delivered his message and in a few seconds there was much excitement. It took three precious minutes to get an answer from Nettleton and then it was to the effect that the train had left.

Meantime, Stocks and two others of his gang had got the "jigger" onto the rails, and as soon as Watkins returned, they set off on it. How they did make it go. Each one knew that the light handcar could pass over the cracked rail safely, or that even a train going very slowly could do it, but the passenger ripping along at fifty miles an hour was a different matter. The bad spot was in a curve and would "give" to a certainty.

Unexcelled for repairing china, glassware, earthenware, furniture, vases, books, etc. Famous since 1876. Major's rubber and Leather Cements are good.

Three kinds, 20c per bottle at dealers, or write us.

MAJOR MFG. CO., NEW YORK

W. C. T. U. Badges. Made of mother of pearl. Price 25 cents each. Address treasurer W. C. T. U., Jerusalem, Palestine. P. O. Box 443.

Prepare for October 29, World's Temperance Sunday

Order All Supplies In Ample Time
Note Helps Here Named
(All leaflets 2 cents unless otherwise noted)

Quarterly Temperance Lesson of the International Sunday School Series, October 29. Should be early in the hands of every teacher. Prepared especially for teachers and officers. Price, per 100, 20 cents; per 50, 15 cents.

ENVELOPE LEAFLETS FOR STUDY AND DISTRIBUTION:
Duty of a Christian Citizen.
Clean Hands.
Marion Lawrence on Pledge Signing.
Beware Wine!
Listen, Boys!
Counting Fingers.
God's Bottles.
Why Sign the Pledge.
Lincoln's Appeal for Law.
Beer and Home Brew.
What Uncle Sam Says.
An Elder Sister's Advice to Boys. No. I.
An Elder Sister's Advice to Boys. No. II.
An Elder Sister's Advice to Girls. Nos. 1, 3, 4.
Safety First, Boys!
Price, per 100, 20 cents; per 50, 15 cents.

RECITATIONS FOR PRIMARY AND JUNIOR CLASSES:
Two Offerings.
Look Not Upon the Wine.
Where There's Drink There's Danger.
Price, per 100, 25 cents; per 50, 15 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois

It seemed to Stocks, as they flew along straining every muscle, that every clickity-click of the wheels over the rail ends kept saying, "Minnie and her baby—Minnie and her baby." The vision of the fair-haired little girl whom everybody loved, was ever before him. "God help me, they must be saved," he told himself through gritted teeth.

As they neared the defective rail, Dick realized that they could not get far enough beyond it to stop and signal the train before it would be upon them. Suddenly its whistle sounded very close.

"Jump," yelled Stocks, as the engine came in sight at the far end of the curve.

It is always a matter of surprise when a bad man proves a hero. The old doctrine of total depravity has no place for such a phenomenon. Yet it is not uncommon. How can we account for it? Only by giving due value to the latent good which a crisis calls out. It was so with Stocks; he stayed in the hand-car and rode it straight at the swiftly oncoming train. He did not jump but forgot himself entirely in his determination to rescue endangered humanity.

The engineer blew his whistle and reversed his engine. Hand-car and man flew from the rails into the ditch, the train coming to a standstill a few feet from the cracked rail.

Just as the engineer and fireman climbed out of the cab, Watkins and his companions came running up and the conductor and brakeman and several passengers approached hurriedly; they lifted the broken hand-car off the chest of poor Dick Stocks, and tenderly they raised him and put him on the train, which a few minutes afterward crawled gingerly along over the cracked rail. When the 8:15 pulled into Marville five minutes later, a young woman with a child in her arms, alighted.

"Father," sang out her girlish voice, 'look at my baby. I think he's just like you."

Later, when they lifted the section foreman out of the baggage car on an improvised stretcher made of sacks, the injured man turned his eyes towards the little group and smiled gently.

The evening of the same day, Dick died; there was no hope for him from the first. Tearfully, his wife stood by and held his hand. The old love of early days had come back to her. Dick asked for the minister, and when he arrived and bent over the bed, the feeble lips whispered:

"Tell—the boys—it was—the drink."

Wet Activities

(Continued from Page Three)

"fifty cents until the end of the November campaign," with special rates for bundle orders.

The leading article in the first issue was entitled: "Smash the Wright Act." One or two sentences will show the drift of this article: "The Wright Act is a prohibition law in the sense that it is a subtle attempt to indorse the broken-down, unenforced and discredited Volstead Act. The fact that forty-six states have local enforcement laws proves that no amount of socially coercive legislation like prohibition will win the support of the American people. Human nature cannot be straight-jacketed. The success of the Wright Act at the polls would mean that California, the most progressive state in the Union, had abnegated her leadership and lost her reason. It would be a blot on the escutcheon of our proud state—this affirmation of a law which has created havoc, anarchy and despair!"

Money Spent on Undelivered Liquors

One reason for the desire of the wets to obtain an amendment to the Volstead Act is perhaps seen in the fact that thousands of dollars are gotten from them by unscrupulous "confidence men" under false pretenses. These people, living in Canada and foreign countries, offer to send intoxicating liquors to any person, on receipt of the money asked. When the money is sent them, however, no effort is made to deliver the goods, and since the victims were defying the prohibition law, they cannot ask redress.

Perfection
NON-ALCOHOLIC FLAVORS
Taste Better
Flavor Does Not Bake Out

A combination of pure fruit and flavoring oils with vegetable oils, which carries and distributes the flavorings as well or better than alcohol, and instead of being harmful, has more food value than an equal amount of butter. Wonderful Vanilla and eleven other flavors. Representatives wanted. A permanent source of income for Unions, Church Societies, and individuals. 100% profit. No money required under our consignment plan.

Fletcher Production Co. Ext. Dept. 429 E. 69th St., Chicago.

Stories, Poems, Essays and Plays Wanted

We teach you how to write; where and when to sell. Publication of your work guaranteed by new method. Walhamore Institute, Dept. J, Lafayette Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

Help the Armenian Refugees

BUY HAND MADE LACE

Jerusalem Lace Work made by hand. Latest patterns of yokes from $1.40 to $3.75. Narrow lace, 15 to 35 cents a yard. Wide lace (⅝ in. width and over) to 75 cents a yard, edging or insertion. Medallions, round or square, 45 to 75 cents a dozen. Wide edging for underclothes $1.90 to $4.55, a set of 3 pieces. Lace will be sent in registered envelopes. Postage free. Apply to Misses Farah, Box 287, Jerusalem, Palestine.

Campaign Against Disloyalty

The League of American Pen Women has inaugurated a nation-wide campaign against disloyalty to the country of whatever nature, in the spoken or printed word. Many textbooks in use in schools and colleges, through deletions, fail to instruct properly in American history, American traditions, and American ideals, it is said, and these books are to be given close scrutiny by a special committee appointed by Mrs. Louis N. Gelaert, national president of the League, and the national executive board.

Study God's Book and Let It Mould Your Destiny

How are you to realize those deep longings and aspirations of your heart to make your life one of real service and rich blessing to many? The answer is, through reverent, systematic, enlightening study of the Bible.

It is your book, given to you by God for your learning, that you may know the answers to life's greatest questions, and have wisdom and power for all your life problems. Study of it is made easy under the guidance of the

MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE
CORRESPONDENCE DEPARTMENT

and you will be delighted by the progress which will reward your faithful effort.

A great university educator, who writes of the Bible merely as literature, has testified recently that knowledge of the Bible without a college course is more valuable than a college course without the Bible. More than 7,000 students of nearly all ages and about 40 different occupations are now taking one or more of the Institute's eight different Courses: Synthetic Bible Study Course; Scofield Bible Correspondence Course; Bible Doctrine; Bible Chapter Summary; Practical Christian Work; Introductory Bible Course; Evangelism; Christian Evidences.

Personal direction is given every student by the Correspondence Department. Time, place and amount of study are under your own control. The Courses are not sold for profit—the prices are below cost—surprisingly low. Every day is precious. Take advantage of this unequaled privilege now. Mail coupon today.

THE MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE
Dept. 4056 153 Institute Place, Chicago, Ill.

Send me your prospectus giving complete information regarding your eight courses in Correspondence Bible Study.

Name .....

Address .....

CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT

THE UNION SIGNAL ..... $1.50 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance (monthly).....50c a year
Single Copies, 5c each; per 100 .....$2.75
Club rate for ten or more Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition subscriptions, 40c a year. No other premium allowed.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER ..... 35c a year
Single Copies, 3c each; per 100 .....$2.00

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES

THE UNION SIGNAL .....$2.00 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (monthly) .....62c a year
THE YOUNG CRUSADER .....47c a year

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL Evanston, Illinois

How About That Check?

Della F. Withers, Circulation Manager

Our premium announcement, issued last fall, contained the following offer:

To the state promoters of circulation of national official papers, whose states make a 25 per cent gain in subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL between November 1, 1921, and October 31, 1922, the following premiums will be awarded at the 1922 national convention.

States having reached on November 1, 1922—

Between 100 and 500 subscriptions, $5.00.

Between 500 and 1,000 subscriptions, $10.00.

Between 1,000 and 1,500 subscriptions, $15.00.

Over 1,500 subscriptions, $20.00.

Winning states must have a gain of not less than 25 per cent over their UNION SIGNAL list of October 31, 1921.

Here we give the per cent of gain made by each state from last November to the first of this month.

	Per Cent Gain
Alabama	27
Alaska	70
Arizona	32
Arkansas	18
California (North)	14
Colorado	15
Connecticut	4
Delaware	31
District of Columbia	18
Florida	15
Georgia	23
Idaho (South)	10
Illinois	17
Indiana	20
Iowa	32
Kansas	42
Kentucky	21
Maine	20
Maryland	2
Massachusetts	8
Michigan	11
Minnesota	51
Missouri	7
Montana	19
Nebraska	27
Nevada	25
New Hampshire	20
New Jersey	3
New York	3
North Dakota	8
Ohio	12
Oklahoma	27
Oregon	15
Pennsylvania	9
Rhode Island	19
South Dakota	46
Tennessee	17
Texas	3
Utah	34
Vermont	19
Virginia	25
Washington (East)	14
Washington (West)	19
West Virginia	39
Wisconsin	29

Those having a 25 per cent, or larger, gain, need to be very watchful lest neglecting renewals, or neglecting to get new subscriptions to replace those not renewed, pull down their increase and they will not be entitled to a check this November.

With all the conventions held this October, many states can bring their gain to the 25 per cent mark.

Urge the Trio Team. Keep up the good work.

WIN A CHECK!

UNION MEMBERS MAKE GOOD MONEY

Selling JERSEY CROWN FLAVORING POWDER (Non-Alcoholic) to their neighbors and friends on our liberal consignment plan. No money down. We furnish the powder and guarantee sales. You pay us when you sell it, or return at our expense. Write at once for our "Special Business Proposition."

JERSEY CROWN VANILLA CO.,
Dept. S, Valparaiso, Indiana

Quiz: Why Continue to Work for Prohibition?

1. Show that prohibition is being enforced in various states.

2. How are the wet forces continuing their activities?

3. Why push W. C. T. U. work among women in industry?

4. What is the connection between saloons and labor temples?

5. Who are to come from England in November, to note the result of prohibition in the United States, and to attend the World's and National W. C. T. U. Conventions? From Egypt? South America? Korea? Philippine Islands?

6. Discuss the importance of continuing our work for the sake of the children.

7. State two fundamental facts in regard to prohibition which should be kept in the foreground.

8. Summarize the statements of three federal judges in regard to the observance and enforcement of law.

9. Name three important dates, and show the value of each.

10. How does your state rank in gain made in UNION SIGNAL subscriptions? Is your county on the Trio Team Honor Roll?

State Conventions

Tennessee, Springfield, September 29-October 2.

Pennsylvania, Williamsport, September 29-October 3.

Montana, Kalispell, October 1-4.

Washington (East), Spokane, October 3-6.

Maryland, Walkersville, October 4-6.

New York, Gloversville, October 5-9.

Kansas, Salina, October 10-13.

Oregon, McMinnville, October 10-13.

Missouri, St. Louis, October 10-13.

Idaho (South), October 10-13.

Delaware, Smyrna, October 11-13.

Oklahoma, Enid, October 12-16.

Nebraska, Lincoln, October 13-17.

Indiana, Wabash, October 13-16.

North Carolina, Spencer, October 14-18.

California (North), Modesto, October 16-20.

Connecticut, New London, October 17-19.

Colorado, Pueblo, October 17-19.

Massachusetts, Hyannis, October 17-19.

Alabama, Albany, October 17-19.

Illinois, Decatur, October 17-20.

Ohio, Findlay, October 17-20.

Georgia, Douglasville, October 17-20.

South Dakota, Mitchell, October 18-23.

South Carolina, Newberry, October 20-23.

Vermont, Burlington, October 24-26.

Texas, Fort Worth, October 24-27.

Iowa, Oskaloosa, October 24-27.

Mississippi, Waynesboro, Oct. 24-27.

Arkansas, Paragould, October 25-27.

Florida, Kissimmee, October 31-November 3.

New Jersey, Camden, November 9-10.

TRIO TEAM COUNTY HONOR ROLL

1. Jackson County, Iowa.
2. Grady County, Georgia.
3. Boone County, Illinois.
4. Barton County, Kansas.
5. Harper County, Kansas.
6. LaPorte County, Indiana.
7. Norfolk County, Mass.
8. Jewell County, Kansas.
9. Washington County, Kansas.
10. Ohio County, West Virginia.
11. Dukes County, Mass.
12. Dubuque County, Iowa.
13. Shawnee County, Kansas.
14. Big Stone County, } Dist.
15. Stevens County, } No. 12
16. Traverse County, } Minn.
17. Winnebago County, Wisconsin.
18. Walworth County, Wisconsin.
19. Strafford County, N. H.
20. Wayne County, Ga.
21. Dunn County, Wisconsin.
22. Faribault County, Minn. (District No. 27)
23. Winnebago County, Iowa.
24. Hamilton County, Kansas.
25. Ottawa County, Kansas.
26. Woodson County, Kansas.
27. Martin County, } Dist.
28. Watonwan County, } No.
29. Jackson County, } 3
30. Cottonwood County, } Minn.
31. Cheyenne County, Nebraska
32. Kimball County, Nebraska
33. Norton County, Kansas.
34. Clark County, Kansas.
35. Marion County, Kansas.
36. Highland County, Ohio.
37. Upshur County, W. Va.
38. Payne County, Oklahoma.
39. Stanislaus County, California.
40. Merced County, California.
41. Deuel County, South Dakota.
42. Mills County, Iowa.
43. Union County, Iowa.
44. Dakota County, } Dist.
45. Goodhue County, } No. 26
46. Rice County, } Minn.
47. Olmsted County, } Dist.
48. Dodge County, } No.
49. Steele County, } 2
50. Waseca County, } Minn.
51. Crawford County, Kansas.
52. Cass County, Iowa.
53. Polk County, } Dist.
54. Marshall County, } No.
55. Pennington County, } 14
56. Norman County, } Minn.
57. Edmunds County, South Dakota
58. Mower County } Dist. No.
59. Freeborn County } 30, Minn.
60. Bell County, Kentucky.
61. Chippewa County, Wisconsin.
62. Eau Claire County, Wisconsin.
63. Blair County, Penna.
64. Ness County, Kansas.
65. Blue Earth County, Minn. (District No. 21)
66. Dawson County, Nebraska.
67. Ellis County, Kansas.
68. Woodbury County, Iowa.
69. Kingman County, Kansas.
70. Lincoln County, Montana.
71. Bay County, Florida.
72. Glades County, Florida.
73. Highland County, Florida.
74. St. Lucie County, Florida.
75. Yamhill County, Oregon.
76. Creek County, Oklahoma.

One is inclined to ponder just what sort of "King's X-ing," finger-crossing, and mental gymnastics candidates elected on a wet platform will employ in taking an oath of office in which they solemnly promise to uphold the law. Knowing that these men will be taking an oath with certain mental reservations, how is the voter to know that these evasions of an honorable oath will be restricted anywhere?

—Christian Science Monitor.

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN

NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly — Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year in Advance

Entered as second class matter at the Postoffice at Evanston, Illinois

Vol. XLVIII — EVANSTON, ILLINOIS, OCTOBER 5, 1922 — No. 39

A TELEPHONE CAMPAIGN WOULD TELL!

The wet forces are sending out chain letters, seeking votes for officials pledged to work for the return of light wines and beer. Let us "get busy." Start a chain of telephone conversations. Call up friends and acquaintances and urge them to vote for candidates pledged to work against modification of the prohibition laws and for dry officials, they, in turn, to telephone five others, making the same request. Telephone, tell a woman!

LAW ENFORCEMENT AND SCIENTIFIC TEMPERANCE EDITION

FEDERAL LEGISLATION

A BILL IN CONGRESS

Twelve Steps From a Bill to a Law

LENNA LOWE YOST, National W. C. T. U. Legislative Representative, Washington, D. C.

Bill Originating in the House

First Step

Introduced in the House of Representatives

Member of House walks to clerk's desk at the dais, and drops bill into basket known as "the hopper," provided for this purpose, or member calls page to carry bill to basket. In the Senate a member rises in his place and formally introduces the bill, which is read by title and appropriately referred to committee, or private bills may be handed in to officer at desk.

Second Step

Referred to Its Proper House Committee

The bill Clerk numbers and records the bill, and it is automatically referred to the proper committee. As a matter of record, the Speaker refers the bill to its committee, but in actual practice this reference is made by the clerk. The bill is sent to the Government Printing Office. Printed copies are placed in the Document Room, where they may be secured.

Third Step

Favorably or Unfavorably Reported Back to the House by Committee

The bill is considered by the committee. It is customary to grant hearings to persons interested, for or against, and a stenographic record is made of the arguments submitted. After hearings, the committee sits in executive session and decides whether it will be reported in its original form, or with amendments. The chairman, or some member designated by him, reports the bill.

Fourth Step

Considered and Passed by the House

The bill reported takes its place on the calendar. Here it is on the road to be a statute. If it has been amended in committee, another lot of copies is printed, carrying the calendar number, and showing the proposed amendments. In the House debate is limited, and the "previous question" prevails. This is essential to the prompt transaction of business. The "previous question" is "Shall the main question now be put?" And it permits the House, by a majority vote, immediately to close debate on the pending bill. The time of general debate is usually fixed by agreement between the majority and minority leaders, and the agreement must be ratified by the House.

When the time is fixed in the House for a general debate upon a measure involving expense to the Government, and which has been reported from committee and taken from calendar, the House resolves itself into a Committee of the Whole, composed of all the members, 100 constituting a quorum. The advantage of considering such measures in the Committee of the Whole is to allow greater latitude or freedom of debate such as is not possible under the more stringent rules of the House.

Fifth Step

Sent to Senate

The bill being passed is certified by the Clerk of the House, who carries the certified copy to the Senate, where it is received by the presiding officer (usually the Vice-President of the United States, who is the President of the Senate, is in the chair), and referred by him to the Senate committee having jurisdiction of the subject matter.

Sixth Step

In Senate Committee

Here the bill usually follows much the same course as was taken in the House Committee. The measure is subject to amendments or it may be rewritten entirely by Senate Committee. Occasionally, when extensive hearings have been held by the House Committee, the Senate Committee dispenses with hearings.

Seventh Step

Favorably Reported to Senate from Committee

When favorably reported to the Senate by the Committee, the bill is either acted upon by unanimous consent or awaits its turn on the calendar.

Eighth Step

Considered and Passed by Senate With or Without Amendments

In the Senate, where the membership is but one-fourth that of the House, the debate is unlimited. Even the two-thirds cloture rule has been invoked but once since its adoption and that was in November, 1919, on the Versailles Treaty. "Senatorial courtesy" still prevails, and only when discussion is exhausted can a vote be taken. It is possible for a Senator opposing a bill to obtain the floor, hold it by continual debate until the hour of adjournment arrives, and thus prevent a vote being taken on the measure.

Ninth Step

Returned to House for Consideration

Having passed the Senate with or without amendments, the bill is reported back to the House, with that fact stated. If amended by Senate and the House accepts the amendments, the bill is ready for signatures, but, if the House disagrees to Senate amendments, the Senate is so informed and, if it still insists upon the amendments, the bill is sent to Conference.

Tenth Step

Referred to Conference Committee

This is a committee consisting of members appointed by the House, usually three, and the same number appointed by the Senate, for the purpose of harmonizing the differences between the two branches. This is usually done. If not, the conferees so report to their respective Houses, and one or the othe may then recede or a new conferenc may be arranged. In the event the cor ferees still are unable to agree befor the adjournment of Congress then th bill dies in conference. Under the rule of the Senate, no new matter can b added by the conferees, and no matte agreed upon by both Houses can be elim inated.

Eleventh Step

Passed Again by House and Senate a Harmonized

With both branches accepting the Con ference report, the bill is formally pass ed, signed by the Speaker of the Hous and the Vice-President, and presente by the Committee on Enrolled Bills t the President of the United States.

Twelfth Step

Signed by the President

The bill when signed by the Presiden becomes a law. The Constitution, how ever, gives the President ten days i which to sign any bill. If he withhold his signature during that period, Con gress then being in session, it become a law without it. The President may if he so desires, exercise what is know as the "pocket veto" by withholding hi signature from a measure reaching hin less than ten days before an adjourn ment of Congress. The measure ther dies automatically. If the President doe not wish the bill to become a law, h returns it to the body in which i originated, with a veto message. To pas the bill over his veto the votes of two thirds of the membership of both House and Senate are necessary.

Addenda

How a Bill May Encounter Obstacles and Fail to Pass

The committee to which a bill is re ferred may refuse to report, or "pigeon hole," it. If the committee reports favor ably, the House or Senate, as the case may be, may let it die by failing to take it off the calendar. A committee may recommend its passage to the Senate and that body may defeat it through a major ity vote or through inaction. The same thing may happen to a Senate bill reach ing the House. The bill may pass both houses, go to conference and, because of failure of conferees to harmonize any existing differences between the houses, die in conference. A bill may reach the President and be vetoed by him.

Aliens Should Be Educated to an Understanding of Prohibition

In explanation of why so many aliens are among those convicted of violating the prohibition law, Federal Prohibition Commissioner R. A. Haynes says: "It is very difficult for the alien to understand our laws because he has been reared under old institutions and customs, and a law which touches one's personal habits as does the prohibition law is beyond the comprehension of many aliens."

Many suggestions have been made by high government officials regarding the solution of the problem. The House of Representatives recently passed a bill providing for the deportation of aliens guilty of violating the prohibition law, while in California Director S. F. Rutter has adopted the plan of keeping a record of the citizenship of all persons arrested for liquor violations and classifying bootleggers in the matter of nationality.

Drive Against Physicians Issuing Illegal Prescriptions

Federal Prohibition Director James A. Stone of Wisconsin advises Commissioner Haynes that he has begun a drive against physicians who are illegally issuing prescriptions for medicinal liquor. "Mind healers" and others of that type who have no occasion to prescribe whisky as medicine have been found to hold permits and these persons will be cited for revocation of permit, Director Stone says.

Public Sentiment Increasing in Favor of Prohibition Enforcement

Regarding general conditions in South Carolina, Prohibition Director Bowen says:

"The attitude of juries in both federal and state courts is good and that of the judges is excellent. Public sentiment toward enforcement of the law is improving rapidly, which is being reflected in the attitude of the juries. Satisfactory co-operation is being secured by our agents in practically every section of the state, while every agent on my force is exceptionally good, seemingly imbued with the idea that this office is here to enforce the law and that it means business."

England Watching Prohibition in United States

At the Five-Year Meeting of Friends, in Richmond, Indiana, recently, the statement was made by John Henry Barlow, an English visitor, that England is looking to America to maintain prohibition, and that no greater disaster could come to England than that the United States should "go back on" her prohibition stand.

Austrian Land Settlement Societies Ban Alcoholic Drinks

In an article concerning land settlements in Austria, Reconstruction, which is, as its name implies, a publication for the promotion of political and economic reconstruction (in Central and Eastern Europe), and is published bi-weekly in Vienna, states that according to an agreement with the municipality the Landsettlement Societies pledge themselves to allow neither the manufacture nor the sale of alcoholic drinks within the land settlement boundary. In this way it is expected that the land settlement movement will become a strong means of combating alcoholism in Austria. Four settlements have used gifts of foodstuffs from the Friends' Relief Mission to open Non-Alcoholic Canteens for their workers, and it is reported that one of these has already made sufficient working profit to buy its own soda water apparatus, and from the drinks supplied has made a profit of 1,000,000 kronen in two months.

Prohibition Beneficial in Toronto

At the great national Canadian annual exhibition held recently in Toronto, at which 1,700,000 people paid for entrance, there was no death, no serious accident, and only one arrest for drunkenness. "It does not look as if we were suffering under our measure of prohibition," writes Mrs. Blanche Read Johnston, honorary secretary of the World's W. C. T. U., a resident of Toronto, Canada, in describing the event.

Pawtucket (R. I.) Chamber of Commerce Calls for Law Enforcement

The board of directors of the Pawtucket, Rhode Island, chamber of commerce have recently handed to the mayor and council of that city a set of resolutions which call for vigorous and rigid enforcement of the prohibition laws of the United States. Attention is directed to the state and national laws regarding prohibition, and to the fact that non-enforcement of this or any other law leads to disrespect for law in general and that "if it is permissible to break one law, many people will argue that it is permissible to break all laws."

In Some Courts Charge of Violation of Prohibition Law Almost Equivalent to Conviction

Prohibition Director J. E. Russell of Ohio feels that in view of the splendid results that have already been obtained in that state, the future may be approached with confidence. "While in a few instances some prejudice, personal interests and biased courts and jurors exist," he says, "I believe that the attitude of courts and juries toward enforcement of the prohibition law is all that could be expected in the administration of human affairs. In some courts a charge of violation of this law is almost equivalent to conviction.....My observation of the attitude of the press of Ohio toward the dry law during the past year leads me to believe that it is favorable to enforcement and we have received hearty co-operation in practically every instance."

No Laxity in Enforcement of Dry Law in Michigan

Concerning conditions in Michigan, Federal Prohibition Director James R. Davis says:

"The splendid co-operation which exists is shown in the various expressions of appreciation which I have received from numerous sheriffs and prosecuting attorneys throughout the state regarding the assistance given them by Federal agents in cleaning up their respective communities. All of these officers are aware of the attitude of Attorney-General Wiley, who, by word and action, has shown that he will countenance no laxity on the part of any official in the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment.

"The newspapers are much more favorable and are publishing all news in a straightforward fashion."

THE LAWLESSNESS OF THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC

Some people are inclined to say: "Never mind the liquor element! The question is settled, sentiment is growing in favor of prohibition, and the opposition to it will die a natural death." Of course it will die, but meanwhile it is doing all the mischief possible. A few of the tactics of those carrying on the campaign are briefly stated herewith, that our readers may be on their guard against the insidious suggestion, "Let it alone."

Subsidizing of Road Houses

Liquor interests have set for themselves the task of bringing about in the various states and municipalities the election of judges and executive officials who will be lenient with the rum-runners and the bootleggers. Their proposition is to make the enforcement of the Volstead Act as difficult as possible for the Federal prohibition agents, and at the same time create a state of disgust with the conditions and a consequent willingness on the part of the people to allow the return of light wines and beer so as to "relieve the situation." In some parts of the country it is reported by the press that there has been a definite subsidizing of road houses by means of liquor money, explicit instructions being given the pretended proprietors to run the places in a most objectionable manner, so that decent citizens will be disgusted and come to believe that to have licensed places where mild beverages containing small amounts of alcohol may be sold, is better than lawlessness.

Bribing of Public Officials

Frederic W. Wile, the newspaper correspondent, in his articles on the activities of the bootlegging combine, tells of an offer made to the Federal prohibition director of one of the largest (and wettest) states in the Union of $10.00 a case to release 250,000 cases of whisky from bonded warehouses—a single bribe of $2,500,000!

One U. S. Senator admitted that he was offered $250,000 for his "influence" in prohibition affairs. He declares, by the way, that he is quite willing to vote for a budget of three times the $9,125,000 that Prohibition Commissioner Haynes is asking for, to carry on the enforcement work for another year.

Recipes for Home Brew

A subterfuge resorted to by the bootlegger, whereby he avoids all risk and at the same time satisfies the customer who desires liquor of illegal percentage, is the sale of materials—concentrations or essences—for home preparation, accompanied by negative directions which caution the user to refrain from certain combinations or measurements lest illegal product result.

Breweries Make Real Beer

The New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs makes the definite charge that in the state "bootleggers are rampant, that officials can not or will not see that offenders are brought to justice," and that "Federal officials grow rich by defying our Constitution and laws."

Breweries whose owners state that they are in favor of keeping the law as long as it is a law, are violating it constantly, as in the case of the five large Chicago breweries. Injunctions to close these were asked for in August, on the ground that they had been making beer of illegal alcoholic content.

Concentrated Lye Fatal

The Federal enforcement officers for Massachusetts recently issued a statement concerning an alleged conspiracy to flood the illicit liquor market with "pure" grain alcohol, obtained through redistillation of rubbing alcohol, whereby poisonous ingredients were supposed to be removed, but which caused many fatalities to those buying and drinking it. Several hundred gallons were seized by the prohibition officers and analyzed, and it was then discovered that even after redistillation large quantities of concentrated lye remained in the so-called beverage.

Defiance of Law Suggested

In the introduction to the questionnaire sent out by the Missouri branch of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment to every candidate for public office in the state, this statement appears: "Let there be no quibbling on this question, no evasion, by saying, 'We believe in obeying the law.' If this attitude should always prevail, no bad law would ever be repealed." One of the questions reads: "Do you believe the individual can be made moral by law?" and another: "Do you believe every law should operate equally upon all classes of citizens?"

WHY NOT BEER FOR THE WORKINGMAN?

Cora Frances Stoddard

Because when a man asks bread we should not give him a stone. This, in principle, would be the result of again opening the flood gates of beer to the rich and the poor, the wise and the unwise, the discriminating and the undiscriminating.

What are the things which the "poor" man—and all men worth while—really want? Some one has said that the first thing a man wants is a good job, and the next thing is a better job. By placing beer in the way of the worker we tempt him to reduce his fitness for getting or holding the good paying jobs he might otherwise have.

This has been repeatedly proved by reliable experiments, and particularly by recent experiments in which weak beer —2.75 per cent by weight or 3.5 per cent by volume—was tested out on working men.

Before war prohibition went into effect, July 1, 1919, the brewers tried to show that such beer should be exempt from the prohibition law because, they claimed, no one could drink enough of it to injure himself.

They hoped to show this by means of scientific experiments. A series of experiments with "2.75 per cent beer," by weight, was carried out by Dr. Hollingworth, professor of psychology in Barnard College, Columbia University, a brief account of which was published in the Therapeutic Gazette, February, 1921.

The tests were made on:

Steadiness of the hand (holding a pointer extended in the hand in a small hole without touching the sides).

Control of combined eye and hand movements (striking a target).

Muscle work (speed of tapping).

Control of speech (naming colors).

Mental work (adding).

Logical thinking (naming words having opposite meanings from the given words).

Memorizing.

The subjects were all healthy men engaged in different kinds of work, who entered cheerfully into all the requirements of the tests.

The amounts of beer taken ranged from three to six bottles, each containing 12.5 ounces of 3.5 per cent beer (2.75 per cent by weight), making the doses of alcohol 39.42 cubic centimeters, about 1⅓ ounces, with the three bottle amounts, and 78.84 c.c. with the six bottles.

With one or two exceptions the subjects found no trouble in taking these amounts of beer during the noon hour.

The results of the tests showed in every case lower scores after the beer than before. The degree of impairment was not the same with all the subjects, but all showed some loss of some ability that would count in getting and holding jobs which they might hope to obtain as a result of their natural fitness and ability to apply themselves.

These tests of the effect of weak beer on working ability show that no true friend of the working man would want to see it again placed in his path.

Nor is it simply a matter of letting the poor man have what he may think he wants. Whether the beer were sold in a place called a saloon or by some other distributing agency, the brewers and their salesmen would see to it that all manner of temptations were placed in the drinker's way to increase his buying. Profits, not the welfare of the drinker, would be, as it always has been, the motive for pushing sales.

The "poor" working man would remain poor if the brewers could mortgage his working ability for the promoting of the brewing interests.

But this is not all. Life insurance statistics, from those of the early English life insurance companies to the latest review of the experience of American companies (Rogers, 1922), have proved that the average insured man's life is shortened by as little as two glasses of beer a day. If the brewers and their salesmen can get the workman to drink regularly this amount of beer or more a day, he will have, on the average, considerably less of life to enjoy than he could have without beer.

The worker's true interests and happiness include those of his home. If his wages are none too large for the comfortable support of his family without spending a portion of it on beer, there must be less of comfort and the essentials of good living if the brewers' profits have to come first from his pay envelope.

In view of all the evidence proving that the average man's working ability, his health, his family happiness and means of healthful recreation are all injured by beer drinking, there is only one answer to the plea for so modifying the Volstead Act as to allow the sale of beer: It should not be done.

Other arguments in favor of restoring beer, which touch the working man's interests, directly or indirectly, include the spread of home-brewing. Whether or not home-brewing is as extensive as it is reported, it represents the need of education which can be more easily effected in the absence of a legalized brewing interest advertising false claims for beer and organizing to prevent the spread of better knowledge than it could if that interest were restored to power.

It is urged by the beer advocates that if men could obtain beer they would be satisfied with that and would not patronize the spirit bootlegger. This is contrary to experience and the characteristic effect of weak alcoholic drinks. Illegal spirit selling exists where only beer or wine is legalized. This was proved in Massachusetts in 1870 when her state prohibition law was modified to let in beer. It is being verified in Belgium and other European countries where they are trying to restrict the sale of spirits witout restricting the sale of beer. Science shows the reason. The desire for the stronger alcoholic drinks results from the effects of the alcohol in the weaker drinks.

"A considerable proportion of men drink beer not because they are thirsty or like the taste particularly," explains Dr. R. Cabot, of Boston, in giving the reason why men get drunk on beer, "but because they want to produce a certain sense of exhilaration and forgetfulness. This being so, they will go on drinking beer until they attain the desired result."

The same desired result leads to substituting whisky for beer when the effect craved is not obtained easily enough from the weaker drink.

Beer and wine create the urge that leads to whisky and rum.

The truth is that the time has come for the real patriots of this land to set an example, no less by the exercise of self-restraint than by the display of good citizenship. The problem now immediately presented to the American people is really that of the possible continuance of self-government.

—Federal Judge B. F. Bledsoe.

IS ALCOHOL A STIMULANT?

C. W. Saleeby, M. D. and F. R. D., Edinburgh

The unanimous verdict of all authorities defines alcohol from first to last as a pure narcotic, the direct opposite of a stimulant. From the slightest trace of any action until it lays its victim out "dead drunk" it does nothing but paralyze. The most expert and impartial committee that has ever studied the subject reported to this effect in 1917—the members including such men as Sir Charles Sherrington, President of the Royal Society, and Dr A. R. Cushny, Professor of Materia Medica in the University of Edinburgh.

But everybody has seen the boisterous condition of an alcoholic man, or has seen a person aroused from fainting after swallowing spirits; how, then, can men of science call alcohol a pure narcotic?

The answer is that we all live under self-control of mind and body, technically called Inhibition. Without it we should exhaust our reserves and die, like a runaway horse on a mountain road, or swine rushing over a "steep place" into the sea. Alcohol paralyzes self-control, the highest thing in us. This applies to behavior, such as control of speech, of temper, of sex instinct, and so on; and to the body, as in the case of the heart, which normally runs under the control of a pair of nerves, and the rate of which doubles when they are cut or paralyzed—with exhaustion and death looming near.

Any solitary drinker shows the pure narcotic action of alcohol. He simply becomes fuddled, slow, stupid, sleepy, unconscious. Alcohol is often mixed with chloroform and ether (A. C. E. mixture) as in anaesthetic surgery. All three drugs act in the same way. The patient is violent at first—his inhibition is paralyzed, "the first to go," and soon he is unconscious.

True stimulants, some of which are, of course, used in acute alcohol poisoning to combat the paralysis, are coffee and tea; hot water, cold water, sunlight, moving air; and, best of all, for certain and rapid action on heart and breathing, ammonia, as in the form of smelling salts.

Alcohol dulls feelings of effort and fatigue and makes us feel stimulated; but when our work is tested with and without, it is always found to be slower and less accurate with alcohol, though we thought the reverse.

Proverbs called it a "mocker" thousands of years ago; that is the last word of science about it today.

WHAT IS THE SOURCE OF THE PROPAGANDA FOR LIGHT WINES AND BEER?

Margaret B. Platt

"I know of no way of judging the future but by the past."

—Patrick Henry

Not even the most obtuse reader of the secular press can be oblivious to the fact that a tremendous propaganda for the return of wine and beer is being spread broadcast by the wets of this country, aided and abetted by those in foreign lands who might also hope to profit thereby. This effort has been going on for many months, and by the insidious character of its weapons and methods of attack is calculated to deceive even the very elect. "To get the Volstead Act out of the law and keep it out, and to work .....for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment" is the avowed purpose of those who are back of this propaganda. When we remember that forty-six of our sovereign states have ratified this amendment and that at the time when national prohibition became effective thirty-three states had by popular vote, or legislative enactment, outlawed the liquor traffic root and branch, it may be well to inquire whence comes this mighty and enveloping "gas" attack. What is its source? What would be the spoils of conquest if, having routed the defenders of Home Protection, the cohorts of the brewery and winery resumed sway, and under protection of the law were at liberty to enlist every son and daughter of our homes under the banner of Gambrinus and Bacchus and could snap their fingers in the faces of protesting, home-loving mothers and fathers?

There are times when, in the study of questions of vast national import, it is well to consult history. On September 19, 1918, there was introduced in the United States Senate, "Senate resolution 307", relating certain charges made against the United States Brewers' Association and allied brewing companies and interests. The resolution was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and a sub-committee appointed to consider the charges and report to the Senate. For months this committee carried on its work, and on September 5, 1919, submitted to the Senate the following report:

"With regard to the conduct and activities of the brewing and liquor interests, the committee is of the opinion that the record clearly establishes the following facts:

"(a) That they have furnished large sums of money for the purpose of secretly controlling newspapers and periodicals.

"(b) That they have undertaken to and have frequently succeeded in controlling primaries, elections, and political organizations.

"(c) That they have contributed enormous sums of money to political campaigns in violation of the Federal statutes and the statutes of several of the states.

"(d) That they have exacted pledges from candidates for public office prior to the election.

"(e) That for the purpose of influencing public opinion they have attempted and partly succeeded in subsidizing the public press.

"(f) That to suppress and coerce persons hostile to and to compel support for them they have resorted to an extensive system of boycotting unfriendly American manufacturing and mercantile concerns.

"Don't parcel out your patriot's work
For other folks to do.
Just do your little bit yourself;
Begin—and 'put it through.'"

"(g) That they have created their own political organization in many states and in smaller political units for the purpose of carrying into effect their own political will, and have financed the same with large contributions and assessments.

"(h) That with a view to using it for their own political purposes they contributed large sums of money to the German-American Alliance, many of the members of which were disloyal and unpatriotic.

"(i) That they organized clubs, leagues, and corporations of various kinds for the purpose of secretly carrying on their political activities without having their interest known to the public.

"(j) That they improperly treated the funds expended for political purposes as a proper expenditure for their business and consequently failed to return the same for taxation under the revenue laws of the United States.

"(k) That they undertook through a cunningly conceived plan of advertising and subsidization to control and dominate the foreign-language press of the United States.

"(l) That they have subsidized authors of recognized standing in literary circles to write articles of their selection for many standard periodicals.

"(m) That for many years a working agreement existed between the brewing and distilling interests of the country by the terms of which the brewing interests contributed two-thirds and the distilling interests one-third of the political expenditures made by the joint interests."

Reading this revelation concerning the character and activities of the brewery and liquor interests embodied in the report submitted by the committee appointed by the United States Senate, do we need to question further the source of the insidious and misleading propaganda spread before the people today by large portions of the public press? Does the appeal for the return of beer and wine come from the religious citizenry of our country? Does it come from the great organizations of women representing the highest type of motherhood and of women engaged in patriotic, social or religious service? Does it come from our great educational bodies? From college faculties, student bodies, manufacturers, farmers' organizations, Chambers of Commerce, Rotary clubs, Kiwanis clubs, or the representative bodies of the leading secret orders? It does not! It comes from none of these. It comes from the liquor traffic of the country, a vicious, unpatriotic, un-American, un-Christian combine that has been already convicted of high crimes and misdemeanors, and against which sentence of death has been pronounced by the American people. The fact that in the face of the continuous record of its business of so monstrous a nature, and its treachery to the best and highest interests of its country, the unholy cabal dares to come again before the American people, in the determination to again fasten itself upon the body politic, and, parasite that it is, fatten upon the destruction of homes and the debauchery of men and women, is not only an exhibition of most colossal impudence but sufficient evidence that country, home and all that we hold dear will never be safe from its deadly power until its extermination is complete.

The results of the November elections should prove to the A. A. P. A. and their ilk at home and abroad, whatever branch of the liquor interests they represent, that the people of the United States know their character, are familiar with their history, are perfectly cognizant of their purpose, and are fully determined that they shall not pass.

Voter, carry in mind the report upon the conduct and activities of the brewing and liquor interests during the world war. Remember that those interests have not changed in character or purpose, and vote for the protection of your country, your home, and your own highest and holiest interests. Every vote cast at the coming election for candidates friendly to the beer and wine interests will be an added encouragement to the enemies of prohibition to go on trampling the law under foot and inciting others to similar disobedient and unpatriotic deeds. Let the rebuke administered at the ballot box to those who seek to nullify the law and the Constitution be of such a character as to demonstrate to the world that the American people knew what they were doing when they wrote the Eighteenth Amendment into our Constitution and that it is there to stay and to be OBEYED! Let us once more make ourselves understood at the ballot box!

Lawlessness the Outstanding Characteristic of the Liquor Traffic

"Licensed or unlicensed, legal or illegal, the liquor business in this country has always been lawless and always will be until it is exterminated forever," said Bishop Thomas Nicholson of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in a recent address. "It is outlawed today chiefly because it never obeyed regulations about selling to minors, intoxicated persons and habitual drunkards. It never observed closing hours when it could profitably disregard them. It obeyed only when it was forced to obey, and it is a matter of common knowledge that in many places it did not hesitate to corrupt whatever public officials it could reach when it might thereby disobey with reasonable impunity. Men of that character, however loudly they claim respectability, have no standing as pleaders for privilege. It is the duty of every right-minded citizen to do all that he can to forever eradicate this persistent law-breaking business and there is nothing more ridiculous and wicked than its plea that it should be restored because it proposes to so persistently defy the law that the will of the people thus registered against it can never be enforced. If there is one thing above another which is the duty of American citizenship at this hour it is the strongest law enforcement. Every citizen should do his part toward the creation of a public sentiment which will make utterly disreputable the bootlegger, however loudly he claim respectability, who disregards the law of the land against the liquor traffic."

"LISTEN IN" TO THE TESTIMONY FROM THE RURAL DISTRICTS AS TO THE ADVANTAGES OF NATIONAL PROHIBITION

STATE GRANGE MASTERS HEARTILY ENDORSE DRY LAW

In an attempt to get an idea of the attitude toward national prohibition of the people who live in the rural and farming sections of the country, THE UNION SIGNAL sent the following questionnaire to the masters of various state granges:

1. Do the majority of the people of the farming districts of your state approve of the national prohibition law?
2. Has prohibition proven beneficial to the people on the farms and in the country towns?
3. Would a majority of the farmers vote for the present prohibition law, if it were submitted to them?
4. Do you personally consider prohibition worth while as a promoter of the general health, prosperity and moral welfare of the people?

Giving an unqualified "Yes" in answer to all four questions, B. John Black adds: "In the past ten years that I have been master of the Maryland state grange, an organization of farmers in this state, representing five thousand farm folks, in our meetings during that period our members have voted almost unanimously for a bone-dry nation. IT IS THE CITIES AND PRACTICAL POLITICIANS THAT MAKE MARYLAND WET."

The following state grange masters answered all questions in the affirmative: John A. McSparran of Pennsylvania; O. L. Martin of Vermont; D. H. Agans of New Jersey; George Bischel of Nebraska; R. W. Roberts of Minnesota; E. H. Gilbert of Massachusetts; A. B. Judson of Iowa; and Jesse Newson (by Mrs. Newson) of Indiana.

"Idaho state grange is on record as favoring prohibition law enforcement," says W. W. Deal, state master. In his opinion prohibition has "most assuredly" proven beneficial to the people on the farms and in the country towns; they approve of it, and would vote for the prohibition of all alcoholic liquors, including beer and wine, if the question were submitted to them. He personally considers prohibition worth while from the viewpoints of economics, health and moral welfare.

"The grange in this state was one of the greatest rural influences that aided in the temperance fights," says Harry A. Caton, master of the Ohio state grange. He believes that the majority of the people of the farming districts of Ohio approve of national prohibition, and he declares they would vote for the present law if it were submitted to them. Results have been beneficial and the general health, prosperity and moral welfare promoted.

"As one who voted for prohibition in Kansas in 1880, and has voted for it in California at every opportunity for the last thirty-six years," George R. Harrison, master of the California state grange, considers prohibition very much worth while. He thinks that the people of the farming districts approve of the dry law, that conditions are better than they were, and that a great majority of the farmers would vote for prohibition, if it were to be submitted to them.

"I feel that I can very safely answer 'yes' to all four questions in your letter," says Albert Manning, master of the New York state grange.

Ninety-five per cent of the farmers of the state of Washington approve of national prohibition, and would vote for the present law if it were submitted to them, in the opinion of A. S. Goss, master of the state grange. Prohibition has proven very beneficial to the people of the farms and in the country towns, and very much worth while as a promoter of the general health, prosperity and moral welfare of the people. Mr. Goss considers lax enforcement a menace, but "can't blame prohibition for the failure of officials to perform their duties."

J. H. Hutchinson, master of the South Dakota state grange, points out the difficulty of exactly interpreting the opinions of the rural people on the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment because "there is a certain element that seems to glory in breaking the law and in making it unpopular. However," he continues, "I feel confident that a majority are in favor of the national prohibition law. Of course I think prohibition has been beneficial to the farmers, and while there is still a great deal of drinking, it is not so open and frequent. I think a majority of the farmers would vote in favor of the present law. I certainly believe in a strong prohibitory law. In my opinion there are no arguments whatever for liquor in any form. There should be a more rigid enforcement of the law with a severe penalty for its violation."

"There is nothing the matter with the prohibition law," according to E. A. Eckert, master of the Illinois state grange, "but the officers are not doing their duty in enforcing it." He expresses his conviction that the majority of the people of the farming districts of Illinois approve of national prohibition, and is positive that a majority of the farmers would vote in favor of the present law, should the question be submitted. Prohibition has proven beneficial, and he "most certainly" considers it worth while as a promoter of the general health, prosperity and moral welfare of the people.

"Decidedly so," says Thomas D. Urmston, master of the Kentucky state grange, answering the question as to whether prohibition has proven beneficial to the people on the farms and in the country villages and towns, and adds that a large majority of his acquaintances strongly favor it. He is certain that those in the farming districts of the state favor the dry law and would vote to retain it, were the question submitted to them, and believes that from the point of view of health, moral welfare and general prosperity, prohibition is worth while.

The situation in Wisconsin is complicated by the fact that a large number of ex-brewers live there, and for this reason Herman Ihde, master of the state grange, is inclined to feel that the majority of the people might not vote for the present prohibition law, were it submitted to them. Owing also to the flow of moonshine at the present time through the rural districts, "the people are disposed to go back to light wines and beer, but not the saloon," if this could be brought about. But even handicapped as it has been, "prohibition has proven beneficial to rural communities." Mr. Ihde says, "I do consider prohibition worth while as a promoter of health, prosperity and moral welfare. I see much good in it."

"Prohibition is always supported by the farmers," says A. E. Geer, master of the Oklahoma state grange. He thinks they would vote for the present law, should it ever be submitted to them. He considers that prohibition has proven beneficial, and worth while as a promoter of the general health, prosperity and moral welfare of the people.

Considerable enthusiasm is evinced by W. J. Thompson, master of the Maine state grange. Taking the questions in their order, he replies:

1. Yes, very strongly.
2. Yes, without a question.
3. Yes, with a larger majority than ever.
4. We like it very much, for every reason.

"The National Grange," he says, "and especially the Maine state grange, has always stood strongly for prohibition. They have no reason to change their attitude."

By a very large majority, the people of the farming districts of Michigan approve of the national prohibition law, the master of the state grange, A. B. Cook, believes. The results have been very beneficial and should the question ever be submitted to the farmers they would vote for the present law. To the question, "Do you personally consider prohibition worth while as a promoter of the general health, prosperity and moral welfare of the people?" Mr. Cook answers: "I do, enthusiastically."

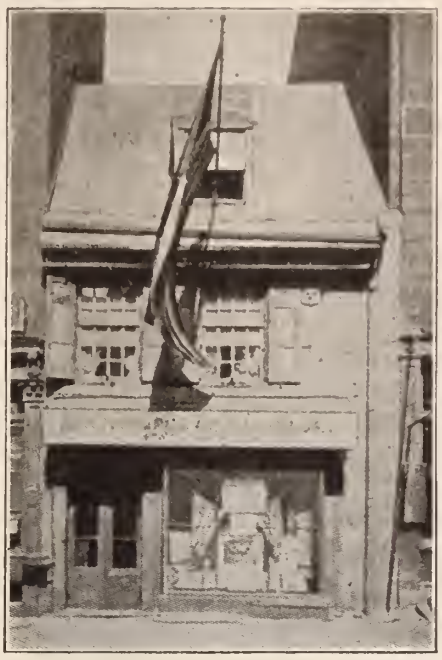
"We have in Connecticut a great many foreign-born farmers who have always been in the habit of using liquor in some form, and do not understand why they cannot continue," says Allen B. Cook, master of the state grange. "A good many of these, not being able to get it in the ordinary way, have resorted to making their own. These people, of course, do not approve of national prohibition, but the so-called better class, even though some of them are users of liquor to a greater or less degree, approve, I believe, of the policy. Prohibition has proven beneficial beyond a doubt. As to whether a majority of the farmers would vote for the present prohibition law, if it were submitted to them, I have to base my answer largely on the attitude of the members of the grange, who, I think, would vote overwhelmingly in favor of the present law. Some of the foreign element would also vote that way, and a good many of the others are not voters. I believe, everything considered, that the rural vote in Connecticut would show a large majority in favor of the present law."

B. Needham, master of the Kansas state grange, is greatly dissatisfied with the Literary Digest poll, which he does not consider a true reflection of popular sentiment in Kansas. He answers in the affirmative questions 1, 2, and 3, and believes that prohibition is decidedly worth while "because of the better social and moral environment it brings to a community, and the better economic opportunities it affords to those who would be debauched by any restrictions short of absolute prohibition."

HISTORIC ATTRACTIONS OF CONVENTION CITY

BIRTHPLACE OF "OLD GLORY"—GRAVES OF BENJAMIN FRANKLIN AND OF DR. BENJAMIN RUSH

One of the historic places in the Convention City—Philadelphia—that all delegates and visitors will desire to visit is the birthplace of "Old Glory," a tiny house on Arch Street where lived Betsy Ross, who was employed by General Washington in May, 1776, to make the sample flag, with thirteen stripes and thirteen stars, which was adopted as our national flag by resolution of Congress, June 14, 1777. Betsy Ross was from her young womanhood an expert needlewoman, and had a great reputation for her work in embroidering and darning. She married young and like most of her girl friends saw her husband march off to war, where he suffered serious injury, from the effects of which he died. As a widow she returned to her trade to support herself. One day General Washington came into her place and asked her to embroider the ruffles on his shirts. Later, because of her excellent work, he secured her aid in making a new flag evidencing the growing spirit of Americanism. He showed her a rough sketch of a square flag with thirteen stripes of red and white and thirteen stars in the blue field, and from that suggestion she made "Old Glory." For more than fifty years she was employed to make government flags, her daughters, nieces, and later, her granddaughters helping her.



Home of Betsy Ross

The Grave of Dr. Benjamin Rush

Dr. Benjamin Rush has the distinction of being the first physician to publish a warning note in regard to the danger from the use of alcohol. His famous "essay" directed against alcoholic beverages had wide circulation. In 1886 through the efforts of a philanthropic resident of Philadelphia, Edward S. Morris, a white marble tablet was placed at the grave of Dr. Benjamin Rush. When the National W. C. T. U. held its convention in Philadelphia, in 1885, at the suggestion of Frances Willard an oak tree was planted beside the grave of Dr. Rush. This grave is in the churchyard of Christ Church. This edifice stands on the site of the original church, which was built of wood in 1695. The present building was completed in part in 1731, when a chime of eight bells was installed. George Washington, Benjamin Franklin and other distinguished men of their time attended services in this church. Benjamin Franklin's grave is in the Christ Church Burial Ground, corner of Fifth and Arch Streets. A section of the old brick wall has been removed and the visitor may look through the railings upon the graves of the great philosopher and Deborah, his wife, and their children.

W. C. T. U. CONTINGENT FROM BRITISH POSSESSIONS, AUSTRALIA, NEW ZEALAND, SOUTH AFRICA, EGYPT AND HOLY LAND AND INDIA AND BURMA, CEYLON AND MALAYA AN INTERESTING COMPANY.

Mrs. S. M. Zwemer from Egypt

The daughter countries of Great Britain, far removed from the center of the British Empire, are perhaps more alive on the prohibition question than is the parent country. W. C. T. U. workers from Australia, New Zealand, South and North Africa, the Holy Land, India, Burma, Ceylon and Malaya are en route to America to attend the World's Convention, and plan to give serious study to the operations of our prohibitory law.

From Australia are expected two of the officers of the national W. C. T. U. of Australasia, which includes Australia and the adjacent islands. They are Mrs. John McLeod, president, from Kew, Victoria; and Mrs. W. H. Carvosso, national corresponding secretary, of Brisbane, Queensland, who is also the World's superintendent of Exhibits. With them will come Miss Edith M. Bailey of Toowong, Queensland, national general secretary of the L. T. L., and Miss Adie Robertson of Victoria, who has rendered service in the children's work. There is to be a nation-wide poll on prohibition in Australia in 1923, and the workers in the W. C. T. U. are expecting to prime themselves for their big task while in the land where prohibition has been tried and not found wanting. They are leaving ample space in their trunks and other luggage to take back first hand arguments and facts to help them win their battles.

From the Land of the Pyramids

One of the questions the residents of Egypt are now propounding to that traditional repository of wisdom, the Sphinx, is, "Will Egypt ever have prohibition?" A goodly proportion of the population interpret the reply as in the affirmative and are working to make it a fact. The land of the Pyramids will be represented by Mrs. S. M. Zwemer, now in America on a furlough. Mrs. Zwemer is the wife of the noted writer on Mohammedism and a fearless worker among Moslems.

Syria, it is hoped, will have as its representative Mrs. Charles Perrine of the American University at Beirut, Turkey.

The report from South Africa will be given by Mrs. Deborah Knox Livingston, who has just returned from a three months' tour of that interesting country, having been called there by invitation of the temperance forces.

New Zealand Now in Campaign

Because of the very lively campaign for national prohibition now in progress in New Zealand, the delegation from that country will be small, only one woman. Were it not that all the workers are needed at home at this critical moment, the vote to be taken in December, more would come. It will be recalled that New Zealand in 1919 voted on national prohibition but was so handicapped by the provisions of the law under which the vote was taken, that although the poll showed a majority for prohibition, it did not meet the requirements of a majority of all votes cast, etc. Miss Jean Begg, former president of the "Y" of Dunedin, New Zealand, will represent the very strong and active W. C. T. U. of that country and tell the dramatic and heroic story of the campaigns.

Mrs. W. H. Carvosso, National Corresponding Secretary of the W. C. T. U. of Australasia

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union
Evanston, Illinois

Editor-in-Chief - - - Miss Anna A. Gordon
Managing Editor - - Miss Julia F. Deane
Associate Editor - - Miss Vida I. Thompson

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors of The Editorial Department, The Union Signal, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittance of $1.50 or under.

Notice of Expiration is sent to the subscriber two or three weeks before renewal is due, so that by immediate attention to this reminder not an issue need be missed. RENEW PROMPTLY.

Remittances should be made by draft on New York or Chicago, or by Post-office Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

Change of Address. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE, $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
Foreign Postage, 52 Cents Additional

Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (Monthly) 50c a Year
Foreign Postage, 12 Cents Additional

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., post-office as second class matter. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized August 20, 1918.

Evanston, Illinois, October 5, 1922

RESOLUTION

SUGGESTED FOR ADOPTION BY CHURCHES AND OTHER INFLUENTIAL ORGANIZATIONS

W. C. T. U. speakers are urgently requested to secure from all meetings which they address the adoption of this resolution:

RESOLVED: That we declare against any modification of the Volstead Code which would admit wine or beer or otherwise weaken enforcement, and will do all in our power to insure the election November 7, 1922, of members of the United States Congress and state legislatures who will work and vote for the retention and enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Code.

(Through your local papers give wide-spread publicity to the resolutions thus secured.)

Why Not a Telephone Campaign?

One of the new things in politics is the telephone campaign. Those who know declare that some of the most remarkable victories for good government in the recent primaries were won over the telephone by the women who mapped out their program, scrutinized carefully the record of all candidates, and then went through the telephone book alphabetically, calling up every woman and talking to her about the candidate and issues involved; calling her up again to remind her to register, and calling her a third time to see that she failed not to go to the polls to cast her ballot for the man or woman who stood for the best interests of the home and the family.

Why not inaugurate a telephone campaign in your community? Card catalogue the women of your city, and parcel them out among the members of your union. Then get the telephones of the city into action for God and Home and Every Land, to help you arouse and convict the women of their responsibility to vote and get others to vote for Congressmen, state legislators and other officials who stand foursquare for national prohibition.

The Farmer Rises To Say—

Some weeks ago at a "get-together" meeting of the masters of thirty-three state granges a resolution unanimously in favor of national prohibition was passed. Far too little notice of this significant action by leaders in rural life was taken by the press and the big pro-liquor metropolitan papers virtually ignored it. To learn definitely the sentiments of the farmers and residents of rural districts as to the value of prohibition and its continuance and enforcement, we sent a letter in the form of a questionnaire to these masters of state granges. The answers (in substance) of a majority of them appear on page six, showing very definitely their endorsement of prohibition as a highly beneficial policy and their belief that if the question of continuance of the present prohibition law were submitted to the farmers and residents of the country districts, it would receive a big majority vote.

These testimonies should be reprinted in the country papers all over the United States. Every publicity director of a local union should see that they are given a wide publication.

Beg Pardon, Secretary Davis!

It is dangerous for a layman to attempt to deal with scientific questions. He is liable to find himself in deep water. Physicians and scientists are quietly laughing at the reported defense of beer for working men by Secretary Davis of the Labor Department.

"I have no doubt the secretary of the Labor Department is a very fine gentleman, and a great secretary of labor, and perhaps at one time, was something of a puddler," remarks Dr. W. A. Evans, former health commissioner for Chicago, writing in his health column in the Chicago Tribune, "but what he does not know about physiology and hygiene is enough and then some."

"God made water for man to drink and man was built on the basis of water as his beverage, and not even a member of the President's Cabinet can improve on God and God's works. Water can get into stomachs and stay there with satisfaction to all concerned where beer finds the 'no admittance' sign.

"Occasionally one finds an old souse whose stomach will stand beer better than water, but such don't live long. It's dollars to doughnuts that the honorable secretary's sousy old pal has been on the under side of a tombstone a long time."

And then Dr. Evans, prominent physician and health authority, delivers his soul of further information as to the effect of beer on the human system, saying:

"A man handling molten iron in any sort of a foundry labors in a hot atmosphere and sweats a lot. Now let us see what the physiology is. He pours out sweat because the heat of the air dilates the small blood vessels of his skin. The evaporation of the sweat holds his body temperature near 98, in spite of the heat of the air. To supply the sweat, he needs water and a little salt. Since he is in the air that is hotter than he is, he needs no fuel to keep up body heat. Furthermore his comfort demands that his heat registering apparatus in his skin and in his central nervous system be shielded as much as possible. Since he must pass a large quantity of fluid through his stomach the fluid must not irritate the stomach by being hot or cold or otherwise irritating. Water that is neither hot nor very cold just exactly fills these indications. .....

What does beer do? It increases thirst. The fellow who drinks a growler full will want another growler full in a short while. The alcohol sends blood to the skin and heat centers, and increases the feeling of heat.....When a man working in a hot place drinks beer to assuage a beer-induced thirst, he will drink it by the bucket. When beer is drunk by the bucket, the drinker takes a big dose of alcohol and, incidentally, he fills himself up with fermentable food which he does not need, and which definitely harms him."

Dr. Evans asks the Secretary of Labor to remember that "Most of the old-time sunstrokes were beer strokes. This was true in your old craft, Mr. Secretary. Don't wish heat stroke and sun stroke back on your old comrades. If you don't believe me, go to Secretary Hoover, and ask him what the statistics in his department have to say on the subject."

With all due respect to Secretary Davis, we hardly think his utterance on the desirability of beer-drinking worthy of the serious consideration of intelligent people, since it is contrary to the well known facts of science.

Your Opportunity

The W. C. T. U. as a body educated and agitated for prohibition through past years. Its members also legislated, at first indirectly, by using their influence against the legalized liquor traffic. Since gaining the ballot they are able to legislate more directly and thus more effectively, and it may be that in their anxiety to do their full duty along this line, there is some danger of their losing sight of the continued need for education. In all the reforms of the world's history, there has first been a steady growth of opinion, followed by the desired legislation, but the sentiment for the legislation did not cease. We now have prohibition, but if the educative training is not continued it will only be a matter of time until prohibition is repealed.

Because of the importance of this phase of the work you are doubtless in close touch with the schools of your community, and since the beginning of the fall term, have probably planned for, perhaps held, a reception for the teachers. Have you also planned for some informal gatherings, or group meetings, for the teachers of certain allied grades, the object being the discussion of plans for co-operation in the promotion of sentiment for Christian citizenship, law observance, and prohibition, in school and town?

If you have not yet made your plans, why not take up the matter at your next union meeting? Then, too, instruct your literature committee to recommend that

(Continued on Page Nine)

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA, NOVEMBER 11-16, 1922

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA, NOVEMBER 17-19, 1922.

TEMPERANCE, OR FRANCES E. WILLARD DAY, IN THE SCHOOLS

Elizabeth O. Middleton, National Director Scientific Temperance Instruction

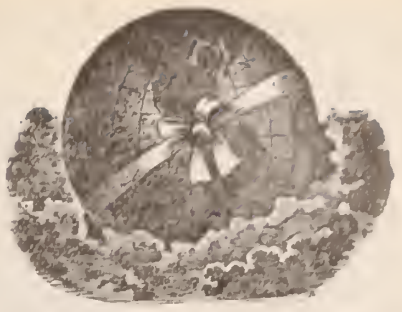
Twenty states require the observance of a Temperance or Frances E. Willard Day in the public schools. Some of the states designate the date as September 28. The program, prepared and sent out by Missouri's state superintendent of schools, Sam A. Baker, contains the following tribute to Frances E. Willard:

"The character and achievements of this intellectual, industrious, consecrated woman, who gave her life to the service of mankind, are an inspiration to all the pupils of our schools. We need great, clean, worthy specimens of humanity for the guidance of the boys and girls who are to form the civilization of our nation's tomorrow. How good and effective it is to have a model to follow who is not a strange freak of unusual characteristics, a being who reached her eminence by peculiar and seldom trodden paths. In Miss Willard we have a person who grew naturally and steadily and truly into a remarkable personage through the different stages of real life that can be experienced by any willing and determined American. Miss Willard was ever an honest worker who did not constantly wait or worry because some one did not come to lighten her burdens or perform her tasks. She lived in the joys of useful activity, which gave her the thrill of spiritual rectitude and soul health. In whatever environment she happened to be thrown, there was her opportunity to show her skill and helpfulness. No matter what obstructions fell across the highway she decided to travel, her energy, good will, noble determination, and clear-minded ambition lifted her over all retarding influences, and she moved forward to the grandeur of her achievements. The difficulties she encountered, the sorrows she experienced, and the almost impossible tasks she accomplished, gave her such supreme control and balanced development that she became the master of the great problems that fell to her lot for solution."

The program issued by the Scientific Temperance Instruction department of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union contains a pageant designed for use in the public schools or for a public meeting, to create temperance sentiment in the community. This program aims to show the value of temperance teaching in the public schools, to create respect for prohibition and law enforcement, illustrates what total abstinence will mean to our nation, and gives the children's opinion of beer, wine, cider and home-brew as compared with bread, grapes or raisins, apples, and milk. For Temperance Day programs, write to the National W. C. T. U. Publishing House, Evanston, Illinois. Single copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 45 cents; per hundred, $3.00; per thousand, $25.00.

States Having a Temperance or Frances E. Willard Day in Schools:

Alabama, Tennessee, Kansas, New Mexico, Kentucky, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Maine, Mississippi, Oregon, North Dakota, Missouri, South Dakota, South Carolina, Nevada, Nebraska, Ohio, North Carolina, Minnesota and Georgia.



For God and Home and Every Land

Time of Prayer—Noontide

"It is always noontide somewhere,
And across the awakening continents,
From shore to shore, somewhere,
Our prayers are rising evermore."

And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free—John 8:32.

Thou must be true thyself
If thou the truth wouldst teach;
Thy soul must overflow if thou
Another's soul wouldst reach;
It needs the overflow of heart
To give the life full speech.

Think truly, and thy thoughts
Shall the world's famine feed;
Speak truly, and each word of thine
Shall be a faithful seed;
Live truly, and thy life shall be
A great and noble creed.

—Bonar

Your Opportunity

(Continued from Page Eight)

books, leaflets and other materials obtainable from the W. C. T. U. Publishing House, be presented to the school heads as helps. And do not forget THE UNION SIGNAL. If your treasury is too low to do more, at least see that one copy is placed on each reading table in the schools and the students required to refer to it for information on prohibition and correlated subjects.

Of course your teachers have all received invitations, written, telephoned, and verbal, to join the W. C. T. U. If you have a business woman's group, meeting in the evening, the teachers will be able to attend a part of the time. If not, membership in the regular group gives them a hold in your hearts and your work and a hold in theirs which cannot otherwise be had and which will mean much in the building of the young lives intrusted to their care during the coming months. It might be wise for them to be presented by the union with such memberships.

White Ribboners Nominated as Law Makers

Among the candidates for state legislators nominated at the primaries in the different commonwealths were quite a few women prominent in the W. C. T. U. Among them are Mrs. Abbie B. Hillerman, honorary president of the Oklahoma W. C. T. U., Mrs. Lilah D. Lindsey, state superintendent of Citizenship for Oklahoma W. C. T. U., Mrs. Culla J. Vayhinger, national director of Americanization, from Indiana, and Mrs. Lila Mattison, state lecturer and organizer for the Wisconsin W. C. T. U.

Mrs. Maggie Smith Hathaway, who has served several terms in the Montana state legislature, has been nominated as a member of Congress from her district. From youth Mrs. Hathaway has been an ardent W. C. T. U. worker. While in the legislature she represented most ably and courageously the principles and purposes of the organization.

In the new edition of "Who's Who?" recently issued, over eighty citizens of North Dakota are listed, and among them is only one woman, Mrs. Elizabeth Preston Anderson, recording secretary of the National W. C. T. U., "a temperance worker."

State Conventions

New York, Gloversville, October 5-9.
Kansas, Salina, October 10-13.
Oregon, McMinnville, October 10-13.
Missouri, St. Louis, October 10-13.
Idaho (South), October 10-13.
Delaware, Smyrna, October 11-13.
Oklahoma, Enid, October 12-16.
Nebraska, Lincoln, October 13-17.
Indiana, Wabash, October 13-16.
North Carolina, Spencer, October 14-18.
California (North), Modesto, October 16-20.
Connecticut, New London, October 17-19.
Colorado, Pueblo, October 17-19.
Massachusetts, Hyannis, October 17-19.
Alabama, Albany, October 17-19.
Illinois, Decatur, October 17-20.
Ohio, Findlay, October 17-20.
Georgia, Douglasville, October 17-20.
South Dakota, Mitchell, October 18-23.
South Carolina, Newberry, October 20-23.
Vermont, Burlington, October 24-26.
Texas, Fort Worth, October 24-27.
Iowa, Oskaloosa, October 24-27.
Mississippi, Waynesboro, Oct. 24-27.
Arkansas, Paragould, October 25-27.
Florida, Kissimmee, October 31-November 3.
New Jersey, Camden, November 9-10.

Make Temperance Sunday, October 29, a Great Day

Order Programs, Blackboard Exercises, Temperance Talks, Leaflets for Study and Distribution, Pledge Cards, etc., etc., of the National W. C. T. U. Publishing House, Evanston, Illinois. See pages 12 and 14.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. HEADQUARTERS

GENERAL OFFICERS:
PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL.
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, FARGO, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA.
TREASURER
MRS. MARGARET C. MUNNS, EVANSTON, ILL.

1730 Chicago Avenue, Evanston, Ill

REST COTTAGE

RED LETTER DAYS

October 29—World's Temperance Sunday.
December 23—Crusade and Pioneers' Day.

TRANSPORTATION NOTES

WORLD'S AND NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTIONS, NOVEMBER, 1922

Tour No. 1. For those who wish to spend Saturday, November 11, in Washington, D. C., and who do not plan to go to Toronto.

A train on the Pennsylvania Railway will leave the Union Station, Chicago, Friday, November 10, at 10:30 a. m., arriving in Washington at 8:00 a. m. The day will be spent sightseeing, and the trip to Philadelphia will be resumed at 4:30 p. m., arriving in the convention city at 7:30 p. m. The return trip can be made at the delegates' pleasure as no special arrangements will be made by the transportation committee. Apply for reservations to W. E. Blachley, Division Passenger Agent, Pennsylvania Railway, 323 South Wells Street, Chicago.

Tour No. 2. For those who wish to attend the World League against Alcoholism meeting in Toronto, Canada, November 25-29.

A train on the New York Central will carry special cars for delegates leaving Chicago, Friday, November 10, at 5:00 p. m., connecting at Buffalo with the Lehigh Valley road. No change of cars will be necessary. Arrival at Philadelphia will be at 8:08 p. m. Apply for reservations to Mr. C. Hartigan, Ass't. Gen. Pass. Agt., New York Central Railroad, La Salle Street Station, Chicago.

Tickets on the going trip will be available on the Pacific Coast November 7 to 13 and in all other parts of the country and Canada, November 8 to 14. By either route, the one way fare, Chicago to Philadelphia, is $29.46. The return trip will be one-half of the regular fare. The Pullman fares are as follows from Chicago, either route; Lower berth, $8.25; upper, $6.60; drawing room, $30.00; compartment, $23.25.

The trip from Philadelphia to Toronto will be made on the Lehigh Valley road, leaving Philadelphia, Tuesday, November 21, at 8:40 p. m. Several hours will be spent at Niagara Falls, arriving in Toronto at 9:43 p. m., November 22. Tickets must be deposited at Buffalo by all delegates who hold tickets to any point east or west of Buffalo.

An agent of the railroad will be at the convention November 15 and 18 for the purpose of validating tickets. Immediately on arrival in Philadelphia tickets should be left at convention headquarters, the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, with Miss Elizabeth Newman, secretary of the transportation committee. On the return the final limit for leaving Philadelphia is December 1. Delegates must arrive at starting point December 3 for all but Pacific Coast points.

The fare from Buffalo to Toronto is $3.67. The pullman fare from Philadelphia to Toronto is as follows: lower berth, $5.25; upper, $4.20; drawing room, $19.50; compartment, $14.75. Reservations for this trip may be made at the convention.

The Pennsylvania and New York Central railroads have prepared a special letter covering details of trips mentioned, which may be obtained on application to the railroads.

It is very important that reservations for either tour from Chicago to Philadelphia should be made as soon as possible. If a sufficient number make reservations, either or both roads will run a special train for the exclusive use of the delegates.

Parties living east of Chicago may join either tour at the most convenient point; western delegates will join in Chicago.

Be sure to secure a certificate from your railroad agent at the time of purchasing your ticket. Do not make the mistake of asking for a receipt. No refund of fare will be made because of failure to secure certificate.

N. B. In order to secure reduced fare, tickets must be purchased going and returning over the same route.

Why Not Beer and Wine?

Answer the Questions With Truth Given In These Leaflets:

(All leaflets 2 cents unless otherwise noted)

Beer Is Drunk for Its Alcohol.
Beer as a Cause of Alcoholism.
When Is a Man Intoxicated?
Wine as a Cause of Alcoholism.
He Was Not Drunk But———
Primary Lesson on Beer.
Per 50, 15 cents; per 100, 20 cents.
What Benjamin Franklin Said About Beer.
A Story of Root Beer.
Wine—What Is It?
The Persistent Beer Fallacy.
Beer Quantities of Alcohol Injurious.
Dangers in the Use of Fermented Drinks.
Is Beer Intoxicating?
Prenatal Effects of Alcohol.
Is the Moderate Drinker a Safe Citizen?
Beer a Bluffer.
Wine.
Alcohol and the School Child.
Blackboard Exercise—No Beer, No Wine. Price per 50, 25 cents; per 100, 45 cents.
Of the Poison Brand—Labeled by the Mighty Hand of Science. Cartoon poster (10 x 12 inches). Per dozen, 10 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois

Do It Now! Time Is Fleeting!

Rally every friend to the standard. Each one means that much more power for the right.

TO GAIN MEMBERS POSTERIZE YOUR COMMUNITY WITH THESE STRIKING NEW POSTERS

(Size 19 x 25. Price, each, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00.)
For Their Sakes Enforce the Law.
Booze Stands Between —.
Forge a Chain.

HAVE YOU SEEDED DOWN THE FIELD IN YOUR VICINITY WITH THESE NEW MEMBERSHIP COMPELLERS?

IF NOT, DO IT NOW!

The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment Appeals to Millions By Way of the Printed Page
Do Thou Likewise

We List Herewith SPECIAL HELPS

Order in quantities, enclose in envelopes with membership cards and a personal note of invitation, and hand or mail to the women of your church, missionary society, club, lodge, etc.

Titles of Leaflets and Prices. Each Leaflet a Winner.

(Leaflets, 2 cents each)

Why You Should Join the Half-Million Women of the W. C. T. U. Price, per 100, 50 cents; per 50, 30 cents.
Why I Am a White Ribboner Today.
Why a Million Members?
Price, per 50, 25 cents; per 100, 45 cents.

OTHER LEAFLETS:

W. C. T. U. Co-operation the Community Keynote.
Jubilee Membership Campaign Songs.
Mobilize a Million Members.
Price, per 50, 35 cents; per 100, 60 cents.
Declaration of Principles.
Purpose and Scope of the W. C. T. U.
Recruiting for Membership.
Price, per 100, 20 cents; per 50, 15 cents.

PLEDGES AND CARDS

Membership Appeal card, with vignette and autograph signature of Anna A. Gordon. Per 100, 50 cents.
W. C. T. U. Coupon Pledge. Per 100, 45 cents.
Y. P. B. Invitation Card. Per 100, 50 cents.

Order in quantities, enclose in envelopes with membership cards and a personal note of invitation, and hand or mail to the women of your church, missionary society, club, lodge, etc.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

HOW TO GET A Y. P. B. GOING THIS WINTER AT BREAK-BOTTLE SPEED

Richard K. Morton, Director of Publicity, Massachusetts Y. P. B.

These are excitement-charged days, taut, tense, strained, with suspense over vital events. Two great social armies struggle in deadly combat—on the one hand stands a blind mob of drunkards, law-breakers, mental, physical, and moral weaklings; on the other hand, a basically American, undaunted sorority of women filled with the true light, assisted by men of principle who also have seen true, and followed their lead.

The Young People's Branch must do something to swing the great social scale on the side of Law Enforcement, Peace, Prohibition, Common Sense! Can you ask us to go calmly about our tasks, when we long for the excitement of the fray?

Here is the best way for the members of the Y. P. B. to help. Make the Branches so strong, vital, influential, compelling, virile, that they demand recognition. Let this winter count. The following methods are worth while considering as means of attaining this end: When they are against a progressive social order, people ridicule, cheapen, scorn prohibition. Without being vindictive, coarse, or crude, why not turn the tables, and let the anti-prohibitionists experience—through press, platform, and campaign—the humiliation of ridicule and sarcasm? Let every member of the Y. P. B. start this effective propaganda, and certain "honorable gentlemen" will come in for some awkward embarrassment!

As soon as possible, have some one in each state organization, as well as the secretary of each community Branch, write to each officer, exhorting him to immediate and definite activity. Ask for monthly reports of news, finances, accomplishments, and new methods. Enclose pledge cards for filling out, and also provide a self-addressed, stamped envelope for their return.

Try to get law enforcement, prohibition, and common-sense editorials into your local, weekly, or daily papers. Indirectly hit at the leering menace in other subtle ways. Flood the dailies with Y. P. B. news, report meetings, write up programs, methods, and schemes.

Campaign for subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL and your home state W. C. T. U. publication. A tactful letter, a clever suggestion, a mere hint, by a close friend, is as effective an appeal as the printed exhortation.

Make an achievement map. On one side of a large piece of cardboard (in a blue-colored space, to represent the "sea," or unexplored territory—tasks yet to be done), list objectives to be reached. On the other side (in green to represent verdant, prosperous "land," or explored fields) list work already done. Circulate the achievement maps of each Branch among other Branches. Stimulate activity this way.

Have a scrap-book contest. Encourage all Y. P. B. members, during the coming months, to watch current daily and weekly newspapers, periodicals, magazines, books, and other publications for constructive articles favoring prohibition, law enforcement, and expressing general good will. Have each member make a scrap-book of these clippings, giving a prize to the one who has the best and most of them. This may be extended by announcing widely through paid-for ads that a prize will be given to any person in the community whose scrap-book of this sort, submitted to the Y. P. B., is considered especially good.

Put out some mimeographed sheets describing and amplifying Y. P. B. work. Try to reach that half-indolent, morose individual whom the larger publications fail to affect.

Publish abroad arguments for prohibition and law enforcement. Get up a debate or a speaking contest, with either of these questions as the theme.

Have a Y. P. B. recruiting booth set up at all public affairs, in the church, in halls, at parties, fairs, concerts, etc. Have those present questioned by the keepers of this "booth" as to their opinions on law enforcement, prohibition, and progress, and get from them the names of people needing Branch literature, places to date a Y. P. B. "flying squadron," prospective Branch members, and other valuable data.

Enroll "correspondence members" in your Y. P. B.'s. Send them your literature, all reports, anecdotes of your doings, pledges, work to do, and a list of the ways to be of help to the great Cause.

To arouse the Branches in a state, start a "league" of Branches. For a good illustration, model it after the major leagues in baseball. Every week two Branches contest with each other for general efficiency. The one with the highest number of points wins the contest. With frequent changing of opponents, each Branch soon has its percentage and place in the league. A Y. P. B. banner may be used as the pennant.

Keep each Branch going this fall and winter. Forget the peculiar, pet aims of your particular Branch. Keep your eye on the purpose, the Cause, for which we are all working! Write to editors, pay for small ads, support your Y. P. B., prepare straightforward opinions on politicians, leaders, and workers in your community. Keep hammering away at the truth with the Y. P. B., and the Door of Belief will ultimately open!

WHY I AM PROUD TO BE AN AMERICAN

(PRIZE-WINNING ARTICLE)

Sidney E. Ayres, President New York State Federation of Young People's Branches

First: Because America's laws and her constitution came from Biblical inspiration.

Second: Because America stands for freedom of worship. There is no state religion. Every citizen worships God as his soul dictates.

Third: Because in the past America practiced the Golden Rule and played the big brother to other countries. After the Opium War she prevented the opium traffic from being forced upon China. After the Boxer Uprising America returned the Indemnity Fund to China that she might use it in educating her sons in our colleges and universities. America protected and nursed the oppressed and weakened Cuba until she could stand on her own feet, and then made her free.

Fourth: Because America has produced great and noble men, such as Washington and Lincoln.

Fifth: Because America gave the Negro slaves their freedom.

Sixth: Because America is the first great nation to prohibit the liquor traffic.

Seventh: Because the countless strangers already within her gates, and the great number of immigrants now pouring into America, challenge me as a citizen and present me with an unexcelled opportunity to help serve humanity. Where else do all nations come begging at the very door? True, my bit is small, but it counts.

Eighth: Because in America democracy is being tested. America leads all other nations. She is the experimental station of the world. As a citizen, I have the privilege of helping make democracy successful.

Ninth: Because universal prohibition of the liquor traffic will, or will not, succeed according as America's great experiment succeeds or fails, and, therefore, by supporting the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act, I can help serve humanity.

Tenth: Finally (I can not resist adding), I am proud to be an American, because I was born in America.

Special Helps for Sunday School Officers and Teachers, October 29

(All leaflets 2 cents unless otherwise noted)

How can the Superintendent Promote Temperance Teaching in the Sunday School?
Problems of the Physical Awakening.
Temperance Teaching.
The Temperance Sunday School Lessons.
A Study of the Pledge. (For Primary Class Workers).
Pen Points.
The Teachings of the Divine Savior Concerning Wine.
The Pledge. What Is It? Why Sign It?
Thorough Temperance Teaching the Demand of the Hour.
Temperance Instruction in the Sunday School. Its Need from a Bible Standpoint.
Price, per 100, 45 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

BLACKBOARD EXERCISES:

Prohibition in the United States.
The Total Abstainer on Safe Ground.

TEMPERANCE TALKS FOR PRIMARY AND JUNIOR WORKERS:

Look Not Thou Upon the Wine.
Beware of the Wine Cup.
Watch! The Thief Is Alcohol.
Destruction.
Sin in the Heart.
Price per 100, 45 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

LEAFLETS:

World's Temperance Sunday—Citizenship Recognition Day.
The Sunday School Pledge Flag (Method Leaflet).
Temperance Sunday—Program for Sunday Schools.
Responsive Reading (Christian Citizenship).
Responsive Reading (Bible Temperance).
Responsive Reading (Signing the Pledge).
Responsive Reading (Bible Wines).
Responsive Reading (Bible Total Abstinence).
Posters In the Sunday School.
Price, per 100, 45 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

Citizenship Questionnaire.
The Sunday School and Law Enforcement.
Sunday School National Prohibition Guards.
The Forward Look of the Sunday School Department.
The Sunday School and Social Service.
Price, per 100, 45 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

Program—Recognition of Young Voters. Four pages. Price, per 100, 75 cents; per 50, 40 cents.

Special

TWO NEW PROGRAMS FOR L. T. L.'S, NATIONAL PROHIBITION GUARDS, AND SUNDAY SCHOOLS

Uncle Sam's Prohibition Quiz. Testimony of ten noted Americans (Exercise for 11 boys or young men).

Aunt Columbia's Prohibition Quiz. Testimony of ten noted American women. (Exercise for 11 girls or young women.)

Price, five cents per copy; per dozen, 50 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois.

Scientific Temperance Instruction in Summer Schools

Elizabeth Owens Middleton

We look upon the summer months as the teacher's vacation time, with freedom to recreate in the mountains or on the coast, or to spend in catching up with the little home duties dear to the heart of every man and woman. The Scientific Temperance Instruction director, who spent seven weeks in eleven summer schools, found that during their vacation period the teachers spend six very strenuous weeks in school, with text books and instructors, preparing for better service in the school room. These summer schools are veritable bee-hives of industry.

My first visit was at Normal, Illinois, where I found 2,400 teachers taking the course. I addressed a crowded assembly room two mornings, and was assured that on each morning I had an entirely different audience—about 1,200 each day, all the auditorium would hold. The shady grounds and spacious buildings on the campus afforded adequate space for quiet study and systematic class room work. The informal conferences that were arranged for me gave me ample opportunity to reach the teachers personally, and to explain our methods and helps for teaching health and temperance scientifically.

My next visit was to the Northern Illinois State Normal School at DeKalb, where a similar program was carried out, and the very hearty co-operation of President Brown and Dean Gilbert, and other members of the faculty, made work in this large school a delight.

After twenty-four hours' travel I arrived in North Dakota, for an engagement of three weeks in seven summer schools. At Ellendale, near the South Dakota line, I found a small but very select school, with attendance from Minnesota and other states.

At Dickenson, in the far west, the teachers were as eager to hear the message and receive the literature and helps as at the other points.

An interested audience of 1,200 greeted me at the Teachers' College in Valley City, for the morning lecture. The corridor, where our exhibit and our table of free literature were located, was thronged with teachers throughout the afternoon, and every page of reading matter eagerly appropriated. I longed for immediate access to our well equipped Publishing House that I might supply all the needs.

At the State Agricultural College, Fargo, and State University, near Grand Forks, I found swarms of busy teachers who also gave my message a cordial welcome, and studied earnestly the W. C. T. U. charts and posters.

Mayville State Normal, in close proximity to Fargo and Grand Forks, is a thriving center of education, with increasing attendance each year, and draws its students from an excellent section of the state.

Minot is a typical western city, full of the spirit of the great west, and its educational facilities are fully abreast of the times.

In the schools of North Dakota I renewed pleasant acquaintance with a number of teachers whom I had met there several years ago. In most of these schools I was assisted with the literature and exhibit by members of the local W. C. T. U., and through the courtesy of the state W. C. T. U., both in Illinois and North Dakota, packages of literature were supplied at each point for free distribution. In North Dakota there were furnished also a set of the twelve posters, "Why America Went Dry," the set of five graded S. T. I. charts with manual, the story booklets of Christine I. Tinling, memory gems for the school room, and posters, "A Physical Decalog" and "College Smokers and Non Smokers," to be left in the school library for future reference.

Too much can not be said concerning the intelligent and hearty co-operation of the faculty and members of these institutions. The fact that my engagement in North Dakota was made directly with Miss Nielson, the state superintendent of schools, and that all expenses were met by the state educational board, put the work on a business basis that was recognized and respected by all. When all states recognize this special line of teaching, which is required by the law in every state, and make appropriation for these special lectures, we shall be able to accomplish more in the creating of total abstinence and prohibition sentiment in the community.

From Minot, North Dakota, I went direct to the province of Alberta, Canada stopping to fill dates at Medicine Hat Calgary and Red Deer, on my way to the University of Edmonton, where the summer school is held.

The western provinces of Canada do not have compulsory temperance teaching such as is given in the States, and I had been advised not to expect the same degree of interest on the part of the teachers as had been evinced in the schools across the line, but I found among the Canadian teachers the same earnest desire to give the very best to the young people in their charge.

Considering the fact that my two days visit at Edmonton and the four days at Victoria, British Columbia, were in the closing week of the summer term with the teachers and instructors making the final effort to complete the course, the attendance at my lectures and at the informal conferences was most gratifying. I had the earnest co-operation of the directors of the summer schools, Mr. McNally at Edmonton and Mr. Gibson at Victoria. They are studying the condition of temperance education in the States with a view to introducing similar methods in the Provinces. Here, as in the States, the W. C. T. U. supplied literature and posters and assisted me in the schools.

I wish that my S. T. I. superintendents and others could have been with me on this trip, and thus have met these 6,000 teachers. It would have been an inspiration for future work. If you could have seen the interest manifested by the teachers in the charts, posters, story booklets, memory gems, etc., and could have heard them ask, "Where can we get these helps?" and "Are they furnished free to teachers?" and if you could have noted the look of disappointment that sometimes followed my answer, "No, we give out this free literature, but we must charge a nominal sum for the charts and posters;" if you had heard all this I think you would have resolved to put a set of the posters and charts in your schools at once, and to be prepared to give assistance to the teachers in handling this very important branch of education, which is compulsory in every state in our Union. Many teachers took the name and address of our Publishing House, that they might send for our helps. Others gave orders for supplies.

Summed up, the situation is this: The teachers greatly need the simple, practical helps furnished by our Publishing House for hygiene and temperance teaching, which contain a special warning against the use of habit-forming drugs, and teach respect for and observance of law. My earnest plea is for closer co-operation between the local union and the school. I have said to the teachers this summer, "If you want our helps, go to the local W. C. T. U. in the town where you are teaching, or in your home town, and ask them to assist you in putting these supplies in your school." There is no local union so small or so poor but what it can furnish a set of the twelve anti-alcohol posters at $1.50, the graded charts with manual at $1.25, the Tiling booklets at $1.00, or other posters and memory gems at small cost. Send to the National W. C. T. U. Publishing House, Evanston, Illinois, for copies of the new Outline for Health and Temperance Teaching for the Grades of the Public Schools; price 15 cents. Put this into the hands of your school principal and county superintendent of schools, asking them to combine this teaching with the new health code which has been adopted. Also send for a copy of the new 1922 Temperance Day program in the public schools, and have the pageant outlined therein used as a demonstration in your school or at a public meeting.

Introduce the essay and poster contests in your schools by offering prizes, using the subjects selected for the national essay and poster contests, as given in the department leaflet of subjects and rules for 1922-1923, which can be ordered from the National W. C. T. U. Publishing House, Evanston, Illinois.

If your union has not taken up this important department of work, it is missing its greatest opportunity for educating the community to uphold the standard of total abstinence and prohibition. This teaching needs to be stressed just now to combat the effort which is being made to secure a return of wine and beer. Our posters and charts will answer every argument that can be brought in favor of wine and beer. A W. C. T. U. member said to me this summer, "I did not know that the W. C. T. U. was doing this splendid school work." A teacher asked, "If there is no W. C. T. U. in our community, how shall we go about organizing one?" I find many teachers who are members of the W. C. T. U., and many who speak with pride of an active W. C. T. U. mother. Go to your teachers in a tactful manner, offering assistance, and you will meet with a cordial reception. Write to your state S. T. I. superintendent for her plans and suggestions. Order supplies from the National W. C. T. U. Evanston, Illinois.

Ready for 1923

DO NOT FORGET THAT YOUR OWN PUBLISHING HOUSE WILL AGAIN FURNISH YOU THE BEAUTIFUL SCRIPTURE TEXT SACRED ART CALENDARS.

This Calendar will be more beautiful and attractive than ever. You can easily dispose of hundreds and thus place the daily Bible Text in multitudes of homes and at the same time earn Christmas money for yourself, your W. C. T. U., the L. T. L., the Woman's Club, or for your Literature Fund.

Send us your order early and so avoid delay or disappointment. Prices: Single copy, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.84; twenty-five, $7.50; fifty, $12.50; one hundred, $20.00; two hundred, $37.00; five hundred, $82.50.

Send us your order now and let's go to work. It is not too early to start.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois.

Workable Plans for the Coming Year Promulgated at the Minnesota W. C. T. U. Convention

Bessie Lathe Scovell

The forty-sixth annual convention of the Minnesota Woman's Christian Temperance Union was held August 29 to September 1 in the Central Park M. E. Church, St. Paul. A welcome banquet attended by four hundred guests was held the evening of the twenty-ninth in the dining room of the church. The state auditor, Mr. Ray Chase, representing Governor J. A. O. Preus, who was away at the time; Mr. Arthur Nelson, mayor of St. Paul; Rev. L. Franklin Gruner, president of the Ministerial Association; Mrs. C. P. Noyes, president of the St. Paul Law Observance League; L. R. S. Ferguson, commissioner of education; Mrs. J. E. Rounds, president of the Minnesota Federation of Women's Clubs; Mr. Paul Doty, president of St. Paul Association; and Mrs. Laura V. Ward, president of the Twenty-third W. C. T. U district, voiced the welcomes, while Mrs. Bessie Lathe Scovell, state vice-president, responded.

$700 For State Work

The program of speeches was interspersed with solos by Mrs. Jessie M. Cox, piano solos by Master Clinton H. Reed, violin selections by Miss Esther Pine, all St. Paul musicians. Miss Rozette Hendrix, editor of the Minnesota White Ribbon, made a call for pledges for state work which resulted in over $700 being given by local and district unions in all parts of the state. Mrs. Josephine E. Sizer, state president, was most happy in her introduction of speakers.

The roll call the morning of the opening of the convention was responded to by five state officers, seventeen district presidents, eleven state superintendents, and the editor of the state paper. There were 216 voting delegates.

The program of the first morning was enlivened by a contest by the district presidents, on the best plan for district work, the prize being a seed-pearl W. C. T. U. pin. Miss Ellen Hare, of Albert Lea, won it for the most concise workable plan. Among the points made by her were: Take THE UNION SIGNAL and keep informed as to the results of prohibition and law enforcement; attend district, state and National W. C. T. U. conventions; get the convention habit; be a praying woman, much is accomplished through prayer; visit the local unions in your district and talk over local affairs, until you understand the conditions in every town in your district; always wear the white ribbon; attend all meetings of outside organizations which are considering the Eighteenth Amendment and law enforcement, that you may know what others think and their plans of work; rally every last woman in your district to vote on election day for dry candidates.

Among the good points made by the twenty-one other contestants were: Have a telephone committee that you may reach quickly every woman in your union, every union in your district; have essay contests in every school in your district, not forgetting the rural schools; stress medal contest work; see that your children and young people are lined up for prohibition; lead the prayer life; lead the informed life; plan your work and work your plan.

Mrs. Frances P. Parks, our national corresponding secretary, who was one of the convention guests, arrived during the contest and was greeted with the white ribbon salute. She responded most happily. Mrs. Margaret B. Platt, promoter of the literature of the National W. C. T. U., was introduced and gave practical suggestions.

The main feature of the first afternoon session was the address by the president, Mrs. Josephine E. Sizer. This was a comprehensive survey of prohibition, peace, the reform of the movies, the Nineteenth Amendment, new citizenship, the industrial situation. Her husband, Rev. J. S. Sizer, was introduced and gave some telling illustrations as to the prohibition situation. In her report, Mrs. Kate Kercher, the beloved state corresponding secretary, stated that fourteen new unions had been organized during the year and 1115 new members gained, but old ones had dropped out, thereby making the returns smaller than was hoped for.

The speakers for platform night were: Miss Rozette Hendrix, former state president, Rev. J. W. Holland, Mrs. Margaret B. Platt and Mrs. Frances P. Parks. Mrs. Parks presented the Minnesota W. C. T. U. with one of the San Francisco welcome banners. Mrs. Cora R. Culver, of Chatfield, made the collection speech.

During the election of officers, Mrs. Nelle G. Burger, president of the Missouri W. C. T. U. and our third convention guest, arrived, and was greeted with the white ribbon cheer. While ballots were being counted, many distinguished visitors were introduced, among them, Mrs. Charlotte Winchell, eighty-six years old, who secured the scientific temperance instruction law for Minnesota, back in 1886; Mrs. Belle Welch, former recording secretary; Mrs. Ella F. Hendrix, former corresponding secretary, and many others. All officers were re-elected. Mrs. Josephine E. Sizer, is president; Mrs. Bessie Lathe Scovell, vice-president; Mrs. Kate Kercher, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Myra Griswold, recording secretary and Mrs. Martha J. Reed, treasurer.

Thursday evening Mrs. Nelle G. Burger gave an inspiring address on "The Challenge to Americanism".

The convention closed after adopting resolutions to make every effort to elect to the United States Congress, those who will work for the retention of the Eighteenth Amendment and its enforcement and who will in no wise vote to weaken the Volstead code; who will oppose military training in the public schools as fostering a militaristic spirit; the sale of liquor on American ships; immodest dress; and who will endorse the efforts being made to raise the moral standard of the moving picture industry.

The convention gift to the St. Paul W. C. T. U. was a beautiful framed photograph of Frances E. Willard. By payment of $25, several were made life members of the state union. The Eighth ward W. C. T. U., Minneapolis, gave $50 to make two of its members, Mrs. A. B. Lewis and Mrs. Homer Clay, life members of the state. Mary Burner W. C. T. U., Minneapolis, made its president, Mrs. Christiana Stuhlfeir a life member, the Twenty-seventh district did likewise for its former president, Mrs. Ina Maine, and a friend made Mr. W. R. Mandigo an honorary life member.

New For You

A Law Enforcement Playlet
"John Barleycorn Wants to Come Back"

Adapted for use in Public Meetings, Conventions, Institutes, Sunday Schools, Temperance Rallies, Boy Scout Meetings, L. T. L's. Prohibition Guards, etc. Requires two young women, one man, soloist, pianist and a number of children and young people. Price per copy, 10 cents; three copies, 25 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

Send for Candy to Sell

Any Union, Church Society, School Class or similar organization, ordering through its officers, can have 60 boxes of 5c Chocolate Bars to sell, 24 bars to the box. 30 days in which to sell and remit. Bars are Schrafft, Hershey, Waneta and other well-known makes. When sold, send us $48 and keep $24 as your profit.

Express Prepaid

We ship express fully prepaid to any office in the United States east of Syracuse, N. Y. and north of Philadelphia, Pa. Special allowances to other points. Write for them. Shipment not practical west of Mississippi River or south of Norfolk, Va.

You can order direct from this advertisement now, or write for circular.

Shipments usually same day order is received.

30, 40 and 50 box shipments at proportionate prices and profits.

Fred D. Lesure Company

Wholesale Confectioners

6 Broad St., Fitchburg, Mass.

Just From the Press for Your Schools

Outlines for Health and Temperance Teaching for the Grades of the Public Schools

New Pamphlet for Scientific Temperance Instruction in the Schools. Just what you want for your teachers. See that they are supplied. Price, per copy, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.25.

Order now for immediate use as the school year opens.

Prepare for October 29, World's Temperance Sunday

Order All Supplies in Ample Time
Note Helps Here Named

(All leaflets 2 cents unless otherwise noted)

Quarterly Temperance Lesson of the International Sunday School Series, October 29. Should be early in the hands of every teacher. Prepared especially for teachers and officers. Price, per 100, 20 cents; per 50, 15 cents.

ENVELOPE LEAFLETS FOR STUDY AND DISTRIBUTION:

Duty of a Christian Citizen.
Clean Hands.
Marion Lawrence on Pledge Signing.
Beware Wine!
Listen, Boys!
Counting Fingers.
God's Bottles.
Why Sign the Pledge.
Lincoln's Appeal for Law.
Beer and Home Brew.
What Uncle Sam Says.
An Elder Sister's Advice to Boys. No. I.
An Elder Sister's Advice to Boys. No. II.
An Elder Sister's Advice to Girls. Nos. 1, 3, 4.
Safety First, Boys!
Price, per 100, 20 cents; per 50, 15 cents.

RECITATIONS FOR PRIMARY AND JUNIOR CLASSES:

Two Offerings.
Look Not Upon the Wine.
Where There's Drink There's Danger.
Price, per 100, 25 cents; per 50, 15 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois

The Call To Service

Jennie N. Standifer

Jean Carlton's home was on the Mexican Gulf coast. Being pretty, bright and attractive, she easily made friends, though, from her mother's viewpoint, some of them were not as desirable as they might have been. One July morning she received over the phone an invitation to attend a supper to be given by Billie Loflin that evening at Madison Point Inn, ten miles down the beach. "I don't want to have you out at night, or on joy rides with the boys and girls who attend Billie's parties," said Mrs. Carlton. "He is so popular, Mother. He spends money freely, and the girls feel honored by any attentions from him." "But Billie likes liquor and I have heard that at some of his parties he 'dashes' what they drink, with intoxicants. He has a bad influence on our young people, and I do not approve of his entertainments." "You know Mr. Barton, the manager of the Inn, Mother. I am sure he will not permit drinking. And only a few are invited this evening. You know most of them." She mentioned half a dozen of her friends. "I am asked to go in the car with Grace Hutchins, Fred Bowen and one of his friends. You can find no objection to them, and we will be at home by ten o'clock. Please, please, let me go, Mother dear!"

A reluctant consent was given, and at seven o'clock that evening, Fred and Grace called for Jean.

"Your escort had a matter of business to arrange, and we are to stop for him at the Country club," explained Fred. "We are going to have an up-to-date thrill party. Several of Billie's friends from New Orleans are to be over, and the best band on the coast is to play. Then we are going on a launch ride after supper."

"I thought I would get home by ten o'clock," said Jean in surprise. "Quit thinking in ancient history, Jean," laughed Grace. "Your mother disapproves of jazz and the latest dances and late joy rides, but she thinks launch rides are all right. And Billie provides such delicious drinks, too."

"He has a big treat in store tonight," Fred grinned and winked knowingly. "Bill is an all-round sport, and believes in a good time in the days of his youth. Some people condemn everything that makes life worth living. Here is the Country club and look at Billie on the spot!"

A handsome, debonair young man was waiting for them, and made a mock gesture of despair.

"Fate is against me," he cried, "but like Caesar, or Alexander, or some of those determined old guys, I'll conquer fate. I saw a fellow here about getting his launch for our ride, but I will have to go out on the pier on another matter of business, and forego the pleasure of your company, Jean. But I will be at the feast in time. Business before pleasure, and this business happens to be the very backbone of our pleasure this evening. Goodbye for a little while."

"You see how unselfish Bill is, Jean," said Fred as they resumed their drive. "He counted on going with you as a rare privilege, but he gives it up uncomplainingly to promote the enjoyment of our crowd. Did you ever hear how Bill—" The story was interrupted by a loud report. A car in front of them had just had a blow-out. Fred slowed down and asked, as he came near the disabled car: "Can I do anything to help, Mrs. Martin?" "Yes, Fred, how thankful I am you happened along," was the reply. "I was taking Miss B———, to the city hall to deliver a lecture. She would be late if I waited until my car is fixed. I see you have a vacant seat. Can you get her there in time for her engagement?" "Of course. It will be on our way." "Mrs. Bowen, my friend, Miss B———, who is known everywhere as a temperance lecturer. And these young ladies are Miss Hutchins and Miss Carlton, the granddaughter of your old friend, Mrs. Jean Bolton Carlton, the writer." "I am delighted to meet such interesting young people," said the handsome, gray-haired woman who now entered the car and took the seat by Jean. "Your grandmother expected great things of you, my dear, when you were a tiny baby," she said, turning to the young girl, "and I believe you are not going to disappoint her." "I have known very little of grandmother since father's death, eight years ago," replied Jean, flushing. "She is a shut-in and somehow we have rarely exchanged visits since we moved to the coast." "But you know her, I am sure, from her pen. All the stories she writes are so forceful for the right, and strong against evil that they cannot be forgotten. And she has been such a power for prohibition. It was the inspiration I received from reading one of her tales that caused me to turn from a life of frivolity and give the best years of my life to a good cause. Through all those years of struggle it was your dear grandmother's faith in our ultimate success that gave me, as an individual, strength to overcome all difficulties, and press forward. Although frail in body, she uplifts and helps every life her influence touches."

"City Hall!" announced Fred Bowen. "Are you going to hear my address, my young friends?" asked Miss B——— "Sorry, but we have a previous engagement," answered Grace. "Who is to introduce you to your audience, Miss B———?" asked Jean. "Mrs. Martin was to have done it, but she will not be in time." An instant Jean hesitated, and then asked timidly: "Would you permit me to have that honor, Miss B———?" "Delighted, my dear, provided your friends will excuse you." "Of course, if she prefers the lecture," replied Fred, coldly. "Billie Loflin broke the engagement to take me to the supper, so it will not matter if I do not attend," retorted Jean. "Mother will be expecting me at ten anyway. I will get Mrs. Martin to take me home." Jean's face flushed at the mocking laughter of her friends as they drove away, but she smiled bravely, and with head erect, and an air of pride in the discharge of duty, escorted Miss B——— to the auditorium.

It was a stumbling, halting speech the young girl made in presenting the distinguished woman to the audience, but at last it was over, and Jean sat listening to the magnetic voice that had swayed multitudes. The men present at first were apathetic, but soon all were giving to the speaker rapt attention. Jean's thoughts were at first with her friends who were on pleasure bent, but presently she, too, was an eager listener. How it was brought to her mind she did not know but the impression came to her that she was wasting her youth and strength of body, mind and soul in harmful pleasures. Like accusing ghosts, neglected opportunities arose before her.

The advantages of young people in their preparation for their life work, the speaker said, were never so good as at the present time, nor had there ever been so great a need for intelligent, efficient service in the home, the community and state. Education, ability and talent were heavenly trusts, which were to be used for man and Maker from youth until hoary age. No one, unless mentally deficient was exempt from this call. Young women especially, were urged to use their influence for furthering righteous causes and to accept the challenge of patriotic citizenship. Other great thoughts were expressed by the speaker, but to Jean it was all a call to individual service.

When the address was ended, she accepted the offer of Mrs. Martin to drive her home, along with Miss B———.

"I can never forget what you said this evening, and I am going to answer the call to serve," Jean told her grandmother's friend when she bade her goodbye.

"There are great possibilities in you, dear child. Remember your call is to make the best of yourself in every way you can," replied Miss B——.

"Instead of going to Billie Loflin's supper, Mother, I went to hear Miss B———'s address on 'Patriotic Citizenship,'" Jean explained when the door was opened to her, "and I am so glad I went."

"And so am I, my dear," replied her mother, with a sigh of relief.

That night Jean sat by her window and watched the sparkling water, rippling in the moonlight. Somewhere out there her friends were making merry with jest and song, and she would be missed. She was conscious of giving up something she liked very much, but must not have and a feeling of loneliness—almost of friendlessness—stole over her. Then there came to her the parting words of Miss B——: "Your call is to make the best of yourself in every way you can." In her heart she knew that these friends were of the cheap, jellyfish type, thoughtless, shallow, without any purpose in life except to have a good time. They jested lightly over the breaking of the laws of the land and did other things unworthy of them. Jean sighed as she turned from the window.

When she came down to breakfast the next morning, her mother met her with a white, shocked face.

"Such a dreadful thing has happened," she said. "A friend has just telephoned that there was a drunken crowd at Madison Point Inn last evening and when an officer of the law was summoned, the party scattered. Billie Loflin and a dozen of his friends started in a launch to a vessel anchored several miles from shore. They were very much intoxicated and when they attempted to return, there was an explosion and all on board were badly burned. Fred and Grace, and another girl of the party, are at the hospital, and will be much disfigured, they fear."

"How terrible, Mother! And Billie Loflin—was he badly burned?"asked Jean.

"Poor Billie and the engineer were drowned. Billie could not swim. His body was washed ashore by the tide this morning, and in his hand was grasped an empty jug. It had probably been given him as a life preserver."

Jean sat for a long time in silence. Tears were streaming down her cheeks.

"But for the accident that caused me to go with Miss B———, it might have been my fate, Mother," she whispered huskily. "With you and Grandmother to help me, I am going to answer my call to service. I will begin today, and no matter how hard the work, I will try to give the world my best."

THOSE FOUR BEAUTIFUL SONGS

Are spreading through the land. Already thousands are singing them. They are "Hidden," "That City O'er the Sea," "May the Fire Fall," "We Shall Join the Shouting By and By." All for only 10 cents. Four lots of them for 25 cents. Or make it 35c and to the four lots we will add the fine 25c patriotic sheet song "The U. S. A. For Me."

REV. L. L. PICKETT, Wilmore, Ky.

W. C. T. U. BADGES

Made of mother of pearl in Bethlehem. Price, 25 cents each. Orders must be accompanied by price sent by N. Y. or London draft, cashiers' cheque, or foreign postal order. Coin or stamps not accepte Orders for less than two badges are refused. Address treasurer of W. C. T. U., Jerusalem, Palestine. P. O. Box 443.

That Referendum

[The papers report that over 550,000 Illinois voters signed the petition for a referendum to the people asking for a modification of the Volstead Law. In this connection the following incident may be of interest.]

As the business woman and her friend approached a corner of a busy Chicago street, the former said in a low tone, "Look, there's the man I told you about."

Yes, there he was, on his hat a placard reading, "Sign a petition for light wines and beer," in each hand a paper which he held out toward passersby. Three men walked up together, laughing and talking—young fellows of the rakish type. "Let's have your petitions", said one, and they signed with a flourish and went on.

"Those men look like three I saw signing yesterday," remarked the business woman to her companion. They stood a moment and noted that though the streets were crowded, the three mentioned were the only ones to sign. Seeing the women, the man held out his paper, saying, "Want to sign, ladies?" They shook their heads, one showing a little white-ribbon bow. The other said, "You know you folks aren't going to accomplish anything by your petitions. Why do you get them up?" The man laughed: "Oh, yes, we shall, ma'am; you just wait and see."

A little further on the two friends met another man with similar papers. "Sign right here, ladies", he accosted them. "Here's the way to get back our rights. Vote for the return of wine and beer". Again one pointed to her badge of honor. "Does that look as though I'd be likely to sign?" she asked, and the other added, "You know that the country was made dry before the women could vote. They could only make sentiment. Do you suppose they will vote to make it wet again?"

"Oh, yes, some want it. Wine and beer are coming back all right, all right," said the man rather sneeringly. Walking on they pondered the statement. "I don't think he feels as positive as he wished you to believe", said one. "He looked more angry than assured about it." "Yes, and did you notice, too," asked the other, "that no one signed while we were there? Each one he asked simply shook his head and waved the paper away."

A little later, coming upon a third petitioner, and rather vexed by the insistence of the affair, the business woman deliberately watched him as he asked for signers. Only two or three responded, and she finally said: "Why don't you ask me to sign, too, young man?" Looking up with a little smile, he replied, "Why, I don't believe you would do it, lady. You don't look like that sort to me?"

"Unless you approve of 'that sort', then, why are you in this business?" she retorted. "You folks surely know you can't win out. Look at the results of the primaries that have been held!"

"Sure, I know", he answered, "and that's why we are told to work so hard at this job, and why there are so many of us. The folks are getting scared about it. I don't drink, myself, but then, I don't see why others shouldn't, if they want to, so I'm willing to ask for signers. Besides, its an honest job, you know, and I sure do need the money."

Disarmed by his frankness, the woman said, "Do you mind telling me how much you make at it?"

"Why, no, ma'am," he said. "We get two cents for each signer. Naturally the more we can induce to sign, the more we make. Every day we are told what all the others have gotten, so as to make us try our hardest. Of course our friends help us out by signing every time they go by, but even at that it's only a fair day's pay."

"I see", said the woman. Thanking him, she went on thoughtfully. When the results of the petition were published in the papers, she was not disheartened, knowing the source of some of the "550,000 votes for the return of wine and beer," and the methods used to obtain them.

Unexcelled for repairing china, glassware, earthenware, furniture, vases, books, etc. Famous since 1876. Major's rubber and Leather Cements are good.

Three kinds, 20c per bottle at dealers, or write us.

MAJOR MFG. CO., NEW YORK

Tremendous Value for 15c

Leading Weekly Magazine of Nation's Capital Makes Remarkably Attractive Offer.

Washington, D. C. (Special).—People everywhere are hurrying to take advantage of the Pathfinder's wonderful offer to send that splendid illustrated news and story paper to new readers thirteen weeks for 15 cents. It costs the editor a lot of money to do this, but he says it pays to invest in new friends. You will like this paper; it is chuck full of just the kind of reading the people want, as its half-million subscribers testify; it will keep you posted on activities at the nation's capital and the world over. Splendid stories and rare miscellany; question box is a mine of information. Only 15 cents in stamps or coin mailed at once to Pathfinder, 20, Langdon Sta., Washington, D, C., will bring you for 13 weeks the breeziest, cleanest, sanest, most entertaining paper there is; you will be delighted.

ROCHE'S
HERBAL
EMBROCATION
FOR CROUP OR FOR
WHOOPING COUGH

Relieves promptly and safely the Terror and Distress of these dreaded afflictions of Childhood.

120 years of successful use

Applied externally only. Wonderfully effective in Bronchitis, Lumbago and Rheumatism.

All druggists or

W. EDWARDS & SON, London, England
E. FOUGERA & CO., 90-92 Beekman St. N. Y.

CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT

THE UNION SIGNAL ..... $1.50 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance (monthly).....50c a year
Single Copies, 5c each; per 100 .....$2.75
Club rate for ten or more Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition subscriptions, 40c a year. No other premium allowed.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER ..... 35c a year
Single Copies, 3c each; per 100 .....$2.00

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES

THE UNION SIGNAL .....$2.00 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (monthly) .....62c a year
THE YOUNG CRUSADER .....47c a year
Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL Evanston, Illinois

Make Your State a Winner

Della F. Withers, Circulation Manager

Did you notice in last week's UNION SIGNAL what per cent gain in circulation of THE UNION SIGNAL your state made from last November to this September 1? Were you made happy or were you a wee bit disappointed? Remember September and October will be included when the next list and "day of reckoning" comes, November 1. A number of conventions have been held this month, but many are still to be held in October. Wonders can be accomplished in the time still left. So put on your thinking caps, pull that per cent up, and WIN THAT CHECK!

Read What Some of Our Presidents and State Promoters are Saying:

Mrs. Mitchner, president of Kansas W. C. T. U., writes: "It has been a great pleasure to me to be able to send in so many subscriptions. We are hoping to have one thousand subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL by state convention time. It is a truly splendid paper. I do not see how any member of the W. C. T. U. can afford to be without it. The Washington Letter alone is worth the price of the subscription to me, and as a field worker and speaker, the statistics and general news are invaluable in preparing my addresses."

From Mrs. Richard, Ohio's chief, comes the emphatic statement: "I am going to urge in my annual address that the local unions provide a budget for three subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL for the members of the Trio Team."

Our Montana promoter, Mrs. Monk, enthusiastically says: "Oh, joy, over the 19 per cent increase in circulation! I shall do all I can to make the 25 per cent increase, and incidentally get a check."

From Miss Sullivan, Nebraska promoter, we have: "I am sorry we do not have a larger subscription list in Nebraska. I am sure with 7000 members, 1000 ought to take THE UNION SIGNAL, if not more. I am trying to plan something worth while for our state convention."

Mrs. Kershner of Kansas tells us quite plainly one reason her state has made a 42 per cent gain. Read what she says: "I am delighted to receive report for Kansas. I have been writing a personal appeal each month, to everyone whose subscription you report to me as expiring. I am planning a demonstration for state convention. Ever yours to win."

West Virginia's state promoter, Mrs. Whitsell, tells us: "I am proud to know we have made a gain of 39 per cent in subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL and I hope it will reach 50 per cent by October 31."

Mrs. Nowells of Indiana is going to do her best. She writes: "I certainly do want that extra 5 per cent, and I believe we will get it."

ALTOGETHER NOW—WORK!

TRIO TEAM COUNTY HONOR ROLL

1. Jackson County, Iowa.
2. Grady County, Georgia.
3. Boone County, Illinois.
4. Barton County, Kansas.
5. Harper County, Kansas.
6. LaPorte County, Indiana.
7. Norfolk County, Mass.
8. Jewell County, Kansas.
9. Washington County, Kansas.
10. Ohio County, West Virginia.
11. Dukes County, Mass.
12. Dubuque County, Iowa.
13. Shawnee County, Kansas.
14. Big Stone County, } Dist.
15. Stevens County, } No. 12
16. Traverse County, } Minn.
17. Winnebago County, Wisconsin.
18. Walworth County, Wisconsin.
19. Strafford County, N. H.
20. Wayne County, Ga.
21. Dunn County, Wisconsin.
22. Faribault County, Minn. (District No. 27)
23. Winnebago County, Iowa.
24. Hamilton County, Kansas.
25. Ottawa County, Kansas.
26. Woodson County, Kansas.
27. Martin County, } Dist.
28. Watonwan County, } No.
29. Jackson County, } 3
30. Cottonwood County, } Minn.
31. Cheyenne County, Nebraska
32. Kimball County, Nebraska
33. Norton County, Kansas.
34. Clark County, Kansas.
35. Marion County, Kansas.
36. Highland County, Ohio.
37. Upshur County, W. Va.
38. Payne County, Oklahoma.
39. Stanislaus County, California.
40. Merced County, California.
41. Deuel County, South Dakota.
42. Mills County, Iowa.
43. Union County, Iowa.
44. Dakota County, } Dist.
45. Goodhue County, } No. 26
46. Rice County, } Minn.
47. Olmsted County, } Dist.
48. Dodge County, } No.
49. Steele County, } 2
50. Waseca County, } Minn.
51. Crawford County, Kansas.
52. Cass County, Iowa.
53. Polk County, } Dist.
54. Marshall County, } No.
55. Pennington County, } 14
56. Norman County, } Minn.
57. Edmunds County, South Dakota
58. Mower County } Dist. No.
59. Freeborn County } 30, Minn.
60. Bell County, Kentucky.
61. Chippewa County, Wisconsin.
62. Eau Claire County, Wisconsin.
63. Blair County, Penna.
64. Ness County, Kansas.
65. Blue Earth County, Minn. (District No. 21)
66. Dawson County, Nebraska.
67. Ellis County, Kansas.
68. Woodbury County, Iowa.
69. Kingman County, Kansas.
70. Lincoln County, Montana.
71. Bay County, Florida.
72. Glades County, Florida.
73. Highland County, Florida.
74. St. Lucie County, Florida.
75. Yamhill County, Oregon.
76. Creek County, Oklahoma.
77. Grant County, Wisconsin.

UNION MEMBERS MAKE GOOD MONEY

Selling JERSEY CROWN FLAVORING POWDER (Non-Alcoholic) to their neighbors and friends on our liberal consignment plan. No money down. We furnish the powder and guarantee sales. You pay us when you sell it, or return at our expense. Write at once for our "Special Business Proposition."

JERSEY CROWN VANILLA CO.,
Dept. S, Valparaiso, Indiana

Quiz: Law or Lawlessness?

1. Name some of the ways in which the liquor forces are defying the law.
2. Why not beer for the working people?
3. Is alcohol a stimulant?
4. Show the source of the propaganda now being circulated in the interests of the return of light wines and beer.
5. Discuss the sentiment of the rural districts of the United States in regard to the retention of the prohibition laws.
6. Who are Mrs. S. M. Zwemer? Mrs. John McLeod? Mrs. W. H. Carvosso?
7. What does Dr. W. A. Evans have to say concerning the attitude of Secretary Davis in regard to beer for the working man?
8. Suggest ways to keep your Y. P. B. going "at break-bottle speed."
9. Give at least five reasons for being proud of our American citizenship, and show how such citizenship entails responsibility.
10. Is your county on the Trio-Team Honor Roll?

No Need for Alcoholic Liquors as Medicine

"Alcoholic liquors as such are almost never needed in the treatment of the sick, and when apparently needed, there are always medicines which will answer the purpose just as well and which are not subject to the abuse that alcoholic liquors are," says Dr. H. R. Bankerd, of Bridgeport, Washington. "Of course, alcohol as a chemical for the extraction, preparation and preservation of medicines is an absolute necessity, I believe, with our present knowledge of chemistry and pharmacy."

It Is Not Too Late To Use Our Popular Display Card for Windows, Auto Shields, Exhibits, Parades, etc. "Serve America. Support the Constitution."

Enemies of Prohibition Have a Different Slogan, Use Ours

A white star on a blue background, lettered in white, "Serve America. Support the Constitution." Size 7x11 inches. Order in quantities for distribution in your communities. Copyright by National W. C. T. U. Publishing House, Evanston, Illinois. Per 100, $1.00; per thousand, $7.00. Single copies, 5 cents.

Render to Your Country This Patriotic Service

Send NOW, TODAY, 10 cents

for our Patriotic Service Package. And when received, follow instructions therein given. Stamps accepted.

DO IT NOW!

National W. C. T. U. Publishing House
Evanston, Illinois

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly | Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year in Advance

Entered as second class matter at the Postoffice at Evanston, Illinois

Vol. XLVIII | EVANSTON, ILLINOIS, OCTOBER 12, 1922 | No. 41

Children of the W. C. T. U. Americanization Center, St. Louis, Missouri, ready to take part in celebration of American Citizenship Day.

Attorney General rules Eighteenth Amendment applies to all ships flying the American flag.

OFFICIAL WASHINGTON

TREASURY DEPARTMENT

LENNA LOWE YOST, National W. C. T. U. Legislative Representative, Washington, D. C.

The Secretary of the Treasury, in a word, is required to "manage the national finances."

The chances are that but few today realize what this responsibility means to the man who represents the Treasury Department in the Cabinet of the President. Such a phenomenal task is his that only one trained in finance, both present and past, and having a wide vision of the responsibilities of the government in the future, may accept the duties of the position and do justice to his office.

The aftermath of the war has left problems compared with which the responsibilities of the war itself were simple. In war time the nation was ready at the call of the President and Congress to furnish the money necessary to prosecute the war to a successful conclusion. This meant that bonds, stamps, notes, etc., were issued, freely sold and quickly purchased. Now, these obligations are falling due. The stimulus of war no longer exists to spur men, women and children on to further sacrifices.

The period of hard times has caused many to need badly the money which they put into government obligations. Despite strenuous efforts to pare expenses, the government's bill at the end of each month is of such staggering proportions as to cause knitted brows on the part of those whose duty it is to find the way to meet these accounts. And it is here, primarily, that the Secretary of the Treasury and his immediate assistants are called upon to function.

The Secretary must make plans for:

The improvements of revenues and support of public credit;

The collection of revenue;

The keeping and rendering of public accounts and the making of returns;

The granting of warrants for moneys drawn from the Treasury and the payment of moneys into the Treasury;

The submitting of annual estimates to Congress of probable revenues and disbursements;

The control of construction and maintenance of public buildings;

The coinage and printing of money;

The administration of the Coast Guard;

The control of public health branches of the U. S. Public Health Service;

The furnishing of information to Congress on request of that body, aside from the regular reports on finances which he must make.

The Secretary of the Treasury is ex officio chairman of the Federal Farm Loan Board and of the Federal Reserve Board. He is chairman of the Central Executive Council of the Inter-American High Commission, and of the United States section of that commission.

There are five assistants to the Secretary of the Treasury, one in charge of fiscal affairs, which gives him supervision over numerous divisions; another in charge of miscellaneous divisions, including the Bureau of Engraving and Printing; another in charge of internal revenue and the customs service; another in charge of foreign loans, and a fifth in charge of War Risk Insurance and the public health work related to soldiers of the world war.

Comptroller of the Currency

Among the fiscal bureaus and offices, each of very great importance and of large powers, is that of the Comptroller of the Currency, who is charged with the execution of all laws passed by Congress relating to the issue and regulation of the national currency, and who, under the supervision of the Federal Reserve Board, is also in charge of the issue of circulating notes to Federal reserve banks. He has charge of the organization and regulation of all national banks in the United States, including Alaska and Hawaii, to appoint receivers, and national bank examiners. Reports of the condition of national banks are made to the comptroller.

The Treasurer of the United States is charged with the receipt and disbursement of all public moneys that may be deposited in the Treasury at Washington and in the subtreasuries, and in the national bank depositories. He is the redemption agent for national bank, Federal reserve and Federal reserve bank notes, and trustee for bonds held to secure national bank circulation and public circulation in national banks, and bonds held to secure postal savings in banks. He is custodian of miscellaneous trust funds, treasurer of the board of trustees of the Postal Savings System, and fiscal agent for the paying of interest on the public debt, etc.

Bureau of the Budget

The Bureau of the Budget is a newly created office, designed for the purpose of promoting efficiency and economy in government affairs. The director prepares the annual budget and such supplemental or deficiency estimates as the President may wish to recommend to Congress from time to time. He may also by authority make detailed studies of the departments and establishments of the government that necessary changes may be made. Under order of the President each establishment is required, on request, to furnish the Director of the Budget such information as to their workings as he may need.

Commissioner of Internal Revenue

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has general superintendence of the collection of all internal revenue taxes, the enforcement of internal revenue laws and the national prohibition act. He makes recommendation for the appointment of employees under him, fixes their compensation and duties, except as specifically provided by statute, has charge of the preparation and distribution of instructions, regulations, stamps, forms, blanks, hydrometers, stationery, etc., necessary in the collection of internal revenue.

All of the mints and assay offices of the United States are under the direction of the Director of the Mint, who prescribes rules, subject as usual to the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, for the transaction of the business of the same. Tests of weight and fineness of coins struck at the mints are made in the assay laboratory under his charge, and he publishes a quarterly estimate of the value of standard coins of foreign countries for custom house and other public purposes.

The Register of the Treasury, as his title indicates, signs all bonds of the United States, the bonds of the District of Columbia, the Philippine Islands, the City of Manila, the City of Cebu, and the Porto Rican gold loans, and keeps records showing the daily outstanding balances thereof.

The Federal Farm Loan Board administers the Act which makes provision, under certain conditions and regulations, for the loan of money to farmers. It established the twelve federal land banks through which it functions in different parts of the country, and outlined the districts each was to serve. It has power to grant charters to national farm loan associations and joint-stock land banks, makes appraisal of farm lands and prepares and publishes amortization tables. Naturally the operation of farm loan associations and joint-stock land banks are supervised by this board.

Bureau of Engraving and Printing

Much has been heard lately of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, which designs, engraves, prints and finishes all moneys and securities of the Government embraced under the following: United States notes, bonds, certificates of indebtedness, certificates, national bank notes, Federal reserve notes, Federal reserve bank currency, internal revenue, postage, thrift, war savings, customs stamps. Also, Treasury warrants, Treasury drafts and checks, disbursing officers' checks, licenses, passports, commissions, patent and pension certificates, portraits of deceased members of Congress and other public officers, as authorized by law, and all postage stamps, moneys and securities authorized by the Bureau of Insular Affairs for the insular possessions of the government.

This great Bureau was heard of recently as a result of an order issued by the President under which the director and twenty-seven of his chief assistants were removed from office. The executive order merely stated that the change was in the interest of the public service. The Bureau is one of the show places of the government, tens of thousands of persons visiting it annually. It is now functioning smoothly, and the casual visitor would have no knowledge of the fact that there was an upheaval in connection with its personnel a short time ago.

Public Health Service

The Public Health Service devotes its energies to the task of combating epidemics, and to studies of disease, to the end that the public may be protected. It works with quarantine officers and with state health bodies. Its officers hold rank like those in the army and navy, and are specialists in their lines. Broadly speaking, any question relating to public health may be submitted to the Surgeon General and attention will be given it. The Service does not wish to infringe upon the duties of state health bodies, seeking only to co-operate in campaigns to check and prevent disease. Its work is most important.

Coast Guard

The Coast Guard functions under the Secretary of the Treasury in time of peace and under the Secretary of the Navy in time of war. Under law passed in 1915 the then existing Revenue-Cutter Service and the Life-Saving Service were joined and the service became known as the Coast Guard. It is in charge of a commandant directly under the supervision of the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury assigned to that duty. It renders assistance to vessels in distress, saves life and property, removes wrecks and other floating danger to navigation, and

(Continued on Page Fifteen)

ATTORNEY GENERAL DAUGHERTY RULES NO VESSEL CARRYING ALCOHOLIC LIQUORS CAN COME WITHIN THREE-MILE LIMIT

With the approval of President Harding and the Cabinet, Attorney General Daugherty, October 6, ruled that no vessel carrying alcoholic liquors can come within the three-mile limit of the American shore. This ruling applies to ships flying foreign flags as well as to American privately owned vessels.

This decision renders it necessary, therefore, for the shipping board to discontinue the sale of liquor on all Government ships outside the territorial limits of the United States, prevents the carrying of liquor anywhere in the world by any privately owned ship flying the American flag, and bars American ports to the ships of any nation unless their liquor stores are disposed of before they enter the territorial waters of this country. This will include not only the waters within the three mile limit of continental United States, but also those within the same limits of Porto Rico, the Philippines, the Hawaiian Islands, Alaska, and the Virgin Islands. The Panama Zone is especially exempted by the statute. The decision, which has been delayed for many months, reverses the ruling of the former counsel for the United States shipping board, and is based upon decisions of the United States Supreme Court in several cases.

Attorney General Daugherty holds that the fundamental consideration is that the Eighteenth Amendment represents the culmination of fifty years struggle of the American people to effectively settle the problems arising from the use of intoxicating liquor as a beverage. "To hold that the intent of Congress in proposing the wording of the Amendment and of the states ratifying it was anything less than to extend its inhibitions wherever the judicial arm of this government extended for any purposes is to fail to apply all the rules the Supreme Court has laid down for arriving at the intention of constitutional enactments."

Bar Receipts on Transatlantic Liners Decrease—Decline Attributed to Prohibition

The White Star Line reports from London that the bar receipts on the transatlantic liners under its flag have shown a decided decrease during the last twelve months, according to Glenn Byers, writing in the "Shipping News" section of the San Francisco Bulletin of September 27.

F. L. Wanamaker, of the purchasing department of the White Star Line of New York, attributes this decline to the influence of prohibition, says Mr. Byers, and declares that the passengers, particularly tourists, willfully and emphatically are turning away from the bars and also have registered their objection to being subjected on the water to drinking scenes. The English shipping officials attribute the decline in bar patronage to the prohibition sentiment in America and date that decline from the beginning of prohibition enforcement by the United States.

This statement of Mr. Wanamaker follows that made a few months ago by Mr. William A. Sellender, general passenger agent of the Matson Line, whose ships are "dry" and who declared that business had increased rather than diminished since the bars were closed. In addition to this, Mr. Sellender declared that the Matson passenger department had been informed by tourists that they preferred to travel on the dry boats rather than on the wet transpacific liners that touch at Honolulu inward and outward bound.

New Hampshire Republicans and Democrats Stand For Enforcement Of Prohibition

The New Hampshire Republican state convention recently adopted a plank opposing weakening of the Volstead Act by any modifications permitting the return of light wines and beer. The Democratic plank calls for strict enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment. Both conventions took such action unanimously and without debate.

Republicans of Colorado Strongly Support Prohibition

Law-abiding citizens of Colorado are rejoicing over the emphatic way in which the Republican party has voiced its stand for prohibition and law enforcement. The Republican platform contains the following:

"Realizing that discrimination in the enforcement of laws breeds disrespect for all laws, we unqualifiedly advocate rigid enforcement of our state Prohibition Acts, the Eighteenth Amendment, and the Volstead Act."

Prominent Georgia White Ribboner First Woman to Become U. S. Senator

One of the pioneer W. C. T. U. workers of Georgia last week won the distinction of being the first of her sex to obtain appointment to the United States Senate. She is Mrs. W. H. Felton of Cartersville, Georgia, long known as the "grand old woman of Georgia," and has been named by Governor Thomas W. Hardwick as United States Senator to succeed the late Thomas E. Watson until the November elections, when a successor will be chosen at the polls. Mrs. Felton is eighty-seven years of age and has been prominent in temperance and suffrage activities for nearly half a century. She is a sister of Mrs. Mary McLendon, for many years a member of the state executive committee of the Georgia W. C. T. U., and also prominent as a worker for suffrage, in the days of its unpopularity.

When Prohibition Is Enforced

"We won't need to worry about some diseases, I suppose, when the temperance laws are perfectly enforced everywhere," remarks Dr. Royal S. Copeland, New York's Health Commissioner, in one of his recent talks on health. "One of these diseases is cirrhosis of the liver. In almost every instance it is due to the use of alcohol."

Directly, or Indirectly, the Influence of the Wet Interests is Against Law

During the past weeks THE UNION SIGNAL has been recounting the various activities of the liquor element. It is readily seen that the whole influence of those who stand for the manufacture and sale of intoxicants, whether directly so stated, or camouflaged under the guise of "light wines and beer," is against the observance and enforcement of law. The list of these activities has by no means been exhausted. We add a few herewith.

Liquor Interests Behind Opposition to Wright Law

The public fight against the Wright law, California's state enforcement code, is a lawless movement, since the code merely carries out the provisions of the Eighteenth Amendment, by linking up the concurrent powers of the state and nation, and will demand nothing which is not demanded by the Volstead Act, changing automatically as the Volstead Act is changed. It is therefore not a prohibition law, but an enforcement law, giving power to more than three hundred courts and three thousand state officials to share in the task of making the law of the United States of America supreme.

The propaganda used by the liquor interests in this campaign is so insidious that in many cases individual voters are influenced to become, unconsciously, workers for the traffic. In many cities the press also is working for the liquor interests, though often masking its sentiments behind pleas for the grape and hop industries. The most outstanding of the methods used in reaching the voters and influencing them are: Circularization in favor of the grape industry; false interpretation of the purpose and meaning of the Volstead Act; meetings and addresses in support of the grape and hop industries; personal propaganda on the financial loss to the tax-payer by the elimination of the liquor industry; newspaper advertising and articles, paid and otherwise.

Ohio Made a Battle Field

In a united effort to nullify prohibition in the state of Ohio, the forces of the A. A. P. A. are concentrating their strength upon this particular field. Ohio, rather than one of the other states, has been selected for this attention, says the state secretary of the organization, because it is the birthplace of the W. C. T. U. and contains the headquarters of the A. S. L. A victory here, therefore,

(Continued on Page Fourteen)

PROGRESS IN CHILD WELFARE AT THE IOWA CHILD WELFARE RESEARCH STATION

Dr. Bird T. Baldwin, Director

Dr. Baldwin Measures a Normal Baby

By means of the generous gift of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, supplementing the state appropriation, the Iowa Child Welfare Research Station has been organized on a broad and thoroughly scientific basis for contributing materially to our knowledge of the problems of child welfare. The station now has a staff of twenty-two trained investigators. Eight scientific studies have been published, a series of popular bulletins in nutrition and physical growth issued, and hundreds of letters requesting help and advice on problems of child welfare have been answered.

The Pre-School Laboratory is probably the most interesting recent project of the division of psychology, in which Dr. Lorle I. Stecher is working with the director of the station.

It would be of great interest if we could describe in detail the work of the different divisions: The division of genetics and eugenics; of psychology; anthropometry; nutrition; sociology; and if we could tell you something of the work of the staff of twenty-two trained investigators.

The Pre-School Laboratory is designed for experimental work with children from two to four years of age. Twenty-four normal and superior children have been in regular attendance during the past year in two groups, the younger children coming at nine o'clock and leaving about half past ten, when the older ones arrive for an hour and a half session.

In the past many parents, and often educators, have believed that up to the age of six a child might just as well play at home alone. We now know that the sooner children make the adjustment to other individuals the better it is for their character development and habit formation. Children of this age have never been studied psychologically—except by their mothers, who are usually too busy to write down their observations. So each young mother has to begin all over again instead of having the experience of others to profit by. The Pre-School Laboratory will furnish some definite information in regard to the training of young children.

The laboratory consists of a new four-room building especially planned for this work with little children. The group room is a charming, home-like place, with plenty of equipment for play and educational activities. During the morning, the children are occupied with a simple and flexible schedule of singing-games, stories, rhythmic exercises, and simple occupational projects. They willingly leave the group to play other interesting "games" in the psychological examination rooms. A variety of mental examinations of each child, together with special studies on different phases of the development of motor co-ordination and other simple learning processes, are made, and physical measurements taken once a month, on the date of the child's birth.

What to Feed the Children

A most valuable work is being carried on in the metabolism ward at the Children's Hospital under the direction of the research professor, Dr. Amy L. Daniels. Here are the little babies who are kept under special and constant observation in order to determine the best diet for the artificially fed baby. Many mothers who have to feed their babies artificially do not know that a patent baby-food, or pasteurized milk, is not sufficient to make the little one thrive. Dr. Amy L. Daniels has shown the great value of orange and tomato juice, and of strained vegetable soups, in stimulating growth, and preventing such diseases as scurvy and rickets. Experiments with guinea pigs and rats, showing the great changes in weight, general appearance, size and activity that result from different diets, have proved of importance in determining the factors that make for proper feeding of infants and school children.

Act of Iowa General Assembly, April 21, 1917

"The State Board of Education is hereby authorized to establish and maintain at Iowa City as an integral part of the State University, the Iowa Child Welfare Research Station, having as its objects the investigation of the best scientific methods of conserving and developing the normal child, the dissemination of the information acquired by such investigation and the training of students for work in such fields."

The Importance of Ancestors

The division of genetics and eugenics, in the establishment of which the Woman's Christian Temperance Union has been especially interested, is working to establish the fundamental principles of heredity. It is useless to talk about the way such qualities as good physique, character, and intelligence are handed down from parent to child until we have studied the laws of inheritance in simpler organisms. Dr. Phineas W. Whiting, who has been working for a number of years with a tiny wasp, can now, because of his knowledge of the laws of breeding in this insect, make to order almost any variety of the species. Such questions as the effect of alcohol and disease poisons on the germ-plasm, the carriers of heredity, can be answered only after research of this type.

Our Future Citizens

The division of sociology aims to investigate the conditions under which children are born and live, and to discover ways in which their normal social development can be fostered. By careful study, Dr. Hornell Hart has traced the large numbers of people who are leaving the farms and bringing up their children in cities. He has established the fact that the people who are having the fewest children are the economically successful, the native rather than the foreign-born, the highly educated, and the city dwellers. Conditions such as these cannot fail to have a profound effect upon the types of children produced, the sort of home and community environment provided for them, and hence, upon the trend of character of the population. The division has held many conferences with social workers, and is actively interested in all measures and legislation for social betterment.

The Sound Body

The division of anthropometry conducts experimental and field work to determine how children grow. One investigation deals with the growth of the wrist bones, studied by means of the X-ray photograph. Since the size of these bones is a very accurate indication of the general physical development of a child, the formulation of a scale of anatomical development will prove of great value for diagnostic purposes. Probably the greatest accomplishment of the division of anthropometry is the formulation of an age-height-weight table which will enable parents or teachers to tell just what a child of any age should weigh for its height. This will supply a need keenly felt by all nutrition workers. A similar table is being prepared for the National Tuberculosis Association, to show what should be the breathing capacity of a child of any given age and weight. At the request of their parents and teachers, hundreds of children have been measured, and several large public school systems have reorganized their method of promotion in order to take into account the physiological age of the child as determined by the Baldwin standards.

A Game to Help Girls Grow

Mind in the Making

The psychological division is doing in the field of mental development what the older science of anthropometry has done for physical growth. Work similar to that going on in the Pre-School Laboratory is also being done for older children. The result of six years' observation of large groups of children has enabled the division to publish a study which adds much to our knowledge of the curve of mental growth. There are great differences in the growth of superior and average children, and it is possible to tell from a psychological examination, early in a child's life, what will probably be its future ability. Children of superior intellectual ability were also found to be physically superior. The division maintains a clinic to which children may be brought for examination, and people are beginning to inquire how a child of a certain age "measures up" mentally just as they like to know how a child compares with the standard of height and weight. Children who manifest puzzling dispositional traits and so-called "problem cases" receive a thorough psychological examination, since an understanding of the child's psychological make-up is fundamental for any moral training. Many normal children who show symptoms of partial mental maladjustment can be helped to adapt themselves to the conditions of life and assisted toward obtaining a happier outlook, by an examiner with psychological insight.

Playing "Going to Chicago," a game originated by the children themselves. The "conductor" is seen taking up the tickets.

Helping Flowers—and Children—to Grow

Human Service

Besides the services mentioned in connection with the different divisions, the station co-operates with many national child welfare agencies, with the extension division and the various medical departments of the University of Iowa in all phases of child welfare work.

The station has in its files a volume of correspondence from persons in the state and elsewhere, who desire information about child welfare problems. Mothers of young babies, or of school children, ask advice from the nutrition department in regard to proper methods of feeding. Presidents of study clubs inquire about programs or speakers on child welfare, or about bibliographies and lists of references on special phases of education, on vocational guidance, on physical growth, on mental tests, and on similar topics bearing on the conservation and betterment of the child. Social workers, teachers, and parents desire information about schools and institutions, or laws concerning the status of the child. Community leaders inquire about the best methods of stimulating interest in child welfare work. Social agencies request assistance in regard to types of record forms and the organization of reports and publicity material. Many of these inquiries are referred to other specialized departments of the university, but the very fact that persons in isolated rural places confidently appeal to the station for help is significant of the very real service the Iowa Child Welfare Research Station is rendering in the state and in the nation.

OFFICIAL WARNING AGAINST BOOTLEG LIQUOR

In view of the high mortality rate due to alcoholic poisoning during the past year and the apparent lack of knowledge on the part of the public in general as to the distinction between the various kinds of alcohols, J. M. Doran, Head of the Industrial Alcohol and Chemical Division of the Prohibition Unit, has submitted to Commissioner Haynes the following statement, in an effort to impress upon the public the dangers involved in the drinking of bootleg liquor:

"Wood alcohol, the common term applied to methyl alcohol as distinguished from grain or ethyl alcohol, derives its name from its source of production which is the destructive distillation of wood—that is, the heating of wood in retorts in the absence of air and the condensation of the volatile products. This product is now generally termed 'methanol' in the trade and is so labeled, in order to provide further protection against the confusion of the various alcohols.

"Pure or refined wood alcohol, also known as 'Columbian Spirits', is practically odorless and colorless and its presence in any intoxicating liquor could not be detected by the sense of sight, taste or smell. However, poorer grades of wood alcohol have an odor on account of the impurities from the wood, and might be detected by the sense of smell. This grade of wood alcohol is sometimes used as a denaturant in pure grain alcohol to form the product known as denatured alcohol.

"Wood alcohol produces intoxication rapidly and in addition seriously affects the optic nerve, resulting in paralysis and atrophy with consequent total blindness which, so far as is known, is incurable. Opinions differ as to whether or not absolutely pure wood alcohol will produce blindness, but the opinion is practically unanimous that the commercial grade ordinarily obtainable will invariably produce blindness. Wood alcohol is never used as a medicant or in the preparation of any of the various products such as perfumes, rubbing compounds, etc. The alcohol which is used in the manufacture of these products is usually one of the various formulae of denatured alcohols.

"There are two classes of denatured alcohols. The first is known as completely denatured alcohol which has been prepared according to a limited number of fixed formulae for sale to the general public without permits. All of the products produced by these formulae are injurious to the human system, being totally unfit for beverage purposes or for the manufacture of any product to be taken internally. Every package of completely denatured alcohol containing less than five wine gallons, sold or offered for sale by denaturers or dealers, must have affixed thereto a label on which must be printed the words 'completely denatured alcohol' and, in addition, on the same label, there shall be printed in large letters under the skull and bones symbol, the word 'poison' together with the following statement: 'Completely denatured alcohol is a violent poison. It cannot be applied externally to human or animal tissues without serious injurious results. It cannot be taken internally without inducing blindness and general physical decay, ultimately resulting in death.' The word 'pure' qualifying denatured alcohol will not be permitted to appear on any label.

"The second class known as specially denatured alcohol is prepared by the use of a great many specific denaturants. It is not so thoroughly denatured and protected as to permit its general sale without permit. It can only be obtained under a heavy bond for use in manufacturing processes. Every person who sells specially denatured alcohol except the proprietor of the denaturant plant must qualify as a bonded dealer in specially denatured alcohol. All formulae of specially denatured alcohol are so constituted as to prevent their internal use.

"A word of caution should be sounded against the use of any quick test for the purpose of determining the presence or absence of wood alcohol such as the addition of powders or vials of liquid. It is impossible to detect wood alcohol except by a thorough chemical analysis and that performed by a skilled chemist in a well equipped laboratory. It is a well known fact among all chemists that wood alcohol is one of the most difficult substances to detect in any liquid."

TESTIMONY OF MEN WHO "LIKE LIQUOR" OR WHO WERE OPPOSED TO PROHIBITION

Will Irwin Acknowledges Benefits of Prohibition

Will Irwin is one of a group of eminent California authors whose influence was said to be adverse to prohibition in the Golden State. In a recent article on bootlegging, in the Saturday Evening Post, Mr. Irwin has this to say concerning the results of national prohibition:

"Lately I have talked over the general situation with several social-settlement workers of New York. They all report their people doing well under prohibition. In general, they find less desertion, less thriftlessness, fewer crimes against women and children. One or two lament a recent increase of home-brewing which affects the sobriety of the women, but they seem to regard this, at its present extent, as a minor evil. Of late the traffic in women and commercialized vice in general have dwindled almost to the vanishing point."

Not a Believer in Prohibition But Nevertheless Convinced of Its Value

"While I am not a believer in prohibition, particularly in the way the law has been carried out in the past two years," says D. C. Bakewell, President Duquesne Steel Foundry Company of Pittsburg, Pa., "nevertheless, there is no question in my mind that it has been a great help to industry as a whole. Very few men are now absent after pay-day, whereas, in the old days, we used to count on a fairly large percentage of absentees. This money is undoubtedly being spent in a wiser manner than it was in the past, and I believe it will be for the ultimate benefit of the country to have some sort of prohibition in effect."

"I Am a Man Who Likes Liquor But—"

Health Officer George W. Goler of Rochester, New York, admits that he "likes liquor as well as anyone" but is a strong advocate of the enforcement of the Volstead law on the ground of its benefit to the health of the people. In an interview reported in the Rochester Times-Union of July 18, 1922, Mr. Goler says:

"I would not abate one jot of the Volstead Law. It is medically and socially sound. It has put health in the way of a lot of people who otherwise would not have had it, and certainly has not taken health away from anyone.

"And, remember, I say this as a man who likes liquor as well as anyone. I believe, however, that one should be public spirited enough to put aside one's personal likes in a question which involves the health and happiness of the majority.

"The people have weathered the present period of financial and industrial stress better than they have weathered any other period because they have not been able to spend their hard-earned savings on booze. Anything that lessens the period of stress lessens worry—and worry kills more than do the doctors.

"Drinking does not relieve worry or nervous stress. The man who drinks to 'drown his troubles' only thinks he is drowning them. They are right there waiting for him and by filling his body with poison and irritating his nervous system he has only made himself less fit to cope with them."

Dr. Goler said that he had collected no statistics on the lessening of disease since the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment, but that he was confident from his observation that the general health of the people is improved. Children are being better cared for, are getting more nourishing food, better clothing and better general care, he said, now that fathers are spending their wages on the care of their families instead of for drink. In many cases women who formerly lived in dread of a drunken husband and who were forced to seek employment to support their children, now know, for the first time in years, the happiness of a quiet home and the co-operation of the father in caring for the children.

"I Am Not a Prohibitionist; Nevertheless—"

"Personally, I am not a prohibitionist," said Joseph P. Howe, a prominent New York lawyer, while stopping at "The Ambassador," Atlantic City, N. J. "I like wine as well as many others, but I feel it a patriotic duty to subject my own desires in order that the greatest good to the greatest number may be served. As prohibition is a law, I really have no other choice as I attempt to be a law-abiding citizen. A law is a law and we must obey it even if we do not like it. We cannot set aside some laws and say we will not regard them because they do not suit us.

"Some people say prohibition curtails their liberty. Of course it does. So does every other law. Not being permitted to drive seventy miles an hour, to be denied maintaining a Mormon establishment and the hundreds of other laws also curtail their liberty. Liberty is a much misunderstood word. Liberty means lawlessness to some. The man who says no one has a right to tell him what to do and that he is going to do what he wants is simply talking childishly. He has not grown up. He is the same boy who drew pictures on his slate just because the teacher said he must not. He pets his infantile inclinations and says no one is his boss. The people banded together, working for the country's best interests, are his boss. No man who is a patriot will drink nowadays. He swears he will live by the Constitution and let him do so or be punished with other lawbreakers," concluded Mr. Howe.

"I Like Alcoholic Beverages, But Recognize Benefits of Dry Law"

While mayor of the city of Louisville, Kentucky, George Wessinger Smith gave to the press this testimony: "Although not a prohibitionist, there can be no question in my mind as to the beneficial results of prohibition from an economic point of view." In reply to a recent letter written by THE UNION SIGNAL to Mr. Smith, now president of the Louisville Water Company, he says:

"I am of the same opinion. My purpose in the original statement was to mirror the truth as I saw it under my daily observation as mayor. The new generation will not know the taste of liquor. At that time the full economic benefit will be reaped.

As heretofore stated publicly, only the extremists expect full results immediately. I like the taste of alcoholic beverage yet I am convinced that economicall morally and spiritually the world woul be better off by far if we all let liqu alone."

"At First I Was Opposed to th Prohibition Law"

"At first I was opposed to the prohib tion law," writes August W. Smith, pres dent and treasurer of the Brandon Mill Greenville, South Carolina, to the Man facturers Record, "but after seeing th effect on our people, I am very muc in favor of same. My idea is that ther is no law that has been enacted that ha done the good that the prohibition la has. Before this law was enacted, ou mill communities were troubled no littl with 'drunks' and the families of a grea many of our people were destitute, on ac count of the men spending most of th money that they received for liquor. Now you never see a drunken man around th mill villages and the people are happie and living better than they ever did."

"I Know Whereof I Speak—Used to Run a Saloon"

William Bennett, city street sweepe of Los Angeles, is reported in the Lo Angeles Record of September 8, 1922, t have said: "I want things left just a they are. I don't want any more of th saloon business. I know about it. I use to run one. We can get along witho light wines and beer. It's all right jus as it is."

Eighteenth Amendment Defended by Former Opponents

"One of the curious features of the pend ing movement on the part of the liquo crowd to break down the prohibition law and prevent its enforcement, is that many of the most stalwart and deter mined defenders of the Amendment are public men and women who did not originally favor national prohibition and who took no part in the fight for prohibition when the fighting was hard and the goal distant—unless, indeed, some of them were among the opponents of prohibition," says The Baptist.

"The eminent jurist who fills the office of Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court was not an advocate of national prohibition; but one of the most crushing blows dealt at the nullificationists after the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment was an editorial written by Mr. Taft for the Philadelphia Ledger in which he told the wets they had not a leg left to stand on and that the amendment could not be invalidated and must be obeyed.

"The veteran Christian scholar and editor, Lyman Abbott, was not among those who labored for national prohibition in pre-war times; but Lyman Abbott's paper, The Outlook, had this to say editorially last month:

"'Any intelligent and fair-minded man who is accustomed to studying, comparing, and tabulating the sources and factors of historical progress must come to the conclusion, no matter how wet his sentiments may be, that the Prohibition Amendment was not a sudden and sporadic political move, planned in secret and enacted by surprise, but is the result of steady-going and concerted action by men and women who compose a majority, and perhaps a very large majority, of the qualified voters of the United States.'"

PROGRAM FEATURES OF WORLD'S W. C. T. U. CONVENTION

TWENTY-SEVEN COUNTRIES TO BE REPRESENTED NOVEMBER 11-15, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

The World's W. C. T. U. Convention will open on Saturday evening, November 11, in the parlors of the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, with an informal reception to the delegates from "all round the world." Welcomes will be extended by the Governor of Pennsylvania, the Mayor of Philadelphia, representatives of the churches, social welfare societies, women's clubs, and the state and city W. C. T. U.'s.

Responses will be given by members of delegations who have come the greatest distance to attend the convention: India, Japan, China, Australia, New Zealand, and by Miss Christina Roberts, granddaughter of Rosalind, Countess of Carlisle, our former World's president.

Sunday's Meetings

Delegates are invited to reserved seats at the Sunday morning service in the Church of the Holy Trinity, the Rev. Dr. Floyd Tomkins, rector, preaching the sermon.

On Sunday afternoon, in the Academy of Music, will be held the Devotional Day service, which will be opened with a memorial hour commemorative of the life of our honored World's W. C. T. U. president, Rosalind, Countess of Carlisle, and other World's officers who have passed to the better land since the last convention.

Prohibition in the United States, Sunday Evening's Theme

The meeting Sunday evening, at the Academy of Music, will be of great interest to foreign delegates and visitors. The theme will be "The Benefits the United States Has Experienced from National Prohibition." The chief speaker will be Major Roy Haynes, Federal Prohibition Commissioner. The Right Honorable Leif Jones of London, former member of the British Parliament, will speak on the question from the viewpoint of an Englishman.

Miss Jane Darling, President of the Edinburgh District W. C. T. U.

Miss Mabel Archibald, in costume of Indian princess. Miss Archibald is editor of the National W. C. T. U. paper of India.

Morning Meetings Devoted to Business

The meetings on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday mornings will be devoted to department discussions, the election of officers of the World's W. C. T. U., and other general business.

Overseas Delegates Furnish Monday Program

The Monday afternoon program will be given by delegates from foreign countries. Among the speakers will be Mrs. Kubushiro, niece of Madam Yajima, from Japan; Miss Mary J. Campbell, World's W. C. T. U. organizer, from India; Mrs. Helen Barton, of Scotland, who has traveled around the world in the interests of the temperance reform; and Fraulein von Blücher, grandniece of the famous Marshal von Blücher, who aided Wellington at the battle of Waterloo, and Fraulein Lohmann, who conducted the recent prohibition referendum in Bielefeld, Germany, the first vote ever taken in Germany on the prohibition question.

Young People to Give "Round the World" Demonstration

Youth will dominate the convention on Monday evening. The program will be arranged by the young people. The young women delegates from foreign lands, of whom a number will be present, will be introduced and give brief addresses. The general secretary of the Young People's Branch of the World's W. C. T. U., Mrs. Mary Anderson Crawford, will preside. Mrs. Maude B. Perkins, general secretary of the United States Young People's Branch, will conduct a demonstration of which the Polyglot Petition will be the central feature. Young women delegates from the United States will follow with a spectacular demonstration of special interest to foreign delegates. Dr. Valeria H. Parker, director of the department of Social Morality of the National W. C. T. U., and executive secretary of the United States Interdepartmental Social Hygiene Board, will deliver an address.

Cuba, Mexico, and the Near East will be heard from on Tuesday afternoon, and Mrs. Deborah Knox Livingston will relate experiences of her recent tour of South Africa. Other speakers of prominence from Washington are expected to participate in the program.

Peace and International Relations Tuesday Evening's Subject

The subject to be considered on Tuesday evening, in the Academy of Music, is Peace and International Relations. The speakers for the evening are not yet definitely decided upon, but they will be men and women who can discuss with authority these very important questions, and will represent not only the viewpoint of the United States but those of other nations.

Polyglot Program for Closing Evening

On Wednesday evening, the close of the convention, brief messages will be given by representatives of all the many nations who have sent delegates. Someone will tell of the recent campaign in Sweden, in which the women polled so large a vote. A delegate from New Zealand will graphically describe the campaign for national prohibition now in progress in that country, which is soon to vote. The progress in other parts of the world will be traced by eloquent speakers, furnishing a bird's eye view of the advance of the anti-alcohol movement around the globe.

Delegates from twenty-seven different countries are expected. Three World's W. C. T. U. organizers, and twenty superintendents of departments will be present.

Mrs. George Milne of Aberdeen, Scotland, acting vice-president Scottish British Women's Temperance Association

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union
Evanston, Illinois

Editor-in-Chief - - - Miss Anna A. Gordon
Managing Editor - - Miss Julia F. Deane
Associate Editor - - Miss Vida I. Thompson

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors of The Editorial Department, The Union Signal, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittance of $1.50 or under.

Notice of Expiration is sent to the subscriber two or three weeks before renewal is due, so that by immediate attention to this reminder not an issue need be missed. RENEW PROMPTLY.

Remittances should be made by draft on New York or Chicago, or by Post-office Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

Change of Address. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE, $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
Foreign Postage, 52 Cents Additional

Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (Monthly) 50c a Year
Foreign Postage, 12 Cents Additional

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., post-office as second class matter. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized August 20, 1918.

Evanston, Illinois, October 12, 1922

Mrs. Armor Arrives in New Zealand

News has been received of the safe arrival in New Zealand of Mrs. Mary Harris Armor and her daughter-in-law. She writes from the steamer just as it is entering port: "A marconigram was received last night from the Wellington W. C. T. U., saying, 'Welcome to New Zealand.' It warmed my heart. I am feeling fine. Love to everybody."

The Problem of the "Stay-at-Home" Voter

A member of the Kansas state legislature has announced that he will present at the coming session a bill to penalize all those who fail to vote at every election. The plan provides that at the beginning of each election year a poll tax of $10 will be spread on the records against every person in the state old enough to vote. If the voter attended the primary and cast a ballot, he would be given a certificate showing that he had voted. When he went to the polls at the regular fall election, he would receive another certificate. By presenting these two certificates to the county treasurer when he paid his taxes, his poll tax would be cancelled.

Without discussing the advisability of this method of penalizing the delinquent voter, it seems to us there is certainly reason for adopting some drastic measure to bring to American citizens a realizing sense of their civic responsibilities at the ballot box.

It is a truism to say that it is the "stay-at-home" voters who aid and abet the enemies of good government and make possible their control of civic affairs. How can such a calamity be prevented at the coming election? Especially how can we get the women interested to vote at the November 7 election?

RESOLUTION

SUGGESTED FOR ADOPTION BY CHURCHES AND OTHER INFLUENTIAL ORGANIZATIONS

W. C. T. U. speakers are urgently requested to secure from all meetings which they address the adoption of this resolution:

RESOLVED: That we declare against any modification of the Volstead Code which would admit wine or beer or otherwise weaken enforcement, and will do all in our power to insure the election November 7, 1922, of members of the United States Congress and state legislatures who will work and vote for the retention and enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Code.

(Through your local papers give wide-spread publicity to the resolutions thus secured.)

You, dear comrade, in your little corner and I in mine can help. Hold voters' teas, voters' luncheons, voters' receptions. Invite candidates to address these gatherings. Arrange for house-to-house visits, to be followed by letters, telephone messages, and informing literature. Let the query, "For whom are you going to vote November 7, and why?" be a popular theme of conversation at every get-together affair of the women from now until the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November.

Get the women of your town to the polls!

Publish These Points on Prohibition

In the beginnings of the United States of America, Edmund Burke, England's great statesman, said: "If this young republic ever goes down to oblivion, it will be because of the difficulty of educating its multitude of rulers."

The truth of this prediction is self-evident. In just the degree that we have educated our one hundred million rulers, or voters, have we made real progress. When ignorance in general, or on any particular question, goes to the polls in large numbers and votes, it spells disaster to the nation.

Whether or not there will be a big majority vote at the November election for Congressmen and state legislators opposed to the modification of the Volstead Act and endorsing national prohibition depends upon the educational work that has been or shall be done to emphasize the following five important facts:

FIRST: The return of beer and wine means inevitably the return of the old-time saloon, or the licensing of certain places for the sale of alcoholic beverages. The alternative is the distribution of these liquors by means of groceries, soft drink establishments or coffee shops—a method that would stamp them as "respectable" and they would be an ever accessible temptation to the youth of our land.

SECOND: The return of beer and wine would put again on the market, as a legalized commodity, drinks branded by science as intoxicating, and containing a poison destructive to the physical, mental and moral wellbeing of the individual. In addition, the experience of years has proved that the beer drinking habit is certain to create an appetite for the strongest distilled liquors.

THIRD: The return of the traffic in beer and wines means the return to power of the brewers, and would eventually result in their controlling, in large measure, the politics of city, state and nation. As a reminder of what that would mean, read the report on the activities of the brewers, submitted to the U. S. Senate on September 5, 1919.

FOURTH: The return of beer and wine would make enforcement of the prohibition law immeasurably more difficult, if not impossible. No less an authority than Chief Justice Taft has said: "Any such loophole as light wines and beer would make the Eighteenth Amendment a laughing stock."

FIFTH: Inadequately as the national prohibition law has been enforced in some sections of the country, there is abundant evidence of the most reliable kind to show that it has lessened the consumption of liquor, improved home life and social conditions, and by branding the drink traffic as an outlaw, reduced tremendously the temptation to the young people to acquire the drink habit.

Convince the voters of your community of these five truths, and there is only one conclusion at which they can arrive—that they must go to the polls November 7, and vote for candidates opposed to the modification of the Volstead law.

As Industrious as Satan!

Of course you have read of the gentle little lady who could not bear to hear evil spoken of any person, however far from perfect. Thinking to corner her, her children began to find fault with his Satanic majesty, one after another endeavoring to gain her agreement to criticism of the Evil One. After listening in silence for a time, she interrupted with the quiet protest: "Well, young folk, if thee were all as industrious as the devil is, think what thee might accomplish!"

It is always "while men sleep" and forget to criticise and oppose, that evil has a chance to make headway. The organizations against prohibition have been very active through the summer months. Has your local union kept up to the mark? These societies, if we may believe their statements, are continuing to grow. How many members have you added during the last few months? The daily papers tell us of various mass meetings, held to fight prohibition. How many have taken place in your community, to further prohibition and law enforcement, and how large were the audiences?

Many of our public officials state that they receive far more attention from the lawless than from the law-abiding element. As one said: "The representatives of the criminal class came to me repeatedly, seeking favors, and when they found I was not to be bribed, threatened me in every way. Many of the best people, on the contrary, were apparently utterly indifferent and without real knowledge in the matter. If I were not doing my duty I could be forced to do so, but they did not know what I was doing. If they criticised, it was from hearsay, and if they praised, it was not because of intimate knowledge of my actions."

Could this state of affairs be duplicated in your community? Does your union know the character and actions of each official? Depend upon it, the forces of evil know exactly what they may count on from each of the public servants. Why should we not be equally industrious and well informed?

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA, NOVEMBER 11-16, 1922

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA, NOVEMBER 17-19, 1922.

Chairmen Hostess Committees of World's Convention

Hospitality, Mrs. H. E. Fahnestock, 924 S. 46th St., Phila.

Reception, Mrs. Caroline Moore, 1429 N. 16th St., Phila.

Entertainment, Mrs. E. R. Ferguson, 1937 N. 32nd St., Phila.

Restaurants, Mrs. C. G. Diehl, 5141 Webster St., Phila.

Publicity, Mrs. C. C. Parlin, 128 E. Walnut Lane, Germantown, Phila.

Seating, Miss Ella Broomell, Harrisburg, Pa.

Decoration, Mrs. Winfield S. MacHenry, Ridley Park, Pa.

Social Teas, Miss Josephine Jones.

Pulpits, Miss H. Frances Jones.

Music, Mrs. Vernon E. Hastings, 5425 Catharine St., Phila.

Badges, Miss A. E. Thomas, 1633 Spruce St., Phila.

Chairmen of committees for the National W. C. T. U. Convention will be announced later.

Dr. Wiley Commends W. C. T. U. Leaflets

It is not so many years since it was generally deemed impossible for the medical profession to combat certain diseases successfully without prescribing whisky, wine or beer, one or all. That a great revolution in opinion has taken place is evidenced not only by the pronouncements of the American Medical Association at various times, but by the personal attestation of eminent physicians and scientists of note. We are permitted to quote the following from a letter addressed to Mrs. Martha M. Allen, National W. C. T. U. superintendent of the department of Medical Temperance:

"I think your leaflet on 'Drug Drinks' most excellent. I wish it could be circulated in every family in this country; also your leaflet on the attitude of the professors of medicine on the whisky question, and 'Whisky Not Needed as a Medicine.'

"I hope you will keep up the good work and some day receive that collaboration from the officials which should always be accorded to the enforcement of the existing law.

"Yours very truly,

"(Signed) Harvey W. Wiley, M. D."

Employer Takes Exception to Statement of Secretary Davis

Joseph Hilton, now superintendent of the Seneca Iron and Steel Company, at Buffalo, New York, but employed in the Martins Ferry mill at the same time that Secretary of Labor J. J. Davis worked in the plant, does not agree with the latter that steel workers need beer. In his own experience he found that the men who did not drink were better able to do their work than those who did. "Alcohol in beer, when a man is overheated, may soothe his stomach for a short time," says Mr. Hilton, "but it is not a necessity for steel workers and they are better off without it.

"I have men working for me now who used to say they could not pass the saloon on their way home from work without stopping for a few drinks. The same men have not used liquor for several years, and they tell me they are far better off, are doing better work, and have happier homes. These men say it is not a necessity to have beer and that they can do more work and better work than when they were drinking."

Martyrs for the Cause of Prohibition

Considerable front-page publicity is given by certain papers to occasional shooting of moonshiners and bootleggers by Federal officers, always in self-defense, but correspondingly meager publicity when officers are shot and killed. Records of the Prohibition Unit reveal that twenty-four noble men have tragically given their lives in helping to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment. It were well that the public fully realize the risk to which the prohibition agents are subjected in all parts of the country—even in the shadow of the National Capitol—the splendid sacrifice they are making in an effort to enforce constitutional law, and to banish the dangerous moonshiner and unscrupulous bootlegger, with their poisonous output.

State Conventions

Kansas, Salina, October 10-13.
Oregon, McMinnville, October 10-13.
Missouri, St. Louis, October 10-13.
Idaho (South), October 10-13.
Delaware, Smyrna, October 11-13.
Oklahoma, Enid, October 12-16.
Nebraska, Lincoln, October 13-17.
Indiana, Wabash, October 13-16.
North Carolina, Spencer, October 14-18.
California (North), Modesto, October 16-20.
Connecticut, New London, October 17-19.
Colorado, Pueblo, October 17-19.
Massachusetts, Hyannis, October 17-19.
Alabama, Albany, October 17-19.
Illinois, Decatur, October 17-20.
Ohio, Findlay, October 17-20.
Georgia, Douglasville, October 17-20.
South Dakota, Mitchell, October 18-23.
South Carolina, Newberry, October 20-23.
Vermont, Burlington, October 24-26.
Texas, Fort Worth, October 24-27.
Iowa, Oskaloosa, October 24-27.
Mississippi, Waynesboro, Oct. 24-27.
Arkansas, Paragould, October 25-27.
Florida, Kissimmee, October 31-November 3.
New Jersey, Camden, November 9-10.

No candidate for the Senate or Congress who favors the reopening of the prohibition question should receive the support of those who believe in the Eighteenth Amendment. The wine and beer proposition is a fraud; those who stand back of it want the saloon—the old fashioned saloon with all the vices that go with it.—William Jennings Bryan in The Commoner.

For God and Home and Every Land

Time of Prayer—Noontide

"It is always noontide somewhere,
And across the awakening continents,
From shore to shore, somewhere,
Our prayers are rising evermore."

How excellent is thy loving kindness, O God! therefore the children of men put their trust under the shadow of thy wings. They shall be abundantly satisfied with the fatness of thy house; and thou shalt make them drink of the river of thy pleasures.—Psalm 36:7, 8.

Try, Try Again—Improved

C. A. S. Dwight

If at first you do succeed,
Try, try again.
Life is more than just one deed;
Try, try again.
Never stop with what you've done,
More remains than you have won,
Full content's vouchsafed to none;
Try, try again.

If you've won a bit of fame,
Try, try again!
Seek a still more honored name,
Try, try again.
Sit not down with folded hands,
Cramp not hope with narrow bands;
Think what prowess life demands!
Try, try again.

If you've won on lower plane,
Try, try again!
Life is more than one campaign,
Try, try again.
Send your guidons to the fore,
Strive to seize one standard more,
Still ungained are palms galore;
Try, try again.

If at first you do succeed,
Try, try again!
For future harvests sow thy seed,
Try, try again.
Rise with sacred discontent,
Realize that life is lent
On highest searches to be spent;
Try, try again.

—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

Make Temperance Sunday, October 29, a Great Day

Order Programs, Blackboard Exercises, Temperance Talks, Leaflets for Study and Distribution, Pledge Cards, etc., etc., of the National W. C. T. U. Publishing House, Evanston, Illinois. See page 12.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. HEADQUARTERS

GENERAL OFFICERS:
PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL.
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, FARGO, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA.
TREASURER
MRS. MARGARET C. MUNNS, EVANSTON ILL.

1730 Chicago Avenue, Evanston, Ill.

REST COTTAGE

RED LETTER DAYS

October 29—World's Temperance Sunday.
December 23—Crusade and Pioneers' Day.

TRANSPORTATION NOTES

WORLD'S AND NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTIONS, NOVEMBER, 1922

Tour No. 1. For those who wish to spend Saturday, November 11, in Washington, D. C., and who do not plan to go to Toronto.

A train on the Pennsylvania Railway will leave the Union Station, Chicago, Friday, November 10, at 10:30 a. m., arriving in Washington at 8:00 a. m. The day will be spent sightseeing, and the trip to Philadelphia will be resumed at 4:30 p. m., arriving in the convention city at 7:30 p. m. The return trip can be made at the delegates' pleasure as no special arrangements will be made by the transportation committee. Apply for reservations to W. E. Blachley, Division Passenger Agent, Pennsylvania Railway, 323 South Wells Street, Chicago.

Tour No. 2. For those who wish to attend the World League against Alcoholism meeting in Toronto, Canada, November 25-29.

A train on the New York Central will carry special cars for delegates leaving Chicago, Friday, November 10, at 5:00 p. m., connecting at Buffalo with the Lehigh Valley road. No change of cars will be necessary. Arrival at Philadelphia will be at 8:08 p. m. Apply for reservations to Mr. C. Hartigan, Ass't. Gen. Pass. Agt., New York Central Railroad, La Salle Street Station, Chicago.

Tickets on the going trip will be available on the Pacific Coast November 7 to 13 and in all other parts of the country and Canada, November 8 to 14. By either route, the one way fare, Chicago to Philadelphia, is $29.46. The return trip will be one-half of the regular fare. The Pullman fares are as follows from Chicago, either route; Lower berth, $8.25; upper, $6.60; drawing room, $30.00; compartment, $23.25.

The trip from Philadelphia to Toronto will be made on the Lehigh Valley road, leaving Philadelphia, Tuesday, November 21, at 8:40 p. m. Several hours will be spent at Niagara Falls, arriving in Toronto at 9:43 p. m., November 22. Tickets must be deposited at Buffalo by all delegates who hold tickets to any point east or west of Buffalo.

An agent of the railroad will be at the convention November 15 and 18 for the purpose of validating tickets. Immediately on arrival in Philadelphia tickets should be left at convention headquarters, the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, with Miss Elizabeth Newman, secretary of the transportation committee. On the return the final limit for leaving Philadelphia is December 1. Delegates must arrive at starting point December 3 for all but Pacific Coast points.

The fare from Buffalo to Toronto is $3.67. The pullman fare from Philadelphia to Toronto is as follows: lower berth, $5.25; upper, $4.20; drawing room, $19.50; compartment, $14.75. Reservations for this trip may be made at the convention.

The Pennsylvania and New York Central railroads have prepared a special letter covering details of trips mentioned, which may be obtained on application to the railroads.

It is very important that reservations for either tour from Chicago to Philadelphia should be made as soon as possible. If a sufficient number make reservations, either or both roads will run a special train for the exclusive use of the delegates.

Parties living east of Chicago may join either tour at the most convenient point; western delegates will join in Chicago.

Be sure to secure a certificate from your railroad agent at the time of purchasing your ticket. Do not make the mistake of asking for a receipt. No refund of fare will be made because of failure to secure certificate.

N. B. In order to secure reduced fare, tickets must be purchased going and returning over the same route.

We record here the names of friends and comrades who have recently passed to the higher life.

MRS. LYDIA HARD, of Zion City, Illinois, eldest of fifteen children of Surgeon-General William van Someren of the British Army; wife of Rev. Clark P. Hard, at one time district superintendent of what is now the South India Conference. For forty-five years Mrs. Hard, who was born in India, was her husband's helper in that country and in America. She was an enthusiastic temperance and church worker. Her earnestness and deep spiritual experience never failed to enthuse, and win both old and young to a renewed consecration to service for the Master.

MRS. MARY DENHAM CHALFANT, of Shinnston, West Virginia. From her earliest childhood Mrs. Chalfant evidenced a deep religious faith and a strong interest in temperance matters that continued throughout her life. She and her daughter, Estalee M. Chalfant, M. D., president of the local W. C. T. U., offered the use of their home for the regular meetings of the union and for the instruction of the children of the Loyal Temperance Legion. Hers was a strictly unselfish life, spent in service for others.

MRS. MELISSA CARR WHITTAKER, wife of Rev. W. C. Whittaker, of Sacramento, California. Mrs. Whittaker was the first white missionary to enter north Burmah, where she spent twenty years. She was a woman of rare ability and attainments and of marked spirituality. She was joyous as a bird in her many activities, which ceased only with life in this sphere.

Notes From Your Publishing House

We now have ready for our many friends and patrons a fine photograph of the new Administration Building of the National W. C. T. U. This is also the home of our UNION SIGNAL, official organ of the W. C. T. U., and the Young Crusader, our beautiful monthly paper for the children. Here too are housed our publishing interests, all our business offices being thus conveniently located under one roof immediately at the rear of Rest Cottage, the historic home of Frances E. Willard.

You have often wished you might see this new building and now is your opportunity. The view presents the eastern front and includes the famous chestnut tree planted by Frances Willard many years ago. Size of photograph, 11 x 14 inches. Price, $1.50. Please send remittance with order.

BIBLE WINES VERSUS THE SALOON-KEEPER'S BIBLE. Very apropos to the present time is this "study of the two-wine theory of the Scriptures and arraignment of the argument for Biblical sanction of the use of intoxicants." The author is the Rev. Orin B. Whitmore, who has made extensive study of the question. There is not a dry paragraph in the book in the sense of being uninteresting. It deserves a place in your library and in the public library of your town or city. Handsomely bound in cloth. 116 pp. Price, $1.00.

REMEMBER THAT WE CAN NOW SUPPLY YOU WITH THE BEAUTIFUL NEW SCRIPTURE TEXT ART CALENDARS FOR 1923. One of these calendars should be in every home. Send us your order NOW for a goodly supply and be first in the field. (See advt.)

Among our many leaflets especially applicable to present conditions is a resume of an address by Federal Prohibition Commissioner Roy A. Haynes, "A Vision of American Sovereignty." The matter contained in this leaflet should be placed before all our voters. It is imperative that such material be extensively used. We advise that you order at once in quantities for immediate use. Price, per 100, 45 cents.

Do not forget that your own Publishing House carries a very large and satisfying variety of helps for the Quarterly Temperance Sunday School lessons, Programs, Blackboard Exercises, Temperance Talks for Primary and Junior Workers, Method leaflets, Story leaflets, Responsive Readings, Citizenship leaflets. Plenty of helps for the lesson with leaflets for distribution among old and young, besides pledge cards and songs, can be obtained here. Consult our advertising columns and order early, remembering that "delays are dangerous"— to prompt delivery.

As it is required by the law of the Federal government and of each sover-

(Continued on Page Fourteen)

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

"HOW TO POPULARIZE THE Y. P. B." THEME AT CALIFORNIA (SOUTH) CONVENTION

Hattie M. Doughty, California (South) General Y. P. B. Secretary

A large group of spirited young folks attended the Southern California Y. P. B. convention, held this year in Pasadena. The first day was devoted to the regular routine of reports. In the afternoon, Mrs. Marie Yeoman, president of the Los Angeles county W. C. T. U., brought the message "How a County President could help make the Y. P. B. Popular in her County, and would it be worth while." Mrs. Linnie Carl was also a speaker. In the evening Mrs. Eva C. Wheeler, state W. C. T. U. president, spoke on "The Challenge to Young Men and Women."

An interesting feature was the presentation of a pageant, "Challenge to the Constitution," in which poor California looked so burdened and disgraced that ex-Congressman Randall stepped forward and explained the reason for such a deplorable condition, and suggested the remedy—"Vote for the Wright Act."

We believe we have a splendid team in the newly elected officers: President, Mr. Luther Weston of Pasadena University; vice-president, Miss Ethel Dunham, a student at Redlands College; corresponding secretary, Miss Myrtle Gallon, of Orange; recording secretary, Miss Elizabeth Paine of Pasadena; treasurer, Mr. Harold Huston of Pasadena University. The president was heard to remark that he had always been taught that when there is anything to do, "The best time to do it is NOW."

We had our first graduating class—only three—but just watch California next year! Mr. Martin Patch of Pasadena University has been appointed state superintendent of Anti-Narcotics and authorized by the California (South) W. C. T. U. to tour the state in the interests of the department. Mr. Will Richards, cashier of one of the city banks, a former active Branch member, but for the past two years overburdened with official Christian Endeavor work, attended the convention and said he was "homesick to get back to the Y. P. B." He will now be our Christian Citizenship and Law Enforcement superintendent.

Pasadena W. C. T. U. furnished the meals. The tables were set in Library Park, under lovely shade trees. The last evening was spent in beautiful Brookside Park, the Pasadena Branch providing the treat. The convention closed with a testimony meeting, the topic, "What the Convention Meant to me and What it will Mean to my Branch." Already plans for the new year's work are being carried out.

Why I Am Proud To Be An American

Cora Patience Frye, Former President Colorado Local Y. P. B.

(Winner of Second Honors in Prize Contest).

I think any American ought to be proud—

First: Because our country stands for freedom. It was born free in 1620; it was christened in freedom in 1776; it was reconsecrated to freedom in 1863.

Second: Because of the great resources of the United States; because of our great output of plant, animal, mineral and manufactured products.

Third: Because in America people are equal. The poorest boy in the land may become its most loved and honored leader, as our great Lincoln proved.

Fourth: Because America first considered women mentally equal to men and gave them equal rights with men.

Fifth: Because our land has led the world in the war against King Alcohol.

Sixth: An American should be proud because we have free public education, without which we could not have prohibition, woman suffrage nor democracy.

Seventh: The American people are ambitious, energetic, and ingenious. Ever since the United States has been a country it has added to those previously invented, many time-and-labor-saving devices.

Eighth: America's wars have been for the sake of humanity and civilization. We have entered no war without making the world a better and safer place.

Ninth: Because America sends missionaries, doctors and teachers to foreign lands.

Last, but not least, I am proud to be an American because America has great possibilities. All her good things can be made better, and I can help in this task.

Special Helps for Sunday School Officers and Teachers, October 29

(All leaflets 2 cents unless otherwise noted)

How can the Superintendent Promote Temperance Teaching in the Sunday School?
Problems of the Physical Awakening.
Temperance Teaching.
The Temperance Sunday School Lessons.
A Study of the Pledge. (For Primary Class Workers).
Pen Points.
The Teachings of the Divine Savior Concerning Wine.
The Pledge. What Is It? Why Sign It?
Thorough Temperance Teaching the Demand of the Hour.
Temperance Instruction in the Sunday School. Its Need from a Bible Standpoint.
Price, per 100, 45 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

BLACKBOARD EXERCISES:

Prohibition in the United States.
The Total Abstainer on Safe Ground.

TEMPERANCE TALKS FOR PRIMARY AND JUNIOR WORKERS:

Look Not Thou Upon the Wine.
Beware of the Wine Cup.
Watch! The Thief Is Alcohol.
Destruction.
Sin in the Heart.
Price per 100, 45 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

LEAFLETS:

World's Temperance Sunday—Citizenship Recognition Day.
The Sunday School Pledge Flag (Method Leaflet).
Temperance Sunday—Program for Sunday Schools.
Responsive Reading (Christian Citizenship).
Responsive Reading (Bible Temperance).
Responsive Reading (Signing the Pledge).
Responsive Reading (Bible Wines).
Responsive Reading (Bible Total Abstinence).
Posters in the Sunday School.
Price, per 100, 45 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

Citizenship Questionnaire.
The Sunday School and Law Enforcement.
Sunday School National Prohibition Guards.
The Forward Look of the Sunday School Department.
The Sunday School and Social Service.
Price, per 100, 45 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

Program—Recognition of Young Voters. Four pages. Price, per 100, 75 cents; per 50, 40 cents.

Special

TWO NEW PROGRAMS FOR L. T. L.'S, NATIONAL PROHIBITION GUARDS, AND SUNDAY SCHOOLS

Uncle Sam's Prohibition Quiz. Testimony of ten noted Americans (Exercise for 11 boys or young men).

Aunt Columbia's Prohibition Quiz. Testimony of ten noted American women. (Exercise for 11 girls or young women.)

Price, five cents per copy; per dozen, 50 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois.

Wyoming White Ribboners in Annual Convention Review Year's Program of Work

Special Correspondence

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Wyoming met this year in annual convention in the picturesque town of Cody. With royal welcomes and unlimited hospitality on the part of the Cody union and friends, with wonderful mountains near at hand, and beautiful weather prevailing, the Wyoming white ribboners had a very busy, practical, and profitable convention.

During the morning session on the first day, the guest of honor, Mrs. Adrianna Hungerford, president of the Colorado W. C. T. U., was introduced by Mrs. S. E. Bailey, state president. As convention speaker, Mrs. Hungerford, because of her wide knowledge of W. C. T. U. work and delightfully pleasing personality, won her audience at the start and carried it with her through the delivery of her entire address.

Reports, though incomplete (as our year does not close until October 31), showed a keen interest in the work and indicated activity and accomplishment, along every line.

"Our Goal" for 1923, as discussed by the local presidents and state superintendents, showed definite plans for work. The need of a great gain in members, the raising of the budget by each union, and co-operation on the part of all, were strongly stressed.

"Welcome evening" was one long to be remembered. Various "welcomers" were present with wit and humor, cheery greetings and the "glad hand"—Mayor Dr. Trueblood, representatives of the Cody club, Bar Association, Woman's club, churches, W. C. T. U. and other organizations. Mrs. Minnie Fenwick, state vice-president, gave the response, which was clever and to the point.

The addresses by Mrs. Hungerford, the sermon Sunday morning, by Rev. Minnie Fenwick, many splendid musical numbers and readings furnished by the Cody and Powell musicians and readers, a demonstration by the children of the Cody L. T. L. and the playlet, "Work for Enforcement Where You Are," given by the Casper delegation, are worthy of special mention.

The keynote of the convention was "The Need of Service" or "God's Call to us to Serve."

The reports on the budget plan, adopted for the first time at the last annual convention, and the discussion as to the advisability of its continuation this year were interesting and spirited and showed that if the why of the plan could be made clear to each union, desired response and co-operation would be secured. The plan was adopted for the coming year, the consensus of opinion being that it is the only just and equal way for local unions to meet their financial obligations.

Every courtesy was extended to the members of the convention by the hostess union and nothing left undone for their comfort.

The officers elected are—President, Mrs. S. E. Bailey; vice-president, Mrs. Minnie Fenwick; corresponding secretary, Mrs. S. Darlene Ingraham; recording secretary, Mrs. George W. Ferguson; treasurer, Mrs. Ella G. Trager.

Australia expects to take a prohibition poll in 1923 and is asking Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, to come over and help them in their campaign.

Prepare for October 29, World's Temperance Sunday

Order All Supplies in Ample Time
Note Helps Here Named

(All leaflets 2 cents unless otherwise noted)

Quarterly Temperance Lesson of the International Sunday School Series, October 29. Should be early in the hands of every teacher. Prepared especially for teachers and officers. Price, per 100, 20 cents; per 50, 15 cents.

ENVELOPE LEAFLETS FOR STUDY AND DISTRIBUTION:

Duty of a Christian Citizen.
Clean Hands.
Marion Lawrence on Pledge Signing.
Beware Wine!
Listen, Boys!
Counting Fingers.
God's Bottles.
Why Sign the Pledge.
Lincoln's Appeal for Law.
Beer and Home Brew.
What Uncle Sam Says.
An Elder Sister's Advice to Boys. No. I.
An Elder Sister's Advice to Boys. No. II.
An Elder Sister's Advice to Girls. Nos. 1, 3, 4.
Safety First, Boys!
Price, per 100, 20 cents; per 50, 15 cents.

RECITATIONS FOR PRIMARY AND JUNIOR CLASSES:

Two Offerings.
Look Not Upon the Wine.
Where There's Drink There's Danger.
Price, per 100, 25 cents; per 50, 15 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois

New Inspiration Received at County W. C. T. U. Conventions

"Two wonderful days of inspiration" was the consensus of opinion of those who attended the twenty-sixth annual convention of the DeKalb county (Ill.) W. C. T. U., held recently at Sandwich. It was a most profitable meeting. Miss Epha Marshall, state corresponding secretary, gave valuable assistance. Special emphasis was laid on child welfare, law enforcement, and the importance of getting the women to the polls to cast their ballots for candidates who favor the Eighteenth Amendment.

W. C. T. U. county conventions are always occasions for the renewal of enthusiasm for prohibition. That held recently by Franklin county (Pa.), the president, Mrs. Cora Fahrney, presiding, was no exception to the rule. The address of welcome by Rev. R. A. Strasbaugh, the president's greeting, and the reports of the various officers and superintendents all reflected a general determination to press forward to victory along all lines. With "get-there" the aim, the goal, "got-there" is apt to be reached. An interesting round-table was conducted by Mrs. Culla J. Vayhinger, national director of Americanization, who later delivered a splendid address.

Two new unions were reported, one among colored people. Mercersburg exhibited an afghan made for the soldiers.

Virginia W. C. T. U. Holds Enthusiastic Convention

Faith T. Parrott

Considerable enthusiasm was manifested at the fortieth annual convention of the Virginia Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Danville opening her beautiful homes with hospitality unprecedented. The officers were re-elected. Mrs. Hoge received an ovation, and pink roses were presented to her.

Of the various departments reporting, Peace and Scientific Temperance Instruction showed special progress; Miss Edith Parker received the prize for the best essay written by a pupil in the senior-junior class, Miss Wanda Webb, a naval officer's daughter, following closely.

Few changes were made in the personnel of superintendents or other workers. The Loyal Temperance Legion under Mrs. Walter Page showed great increase: six or more Legions received Victory pennants.

One superintendent came forty miles to attend the convention, bringing with her some young officers that they might note the "onward march" of prohibition affairs. A number of new women from newly organized unions were to be seen among the delegates. Henrico county, including Richmond, reported 1,760 essays written. Danville was not far behind, and excelled in having placed a Temperance Day program in every white and colored school in the city, and also in the county of Pittsylvania in which it is situated.

The banquet held in the evening in Mount Vernon Methodist church, and attended by many guests, including Major Harry Wooding, was brilliant with witty speeches. Large contributions and a number of life patrons were received.

The delegates were enthusiastic over their reception by the city's good folk, beautiful drives, and other enjoyable events. The out-of-state speakers were Dr. Valeria Parker on Social Morality, and Miss Amy Palmer on Americanization. The next convention will be held in Newport News.

Stop! Look!

A Most Important Message

A splendid opportunity for final campaign work is offered by the temperance lesson in the Sunday school on October 29. This is near enough to election day to make the lesson of vital import. Then, too, October 29 and November 5 should witness a nation-wide distribution of campaign literature on such topics as anti-wine and beer, and law enforcement, or leaflets stressing the value and necessity of reverence for and obedience to law. We have a variety of such material to supply your needs and urge you to be prepared by forwarding your orders immediately to your own Publishing House. Read the advertising columns of this paper and order at once posters (which should be displayed in abundance), and supplies for study and distribution in Sunday schools, church services, and other public meetings on the days above referred to. Do not neglect to use to best advantage the days of opportunity between now and November 7. Read the advertisements in this paper.

Maine Convention Creates Law Enforcement Sentiment

Special Correspondence

The forty-eighth annual convention of the Maine W. C. T. U., held at North Berwick, September 20-22, teemed with interest from beginning to end. The slogan was "Law Enforcement." Music in charge of the state musical director, Mrs. Ruth E. Walsh, enlivened the sessions. The president of the local union, Mrs. Ruby A. Grant, and her splendid committee were alert to every need.

Addresses by Mrs. Laura P. Morgan, of the National Council for Reduction of Armament, Miss Grace Leigh Scott, national department lecturer on Social Morality, and Carrol L. Beedy of Portland, enthused and inspired the large evening audiences.

The state president, Mrs. Althea G. Quimby, gave a wonderfully stirring message. The convention voted unanimously to adopt the budget system.

A generous gift from one of our loyal women for our state paper made it possible for us to start a "Recognition Register," similar to the Book of Remembrance of Mother National. Names of workers will be inscribed therein, upon the payment of one dollar, or more.

Americanization Notes

Clara Ansorge Fuller

Mrs. Italia Attends a Protestant Church

In the last lesson, there had been a reference to the desire of the Pilgrims to be free to attend the church of their choice, and I explained their attitude a little, and we discussed it.

"Yes," said Mrs. Italia, "in oald country, all Cat'lic Church. All go there. Here, church very far—big hill—I no go, too tired. Georgetown church four blocks. I take Lawrence and go one time. When I go in, I (making the motions of crossing herself). Man he come, touch my arm and say, 'This not your church. You Cat'lic.' I take Lawrence and go home. I very mad."

In the simplest language I explained to the poor woman, who is very devout and an earnest worshipper, that the man supposed that she thought she was in a Catholic church. If he had known that she was aware that it was not Catholic, he would have been glad to have had her stay in his church.

"Yes, yes, Mrs. Teacher. Now, I see. Maybe, likely, I mad for nothing. I take Lawrence and go another time."

Which goes to show that we need to be most careful in getting the viewpoint of those whom we meet.

She Wished to Die

Little Mrs. Nogales, who has six girls, the eldest of whom is ten, is expecting another little one. She is much discouraged. "I no like boy, I no like girl," she said when I expressed the thought that the next one might be a boy. "I wish die." Poor soul! As I looked about and saw evidences of her hard work to keep the home going, I did not wonder at her feeling. I said, "Nice little children." She replied, "Better they die, too." Then she went on: "Park in Seattle, bears, monkey, me no see. Live here seven years, see nothing but fifteen-cent-store and 'Bon Marche.'" How I wished that some one with an auto some nice Sunday, when "he" would be at home to care for the children, would give her a day of pleasure she would never forget.

Our Public Schools of Today Are Building Our Nation of Tomorrow

TEACH TOTAL ABSTINENCE AND SOBRIETY

Helps for Teacher and Pupil Are Listed Here

"Outlines for Health and Temperance Teaching in the Grades." (Course of Study.)

Just from the press. Supply every teacher with a copy.

Price, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.25.

Temperance Program for the Public Schools.

A Scientific Temperance Pageant or Temperance Day Program.

Interesting and enjoyable for old and young.

Price, single copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 45 cents; per 100, $3.00; per 1000, $25.00. (Less than 100, at dozen rates).

EDUCATIONAL POSTERS

For Schools, Colleges, Sunday Schools, Public Halls, Libraries, etc.

Set of 12 Illustrated Posters. Price each, 15 cents; per dozen, one kind or assorted, $1.50.

TITLES:

Beer a Bluffer.
Different Drinks but Same Amount of Alcohol.
Alcohol Effect a Drug Effect.
Wine a Pass-Key to Alcohol.
Alcohol Sides With Germ Enemies.
Alcohol Makes Hard Work Harder.
Alcohol Impairs Skill.
Doctors Dropping Alcohol as Medicine.
John Barleycorn Not a Good Sport.
Alcohol Hinders Success in Business.
Drinkers' Wounds Heal More Slowly.
Small Accidents That Might Happen to You.

OTHER POSTERS FOR SCHOOLS, COLLEGES AND LIBRARIES

Lincoln on Reverence for Law.
Lincoln's Prophecy. (Portrait of Abraham Lincoln with prophecy).
The Eighteenth Amendment. (Stand by the Flag and the Constitution).
Nutrition. (Health).
The Physical Decalog.

Price, 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

The Ten Commandments.

Price, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.60.

Please send remittance with order.

SCIENTIFIC TEMPERANCE CHARTS:

Animals and Alcohol.
The Effect of Tobacco.
Construction or Destruction.
Diagrammatic Scheme of Brain Centers.
The Smoker's Heart.

Each 15 cents.

Explanatory Manual, 50 cents.
College Smokers and Non-Smokers.
The Cigaret Condemned.

Price, each 15 cents; per dozen, $1.50.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

May Her Tribe Increase

Tyrone (Pa.) W. C. T. U. has a member, Mrs. George S. Calderwood by name, who in the last two months has gained ten new members with all dues paid. Mrs. Calderwood only joined the ranks last January but has won the title of an "active worker." She expects to secure ten more new members in the next two months.

Less than 50 per cent of the average number committed to the Franklin county (Ohio) poorhouse prior to prohibition were sent to the institution last year (1921), according to the Columbus (Ohio) Journal, although it was one of acute business depression.

Render to Your Country This Patriotic Service

Send NOW, TODAY, 10 cents

for our Patriotic Service Package. And when received, follow instructions therein given. Stamps accepted.

DO IT NOW!

New Campaign Leaflet

"WOMEN LINE UP FOR PROHIBITION"

Refuting the charge that "mothers in many parts of the country are anxious to use their votes against prohibition." For effective use, order in quantities and distribute widely.

Price, per 100, 45 cents; per 1000, $3.75.

Campaign Posters

Vote Right! New Poster for Women. Put it in evidence everywhere, and let it gain votes for the protection of home and woman.

OTHER POSTERS:

For Their Sakes Enforce the Law. (In Colors.)

Booze Stands Between—

The Eighteenth Amendment. (Stand by the Flag and the Constitution.)

Price each, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00.

New Campaign Post Cards

INVITATION CARDS TO NEW MEMBERS

TITLES:

Our Slogan.

The Field is the World.

Help Wanted.

Each illustrated. They will suit you and help win members.

OTHER CARDS:

W. J. Bryan's "Ode to Water."

Physical Decalog.

W. C. T. U. Acrostic.

and a large variety with various titles. Price, per dozen, 25 cents; per 100, $1.75. (Please enclose remittance with order.)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

Notes From Your Publishing House

(Continued from Page Ten)

eign state that physiology and hygiene, with special reference to the effects of alcohol and other narcotics, be taught in all public schools, it is of interest to our readers to know that we carry in stock an excellent line of helps for teachers and pupils. We have just from the press a new pamphlet entitled, "Outlines for Health and Temperance Teaching for the Grades of the Public Schools." This, with other helps, should be in the hands of every teacher. The price is 15 cents per copy, or $1.25 per dozen.

In addition to these are Posters, other pamphlets, leaflets, books, etc. Consult our advertising columns and see that your teachers are liberally supplied with these excellent helps.

We suggest that you make extensive use of the new poster, "Vote Right." An appeal from women to women. In sepia, illustrated. (Price, 10 cents, or $1.00 per dozen.)

But a brief time ago, moonshine, labeled "bonded," sold in Denver for from $20 to $30 a quart, but it now lacks patrons at any price, as most of the product contains ether, chloral and creosote. Doctors there state that the beer now being bootlegged is filled with carbonic gas, making it almost as poisonous as moonshine.

Influence of the Wet Interests Is Against Law

(Continued from Page Three)

will react far more against the advance of prohibition in general than would be the case with any other state. Even though he admits that a victory at the polls would not allow beer with 2.75 per cent (by weight) to be sold, he is elated by the decision of the supreme court that the question may be placed upon the ballots. If it is acted upon favorably by the voters, he asserts, cases resulting from law violation will be brought into the federal courts, the question of permissible alcoholic content will be again agitated, and thus, he hopes, a reversal of opinion on the matter by the United States Supreme Court will be brought about. Even more important, he believes, will be the moral weakening of the dry forces in other states and the consequent strengthening of the wet cause. (It may be well to add, however, that in the other states where there will be a referendum on the matter, the wet forces have by no means drawn away their forces, nor are they "lying down on the job!")

Few States Permit Insertion of Wine and Beer Plank in Party Platforms

The splendid way in which the southern states, almost solidly Democratic, have stood for prohibition does not need to be recounted in these columns. The fact that in three or four of the northern states the wet interests have succeeded in injecting into the party platforms statements that would seem to infer a change of heart is a source of mortification to the large number of loyal law-abiding Democrats everywhere.

Floating Bars

The President's Cabinet has just made the decision that the prohibition navy must not be allowed to search and seize ships suspected of bootlegging contraband liquor outside of the three-mile zone, unless it can be proved that the ships had established communication with the shore. Such a policy, making it possible for ships, either foreign or American, to take their station just outside of the three-mile limit and there dispense drinks to all comers, offers opportunity which the wets do not intend to pass by. According to reports that have come to the Anti-Saloon League headquarters at Washington, plans are already under way to establish outside the specified line, "floating bars" which will cater to the thirst of holiday excursionists or those desiring a week-end party upon the high seas.

"Bottled in Bond" Goods Sold But Not Delivered

"Gentlemen bootleggers" are plying their trade in Virginia, their game being to approach the best known citizens, obtain orders with checks to cover and then fail to deliver the goods. So-called "bottled in bond" and various high-grade brands are offered at attractive prices and one of the operators is said to have collected approximately $2,000 in one city alone. Difficulty in apprehending the violators is strengthened by the disinclination of the victims to disclose the hoax and no arrests have been made.

Make Money-Making Candy

Do you want more money than you ever possessed? If so, learn to make nut and fruit bonbons—the business will net you $90.00 to $300.00 per month. You can work from your own home; all who sample your bonbons become regular customers. Mary Elizabeth started her candy kitchen with $5.00, and has made a fortune. Cannot you do likewise? I will tell you all about the business. Now is the psychological time to make big money. Write today. Isabelle Inez, 511-C Morewood Building, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

Naturalization Refused a Drinking Applicant

A new standard has been set for naturalization by Chief Justice Leslie C. Cornish of the Maine supreme court, who recently refused citizenship to an alien who appeared with his breath smelling of liquor.

The man appeared for his final papers during the September term, and the court asked if he was a drinking man. "I am not," was the reply.

"Have you been drinking today?" was the next question.

"No, sir."

"Your breath smells as though you had been drinking and I will deny the application," ruled the judge.

There is little use saying to the man who makes prohibition an issue, "The thing is settled. Is it not written into the Constitution?" The point is the principle of prohibition is not written into the minds and hearts of all the people. This is essential for effective enforcement on any principle.

The fight has been a long one. The question has become stale. It irritates everybody's nerves. Why not call an armistice, make a truce for ten years and let us get a rest from the ancient wet and dry talk, the curse of law violation, the disgrace of bootlegging, the stupidity of trying to outwit the Federal courts, and let every fellow be a good sport and abide by the decision of the majority in this matter.

—Cedar Rapids (Iowa) Gazette.

Ready for 1923

Put the Word of God in Every Home

DO NOT FORGET THAT YOUR OWN PUBLISHING HOUSE WILL AGAIN FURNISH YOU THE BEAUTIFUL SCRIPTURE TEXT SACRED ART CALENDARS.

This Calendar will be more beautiful and attractive than ever. You can easily dispose of hundreds and thus place the daily Bible Text in multitudes of homes and at the same time earn Christmas money for yourself, your W. C. T. U., the L. T. L., the Woman's Club, or for your Literature Fund.

Send us your order early and so avoid delay or disappointment. Prices: Single copy, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.84; twenty-five, $7.50; fifty, $12.50; one hundred, $20.00; two hundred, $37.00; five hundred, $82.50.

Send us your order now and let's go to work. It is not too early to start.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois.

Unexcelled for repairing china, glassware, earthenware, furniture, vases, books, etc. Famous since 1876. Major's rubber and Leather Cements are good.

Three kinds, 20c per bottle at dealers, or write us.

MAJOR MFG. CO., NEW YORK

The "Money Earning Plan"

EARN MONEY FOR YOUR UNION, CHURCH, SOCIETY OR SCHOOL

For details write to

CHAS. R. DAVIS
184 Ward St.,
NEWTON CENTER, 59, MASS.

Wanted by the Children

The Cry of the Children is now for more stickers! Have you been supplying these to the school children to put on their new notebooks, every one of which would be improved if it had a sticker on it? These notebooks enter homes to which we do not have access, and the sight of the sticker will no doubt cause discussion. Again, those who may not be able to attend the convention will know that we are not discouraged or alarmed, as our friend, the enemy, would have them believe, and with the sticker before them as a reminder, will be interested in the newspaper accounts of the great meeting.

It has been extremely interesting to learn of the many, many ways in which our resourceful workers have been using the stickers. There has been a great demand for large ones that could be more easily read at a distance, so our committee has had printed 25,000, large enough to put in the window, as the star card was used. We hope in this way to give all an extra royal welcome to the City of Brotherly Love. We are going to distribute these posters free in Philadelphia, although they cost a "pile of money," but since we are going to pay for them with the proceeds from the sale of stickers, you can readily see that you may help meet the bill, if you wish.

We are making a special price of one dollar per thousand in any quantity for stickers to be used for distribution among the school children.

Summer prices still prevail: $2.00 per thousand; $1.25 per five hundred; 50 cents per 125.

Please remit with order to Mrs. James B. Scott, 503 South 46th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Just Love

Harriet L. Ricards

It was an every-minute-filled morning. As I sang at my work, my boy, Bobbie, came in, bringing a great cluster of wild roses, the dainty blossoms and dewy leaves held close to his eager face. The little fellow made a picture I shall never forget. I left my tasks to help him arrange the flowers in vases, and, as we stood talking of their beauty and fragrance, he drew close to me and said:

"Mumsey, I wonder if all the pink in the world isn't akin, the pink in the roses, and in the sky sometimes?"

"And in your cheeks," I added, looking into his dear face flushed from the morning walk.

Putting my arm around him, I snuggled him down into the big arm chair, and sitting there beside me he began to talk —a little shyly at first, for now that he was growing older, he was finding it harder to indulge in confidences. (Indeed, he was getting so big that, as Daddy said, "We shall soon need to fold him up in sections, if we are to hold him on our laps!")

"And the blue in the violets and in the lake?" he continued. "You know sometimes the lake is so blue, and then sometimes it is just like gold or great streaks of silver. And then all the colors are akin, just parts of the plan like the blue in the rainbow?"

"Yes, dear, God's plan for His wonderful world."

"And each one of us is a part of that plan?" I nodded assent. "Not only you, and Daddy, and I, and the minister, but old Hunt Henry and Sam who mows the lawn?"

"To be sure, each one, just God's child."

"But Sam! Why, Mumsey!"

"Yes, I know, dear. Sam does not always talk or act as we would like to have him, but perhaps no one has ever told him that he is one of God's children."

"Then it is up to me to do it."

I smiled at the decisive "up to me."

"God has made a wonderful world," he went on pensively, and then whispered softly, "but the sweetest thing in it is you!"

"All mothers aim to be sweet, dear."

He was very still for a moment then, looking up, he said, "But, Mumsey, isn't love the greatest thing of all?"

"Yes, son, you have made the discovery. The greatest thing in all the world is love. Think of this, Bobbie, God so loves the world—"

"And we so love each other, and Daddy so loves us—of course you come first, Mumsey—oh! I don't know,"—a puzzled look crept into the honest brown eyes. "I do so love Daddy, he comes in right long side of you, I think, Mumsey."

"Yes, but dear, our Heavenly Father comes first, you know."

"Before you and Daddy?"

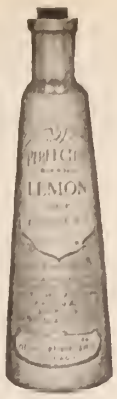
"Yes, my boy. You owe Him all. You would not even be here in my arms had He not so loved you and thought to send you to us."

Not quite ready to accept my words, he pondered long and then exclaimed:

"Say, Mumsey! I b'lieve I love everybody."

Accident Society Issues Warning

"Leave the Hip-Pocket Flask Home," warns the Ocean Accident and Guarantee Corporation, Limited, in a little booklet that is widely circulated. "Liquor is responsible for some of the most disgusting and tragic motor car accidents," the leaflet goes on to say.



Perfection
NON-ALCOHOLIC FLAVORS
Taste Better
Flavor Does Not Bake Out

A combination of pure fruit and flavoring oils with vegetable oils, which carries and distributes the flavorings as well or better than alcohol, and instead of being harmful, has more food value than an equal amount of butter. Wonderful Vanilla and eleven other flavors. Representatives wanted. A permanent source of income for Unions, Church Societies, and individuals. 100% profit. No money required under our consignment plan.

Fletcher Production Co. Ext. Dept. 429 E. 69th St., Chicago.

Official Washington

(Continued from Page Two)

acts in the interest of the Federal government in maritime matters along the coasts of the United States. It has but one station outside the United States, at Honolulu. The officers have rank the same as officers of the Navy up to and including that of captain, and they wear the same uniforms as officers of the Navy.

The supervising architect of the Treasury has charge of the construction of government buildings coming under the supervision of the Treasury department, secures sites, directs the operating forces in public buildings, provides the furniture for the same, and miscellaneous supplies for the use of custodians' and engineers' forces in the care of public buildings.

Under the Treasury is a general supply committee, made up of one officer from each of the executive departments, designated by the head thereof. This committee makes an annual schedule of necessary miscellaneous supplies for the Departments, purchases the same, disposes of that no longer needed, makes exchanges of supplies as between departments, and seeks to standardize the same. All inquiries as to supplies or the disposition of surplus are directed to the General Supply Committee. There is a superintendent of supplies, appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, who is ex officio secretary of the general committee.

Send for Candy to Sell

Any Union, Church Society, School Class or similar organization, ordering through its officers, can have 60 boxes of 5c Chocolate Bars to sell, 24 bars to the box. 30 days in which to sell and remit. Bars are Schrafft, Hershey, Waneta and other well-known makes. When sold, send us $48 and keep $24 as your profit.

Express Prepaid

We ship express fully prepaid to any office in the United States east of Syracuse, N. Y. and north of Philadelphia, Pa. Special allowances to other points. Write for them. Shipment not practical west of Mississippi River or south of Norfolk, Va.

You can order direct from this advertisement now, or write for circular.

Shipments usually same day order is received.

30, 40 and 50 box shipments at proportionate prices and profits.

Fred D. Lesure Company

Wholesale Confectioners

6 Broad St., Fitchburg, Mass.

CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT

THE UNION SIGNAL ..... $1.50 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance (monthly).....50c a year
Single Copies, 5c each; per 100 .....$2.75
Club rate for ten or more Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition subscriptions, 40c a year. No other premium allowed.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER ..... 35c a year
Single Copies, 3c each; per 100 .....$2.00

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES

THE UNION SIGNAL .....$2.00 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (monthly) .....62c a year
THE YOUNG CRUSADER .....47c a year

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL Evanston, Illinois

Help Your State

Della F. Withers, Circulation Manager

September has made a change in the per cent gain in circulation of THE UNION SIGNAL. Some states have increased, which brings them close to the 25 per cent mark, and assures them receipt of a check, if they will only continue in the good work this month. Because of expiring subscriptions, a few states have suffered a little set back. Don't neglect getting renewals. If you wish to help your state, look for that pink slip and ask to have THE UNION SIGNAL sent you for another year.

It may be you are unable to be present at your state convention this year. Why not have a little convention of your own at home? Get your W. C. T. U. "have-to-stay-at-home" comrades and start a campaign during your convention days; talk prohibition, the benefits already attained, the situation today, what all can do to help enforce the law, what the bringing of light wines and beer into the town would mean to the boys and girls of this generation. Of course you know all about these things because you have been reading THE UNION SIGNAL. Get your friends and neighbors to read your paper; ask if they do not wish to be kept informed on a vital, world-reaching question; invite them to join our ranks, to subscribe to THE UNION SIGNAL, a paper giving them truth, the only ammunition that can kill the lie. We will wager your "at home convention" will be a great success, inspiring, perhaps thrilling. The "wish I were there" feeling will be overcome and a real peace, the peace which ever follows good work well done, will be yours. Try it!

Beware of This Kind of Economy! Take the Union Signal!

"Take Warning!—Just listen to this: A woman who was too 'economical' to subscribe for the Baptist state paper sent her little son to borrow her neighbor's copy. In his haste he ran over a four-dollar stand of bees and in ten minutes looked like a warty summer squash. His cries reached his father, who ran to his assistance and, failing to notice a barbed wire fence, ran into it and ruined a five-dollar pair of pants. The old cow took advantage of the gap in the fence and got into the cornfield and killed herself on green corn. Hearing the racket, the mother ran, upsetting a four-gallon churn of milk into a basket of kittens and drowning the whole litter. In her hurry she dropped and broke her twenty-five-dollar set of false teeth. Taking advantage of the excitement, the eldest daughter ran away with the hired man, the dog broke up eleven setting hens, and the calves got out and chewed the tails off of four fine shirts. The moral is plain: Subscribe for the Baptist Advance, so you won't have to borrow."—Baptist Advance.

TRIO TEAM COUNTY HONOR ROLL

1. Jackson County, Iowa.
2. Grady County, Georgia.
3. Boone County, Illinois.
4. Barton County, Kansas.
5. Harper County, Kansas.
6. LaPorte County, Indiana.
7. Norfolk County, Mass.
8. Jewell County, Kansas.
9. Washington County, Kansas.
10. Ohio County, West Virginia.
11. Dukes County, Mass.
12. Dubuque County, Iowa.
13. Shawnee County, Kansas.
14. Big Stone County, } Dist.
15. Stevens County, } No. 12
16. Traverse County, } Minn.
17. Winnebago County, Wisconsin.
18. Walworth County, Wisconsin.
19. Strafford County, N. H.
20. Wayne County, Ga.
21. Dunn County, Wisconsin.
22. Faribault County, Minn. (District No. 27)
23. Winnebago County, Iowa.
24. Hamilton County, Kansas.
25. Ottawa County, Kansas.
26. Woodson County, Kansas.
27. Martin County, } Dist.
28. Watonwan County, } No.
29. Jackson County, } 3
30. Cottonwood County, } Minn.
31. Cheyenne County, Nebraska
32. Kimball County, Nebraska
33. Norton County, Kansas.
34. Clark County, Kansas.
35. Marion County, Kansas.
36. Highland County, Ohio.
37. Upshur County, W. Va.
38. Payne County, Oklahoma.
39. Stanislaus County, California.
40. Merced County, California.
41. Deuel County, South Dakota.
42. Mills County, Iowa.
43. Union County, Iowa.
44. Dakota County, } Dist.
45. Goodhue County, } No. 26
46. Rice County, } Minn.
47. Olmsted County, } Dist.
48. Dodge County, } No.
49. Steele County, } 2
50. Waseca County, } Minn.
51. Crawford County, Kansas.
52. Cass County, Iowa.
53. Polk County, } Dist.
54. Marshall County, } No.
55. Pennington County, } 14
56. Norman County, } Minn.
57. Edmunds County, South Dakota
58. Mower County } Dist. No.
59. Freeborn County } 30, Minn.
60. Bell County, Kentucky.
61. Chippewa County, Wisconsin.
62. Eau Claire County, Wisconsin.
63. Blair County, Penna.
64. Ness County, Kansas.
65. Blue Earth County, Minn. (District No. 21)
66. Dawson County, Nebraska.
67. Ellis County, Kansas.
68. Woodbury County, Iowa.
69. Kingman County, Kansas.
70. Lincoln County, Montana.
71. Bay County, Florida.
72. Glades County, Florida.
73. Highland County, Florida.
74. St. Lucie County, Florida.
75. Yamhill County, Oregon.
76. Creek County, Oklahoma.
77. Grant County, Wisconsin.

W. C. T. U. Badges. Made of mother of pearl. Price 25 cents each. Address treasurer W. C. T. U., Jerusalem, Palestine. P. O. Box 443.

How to Reduce your Weight

YOU NEED not carry one pound of excess fat. You can reduce in a dignified, simple way in the privacy of your own home.

I KNOW you can because I have reduced 50,000 women from 20 to 85 pounds each; and what so many others have done YOU can do.

Don't reduce by drugs, you'll ruin your health; nor by diet alone—you'll look old if you do. My way is the common sense way and you enjoy every step.

Individual Instruction

I attribute my marvelous success to the fact that I give each woman special instructions just for her individual case. I build your vitality, strengthen your heart, and teach you how to stand, walk and breathe.

Send me your height, weight, age, and I will tell you just what you should weigh. Your letters are held in strictest confidence. If you write NOW I will send you FREE my illustrated booklet. Write to me today.

Read What One Pupil Writes:

"Last year I weighed 216 pounds---this year 146. It is surprising how easy I did it. I feel 15 years younger and very much stronger."

Susanna Cocroft

Dept. 37 1819 Broadway New York

Quiz: Building for the Future

1. Show that the proposed amendment to the Ohio state constitution would bring back old conditions.

2. News items prove that prohibition is on the upward trend. Quote from four of them.

3. Give a resume of some of the activities of the Iowa Child Welfare Research Station.

4. What are those who were formerly opposed to prohibition saying of its results and the outlook?

5. Name some of the special features of the coming World's W. C. T. U. Convention at Philadelphia.

6. Who are Miss Mary J. Campbell? Mrs. Kubushiro? Fraulein von Blücher? Honorable Leif Jones?

7. What does a superintendent of steel workers have to say of the statement of Secretary Davis?

8. State five reasons for pride in your American citizenship.

9. Suggest ways in which your local union can help to make the coming election count for righteousness.

10. Is your county on the trio team county honor roll?

Rubbing Compounds in Illicit Booze Poisonous

"The excessive amount of rotten and decayed fruit with which this state abounds affords great opportunity to the illicit booze maker who has no scruples as to the materials used," says Federal Prohibition Director S. F. Rutter of California. Concentrated lye is also used to hasten fermentation, according to the report, while denatured alcohol and wood alcohol, both deadly poisons and productive of blindness, are frequently being used. "Kick" is introduced into near-beer by means of rubbing compounds which are composed chiefly of denatured alcohol, denaturants such as benzine, wood alcohol and tartar emetic being commonly used. Dealers in photographers' supplies have been discovered selling alcohol denatured with ether. "Chemists are emphatic and unanimous in their opinions that these poisons cannot be removed by redistilling, precipitating or any other manipulative process which bootleggers employ," says Director Rutter.

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly — Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year in Advance

Entered as second class matter at the Postoffice at Evanston, Illinois

Vol. XLVIII — EVANSTON, ILLINOIS, OCTOBER 19, 1922 — No. 42

Academy of Music, Philadelphia

World's W. C. T. U. Convention and Closing Meeting of National W. C. T. U. Convention will be held in this building

World's W. C. T. U. Convention

Academy of Music

November 11-15

National W. C. T. U. Convention

Chambers-Wylie Memorial Presbyterian Church

November 16-19

Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, Philadelphia

Convention Headquarters of World's and National W. C. T. U.'s

OFFICIAL WASHINGTON

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

LENNA LOWE YOST, National W. C. T. U. Representative, Washington, D. C.

The Secretary of Agriculture, who represents in the President's Cabinet the interests of the farmers of the country, is empowered, in the broadest sense of the word, to promote agriculture. His duties are almost entirely of executive character, in that he formulates the general policies to be pursued by the various branches and offices under him and sees that they are carried out.

The present Secretary of Agriculture is Henry C. Wallace of Iowa. His immediate predecessors, Secretaries Wilson, Houston and Meredith, the first and last of whom were also from Iowa, did much to forward the interests of the farmer and Mr. Wallace is keeping up the work.

Under the Department of Agriculture, in charge of the offices and branches, are to be found specialists in great number and of a high order. A glance at the list of these divisions immediately suggests that farming has become a highly specialized calling. Among the offices are those of Farm Management, the Weather Bureau, Bureau of Animal Industry, Bureau of Plant Industry, Forest Service, Bureau of Chemistry, Bureau of Soils, Bureau of Entomology.

There are also the Bureau of Biological Survey, Bureau of Crop Estimates, States Relation Service, Bureau of Public Roads, Bureau of Markets, Insecticide and Fungicide Board and Federal Horticultural Board. The Department has, in addition, a Solicitor, a Division of Publication, and a Division of Accounts and Disbursements.

Farm Management and Farm Economics

The office of Farm Management and Farm Economics studies the farm's economic problems with a view to reducing costs and increasing profits through a better organization of the farm and a better adjustment of production to the demands of the market. Special attention is given to the cost of production, farm organization, farm finance, the geographical distribution of types of farming, the supply and use of labor, land utilization, land tenure, and farm life studies. The Bureau of Chemistry is concerned with analytical work, investigation under the food and drugs act, questions of agricultural chemistry of public interest, and other chemical investigations referred to it by the government.

Bureau of Animal Industry

The live stock industry is given attention through the Bureau of Animal Industry. In general it deals with the investigation, control, and eradication of diseases of animals, the inspection and quarantine of live stock, the inspection of meat and meat products, and with animal husbandry and dairying. In this work remarkable progress has been and is being made. Diseases of animals, on occasions, have caused havoc throughout the country, and year by year they cause great loss, particularly to farmers. Steps dealing with the eradication of the same, therefore, represent an economic work of real value.

Plant Industry

Plant Industry, a subject which appeals to all, is given attention in connection with the relations of plant life to agriculture. This is a scientific work which is carried on intensively. The work of this Bureau is divided into thirty-three distinct groups, each headed by a scientist of ability. The distinct groups keep in close touch with each other, particularly with reference to discoveries made in their investigations, as a mutuality of interest runs throughout the work as a whole.

Bureau of Soils

The relation of soils to cilmate and organic life is investigated by the Bureau of Soils. The texture and composition of soils is studied in field and laboratory; the soils are mapped and the cause and means of preventing the rise of alkali in the soils of irrigated districts studied, as are the relations of soils to seepage and drainage conditions and the fertilizer resources of the country.

Entomology

Staggering figures are given out from time to time as representing, measured in money, damage done by insects. The Bureau of Entomology, which studies insects in their economic relation to agriculture and agricultural products, and to the health of man and animals, has therefore a task of big proportions to accomplish. This Bureau conducts experiments through the introduction of beneficial insects, makes many tests with insecticides and insecticide machinery, and identifies insects sent in by inquirers.

Biological Survey

Along the line of work of those who study the relation of insects to agriculture is the work of the Bureau of Biological Survey, which studies the control and conservation of wild birds and mammals and the investigation of their relation to farming interests. In studying their food and habits, the Bureau investigates methods of protecting beneficial species and controlling harmful ones.

Experiments in fur farming, the control of injurious mammals in national forests and in other public domain, the studying of the geographic distribution of wild animals and plants, the mapping of natural life zones, the administering of Federal laws relating to interstate commerce in birds and game, the Federal migratory-bird treaty act, the supervising of national mammal and bird reservations, etc., are additional duties of this Bureau.

States Relations Service

The States Relations Service gets close to the people as it represents the contact between the Secretary of Agriculture and the state agricultural colleges and experiment stations, and co-operative extension work in agriculture and home economics. It co-operates in demonstration work by and for farmers, makes investigations relating to agricultural schools, farmers' institutes, home economics, etc.

Bureau of Farm Markets

The extent to which the Bureau of Farm Markets and Crop Estimates keeps in touch with prices throughout the country, and advises the country as to them is a constant source of surprise to those who keep at all in touch with this work. The Bureau disseminates information regarding the marketing and distribution of farm and nonmanufactured food products and "collects, compiles, summarizes, interprets and makes public statistical data relating to agricultural production."

Particular attention is given also to marketing methods, for the benefit of the farmer and the housewife on the farm, and conditions and costs, and the standardization, transportation, handling and storage of agricultural products are studied and reported upon. As often as possible publications are issued giving in concrete form the results of the studies made. A market inspection service of fruits and vegetables is now available at close to two hundred markets, and on butter at four of the principal markets of the country.

By this Bureau attention is given to regulatory work in connection with the enforcement of the United States cotton futures act, the United States grain standard acts, the standard container act, and in connection with the administration of the United States warehouse act.

Packers and Stockyards Administration

Then there are the Packers and Stockyards Administration, created under recent legislation, the Administration of the Grain Future Trading Act, the Federal Horticultural Board, and the Fixed Nitrogen Research Laboratory. Nitrogen is so important to the agricultural interests that this laboratory is doing a fine work in its behalf along research lines. The Insecticide and Fungicide Board assists the Secretary in enforcing the insecticide act of 1910.

Bureau of Public Roads

Of particular interest is the Bureau of Public Roads, which has charge of the spending of government moneys appropriated for the purpose of aiding the states in the extension and building of highways. Assisted by trained engineers, the Director of this Bureau is authorized to investigate new projects suggested, decide whether Federal aid should be forthcoming, in what sums, etc. He also carries on constantly experiments for the purpose of determining what character of road bed should be built, the relation of the different kinds of soil on road building, and the effect of different kinds of automotive machines on road beds.

The Secretary of Agriculture has one Assistant who acts in the absence of the Chief, and assists in the general supervision of the work of the Department. Then there are a Director of Scientific work, an Administrative Assistant, a Chief Clerk, a Solicitor, a Private Secretary to the Secretary, a Private Secretary to the Assistant Secretary, a Director of Information, a Press Service, and an Exhibit Service.

Proposed Amendment of Ohio Wets Entering Wedge to Old Conditions

George C. Southwell, secretary of the Dry Maintenance League of Ohio, is appealing to the people of the state, to awaken from their lethargy and fight now the amendment to the state constitution proposed by the wets, which would permit the manufacture of 2.75 per cent beer. There are five jokers in the bill. They are:

"1. The passage which reads 2.75 per cent beer 'by weight.' All other liquor laws have been 'by volume,' and 2.75 per cent beer by weight would be equivalent to the old 3.35 per cent by volume and this is the old pre-prohibition intoxicating beer. So the claim of the wets that their amendment is merely for the introduction of non-intoxicating liquor is a fraud.

"2. No person suspected of having liquor in his possession may be searched without a search warrant. This would mean that any bootlegger who drives a truck could get by with his trade unmolested.

"3. The manufacture and sale of beer in homes 'and abodes' shall be legal. Why 'abodes'? Because it means the return of the saloon. The saloonkeeper can put a cot in the rear of his place of business and it will be a place of abode legally.

"4. The provision that no beer shall be unlawfully made if intended for the maker's own use in his home means simply that extensive manufacturers of beers and wines may place their product in a home, declare it for home consumption and bring back the old conditions.

"5. Although the making of 2.75 per cent beer is made legal, it is not considered legal to drink intoxicating liquors within the place of sale. The beer would be intoxicating and it could be bought in a saloon but the buyer would have to go outside to drink it. However, there isn't any prohibition of selling beer anywhere.

"The expense of putting this proposed amendment on the ballot will be $150,000, yet it will be merely a straw vote in practical effect since the Federal Constitution would intervene. However, the menace is that it is an entering wedge to the old wet days. If Ohio goes wet it will serve notice on Congress, as the wets have said, that the people do not favor the Eighteenth Amendment. Every week from now until election day speakers will inform the people of the peril in this proposed amendment."

Aid Given Dry Forces By Massachusetts State Grange

The Massachusetts state grange will aid the drys, it is reported, in the campaign to assure ratification of the enforcement code passed by the legislature and signed by the governor, but held up by the wets on a referendum petition. Posters urging the voters to stand for law and order and the Constitution of the United States by voting "Yes" on referendum number 4, the state prohibition code, at the November 7 elections, are to be placed in every grange hall in the state. The poster says in part: "Uphold the Constitution of the United States. Vote Yes, and stand for law and order; vote Yes, and help suppress the rum runner and bootlegger; vote Yes, and give protection to the home—vote rain or shine, and vote Yes."

Prohibition Has Improved Social Standing of Hotel Men

Mr. Volstead has helped hotel men to become members of a favorably recognized profession, in the opinion of Harold Van Ornum of Evansville, Indiana, president of the Hotel Men's Mutual Benefit Association. "They used to be known as saloon keepers," he declared, while speaking at a banquet that preceded the public opening of the new Hotel Chase in St. Louis, Missouri, "but now they form a recognized profession which is helping to make cities."

Bellingham G. A. R. Upholds Prohibition

Members of J. B. Steedman post No. 24, Department of Washington and Alaska, Grand Army of the Republic, assembled at the Bellingham (Wash.) armory recently, passed a resolution condemning any effort to annul or repeal the Eighteenth Amendment as a backward step in the progress of civilization.

A "Dry" Fair

Although there were about twenty-five thousand persons in attendance at the recent fair in Macon, Ohio, there was not an arrest of any character, according to Marshal James Wisdom, who is reported to have said that neither he nor any of his men saw an intoxicated person.

Episcopal Church In Triennial Convention Passes Law Enforcement Resolution

The Protestant Episcopal Church in its triennial general convention in September, held in Portland, Oregon, passed a resolution in favor of law enforcement, specifying by name the Eighteenth Amendment.

New York Club Women A Unit For Prohibition

A victory was won for prohibition in the annual meeting of the New York state federation of Women's Clubs last week. In spite of the ruling that actions of other years would not be reiterated, a number of women, led by Miss Mary G. Hay, brought up the question of prohibition. The women voted unanimously that copies of a resolution for law enforcement, passed last year by the convention, should be printed and circulated as proof that they have not retracted from the stand then taken.

Wet Forces Receiving Numerous Setbacks

During the past weeks we have shown that the wet forces are ever alert to bring about the defeat of prohibition. Not until after the elections can we know how much or how little they have gained in their attempt to influence public opinion, but that some of their efforts have met with disappointment will be seen by the following items:

Chain of Wide-Open "Coffee Shops" Looked Upon With Disfavor

The coast-to-coast coffee shop plan first promulgated by the wet forces in New York, who profess to believe that a chain of such places, where "a girl could have an ice-cream soda, and her escort obtain eight per cent beer" would be popular, met with opposition in unexpected quarters when Mrs. Harry Chester Arthur, chairman of the Bronx woman's committee of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, called such a scheme "absolutely infamous," for the reason that "such shops would result in worse conditions than existed under the saloon system." "Conviviality does not depend upon liquor," said Mrs. Arthur, as quoted in a recent issue of the Christian Science Monitor. "Youth needs no such artificial stimulation and older persons should have developed sufficient intellectual force and common sense to entertain themselves in public places without liquor. I am the mother of six daughters. I have been a social worker for twenty years, during the course of which I have done much voluntary probation work. I know that it would be an evil thing to have liquor sold in soft drink parlors. I can see that right now. If such a plan as that is to be put into operation I am coming out for rigid prohibition and fight for it. I believe, anyway, that the world was growing more temperate, and my only opposition to the prohibition amendment was that I wanted total abstinence to evolve. I am utterly opposed to the saloon."

Saloons in New York City

Orville S. Poland, general counsel and superintendent for the Anti-Saloon League in New York City, is authority for the following encouraging announcement concerning conditions there. He states that "of the 14,000 saloons which were formerly doing business in the city, about 12,000 have closed up," that a member of the staff, who is "taking photographs of 1,000 places in New York City which were formerly saloons in order to show the physical change in the properties, tells me that there is no trouble at all to get the pictures and in fact there are so many more places than the thousand he is looking for, which have closed up as saloons and reopened with another line of business, that he has to choose and select those which are the best photographic material." Most of the places to which Mr. Poland refers are now prosperous groceries, and markets, shoe shops and dry-goods stores.

Governors Resent Governor Edward's Claim

The boast of Governor Edwards of New Jersey that he would make his state as wet as the Atlantic is well-known, and likewise his sentiments in general in regard to the wet and dry situation. The following interesting incident is told by Frederick W. Kelsey, president of the F. W. Kelsey Nursery Company of New York City, who in denouncing Governor Edward's defiance and disregard for the authority of the United States Government, charged him with making a serious misrepresentation following the convention of state governors some time since. After the convention, says Mr. Kelsey, Governor Edwards made the remark that "of the other thirty-three governors in attendance, he was 'the only one to refuse a drink.' A few days afterward, as a guest at a banquet here in New York, I happened to be seated at the guests' table between two western state governors, who were then returning from the convention. In mentioning to them the statement of Governor Edwards, as published in the New Jersey papers, one of the

(Continued on Page Fourteen)

THE MAGNET OF MANCHURIA

(PART II.)

TEMPERANCE WORK IN THE CHRISTIAN SCHOOLS

Christine I. Tinling

[In the first part of this article, which appeared in our columns September 21, Miss Tinling gave a brief resume of Manchuria's experience with drugs and drink and told of her visit to Harbin.]

The little town of Ashiho was brimful of interest. It was Mrs. James Stobie of this station who arranged my entire tour. Besides the good mission schools for boys and girls, there is a government Normal for men with an enrollment of somewhat over a hundred. Both the student-body and the faculty gladly welcomed the daily temperance address, and as drinking and smoking are alike forbidden by the rules, we felt we had the strong moral support of the authorities.

The smaller Manchu school walked over to the church each morning to unite with the Christian boys. We even visited a Mohammedan school and talked to the pupils who were drawn up in the court-yard of the mosque. The old pedagogue showed us over the building, which was neat and clean and formed a great contrast to heathen temples. The low raftered roof, the red pillars, the rugs on the floor and a handsome scroll or two, combined to make the place not unattractive from the aesthetic standpoint.

Ashiho of the Past and Present

It was in this northern town that one realized most vividly what the missionaries experienced during the awful scourge of the pneumonic plague, a dozen years ago. The friends with whom I stayed were then living in a Chinese house. Next door to them every member of the family died and in the boys' school across the street all of the forty or fifty scholars and every teacher met the same fate. When the missionary had removed his wife and children to a safer place he returned to his post. The first sight that he saw was his horse dead by the door of the compound and the dog dead in the corner. In his nightly walk to the nearest city gate he would ask the soldier on guard, "How many have been carried out today?" The answer would usually be about thirty or forty but on the worst day of that woeful winter one hundred and fifty silent travelers passed beneath that arch. Of the forty-three thousand in Manchuria who then took the plague not a single individual was known to recover. As one moves about among missionaries and catches now and then unexpected glimpses of quiet heroism, the thought suggests itself that many a "Book of Golden Deeds" still remains to be written, written, shall we say, "with the finger of God for the instruction of the ages."

In this same town of Ashiho we went to a school held in a heathen temple, dedicated to a goddess of temperance. Her image sat there in state, holding in the hand what purported to be a flask of water. She is supposed to have been the first person in China to forswear the use of wine. The temple walls were decorated with pictures illustrative of the ill effects of drinking. The very existence of such a place showed at least that the liquor habit is a recognized evil, in spite of the many excuses made for it.

When I left that little town a representative group gathered at the station. The Manchu boys had marched a mile, led by their own band, with trumpets, cymbals and drums. Beside the missionaries and their children stood the Chinese principal of the Men's Normal, with some of his students, and there was also a young Mohammedan teacher from another school. The scene when the train pulled out struck me as forcibly illustrating the uniting influence of such a reform as ours. A temperance worker is often welcomed where direct preaching of the gospel would not be tolerated. Missionaries in escorting me to government schools sometimes say that they have not visited them for years, for lack of a sufficient excuse or a suitable opportunity. One of the secondary benefits of temperance teaching in the mission field is that it brings non-Christians into closer touch with the missionary and his message.

Student Prints Charts for Distribution

In the old walled city of Chin Chou, which has some reputation alike for learning and for wealth, the school work was very encouraging. I had showed a chart consisting of Chinese characters in the form of a wine-jar, the whole being a poem on the evils of alcohol. One of the students, a fine-looking lad, recently baptised, asked permission to have it reproduced. At his own expense he printed several hundred copies for distribution in the church, schools and out-stations.

There was one country trip included in my two months' itinerary in Manchuria. Fakumen was too important a station to omit, particularly as the people were willing to make a special effort to unite Christians and non-Christians in a five days' series of meetings. But it was a twelve hours' drive from the nearest railway station. The missionaries sent a Christian carter to fetch me with the three strong mules necessary to pull the two of us in the springless blue-hooded cart the thirty miles over those indescribable roads. These are not really roads at all, but just lines of least resistance, tried and proved by previous travelers.

The Opportunities in the Newly-Awakened East

When we came to the river we boarded a ferry-boat which might better be called a raft. Carts, animals, men and this woman were crowded upon it. The game we had to play consisted in avoiding at one and the same time the mules' heels and the muddy wheels, the sweep of the one great oar and an unexpected poke from the twenty foot pole which appeared first on one side and then on the other. The seamed face of the old ferry-man beamed genially on his one foreign passenger; the boy from the lonely shack by the water-side accepted a gospel and a picture tract with the grace and courtesy of a born gentleman; the carter, with that same grace, handed me down the muddy bank and then took a piece of sacking and wiped my shoes. Really these "common people" among the Chinese have a most uncommon charm about them.

Is it worth while to spend two long days in a cart, traveling in a country like Manchuria, infested with thousand of brigands, in order to reach a lonel mission station? I wish it were possibl by way of reply to exhibit a movin picture. Here are nearly eight hundre little boys in the uniform of the go ernment schools, with blue suits an blue caps, marching to the Christia church and taking their seats in perfec order. Before their meeting is over large number of older boys and me have gathered in the compound, waitin for their turn at temperance instructio yet such is their discipline that, thoug the windows are open, one would nc know that they were there. The girl and women have still another hour eac day. Worth while? Ask rather, "I it worth while to stay at home whe there are such opportunities to be ha in the newly-awakened East?"

Mukden, the capital, is of course th center of education in Manchuria. I was pleasant to receive a spontaneou invitation from the Men's Higher Norma one of six such colleges in all Chin more particularly as the anti-Christia movement in some sections has bee strong and the feeling bitter. The ol gentleman at the head of this institu tion and the young fellows of the stu dent body were evidently more broad minded than many.

In the Manchuria Christian Colleg and Middle School there was a fine re sponsive audience consisting of botl Christians and non-Christians. Girls i Manchuria desiring an education fin their best opportunity in the Christia Normal School, which offers thorough training from the kindergarten upwards

Distilling Temperance Truths

The most interesting feature of th work in Mukden was the originality o the students. To use one of Miss Wil lard's metaphors, they distilled the tem perance truth in the alembic of thei own minds, thus giving it a fresh char acter. At our final meeting in the Chris tian College, when the boys gave a pro gram, one young man thus began hi speech: "I am going to show you how shall talk to the farmers in the holi days." Then throwing off the gracefu manners of the student and gentleman he became a countryman and acted ou a dialogue on the subject of alcohol an tobacco to the immense amusement of th audience.

Two had original songs, set to old tunes, one of them being a round with a verse about drink and another abou smoking, as pithy and pointed as pos sible. This is already catching on among school children and will be remembered when other things have faded from the mind. It was indeed inspiring to see a Chinese professor, baton in hand, drill ing a large school, by the sol-fa method in a temperance song written by a Chi nese boy.

The Mukden posters were cleverly conceived and well drawn, some of them consisting of characters forming a sort of acrostic and teaching truth in a most telling way. The girls of the Norma were not behind the boys in their artis tic efforts. They used figures of their own, to which no one had pointed them

(Continued on Page Thirteen)

DR. MARY HARRIS ARMOR ARRIVES IN NEW ZEALAND—HER STAY IN WELLINGTON PREVIOUS TO THE CAMPAIGN

Kate M. Evans, Recording Secretary New Zealand W. C. T. U.

The women's prayers have been answered! Dr. Mary Harris Armor has arrived in New Zealand! A passenger on the mail steamer, "Maunganui," she landed in Wellington at 7:30 on Friday oveing, August 25. Mrs. Don, the dominion prosident, and officers of the local unions, taking banners and flags, went to the wharf to welcome her. As the big steamer came slowly up to her berth, there was intenso excitement both on board the vessel and on the wharf, and when the banner was unfurled with white streamers floating on the wind, a thrill went through her whole body, like an electric shock, Mrs. Armor said, and she could not help crying out to the passengers, "Look at the omen, the white ribbon on top of the flag: That's what will happen this year!" Then Mrs. Don unfurled the blue Peter, bearing the motto, "The Liquor Traffic Must Go" and Mrs. Armor cried aloud from the upper deck, "Yes! It must go! It shall go! It's going, for God is on our side!" Every one far and near on boat and on shore could hear every word, and the excitement redoubled.

As Mrs. Armor came down the gangway, accompanied by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Beulah Armor, the Doxology was sung, followed by the "Temperance Doxology," expressing thankfulness that the hopes and prayers and efforts of two years had at last been realized. Mr. Nimmo at once drove the visitors, with Mrs. Don, in his private motor car to Island Bay, the residence of Mrs. R. Keene, who was charmed to entertain them for a few days.

On Saturday afternoon, an informal private reception was held at the W. C. T. U. rooms in Constable St. where Mrs. Johnston Wright, the district president, aided by Miss Kirk, the president of the Wellington Central union, gave the combined executive of the two unions the opportunity of making the personal acquaintance of the distinguished guests. Mrs. Don introduced them on their arrival and again the "Doxology" was sung with fervor and gratitude to Almighty God. Representatives of the Alliance, Rev. J. Dawson and Rev. W. Comrie, and Rev. E. Drake, of the No-License League, were also present to give their welcome and express admiration for Dr. Armor's work and personality.

It was a delightful occasion, marked by the utmost cordiality, for Mrs. Armor was anxious to meet individually her New Zealand sisters whom she already loved, every one. She felt so overwhelmed by the welcome given her through wireless, and telegram, and letter that she found it impossible to say all that was in her heart. When the tension was a little relieved by most appropriate musical items, and a welcome cup of tea, Mrs. Armor spoke further of her appreciation and gratitude, and related incidents of her experience in fights against the trade in the States, showing especially how in every instance the most determined opposition had been broken down by the power of prayer and faith in the Spirit of God. She referred also to the great sympathy between Americans and New Zealanders, for her countrymen who had visited New Zealand all had one story to tell of the kindly reception that had been extended to them and of their admiration for our beautiful country. Finally, she struck up the slogan that will be taken up with enthusiasm all over the Dominion: "New Zealand's Going Dry" sung to the tune of "Bringing in the Sheaves."

Every one present sang it over and over with increasing gusto and vigor. Friendly chats with one and another filled up the rest of the afternoon and, at the close, the general feeling was that not only a distinguished visitor but a refreshing personality, and a real friend and sister, had come among us in the form of Dr. Mary Harris Armor.

It happened that Mrs. McPherson, the American revivalist, had also traveled to New Zealand by the "Maunganui" and at her Sunday meeting in the town hall, she graciously invited Dr. Armor to speak for a few moments and announce her meeting on the following Sunday; and also added her own personal appeal to the crowded audience to go and hear the prohibition lecture and give Dr. Armor as good a hearing as they had given her.

In weather Wellington has shown her very best side. During these few days of pause before beginning the strenuous campaign that lies ahead, our visitor has had various opportunities of hearing and seeing what will interest her. On Tuesday, she and her daughter-in-law, with Mrs. Don and Mrs. Helyer, were the guests of the Hon. Mark Cohen at the House of Parliament. Before taking seats in the ladies' gallery, the visitors were introduced to the Prime Minister and several members, including Mr. Edie, the member for Bruce, and Mr. T. Y. Seddon.

On Friday evening, a reception was given to Dr. Armor by the Pioneer Club, and in her answer to the address of welcome, she referred to the important part played in American life by the widespread club movement, and ended with a very fine appeal to women to be their best and to help generously and readily in every good social work.

A Real Maori Welcome

The campaign for prohibition began in Wellington, on Saturday, September 2, with a public reception, the most striking and unique feature of which was a real Maori welcome from Mrs. Poraumati, the Maori missioner. Clad in the orthodox Maori mat, she advanced up the aisle, gesticulating, brandishing a Maori staff and chanting a quaint Maori song of welcome. Afterwards speaking in good, clear English, she pleaded, on behalf of her people, that the government should grant them the vote so that they might have power to banish the drink that was their curse, and begged the "white Maoris" (the prohibitionists) to help them get rid of it.

Sunday evening an "after-church rally" was held at which some 3,000 eager listeners packed the town hall and a second meeting took place on Monday evening in Wesley church. After listening with rapt attention, the crowds went away feeling that "the half had not been told" of Dr. Armor's moving eloquence and wonderful power of swaying vast audiences.

SUFFRAGE LEADER RETURNING FROM EUROPE DENIES REPORTS OF BIG BAR PATRONAGE ON STEAMSHIPS BY AMERICAN TOURISTS

The grand rush for the bar by Americans on board transatlantic steamers is apparently only one of the numerous fairy tales that are being circulated by the opponents of prohibition. Mrs. Catharine Waugh McCulloch, Master in Chancery for the Superior Court of Cook County, Illinois, and legal adviser for the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, on her recent return from a summer in Europe, said in an interview with a representative of THE UNION SIGNAL that she saw no evidence on the ships on which she traveled of an abnormal thirst on the part of Americans that they rushed to satisfy when the ships reached the three-mile limit.

"The dining room steward on the 'Olympic,' on which we returned to the United States, said that in the last two years Americans on his boat had used less intoxicating liquors than previously," remarked Mrs. McCulloch.

One sight that aroused the righteous indignation of Mrs. McCulloch was the label, "American Bar" on places on the continent for the sale of alcoholic beverages. She told some of the proprietors that the name is a misnomer and a libel on America.

One morning while in Geneva, Switzerland, she came down late and found the breakfast room at the hotel closed. It was suggested that she go to the cafe. She discovered later the placard "American Bar" at the entrance, but the only evidence of liquor was a small cupboard in which were a few bottles, perhaps of wine. She explained to the concierge that American bars were never like this and as bars are now only relics of ancient history the name is quite unjustified and ridiculous.

"The drinking water in the nine countries we visited was excellent," said Mrs. McCulloch. "I drank much water, ordinary water, such as the poor people drink, and suffered no inconvenience. Fourteen years ago when Mrs. Ella S Stewart and I were together in Europe we drank water safely."

Mrs. McCulloch visited Norway, where she was told that light wines and beer did not solve the prohibition problem. The real prohibitionists of Norway, said Mrs. McCulloch, can give the United States pointers on the difficulty of enforcing a prohibition law if light wines and beer should be permitted, as is advocated by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment.

"The constant use of intoxicating drinks in European countries may be somewhat responsible for the small stature and weazened appearance of the people," Mrs. McCulloch said. "Of course war is also responsible for killing off the stronger men. Our men seem larger, keener and more alert. For years a great proportion of our population have been teetotalers and we are thus improving the race."

Mrs. McCulloch returned from her summer in Europe more firmly convinced than when she left that, notwithstanding the laxity of enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment in some sections, our present law is immeasurably better than license or restrictions in European countries.

MEN OF AFFAIRS DISCUSS WINE AND BEER FALLACY

Wine and Beer Talk Pure Buncombe

The personal liberty advocate says: "I am willing to obey the law, but give us light wine and beer." Does he imagine that light wine and beer would mean less of heavy wine, heavy beer, booze and moonshine? Quite the contrary. It would make detection of the sale of booze, strong wine and strong beer infinitely harder.

"But," says the personal liberty advocate, "we don't want drunkenness; we only advocate moderate drinking. Absolute prohibition cannot be enforced." When God told Moses to give the Ten Commandments, he might have said, "Now, Lord, thy people are not ready for absolute prohibition of the worship of idols: give them personal liberty and charge them a license fee; low license for worshipping a calf, high license for worshipping a full grown cow." I am afraid the calf of light wines and beer would soon grow into the full grown cow of old fashioned booze. This talk of light wines and beer is pure buncombe. One might quite as well talk of legalizing petty larceny, which very soon would grow into grand larceny, and just as surely light wines would become heavy, and we would be right back where we started from. Let us not confuse liberty with license.

—W. J. Morgan, Attorney General of Wisconsin.

Handicap to Enforcement

But a few years ago nothing of value, either political or social, could be put through most of our municipal legislatures without the previous consent of the organized saloon element. Thank God that is past and thank God there is just as much likelihood of prohibition being abolished in this country or of the return of intoxicating liquors by having them declared non-intoxicating, as of the restoration of slavery.

The idea that the present evils of bootlegging could be mitigated by restoring the sale of wines and beers, if such a thing were possible, is pure rubbish. It would be a great deal easier to sell whisky, brandy and gin as the illegitimate side partners of legalized beer and wine than it is to-day and no man yet has suggested a method of legalizing the sale of beers and wines that would not bring back on our heads the whole foul horde of the liquor industry.

I hope I have succeeded in making myself plain.

—W. T. Beatty, President and General Manager Austin Manufacturing Company, Chicago.

Wine and Beer Producers of Criminals

Taking advantage of a popular fallacy, the wets are striving to influence public opinion in favor of legalizing the traffic in wine and beer, asserting that these drinks are wholesome. The assertion is false. Careful research has proved, for instance, that wine and beer are more efficient producers of criminals, than is any form of so-called "spirits." There are various causes to account for this fact. One principal cause may here be noted: the larger quantity of alcohol which enters the system through the use of beer or wine instead of spirits. It is the quantity of alcohol which counts; and because of the much larger bulk of these "lighter" drinks consumed, the quantity of alcohol imbibed is actually greater. Perhaps I may refer to my own discussion of "Alcohol and Crime" (American Journal of Sociology, July, 1918) where the more important results of the scientific study of this phase of the subject are examined.

If the good citizen would prevent the return of the saloon and the reappearance of the chief evils from the use of alcohol, let him sternly resist the sinister call for the restoration of the traffic in wine and beer.

—George Elliott Howard, Professor of Political Science and Sociology, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Nebraska.

Path to Drunkenness Paved With Mild Drinks

Adding small dose to small dose is the only manner in which a sane man can prepare himself to be a drunkard . . . One must pave the road to drunkenness with mild drinks....One must cheat Nature by the modest advances, seemingly harmless, of perfumed wines and mild-faced beer....Every drunkard has begun with wine and beer; never, in a normal man, did Nature primarily accept alcohol save in its most veiled and delicate disguises.

—Vance Thompson in "Drink and Be Sober."

The Whisky Devil Cannot Be Drawn Out by the Beer Beelzebub

Duncan C. Milner

The advocates of the lighter alcoholic drinks, as the remedy for the evils of the use of intoxicating liquors, seem to think their scheme is a new discovery. The plan has been repeatedly tried and always proved a failure.

A number of states have made the beer experiment.

In 1858, after Iowa was under prohibition, it passed a law allowing beer and wines. The saloons sold whisky in the guise of beer.

Massachusetts made a trial of substituting beer license for prohibition. There was an increase of arrests for drunkenness and assaults. A justice said, "Massachusetts might as well have a law licensing the sale of all other intoxicating liquors, for everything, almost, that will intoxicate is sold under the name of beer."

Georgia tried licensing the sale of "near beer" and very soon the saloons were wide open selling hard liquors. An Atlanta official said, "A near beer law is practically unenforceable, as you can not leave a chemist with every barrel of beer to see that the beer is light." The experiment proved such a farce that a special session of the legislature was called in 1915 and the sale of alcohol in any form was prohibited.

Before prohibition over ninety per cent of the liquor traffic in the United States was in beer. If the scheme of the lighter drink advocates were carried out the old liquor saloon with all its infamies would be opened. Before the enactment of the Volstead Act thirty-two states had defined the per cent of alcohol and if Congress should adopt a larger per cent it could not be sold in these states. The light drink advocates with the brewers and saloonkeepers in the background want something that has a "kick" in it. People must be told that the authori: ing of the sale of wines and liquors ac cording to the program of the A. A. I A. means the return of the saloon an the nullification of the Eighteent Amendment.

Saloon Sure to Return Witl Wine and Beer

Senator Capper recently dealt witl the efforts made to override the Vol stead Act as follows:

"Let me solemnly warn every wif and mother that a tremendous effort i going to be made to override the Vol stead Act and restore wine and beer a a common beverage. If that is done th hated saloon will inevitably come back The so-called light wines and beers wil gradually be made stronger and stronger until we shall have John Barleycorn an the old liquor evil back again and worse than ever. Many unthinking persons ar in favor of modifying the law, not seeing or not caring, perhaps, what this modifi cation inevitably entails. They are great ly strengthening the 'wets' all over th country. The forces of prohibition may as well realize that the booze snake is not dead and that it will surely craw back unless they keep fighting vigorous ly and unrelentingly."

Do They Want Intoxication?

Light wines and beer would bring up the much debated question as to what per cent intoxicates, and if the enemies of the Volstead Act don't want intoxication, then they are perfectly safe with the prescribed one half of one per cent. If they do want intoxication they are running contrary to the National Constitution and are laying themselves open to the criticism that they are not good Americans nor in harmony with the majority of the voting population of our country.

—Chas. E. Lawrence, General Superintendent of Verona Mining Company, Michigan.

Return of Wine and Beer an Admission That Dry Law Is Not Enforceable

It would be unthinkable for any amendment to be adopted permitting beer and light wines, because it would be nothing more or less than an acknowledgment of the inability of America to enforce her laws.

The law has never had enough chance, in Pennsylvania particularly. Some people in charge of enforcement have not only been crooked, but themselves largely engaged in bootlegging.

—Harry H. Willock, Secretary and Treasurer Waverly Oil Works Company, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Beer Not Intoxicating?

"That beer and wine are intoxicating may be seen from the following experiment made in London by the British Board of (Liquor) Control, in 1916," says Mrs. Elizabeth Tilton, of Boston. "Dividing the cases according to the causes of drunkenness, it was found that 40 per cent of the men had become drunk on beer or stout, 35 per cent on spirits including rum, 8 per cent on rum and 4 per cent on other drinks. The remaining per cent did not know the nature of their drink."

SPECIAL FEATURES OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA

The Chambers-Wylie Memorial Presbyterian Church on Broad Street will be the center of activities, November 16, 17 and 18. Social service, as directed through the twenty-four departments of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, will be discussed in a series of open conferences to be held in the Auditorium and Sunday-school room. Among the notable men and women scheduled to speak at these department conferences are Dr. Bird Baldwin of Iowa University; Frederick J. Libby of the National Council for Reduction of Armaments; Edward J. Bok, former editor of the Ladies' Home Journal; Ida Clyde Clark, editor of the Pictorial Review; Col. John T. Axton, Chief of Chaplains, United States Army; Florence E. Duryea, of the Near East Relief; and the directors of the departments represented on the conference program.

Every national director and superintendent will have forty-five minutes in which to speak or introduce others to talk on the work of her department at these group conferences to be held on Thursday morning, Thursday afternoon and Friday morning.

The Lecture Room of the church will be used for purposes of exhibits during the entire week.

Don't Forget These Dates for World's and National Conventions

1922	NOVEMBER					1922
Sun.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thurs.	Fri.	Sat.
			1	2	3	4
5	6	7	8	9	10	11
12	13	14	15	16	17	18
19	20	21	22	23	24	25
26	27	28	29	30

Chairmen Hostess Committees for National Convention

General Chairman—Mrs. H. E. Fahnestock, 924 S. 46th St., Philadelphia.

Reception—Mrs. Caroline Moore, 1429 N. 16th St., Philadelphia.

Entertainment—Mrs. E. R. Ferguson, 1937 N. 32nd St., Philadelphia.

Restaurants—Mrs. C. G. Diehl, 5141 Webster St., Philadelphia.

Decoration—Mrs. Winfield S. MacHenry, Ridley Park, Pa.

Music—Mrs. Vernon E. Hastings, 5425 Catharine St., Philadelphia.

Friday afternoon, November 17, the Forty-Ninth Annual Meeting of the National W. C. T. U. will open in the main auditorium. The address of the president, Miss Anna A. Gordon, and reports of executive officers will be the outstanding features of the program for the first convention session. Citizenship will be the theme of the evening program. The leading speakers for the occasion will be Mrs. Maude B. Perkins, general secretary of the Young People's Branch of the National W. C. T. U.; Mrs. Culla J. Vayhinger, director of the department of Americanization; Miss Agnes E. Slack, of London, England, honorary secretary World's W. C. T. U.; and Mrs. Deborah Knox Livingston, director of the department of Christian Citizenship.

Saturday, November 18, will be devoted to the business of the Convention, including the election of officers for 1922-23. Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel and legislation superintendent for the Anti-Saloon League of America, and Mrs. Florence E. Atkins, a national W. C. T. U. organizer, will be the leading speakers on Saturday evening.

Sunday, November 19, Commander Evangeline Booth of the American Salvation Army will be the principal speaker at the closing meeting, to be held in the Academy of Music.

REPRESENTATIVES OF TWENTY-SEVEN COUNTRIES WILL RESPOND TO ROLL CALL AT WORLD'S CONVENTION

When the roll is called at the World's Convention at Philadelphia there will be present to respond to their names representatives of at least twenty-seven countries, who will tell of the progress of the anti-alcohol movement in their respective homelands.

From the Philippines has come Miss Consuelo Valdez, a talented young woman, a graduate of the School of Pharmacy of the University of the Philippines, who is taking some special studies at Northwestern University to prepare her for temperance work among her own people.

Consuelo Valdez of the Philippines

Japan will have as delegates several prominent white ribboners, among them Mrs. Kubushiro, national corresponding secretary of the W. C. T. U. of Japan, a niece of Madam Yajima.

A large company of white ribboners is expected from Canada, and when they return they plan to take with them, to Toronto, for the meeting of the World League Against Alcoholism, many of the United States comrades and foreign delegates.

Prominent in the delegation will be Mrs. Blanche Read Johnston, one of the honorary secretaries of the World's W. C. T. U., who has long been in the Dominion temperance work as well as very prominent in other welfare activities. She was for years editor of the national Dominion W. C. T. U. paper.

The Dominion delegation will be headed by Mrs. Gordon Wright, who for many years has held the presidency of the Dominion W. C. T. U. She is a sister of the Hon. Newton Rowell, during the war a member of the Dominion cabinet. Mrs. Wright has traveled extensively, visiting Europe several times on speaking tours.

Mrs. James Benedict, of St. Johns, Newfoundland, wife of the American consul, will come from that interesting province to tell the story of the fine temperance work carried on among the fisher folk of Newfoundland, as well as of other activities.

It is hoped that Mrs. McKinney, a member of the Alberta provincial parliament, will attend. Mrs. McKinney has been an ardent W. C. T. U. worker for many years.

Many of the World's W. C. T. U. superintendents of departments reside in Canada, and will of course be present and participate in the World's meeting. Among them are the following named ladies:

Mrs. O. C. Whitman, of Nova Scotia, World's superintendent of Systematic Giving.

Dr. Sara B. Detwiler, of Ontario, World's superintendent of Travelers' Aid.

Mrs. S. G. E. McKee, of Ontario, World's superintendent of Work Among the Miners and Lumbermen.

Mrs. Asa Gordon, of Ottawa, World's superintendent of the department of Counter Attractions to Licensed Houses.

Mrs. Kubushiro of Japan

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union
Evanston, Illinois

Editor-in-Chief - - - Miss Anna A. Gordon
Managing Editor - - Miss Julia F. Deane
Associate Editor - - Miss Vida I. Thompson

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors of The Editorial Department, The Union Signal, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittance of $1.50 or under.

Notice of Expiration is sent to the subscriber two or three weeks before renewal is due, so that by immediate attention to this reminder not an issue need be missed. RENEW PROMPTLY.

Remittances should be made by draft on New York or Chicago, or by Post-office Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

Change of Address. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE, $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
Foreign Postage, 52 Cents Additional
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (Monthly) 50c a Year
Foreign Postage, 12 Cents Additional

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., post-office as second class matter. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized August 20, 1918.

Evanston, Illinois, October 19, 1922

Mrs. Ella A. Boole, vice-president-at-large of the National W. C. T. U., and treasurer of the World's W. C. T. U., spent a day last week in conference with her co-officers in Evanston. She was en route for Nebraska, Colorado and South Dakota, to address W. C. T. U. state conventions in those states.

State President Bereaved

Word has been received of the bereavement of Mrs. T. W. Woodward, president of the Mississippi W. C. T. U., in the sudden death of her husband at their home in Starkville. Mrs. Woodward in her hour of sorrow and loneliness has the sympathy of her W. C. T. U. comrades throughout the nation.

Our Antagonists Overseas—Who Are They?

The pro-liquor press of this country describes picturesquely the ill-feeling and even enmity that the United States is incurring among the overseas nations by the ruling that would prevent foreign ships from bringing alcoholic beverages to our shores. These newspapers quite ignore the fact that there are in foreign countries large companies of people who are friendly toward our prohibition law and eager to see it succeed in full measure, and that not a few among them are influential and hold government positions. The pro-liquor press fails also to take into account the growing sentiment for, and sympathy with, the dry law, among women of these nations, mothers most of them, and voters with power in the political world.

Recall the recent referendum in Sweden, which resulted in an approximately fifty-fifty vote on national prohibition, showing that about one-half of the voters were in favor of a dry law. Consider the strong movement against the liquor traffic supported by the Anglican and Non-Conformist churches of England, the leaders of which are looking to the demonstration in the United States to help them in their campaign. Bring to mind that Scotland has already entered a campaign for national prohibition, which will not end until it outlaws the drink traffic. Forget not that Switzerland is to vote in 1923 on the submission of a constitutional amendment giving right of local option on sale of distilled spirits; that the prohibition of alcoholic liquors is a live question in Germany, that the president of Austria has declared publicly, "I have been a total abstainer for years, and have always been a friend and supporter of the prohibition movement;" and that President Masaryk, head of the Czecho-Slovakia republic, is an avowed prohibitionist.

There is antagonism to the anti-alcohol movement in Europe, but it is an antagonism emanating from the men engaged in the drink trade, who look with apprehension on the growing popularity of an effort that is certain within a few years to put them out of business.

CALL TO THE FORTY-NINTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Tho Forty-Ninth Annual Meeting of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be held in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, November 16, 17, 18, 19, 1922. The official board will meet Thursday afternoon, November 16, and Friday morning, November 17. The executive committee will meet Thursday evening.

The convention shall be composed of the national general officers, the presidents of states, territories and the District of Columbia, the general secretary and field secretaries of the Young People's Branch, the board of directors and superintendents the board of organizers and lecturers, the evangelists, the managing editor of THE UNION SIGNAL, the managing editor of The Young Crusader, editor of publications, the national musical director, one delegate-at-large from every auxiliary state union, one delegate for every five hundred paying members of auxiliary state unions, state vice-presidents-at-large, state corresponding and recording secretaries and treasurers, the editors of state W. C. T. U. papers, state secretaries of the Young People's and L. T. L. Branches, one delegate for every five hundred young women paying Y. P. B. dues and one delegate for every one thousand dues-paying L. T. L. members.

For inspiration, for renewing faith and courage, for strengthening purposes, for mutual help in finding ways to accomplish the great tasks to which we are pledged, this convention is called. Let us gather in Philadelphia to thank God for victories achieved and to plan wisely for the work which we believe is committed to us by Him.

ANNA ADAMS GORDON, President.
FRANCES P. PARKS, Corresponding Secretary.

Our State Campaigns

In four great states of the Union, campaigns on the wet and dry issue have been forced by the opponents of prohibition.

In California a referendum has been initiated by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment and other wet organizations on the Wright Act, a measure passed by the state legislature to furnish the machinery necessary to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment. A favorable vote on this law will insure the enforcement of prohibition.

In Massachusetts the issue is whether or not the voters approve of a law passed by the state legislature to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment. The endorsement of this very comprehensive enforcement law at the ballot box, November 7, will enable Massachusetts to check violation of the national prohibitory law.

Ohio has been forced by the beer and wine interests into a campaign on the question of whether the state constitution should be amended to provide for the manufacture and sale of beer of 2.75 per cent alcoholic content. This proposition is brought on under the provisions of the state referendum law, and the result of such a vote is subject to a review by the courts.

In Illinois, the situation in the matter is very different. The beer and wine interests have filed with the secretary of state a petition under what is known as the "public policy act," for a vote at the November election on the question of amending the Federal and state constitutions to provide for the manufacture and sale of beverages of not more than four per cent alcoholic content. Such a vote will be merely a straw or advisory vote, without force or effect legally, and no court action could be taken, as in Ohio, upon the validity of the question involved. Because of this, the temperance forces of the state of Illinois have decided to ignore the beer and wine referendum, inasmuch as the submission of the question is unwarranted expenditure of the taxpayers' money, is asking for a vote on a question which they say is not debatable because contrary to the Federal and state constitutions, and is without practical value. The drys are concentrating their energies in a vigorous educational campaign to show the voters of the state that the referendum is only another effort to discredit and nullify the Eighteenth Amendment, and should therefore be ignored.

While these four states have special issues, the forty-eight commonwealths have a common interest in electing candidates to their state legislatures, and Congress, who are standing four-square for the enforcement and retention of the national prohibition laws. A threefold duty rests upon every patriotic citizen:

To see that all his friends, family, neighbors and business associates, are informed on the issues at stake.

That they register.

That they go to the polls and cast their ballots for the candidates who stand for good government and civic righteousness.

National W. C. T. U. Convention Data

The regular meetings of the National W. C. T. U. Convention will be held November 16, 17, and 18, in the Chambers-Wylie Memorial Presbyterian Church, Broad and Spruce Streets, Philadelphia. The Convention will close with a large mass meeting, to be held in the Academy of Music, Sunday afternoon, November 19.

The National Official Board and Executive Committee will meet in the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel.

Southern California Out to Win

The wets are meeting strong and determined opponents in the white ribboners of Southern California who, in cooperation with other dry forces, are working day and night to secure the adoption of the Wright Act. In order to thoroughly inform the women throughout the state as to exactly what the measure is, and solicit their support of it, the following campaign plans are being put into operation:

POSTERS—For windows, roadsides and autos.

PRECINCT TEAS—or other gatherings best suited to locality.

STREET MEETINGS—At marketing centers.

PRAYER MEETINGS—Each church to make its weekly prayer meeting a campaign meeting with a good speaker.

WINDOW EXHIBIT—Secure windows for prohibition exhibit.

LITERATURE—Distribute leaflets, "Facts," to every house.

TELEPHONE—Close each telephone conversation with the slogan, "Vote 'yes' on No. 2, Wright act, November 7."

LETTERS—Enclose Wright law in each letter mailed.

BANQUET—Hold a campaign banquet where intensive campaign work will be planned.

MUSIC—Have the song, "Work For Enforcement Where You Are," sung at the church services and in the Sunday school on the two Sabbaths preceding election day.

CHURCH BULLETIN—Ask the pastors to print in church bulletin, each week until after election, the slogan, "Vote 'YES' on prohibition enforcement, No. 2 on ballot, Nov. 7."

BULLETIN BOARDS—Place something on Wright law on the bulletin boards of each church each week until after election, the statement to always close with the slogan, "Vote 'YES' on No. 2, Nov. 7."

INFORMATION BUREAUS—Conduct information bureaus in each precinct one week previous to election and on election day, providing marked ballots to guide voters.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE—Ask chambers of commerce to have a ten-minute talk in favor of the Wright law at their lunches.

To show the enemy still further that they are in earnest, the drys are holding conferences addressed by representatives from over five hundred different organizations trained for the work and pledged, in writing, to present the Act to the various societies of which they are members. With sample marked ballots to guide voters, plans for victory seem to be complete.

Visitors to America Impressed with Results of Prohibition Law

The fact that the results of prohibition in America are of great interest to other countries and may go far towards inducing them to take up the same reform, is seen in the coming to this country of R. W. Bowey of Adelaide and others. Mr. Bowey was officially appointed by the government of South Australia to investigate conditions in the United States. Influenced by press reports, Mr. Bowey had expected to find prohibition a failure, and was therefore surprised as well as pleased with what he learned on his trip.

"While it may be true that conditions are not ideal in all parts of the country," said Mr. Bowey, to a press reporter after his tour from coast to coast, "I feel that prohibition has made a very good showing under unfavorable circumstances. It has not had a chance to be fully appreciated, but I am very much pleased with it and its results just as they stand. I could not help noticing that throughout the country prohibition is invariably better enforced in the states and districts which were dry for some time before the Eighteenth Amendment went into effect. I took pains to look hard for signs of violation of the dry law every place I went, going out of my way to investigate side streets and even alleys, and yet all the time I have been in America I have seen but six men who to my knowledge were drunk. During my travels I have been offered a drink but once. And during this time I have seen only one man take a drink."

Mr. Hugh Lewis, of Birkenhead, was quoted by the Post Magazine and Insurance Monitor, an English periodical, in regard to his impressions gained on a recent visit to the United States. He told of the advantages of prohibition as seen in its effect on industry, its social results among the masses of people, the decrease in crime, and improvement in domestic relations, and concluded with the following significant words:

"It is at least a fine moral effort at human betterment and indicates a rare willingness on the part of millions of moderate drinkers in the U. S. A. to sacrifice their own desires and habits to what they believe are the common interests of their fellows, and the well-being of their country. It therefore, in my judgment, lies ill in the mouth of us Britishers (and I am not speaking as a teetotaller), with our slums and degradation due largely to the drink curse alone, and the millions that are wasted annually on its indulgence, to pass vapid, cynical remarks upon a great social experiment which, if successful,—as I believe it will be—will uplift the whole human race."

The London Times not long ago published two articles on prohibition, one by Winthrop W. Lane on crime in the United States, proving by statistics that crime had lessened since the advent of prohibition, and the other by its special correspondent on "Prohibition," who, while frankly hostile to our law, admits, nevertheless, that crime has diminished and that conditions of home life are better; "for the law, where it does not actually prohibit, does make the getting of liquor more difficult, furnishing enough of an excuse to give up drinking to many who formerly frequented the saloon merely out of idleness and good fellowship."

The report of Sir Arthur Newsholme, the principal medical officer of the local government of England, upon his return after his three-years' residence in the United States, should have a particular influence, also. In his summary he seeks to answer the question of whether the act of the majority of the American people "in deciding to rule the alcohol-loving minority with a rod of iron" is justifiable, and in accord with the elementary principles of right, whether the law can be enforced, and finally, what the results are. He answers in the affirmative the first three, and names some of the outstanding results, with the conclusion that:

"Moral action, voluntarily undertaken, is preferable to compulsion, but it is necessarily slow, and where multitudes suffer, action by the State becomes imperative. This is a case for compulsion, and it is a good case. For Americans, prohibition is a means of securing liberation from a great slavery. If the will of the people remains constant, then America will have carried through successfully the boldest and most momentous experiment in social reform which the world has known."

For God and Home and Every Land

Time of Prayer—Noontide

"It is always noontide somewhere,
And across the awakening continents,
From shore to shore, somewhere,
Our prayers are rising evermore."

The General Officers of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union urge every member of the organization to pray, work and vote for the election, on November 7, of candidates who favor the Eighteenth Amendment and its strict enforcement.

They designate Sunday, November 5, as a day of special united prayer for the triumph of prohibition at the coming election.

Opportunity

He came and waited like a king,
His gift held forth;
The people hastened, meeting him,
From south to north;
He stretched his hand for all to take
As they all could,
And a great light began to break
For those who would.

A glad shout rose from joyful hearts,
For they had won;
Good Opportunity smiles back
On wonders done;
And he will stay to light and lead
Through many days—
God sent him here to meet our need,
Give Him the praise!

—Marianne Farningham.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. HEADQUARTERS

GENERAL OFFICERS:
PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL.
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, FARGO, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA.
TREASURER
MRS. MARGARET C. MUNNS, EVANSTON ILL.

1730 Chicago Avenue, Evanston, Ill

REST COTTAGE

RED LETTER DAYS

October 29—World's Temperance Sunday.
December 23—Crusade and Pioneers' Day.

TRANSPORTATION NOTES

WORLD'S AND NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTIONS, NOVEMBER, 1922

Tour No. 1. For those who wish to spend Saturday, November 11, in Washington, D. C., and who do not plan to go to Toronto.

A train on the Pennsylvania Railway will leave the Union Station, Chicago, Friday, November 10, at 10:30 a. m., arriving in Washington at 8:00 a. m. The day will be spent sightseeing, and the trip to Philadelphia will be resumed at 4:30 p. m., arriving in the convention city at 7:30 p. m. The return trip can be made at the delegates' pleasure as no special arrangements will be made by the transportation committee. Apply for reservations to W. E. Blachley, Division Passenger Agent, Pennsylvania Railway, 323 South Wells Street, Chicago.

Tour No. 2. For those who wish to attend the World League against Alcoholism meeting in Toronto, Canada, November 25-29.

A train on the New York Central will carry special cars for delegates leaving Chicago, Friday, November 10, at 5:00 p. m., connecting at Buffalo with the Lehigh Valley road. No change of cars will be necessary. Arrival at Philadelphia will be at 8:08 p. m. Apply for reservations to Mr. C. Hartigan, Ass't. Gen. Pass. Agt., New York Central Railroad, La Salle Street Station, Chicago.

Tickets on the going trip will be available on the Pacific Coast November 7 to 13 and in all other parts of the country and Canada, November 8 to 14. By either route, the one way fare, Chicago to Philadelphia, is $29.46. The return trip will be one-half of the regular fare. The Pullman fares are as follows from Chicago, either route; Lower berth, $8.25; upper, $6.60; drawing room, $30.00; compartment, $23.25.

The trip from Philadelphia to Toronto will be made on the Lehigh Valley road, leaving Philadelphia, Tuesday, November 21, at 8:40 p. m. Several hours will be spent at Niagara Falls, arriving in Toronto at 9:43 p. m., November 22. Tickets must be deposited at Buffalo by all delegates who hold tickets to any point east or west of Buffalo.

An agent of the railroad will be at the convention November 15 and 18 for the purpose of validating tickets. Immediately on arrival in Philadelphia tickets should be left at convention headquarters, the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, with Miss Elizabeth Newman, secretary of the transportation committee. On the return the final limit for leaving Philadelphia is December 1. Delegates must arrive at starting point December 3 for all but Pacific Coast points.

The fare from Buffalo to Toronto is $3.67. The pullman fare from Philadelphia to Toronto is as follows: lower berth, $5.25; upper, $4.20; drawing room, $19.50; compartment, $14.75. Reservations for this trip may be made at the convention.

The Pennsylvania and New York Central railroads have prepared a special letter covering details of trips mentioned, which may be obtained on application to the railroads.

It is very important that reservations for either tour from Chicago to Philadelphia should be made as soon as possible. If a sufficient number make reservations, either or both roads will run a special train for the exclusive use of the delegates.

Parties living east of Chicago may join either tour at the most convenient point; western delegates will join in Chicago.

Be sure to secure a certificate from your railroad agent at the time of purchasing your ticket. Do not make the mistake of asking for a receipt. No refund of fare will be made because of failure to secure certificate.

N. B. In order to secure reduced fare, tickets must be purchased going and returning over the same route.

Gem Leaflets

Each containing a pertinent lesson. Distribute in Sunday Schools, L. T. L.'s and Children's Societies.

(All leaflets 2 cents unless otherwise noted).

A Chance to Be Mayor.
The Drummer Boy.
He Could Say No.
Boys and Mince Pies.
True as Steel.
Harry's Dream.
How He Learned to Love It.
Speaks for Itself.
His Gift.
A Boy's Essay.
Us Boys.
You Did It.
True to His Pledge.
The Right Start.
General Sheridan's Answer.
His Dog "Dow."
How He Signed the Pledge.
Early Habits.
How He Won.
Jimmy's Answer.
No Toys for Us.
How Ned Barred Out Alcohol.
The Red Flag.

Price, per 100, 10 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

Notes From Your Publishing House

The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment says: "Newspaper advertising is now a permanent feature of our work and we expect ultimately to reach every part of the country with our advertising matter." No one who is familiar with the tactics of the liquor interests, and with certain portions of the press of our country can doubt that in this instance the expectation of the "wets" is being realized. Certain journals seem to vie with each other to see which shall attain the greater degree of moistness. Evidently the published appeal of the A. A. P. A. and the personal canvass of its friends for a million dollars, or more, is meeting with excellent pecuniary returns. Newspaper advertising runs easily into four figures. Through this means is the A. A. P. A. placing before the people of America and the world a mass of misstatements, perverted truth, fabrication and naked untruths through which they are bringing to the "attention of the people" what they are pleased to term "the hideous failure and enormous cost in lives and money of prohibition as now enforced."

The enemies of prohibition are spending money like water and resorting to every available means to secure the repeal of the law which provides for the protection of the homes and the people of our country from the ravages of strong drink. There is time yet for the friends of home protection to do a lot of educational work if everyone will get busy and work with a will from now until the ballots are cast. There are many places where our excellent prohibition material has not been distributed. Our anti-beer and-wine, and reverence-for-law leaflets could be placed in the hands of many voters. Our seven leaflets, "FACTS," and the "Why a Million Members" leaflet should be extensively used right up to election morning. See page 13 for prices, etc., and wire us orders for all that you can use. There is no time to lose. Let us get busy.

Why not Medal Contests? Such numbers of people can be reached and interested by a well organized and wisely advertised series of Medal Contests that it is really surprising more "Contest Campaigns" are not carried on by our thousands of local unions. As thought provokers, educators, sentiment creators, and money makers they are unexcelled. If well advertised, an audience is assured, as interest will center about local participants in the program. The musical selections should in general harmonize with the character of the program. Jubilee Songs furnish everything necessary for congregational singing, including, "Work for Enforcement Where You Are,"

(Continued on Page Twelve)

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

JUBILEE FUND OF NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PROVIDES SCHOLARSHIPS FOR STUDENTS IN FOREIGN LANDS

One of the most important functions of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is the educating and developing of young women as trained workers in their own countries. To that end through the Million Dollar Jubilee Fund several scholarships have been established to prepare students in foreign lands for positions of leadership among their own people. In Japan, Miss Sumi Kanamori, a granddaughter of Madam Kaji Yajima, has been selected as the recipient of the scholarship. She has recently finished high school with high honors, and has entered the preparatory class in Tokyo College, and is said to be a well developed young woman in both body and mind. She is a Christian and her ambition is to fit herself for Loyal Temperance Legion work in Japan. Her parents died several years ago, and Madam Yajima, her grandmother, has been a mother to her ever since.

One of the W. C. T. U. workers in Japan writes that when the offer of the scholarship by the W. C. T. U. of the United States was announced at the executive committee meeting of the W. C. T. U. of Japan, there was an enthusiastic clapping of hands by the white ribboners present, an unusual demonstration in the Orient. It is interesting to learn that the past year, eleven young women have entered the social service department of the college and that the Tokyo prefecture has given a two years' scholarship of twenty-five yen a year for that department. The scholarship, established through the Jubilee Fund, is a memorial to the work of Madam Yajima, through whose tireless efforts and abundant faith the temperance work has been so well promoted in Japan

Sumi Kanamori

Anna Gordon Scholarship in China

The Young People's Branch of the United States has made a contribution to establish an Anna Adams Gordon scholarship at the Danforth Memorial Hospital in Kiukiang, China, where a Chinese girl will be trained to help bring the prohibition message to her own people.

India's Representative

For two years, Salometh Vincent has been the recipient of the Frances Willard scholarship in the Isabella Thoburn College in India. She has now received her B. A. degree, and will teach in the college. While she has been studying she also contributed much to the welfare of the college as housekeeper, in which capacity she directed the plans for food and was generally useful. She is a faithful, reliable woman, and with rather exceptional executive ability. During the past two years Miss Vincent kept temperance news and the progress of the anti-alcohol movement before the students by posting articles on the bulletin board at the college, and by speaking at the meetings of the Young Women's Christian Temperance Union. Many of the young women have become deeply interested in temperance work and have taken temperance literature to their homes to aid them in imparting to others the knowledge concerning the effect of intoxicating liquors they have acquired. They are teaching the children and women whom they meet in their mohulla Sunday schools the facts concerning tobacco and other narcotics and have persuaded some of them to give up their use.

The recipient of the scholarship in the Isabella Thoburn College this year is Miss Persis F. Stephens. Miss Stephens is already very much interested in the temperance movement and the work of the W. C. T. U. She attended the divisional convention at Cawnpore and took an active part in the meeting. Those who know her express the belief that she will make a strong leader among the women of India.

Why I Am Proud to Be an American

Francis W. Harper, Vice-President New York State Federation of Y. P. B.'s
(Winner of Third Honors in Prize Article Contest)

From the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico, to me is the greatest country in the world. I am very proud to be one of its sons because, it has a "government of the people, by the people and for the people."

Here, we are in a Christian nation and we can serve and worship our God as we see fit. We learn to serve others and to help them in their distress.

Our land is the richest in the world, yet it is not miserly. It spends and spends well for the education of its people. It promotes better homes among its inhabitants. Even the homes of the most humble are things of beauty.

Our flag is clean, unstained by the smirch of the liquor traffic. The flag now flies to protect our people from all foes, including the outlawed liquor traffic.

Here, we find men of obscure positions rising to positions of trust and responsibility, because they have had the right to labor and the chance to improve themselves.

Not only is this country rich in money, but also in the raising of foods and in the manufacture of goods. In these it excels all others.

My heart swells with pride when I think that I am an American. Webster explains pride as a generous elation of the heart. Surely I experience this when I think that I am a son of such a country.

Beware the First Glass!

Indulgence in alcohol, even in very small quantities, weakens the power of resisting temptation. We all know that nobody sits down to get drunk; but under the influence of the first few glasses self control is more and more completely lost.

—Dr. E. Kraepelin in "Lectures on Clinical Psychiatry."

Rising Generation Will Not Know Taste of Alcoholic Beverages

"I am as thoroughly convinced of the desirability of prohibition laws as ever. Drunkenness has very greatly decreased. I very seldom see a drunken man any more and the opportunity and temptation to drink have been removed from the pathway of the great majority of young people," writes Prof. J. B. Johnson, Dean of the College of Science and Arts of the University of Minnesota. "Twelve years ago a business man said to me, 'I am looking for a new location, but I can not think of coming to your city. I have two boys to bring up. I have seen more saloons and more drunkenness in fifteen minutes' ride through your city than I have seen in fifteen years in my home state.' The country as a whole is now approximately on the basis of his home state. I do not believe that the present selfish propaganda will induce the people to go back to the old economic and moral waste."

CROUP OR WHOOPING COUGH
ROCHE'S HERBAL EMBROCATION
Relieves promptly and safely. Effective in Bronchitis, Lumbago and Rheumatism.
W. EDWARDS & SON, London, England
All druggists or E. FOUGERA & CO. 90-92 Beekman St. N.Y.

Notes From Your Publishing House

(Continued from Page Ten)

"Win a Million Members," "Some Glad Day," "The Crusade Hymn," "The Crusade Glory Song (Forty-five Years After)," "The World Is Going Dry," and many other choice selections. "The White Ribbon Star Spangled Banner," "John Barleycorn Good-Bye," and "The Ribbon White," solos, are worthy of the best efforts of the local primadonna, while for the grand finale in which every voice may join with full throated accord, nothing better is needed than "The World Is Going Dry." Should something more pretentious be desired for the soloist the soprano solo, "Victory," often sung by Mrs. Graham, our national musical director, never fails to thrill every heart and bring an enthusiastic encore.

(Price of Jubilee Songs per copy, 10 cents; per 100, $5.00. "Victory" per copy, 15 cents; two copies, 25 cents).

The Twentieth Century Contest Reciters, Nos. 1, 2, 3 offer an excellent variety of selections on total abstinence, law enforcement, citizenship, child welfare, patriotism, Americanization, etc., while No. 4 contains a gratifying assortment of Peace selections culled from the productions of the best authors and speakers. (Price of books, 20 cents each).

Books, music, medals and leaflets pertaining to contest work to be secured of the National W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill.

Write for catalog and prices of medals.

TO COMBAT THE WINE AND BEER PROPAGANDA

Give the People the Truth.

THOUGHT-PROVOKING LEAFLETS FOR STUDY AND DISTRIBUTION USE THEM NOW

(All leaflets 2 cents unless otherwise noted)

Educational Series No. 2:
What Is Alcohol?
Beware—Wine!
Why Sign the Pledge?
Uncle Sam Says—
Danger to Seamen.
Disease and Degeneracy the Heritage of Drinker's Offspring.
Words That Count.
Better Shoes for the Children.
Whisky Delusions Dispelled.
American Medical Association Declares Alcohol Detrimental; Its Use as Medicine Without Scientific Basis.
Prescribing Liquor Scored by Dr. Howard A. Kelly.
Primary Lesson on Beer.
Beer is Drunk for Its Alcohol.
He was Not Drunk But——.
Alcohol an Ally of Pneumonia.
Wine as a Cause of Alcoholism.
Beer as a Cause of Alcoholism.
When is a Man Intoxicated?
Behind the Bars for Life.

Price per 100, 20 cents; per 50, 15 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

IMPETUS GIVEN TO WORK AMONG COLORED PEOPLE BY W. C. T. U. LEADERS

Encouraging evidences are to be seen of the desire of the better class of colored people, and especially the women, to align themselves on the side of moral reform and obedience to law and constituted authority. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union is co-operating to encourage this spirit and enroll the women in our organization. At several national gatherings of colored people during the past year the W. C. T. U. has been represented. Mrs. Margaret Peck Hill, president of the Maryland No. 2 W. C. T. U., attended the National Temperance, Public Morals and Law Enforcement Conference, held in October, in Nashville, Tennessee, as the representative of the W. C. T. U. This conference is the first of its kind ever called by the colored people, and Mrs. Hill presented most acceptably the temperance work among the women. Prominent among the white speakers at this meeting was Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp, president of the Kentucky W. C. T. U., who gave an address.

Mrs. Hill also represented the Woman's Christian Temperance Union at a meeting of the National Association of Colored Women's Clubs, which met in Richmond, Virginia, in August, about five hundred representative colored women being present.

The work among the colored people in Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, and Illinois has been promoted during the past few months by the excellent service given by Mrs. Violet Hill Whyte, national department field worker, who is a daughter of Mrs. Margaret Peck Hill.

Mrs. Whyte's work in the school in Oklahoma was especially noteworthy. She is said to be a veritable encyclopedia of W. C. T. U. methods, and was successful in securing many members among the women of her race.

The report of her work in Kansas is that she aroused the colored people she addressed to a sense of responsibility for the success of prohibition and law enforcement, and created a keen interest in the W. C. T. U. Her addresses to audiences of white people were also well received.

Mrs. Whyte spoke before the federated W. C. T. U. at state headquarters in Missouri, on "The Needs of My People" and gave many practical suggestions that will help the white W. C. T. U women in their work with their colored sisters. She is said by those who have heard her to have the happy faculty of winning and convincing audiences of young and old, being equally acceptable to the Loyal Temperance Legion, Young People's Branch and the W. C. T. U. Her versatility and her earnestness interest and charm her hearers. She has an easy flow of excellent English, and gives practical plans for work, illustrating them with actual experiences. A prominent Missouri worker gave her this high commendation: "Her work throughout the country will give a great impetus to law enforcement among her people."

The series of meetings closed at Chicago, where Mrs. Whyte conducted a study class in scientific temperance daily at the Young People's Congress of the African Methodist Episcopal Church. She was also one of the speakers on that occasion, and had charge of a Scientific Temperance and Child Welfare Exhibit, at which large quantities of temperance literature were distributed.

The Work and the Workers

Gertrude R. Brigham, Ph. D., of Washington, D. C., daughter of Mrs. Augusta R. Brigham, member of the state W. C. T. U. executive board of Massachusetts, who is touring Europe in the interest of art, as art editor of the Washington Times, was in Riga, the capital of the new republic of Latvia, at the time the joint W. C. T. U. convention of Latvia, Esthonia and Finland was in session in that city, in September, and was invited by Mrs. Helenius of Finland, who presided, to speak upon "Prohibition in America." Mrs. Helenius declared that Finland voted for prohibition twelve days before the United States. Miss Brigham considers Mrs. Alli Trygg Helenius a remarkable woman of great ability.

A large number of delegates and visitors attended the annual convention of the Westmoreland (Pa.) W. C. T. U. The various superintendents, for the most part, gave inspiring reports of the year's work. Rev. D. F. Marsh, of Pittsburgh, speaking at the evening session, reviewed the steps by which the Eighteenth Amendment was secured. Mrs. Azuba Jones, a national organizer and lecturer, an unexpected but most welcome visitor, was heard with much pleasure. The county expects to be represented at the coming World's and National conventions in Philadelphia.

The W. C. T. U. of Rocky Grove, Pa., has concluded a busy year of work. In its list of activities are included the organizing of a Y. P. B. having an enrollment of twenty-two, and a thriving L. T. L.; also a membership contest which resulted in the enlistment of 295 new members, with eight more added later. An address delivered before the union by Mrs. Viola D. Romans, national organizer and lecturer, and vice-president of the Ohio W. C. T. U., greatly inspired and enthused the women.

Wanted by the Children

We are making a special price of one dollar per thousand in any quantity for stickers to be used for distribution among the school children.

Summer prices still prevail: $2.00 per thousand; $1.25 per five hundred; 50 cents per 125.

Please remit with order to Mrs. James B. Scott, 503 South 46th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

The Magnet of Manchuria

(Continued from Page Four)

by so much as a hint. Here is one picture. Upon the bank of a great river is a village protected by a dyke. Presumably it is the Yellow River, which so often overflows. A break is visible in the rampart, threatening the destruction of homes and harvest, and a few energetic persons are shouldering tools to go and repair the damage. Others are represented as refusing to help and offering the various excuses with which reformers are so familiar. Some children are saying that they are too small to be of any use. It is not hard to imagine the bright young artist teaching the temperance parable by the aid of her picture and showing how even a child can serve his country.

One picture that made a strong appeal shows a splendid pine tree and below it the same tree blasted and dead. The pine makes a fitting emblem of China, the aged and yet ever-green. Beneath the blighted tree stand two figures, a Chinese and a foreigner. The former asks what killed the pine and the other replies, "It was a little worm." The worm is the morphine needle, piercing China to the death. The thing that touches one is the willingness of these people that a foreigner should point out what is wrong with their beloved land, and their readiness to respond to the message.

Yet another drawing shows the enemies of China, illustrated by a number of stores with such signs as these: "East Asia Tobacco Company, Fragrant Cigarets," "The poisonous drugs, morphine and opium, on sale." "Great Medicine Store, wholesale purveyors of all kinds of Chinese and foreign wines." Not far away four people are manning a gun and preparing to demolish the whole group of bad businesses. A man, a woman, a boy, and a girl are thus working together, typifying a united effort on the part of old and young. Above them floats a temperance flag with this inscription, "O China, why not rise up at once and destroy our enemies?"

The hope of Manchuria is in its Christian schools. The missionary body in this broad land consists of Scotch, Irish and Danes, working together in such splendid harmony that most of the Chinese have no idea that they represent three different boards. The only organization of which the majority are aware is the Church of Christ in Manchuria. In a country which continually attracts a stream of men from the East and from the West, by the hope of material gain, these missionaries are holding out a greater attraction. Their one united aim is to bring souls within reach of the magnet of God's love, into touch with Him who said, "I, if I be lifted up from the earth will draw all men unto me."

Why? Why?? Why???

"WHY A MILLION MEMBERS FOR THE W. C. T. U.?"

Read the above leaflet and find out WHY! If the beer and wine forces win in the present campaign prohibition will be set back fifty years.

Order the above named leaflet and see for yourself what is the purpose of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. Buy a quantity and circulate them among your neighbors and church people. Price, per 100, 45 cents.

(Please send remittance with order.)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

World's Organizer a Speaker at Rhode Island Convention

Special Correspondence

The forty-eighth annual convention of the W. C. T. U. of Rhode Island, held in Newport, "the city by the sea," was a great occasion. Reports from various committees and superintendents showed that much work had been accomplished in the state during the past year and that the enrollment is greatly increased. The singing of membership campaign songs, and the recognition of local unions and individuals securing new members during the year were interesting features of the program. The new song, "We Must Enforce the Law," written by the musical director, Mrs. George S. Perry, was highly commended and rendered with much enthusiasm.

The convention was very fortunate this year in having present the renowned W. C. T. U. worker, Miss Mary J. Campbell of India, and Mrs. Lora S. La Mance, national organizer. Miss Campbell, in a very interesting address, told of the political situation at the present time, in her country, of the missionary work, and of the interest shown in W. C. T. U. activities. Mrs. La Mance entertained her hearers with many accounts of her experiences as a traveler and lecturer for the W. C. T. U., and in a very unique way told of what is needed to improve conditions, both moral and spiritual.

Another interesting feature was an account of the life and works of Madam Kaji Yajima, given by Mrs. Lena Fenner Dennett, who has recently returned from a visit to Japan where she met this "wonderful old lady" in her own home.

A dinner was given, one evening, in honor of the pastors of Newport and their wives. This was largely attended.

The convention closed with a "Women Citizens Get-Together Luncheon," at which many guests were present, including Maud Howe Eliot, daughter of Julia Ward Howe. The program of toasts told of the mother, the clubwoman, the missionary woman, the church woman, the W. C. T. U. woman, the teacher and the social worker as citizens.

The number of noted speakers, the large attendance, and the remarkably fine weather, all served to make the forty-eighth annual convention a notable event in the history of the Rhode Island W. C. T. U.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. Ethelyn H. Roberts; vice-president-at-large, Mrs. J. J. Hall; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Mary M. Eldridge; recording secretary, Mrs. Idella Kent; treasurer, Mrs. Eva H. Smith.

As the Billboard Sees It

"The Eighteenth Amendment has almost emptied the jails of America, cut the number of inmates in the workhouses in two, and reduced the totals of convicts confined in penitentiaries appreciably, thereby liberating thousands and thousands," says The Billboard, in its September 23 issue. "Yet the advocates of nullification are chiefly composed of the sticklers for personal liberty. Oh, Liberty, Liberty! What loose thinking—what specious pleading—is committed in thy name."

Costs U. S. A. Not a Cent

"Keep in mind this fact, prohibition enforcement is costing the United States not one cent," says The Voice, organ of the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church. "The proceeds from fines, punitive taxes and confiscated property are much more than covering the cost."

Render to Your Country This Patriotic Service

Send NOW, TODAY, 10 cents

for our Patriotic Service Package. And when received, follow instructions therein given. Stamps accepted.

DO IT NOW!

New Campaign Leaflet

"WOMEN LINE UP FOR PROHIBITION"

Refuting the charge that "mothers in many parts of the country are anxious to use their votes against prohibition." For effective use, order in quantities and distribute widely.

Price, per 100, 45 cents; per 1000, $3.75.

Campaign Posters

Vote Right! New Poster for Women. Put it in evidence everywhere, and let it gain votes for the protection of home and woman.

OTHER POSTERS:

For Their Sakes Enforce the Law. (In Colors.)

Booze Stands Between—

The Eighteenth Amendment. (Stand by the Flag and the Constitution.)

Price each, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00.

For Distribution at Your Fairs Open Air Meetings and Every Place Where People Congregate

FACTS! FACTS!! FACTS!!!

A Series of Seven New Leaflets to Put in the Hands of Voters. You are THE ONE to Distribute Them!

TITLES OF LEAFLETS:

Labor Leaders Outspoken for Prohibition.
Bankers Believe in Prohibition.
Health Experts Favor Prohibition.
Educators Commend Prohibition.
Women Want Prohibition.
Family Life Benefited by Prohibition.
Manufacturers Approve Prohibition.

Special price, per 100, 30 cents; per 1,000, $2.50. Order in quantities and use now! Please send remittance with order.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois

To Combat The Wine and Beer Propaganda

Give the People the Truth

(All leaflets 2 cents unless otherwise noted.)

Primary Lesson on Beer.
Beer is Drunk for its Alcohol.
He Was Not Drunk But——.
Wine as a Cause of Alcoholism.
Beer as a Cause of Alcoholism.
When is a Man Intoxicated?
Behind the Bars for Life.

Price per 100, 20 cents; per 50, 15 cents.

The Persistent Beer Fallacy.
Wine—What Is It?
Beer Quantities of Alcohol Injurious.
What Benjamin Franklin Said About Beer.
Dangers in the Use of Fermented Drinks.
Is Beer Intoxicating?
Pre-Natal Effects of Alcohol.
Is the Moderate Drinker a Safe Citizen?
Are Beer and Wine Harmful?
Drinking to Avoid Drunkenness is Not the Whole Story.
Man or Beer?

Per 100, 45 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

Special Helps for Sunday School Officers and Teachers, October 29

(All leaflets 2 cents unless otherwise noted)

How can the Superintendent Promote Temperance Teaching In the Sunday School?
Problems of the Physical Awakening.
Temperance Teaching.
The Temperance Sunday School Lessons.
A Study of the Pledge. (For Primary Class Workers).
Pen Points.
The Teachings of the Divine Savior Concerning Wine.
The Pledge. What Is It? Why Sign It?
Thorough Temperance Teaching the Demand of the Hour.
Temperance Instruction In the Sunday School. Its Need from a Bible Standpoint.
Price, per 100, 45 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

BLACKBOARD EXERCISES:
Prohibition in the United States.
The Total Abstainer on Safe Ground.

TEMPERANCE TALKS FOR PRIMARY AND JUNIOR WORKERS:
Look Not Thou Upon the Wine.
Beware of the Wine Cup.
Watch! The Thief Is Alcohol.
Destruction.
Sin in the Heart.
Price per 100, 45 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

LEAFLETS:
World's Temperance Sunday—Citizenship Recognition Day.
The Sunday School Pledge Flag (Method Leaflet).
Temperance Sunday—Program for Sunday Schools.
Responsive Reading (Christian Citizenship).
Responsive Reading (Bible Temperance).
Responsive Reading (Signing the Pledge).
Responsive Reading (Bible Wines).
Responsive Reading (Bible Total Abstinence).
Posters in the Sunday School.
Price, per 100, 45 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

Citizenship Questionnaire.
The Sunday School and Law Enforcement.
Sunday School National Prohibition Guards.
The Forward Look of the Sunday School Department.
The Sunday School and Social Service.
Price, per 100, 45 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

Program—Recognition of Young Voters. Four pages. Price, per 100, 75 cents; per 50, 40 cents.

Special

TWO NEW PROGRAMS FOR L. T. L.'S, NATIONAL PROHIBITION GUARDS, AND SUNDAY SCHOOLS

Uncle Sam's Prohibition Quiz. Testimony of ten noted Americans (Exercise for 11 boys or young men).

Aunt Columbia's Prohibition Quiz. Testimony of ten noted American women. (Exercise for 11 girls or young women.)

Price, five cents per copy; per dozen, 50 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois.

Wets Receiving Numerous Setbacks

(Continued from Page Three)

governors promptly and decisively, replied, 'That statement is not true.' The other, with still more emphasis, said that not only was the statement untrue, but from his own observation at the convention and so far as he knew, 'none of the governors there took a drink,' although he did not doubt but that it 'could be had if wanted.'"

The Sanity League in Alaska

The Sanity League has attempted to organize in Juneau, Alaska, though without much result, as after a three-weeks' campaign a meeting was called, postponed because prominent people could not be present, called a second time with a like result, and finally held after the third call, with forty-nine people in the audience. At the close of an address, a resolution was read asking for the repeal of the Volstead Act, the Alaska bone-dry law, and the Eighteenth Amendment, but only four voted in its favor. The organizer declared that he was greatly disappointed, since five hundred had signed a petition that such a meeting be held and an organization formed.

Dry Utah Does Not Welcome Sanity League

The Sanity League, if not successful in one state, does not cease its efforts, as is shown by its advance upon Utah. The representatives of this society claim: "The Volstead Act, as now drawn, cannot be enforced and is making lawbreakers of millions. It is flooding the country with spurious liquors. The Sanity League stands for light wines and beers as opposed to bootleg whisky and narcotics." While announcement is made by its officers that the league is now operating in every state of the Union, it is generally admitted that the attitude of Utah will undergo little change as the result of such ministrations, as those who are cognizant of conditions there say that it is one of the dryest of dry states, with every indication that it will so remain.

Predictions Made by A. A. P. A. Not Borne Out by Facts

At the beginning of its campaign the A. A. P. A. announced that it confidently expected a gain of at least a hundred wet members in the lower House of Congress. According to the latest reports from primaries it seems likely that not only will there be no loss for the drys, but there will in all probability be a gain.

An example of the striking victories won at the primaries by dry candidates is found in the Sixth Congressional district of Michigan. In that state, according to the American Issue, the A. A. P. A. brought out a wine and beer candidate to oppose Grant M. Hudson, who for years has been a prohibitionist. Although the Sixth district of Michigan contains a number of the most important manufacturing cities of the state, and is the largest in population, the dry candidate won over his opponent by a majority of eight thousand, carrying every county but one.

A sweeping victory which will be permanent will come only by steady effort on the part of the drys, during the weeks and months yet to come, and constant education, until the opposition to the Eighteenth Amendment shall die away. Those who study the situation see no cause for discouragement.

Prepare for October 29, World's Temperance Sunday

Order All Supplies In Ample Time
Note Helps Here Named

(All leaflets 2 cents unless otherwise noted)

Quarterly Temperance Lesson of the International Sunday School Series, October 29. Should be early in the hands of every teacher. Prepared especially for teachers and officers. Price, per 100, 20 cents; per 50, 15 cents.

ENVELOPE LEAFLETS FOR STUDY AND DISTRIBUTION:
Duty of a Christian Citizen.
Clean Hands.
Marion Lawrence on Pledge Signing.
Beware Wine!
Listen, Boys!
Counting Fingers.
God's Bottles.
Why Sign the Pledge.
Lincoln's Appeal for Law.
Beer and Home Brew.
What Uncle Sam Says.
An Elder Sister's Advice to Boys. No. I.
An Elder Sister's Advice to Boys. No. II.
An Elder Sister's Advice to Girls. Nos. 1, 3, 4.
Safety First, Boys!
Price, per 100, 20 cents; per 50, 15 cents.

RECITATIONS FOR PRIMARY AND JUNIOR CLASSES:
Two Offerings.
Look Not Upon the Wine.
Where There's Drink There's Danger.
Price, per 100, 25 cents; per 50, 15 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois

At the latest national convention of the W. C. T. U. of Japan, the number of accredited delegates was the largest in its history. There was an increase of 1,000 in paid-up memberships and of twenty-four new local unions. A budget of $5,000 for the year's work was voted, this sum to include the amount given by the World's W. C. T. U.

Stop! Look!

A Most Important Message

A splendid opportunity for final campaign work is offered by the temperance lesson in the Sunday school on October 29. This is near enough to election day to make the lesson of vital import. Then, too, October 29 and November 5 should witness a nation-wide distribution of campaign literature on such topics as anti-wine-and-beer, and law enforcement, or leaflets stressing the value and necessity of reverence for and obedience to law. We have a variety of such material to supply your needs and urge you to be prepared by forwarding your orders immediately to your own Publishing House. Read the advertising columns of this paper and order at once posters (which should be displayed in abundance), and supplies for study and distribution in Sunday schools, church services, and other public meetings on the days above referred to. Do not neglect to use to best advantage the days of opportunity between now and November 7. Read the advertisements in this paper.

Alas! Somawathi!

Flora E. Strout

One June day a little Singalese fishing village, located just on the outskirts of the city of Colombo, the beautiful capital of Ceylon, was all agog with excitement, for the big draught of fish was being hauled in, in the huge nets which required the combined strength of all the men of the hamlet, to safely land.

The sea sparkled and dimpled in the sunlight, but the little thatched-roof houses in the shade of the cocoanut palms, flecked only by plashes of sunshine which filtered through the brush top of the trees, looked dark and cool.

Numbers of children, half-naked, their little brown bodies glistening in the sun as they played on the sand, were making almost sufficient noise to drown the song of the fishermen as they pulled together on the heavy net, putting forth their strength at every accent of the music. The kiddies screamed and shrieked as only children can, when anything out of the usual occurs to break the daily monotony, and a happier lot it would have been difficult to find.

Dozens of katamarans, native fishing boats, with their odd looking outriggers, were hauled up on the beach and around them played several girls older than those in the group just mentioned. One, a lassie of about fourteen, stood upright upon one of the boats balancing herself with outstretched arms, her graceful silhouette thrown strongly in relief by the sunlight as she laughed and danced on the sides of the katamaran. Her golden brown skin, clear and fine in texture, her heavy black hair knotted in a quaint grown-up fashion low in the neck, only served to heighten the attractive profile, so perfect as to features, a not uncommon characteristic of the people of the Island, whether rich or poor, Singalese or Tamil.

This little girl, whose name was Somawathi Dramakrithi, was the daughter of one of the older men even then pulling on the net with the others, who spent much of his time in the toddy taverns, to the neglect of a very large, ever increasing family, and the pretty soft eyes of Somawathi which were now dancing with merriment had often been filled with tears because of this same father. Many times food was scarce and hard words plentiful but just now this was all forgotten in the excitement of the moment and in the joy of play.

Suddenly, the little girl heard her name shouted in no uncertain voice. She was the oldest of the large family and was often called upon to act as nurse to some of the toddlers, and thinking it was for this she had been taken from her play she jumped down from the boat and ran towards the hut which she called home. As she approached the house, her face clouded and the laugh went out of her brown eyes. He had come again, the ugly old Singalese man whom she feared and her soul loathed. He seemed very friendly with her mother, a hard faced woman, and her father evidently liked him, for only two days ago he had taken the visitor to the nearest tavern for a drink of toddy. But Somawathi hated the very sight of him, especially since he had noticed her and tried to make friends with her. She would have turned back when she saw him but the sharp voice of her mother again commanded her and she laggingly approached, just in time to hear him say. "Yes, to-night. Put on her best clothes." Much to her delight he turned and went off after one look at her which travelled from her head to her feet, and which filled the child with renewed fear.

Strange to say, her mother did not scold her, but told her that a treat was in store for her as they were going to Colombo that very afternoon and she must run to the tap at once for a wash if she would be dressed in time for the train. Her eyes opened wide with wonder when she returned from her bath for there ready to put on was a new bright red sari and plenty of gayly colored glass bracelets, not to mention cocoanut oil for her hair, highly perfumed, and a silver anklet. She danced with delight as her toilet was at last complete and she looked as bright and pretty as many another Singalese lassie born under more favorable circumstances.

It was nearly dark when they alighted at a station which Somawathi saw to her disappointment was not the Fort where were located the shops and all the things which delight a child's heart. Her mother acted very strangely, the child thought. She was looking about her as if she feared to be seen or known, and she hurried up the station road at the top of which stood the man Somawathi hated, waiting apparently for them. Why was he there? Why had they come to Colombo so late in the day? Why, it was already dark! Why did they go sneaking down a lane almost parallel to the road leading from the station?

These questions passed through the little girl's head and as she could not find an answer to them she grew more and more terrified, and clung to her mother as if in fear that she would be left like an unwanted kitten by the side of the road.

At last they turned in at a gate which led to a big bungalow ablaze with light, upon the veranda of which several white men could be seen lounging and drinking. The mother holding firmly to the hand of her child passed from the light, hurrying down a side path which led to the back, always following the man, who seemed to be very familiar with the premises.

There was a whispered conference with the servant who met them at the back veranda and presently a white man appeared, much to the relief of the little girl, who by this time was shaking with dread and terror. Was he not a European? He would not hurt a little girl. She remembered when a white man had thrown her fifty cents and had laughed so pleasantly when she had scrambled for it. But as she studied this man's face, she decided that it was not a pleasant face like that other she remembered, indeed it was a face upon which dissipation and lust had already set their mark, if only Somawathi had known about those things. Suddenly, the child realized that they were bargaining. For what? Her mother had nothing to sell. Fifty rupees she wanted for what? Then she heard the words, "I tell you she is sixteen years old." At last after much wrangling the European opened his pocket book and handed some money to her mother, a portion of which was passed on to the Singalese man who had guided them there.

Alas! little Somawathi! She hung to her mother, grasped one of her hands with her two soft little palms, only to have her clinging fingers roughly unclasped by that very mother. "Stay here, my child, I am going out a bit and will return for thee. Nay! Nay!" she scolded as the child begged and wept. "This is a nice place; thou wilt have fine presents, plenty of jewels and saries given to thee here. I will come in a few hours. Thou shalt stay, thou must stay here!" With these words her mother was gone. The little girl sunk upon the floor screaming in terror, then her mouth was covered and she was lifted and carried away; when she dared open her eyes she saw that she was in a bedroom with barred windows. The servant who had evidently brought her in put her on the bed, and went out after locking the door.

Two weeks later, a gentle faced Burgher woman, wearing a white ribbon bow, passed by a chummery, where lived four European men, and saw crouching in front of the gate a dishevelled, sobbing little girl decked with cheap jewelry and a bright red sari. The good woman took the child to her home where her story was soon told, told to the end, where her constant fright and tears had wearied the masters and they had thrown her out after giving her a sum of money.

Attempts were made to get at the parents, but they would have nothing to do with her, besides there was the danger that they might sell their daughter again; so in a Rescue home, there is a Singalese girl not yet fifteen years of age, with the light gone out of her eyes, the brightness from her face.

Alas! Somawathi!

Unexcelled for repairing china, glassware, earthenware, furniture, vases, books, etc. Famous since 1876. Major's rubber and Leather Cements are good.

Three kinds, 20c per bottle at dealers, or write us.

MAJOR MFG. CO., NEW YORK

THOSE FOUR BEAUTIFUL SONGS

Are spreading through the land. Already thousands are singing them. They are "Hidden," "That City O'er the Sea," "May the Fire Fall," "We Shall Join the Shouting By and By." All for only 10 cents. Four lots of them for 25 cents. Or make it 35c and to the four lots we will add the fine 25c patriotic sheet song "The U. S. A. For Me."

Rev. L. L. Pickett,
Wilmore, Ky.

W. C. T. U. Badges. Made of mother of pearl. Price 25 cents each. Address treasurer W. C. T. U., Jerusalem, Palestine. P. O. Box 443.

Quiz: The World-Wide Work

1. Give facts to show that prohibition is gaining adherents.
2. Narrate Miss Tinling's experience in the Christian schools of Mukden.
3. Tell the story of Mrs. Armor's reception in Wellington, New Zealand.
4. Recount Mrs. McCulloch's experiences in regard to drinking on board ocean vessels.
5. What do prominent men have to say about the advisability of allowing the return of wine and beer?
6. What are some of the "good things" in store for those who attend the World's and National W. C. T. U. Conventions in Philadelphia next month?
7. Define the special issues in four great states of the Union.
8. Who overseas are antagonistic to the recent ruling concerning alcoholic liquors on foreign ships that touch our shores?
9. Can your union make use of part or all of the plans to be carried out by Southern California women to win a victory for law enforcement?
10. Give an outline of W. C. T. U. work being done among the colored people, and show its importance.

CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT

THE UNION SIGNAL ..... $1.50 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance (monthly).....50c a year
Single Copies, 5c each; per 100 .....$2.75

Are You Grateful? Prove It!

Della F. Withers, Circulation Manager

A few more weeks and the fiscal W. C. T. U. year will close. Let us be grateful for the many blessings we have enjoyed. Then ask ourselves if we are truly deserving.

Are we grateful enough that this country of ours is dry, thankful to the great army of men and women who have firmly and faithfully worked for the right, thankful for our own wonderful organization, for our official organs, THE UNION SIGNAL and The Young Crusader? Is our gratitude expressed in words only or in deeds?

Think what it would mean to awaken some fine morning to find all efforts to uphold the right had suddenly ceased; all good publications had stopped because they had not been supported; think how distressed you would be and how quickly you would give your energies toward reconstruction. Friends, this nonsupport of good publications is not fable, but fact. Many have been forced to give up; increasing cost of all printing supplies, wages, etc., have made it impossible to stand the strain; economy has been practiced; everything done except to lower the high standard of the paper. YOUR papers, THE UNION SIGNAL and The Young Crusader, have not been self-supporting for six years—since the World War. They are proud. It hurts to be dependent upon other sources for their existence.

We have an earnest, loyal, unselfish company of subscribers, but there are not enough of them. If you love THE UNION SIGNAL, as you tell us you do, you will realize its value to all W. C. T. U. members and others; you will wish YOUR OWN PAPER to be self-supporting; will be interested in seeing it grow in influence and usefulness, and you will be willing to do some work for it, and do it NOW.

THERE MUST BE 50,000 SUBSCRIBERS to make your paper self-supporting. "Overhead" expenses would remain the same with this increase; we would be able to secure good advertising, the getting of which depends mainly upon the size of a paper's circulation. Increase of circulation is the only way out. As an exchange puts it, "It is a laughably easy way," if you will help.

THIS IS YOUR WORK. RENEW YOUR SUBSCRIPTION PROMPTLY AND SEND IN ONE OR TWO NEW NAMES. SPEAK TO YOUR FRIENDS ABOUT THE PAPERS, GET THEM TO SUBSCRIBE.

See to it the Trio Team in your union take THE UNION SIGNAL. If they cannot, get the union to take from its treasury the funds necessary for this purpose.

Find out if the new members in your union are subscribers; tell them how helpful the paper is; ask them to try a six months' subscription.

Ascertain whether your library is supplied; your ministers and teachers.

Insist that your union have a promoter of the official organs. Frances Willard wrote: "It is the devout wish of my heart that each local union have an ACTIVE canvasser; not one waiting for subscribers to come to her, but one who goes from house to house for them."

Make your paper independent. GIVE US 50,000 SUBSCRIBERS. We look to you. Here is a way to prove your gratitude for a "dry nation," and a way to help keep it dry.

TRIO TEAM COUNTY HONOR ROLL

1. Jackson County, Iowa.
2. Grady County, Georgia.
3. Boone County, Illinois.
4. Barton County, Kansas.
5. Harper County, Kansas.
6. LaPorte County, Indiana.
7. Norfolk County, Mass.
8. Jewell County, Kansas.
9. Washington County, Kansas.
10. Ohio County, West Virginia.
11. Dukes County, Mass.
12. Dubuque County, Iowa.
13. Shawnee County, Kansas.
14. Big Stone County, } Dist.
15. Stevens County, } No. 12
16. Traverse County, } Minn.
17. Winnebago County, Wisconsin.
18. Walworth County, Wisconsin.
19. Strafford County, N. H.
20. Wayne County, Ga.
21. Dunn County, Wisconsin.
22. Faribault County, Minn. (District No. 27)
23. Winnebago County, Iowa.
24. Hamilton County, Kansas.
25. Ottawa County, Kansas.
26. Woodson County, Kansas.
27. Martin County, } Dist.
28. Watonwan County, } No.
29. Jackson County, } 3
30. Cottonwood County, } Minn.
31. Cheyenne County, Nebraska
32. Kimball County, Nebraska
33. Norton County, Kansas.
34. Clark County, Kansas.
35. Marion County, Kansas.
36. Highland County, Ohio.
37. Upshur County, W. Va.
38. Payne County, Oklahoma.
39. Stanislaus County, California.
40. Merced County, California.
41. Deuel County, South Dakota.
42. Mills County, Iowa.
43. Union County, Iowa.
44. Dakota County, } Dist.
45. Goodhue County, } No. 26
46. Rice County, } Minn.
47. Olmsted County, } Dist.
48. Dodge County, } No.
49. Steele County, } 2
50. Waseca County, } Minn.
51. Crawford County, Kansas.
52. Cass County, Iowa.
53. Polk County, } Dist.
54. Marshall County, } No.
55. Pennington County, } 14
56. Norman County, } Minn.
57. Edmunds County, South Dakota
58. Mower County } Dist. No.
59. Freeborn County } 30, Minn.
60. Bell County, Kentucky.
61. Chippewa County, Wisconsin.
62. Eau Claire County, Wisconsin.
63. Blair County, Penna.
64. Ness County, Kansas.
65. Blue Earth County, Minn. (District No. 21)
66. Dawson County, Nebraska.
67. Ellis County, Kansas.
68. Woodbury County, Iowa.
69. Kingman County, Kansas.
70. Lincoln County, Montana.
71. Bay County, Florida.
72. Glades County, Florida.
73. Highland County, Florida.
74. St. Lucie County, Florida.
75. Yamhill County, Oregon.
76. Creek County, Oklahoma.
77. Grant County, Wisconsin.
78. Tulsa County, Oklahoma.
79. Logan County, Oklahoma.
80. ? ? ? ? ? ?

When Small Trials Seem Bigger Than They Are

It is a wonderful thing to know yourself.

Stop right there!

Do you really know yourself? To know that you are "cheerful" or "nervous" or "intelligent" or "practical" is not enough. Your body is made up of flesh and blood and bones and nerves. Do you know, in such a way, the make-up of self?

Your SELF is twofold. There is a physical part and a non-material part. Both affect the calm and well-being of the other. Both must be in balance before you can be at your best in influence, in lovableness, in health.

Victory over Weakness

There are apparent exceptions. We all know certain persons who from superabundance of bodily health have the power that subsists in phlegmatic, well-nigh nerveless calm. On the other hand, a few, like the invalid poet Pope, can rise above bodily weakness by sheer mental and spiritual stature. And yet each of these types is out of balance. They accomplish, by painful effort, tasks that would be far easier if their natures were better balanced.

The Promise in the Laws

The encouraging fact is that both sides of this self are governed by fixed laws. They react upon each other by fixed laws of growth, of health, of control, and these laws are known as you may know them.

If you are conscious of a lack of balance that leads to worry, to uncharitableness, to habitually over-hasty action and speech, to infirmity of purpose, let me tell you what those I have helped say of my course. This course applies known fixed laws to mental and temperamental development. It does not give Self Mastery, but what is better—it shows the way to Self Mastery.

Knowledge Acquired in Recent Times

Before modern psychology had analyzed self and discovered its organic laws, our attempts at self-improvement were unscientific. Even now very much remains to be discovered, but enough is known to give a blessed assurance of rapid development if the laws of our being are observed.

If you are interested by these hints of promise, which must of necessity be vague, I wish that you would write to me. My course will do you immediate good in proportion to your present desire for self-betterment. That is relative; but the positive and absolute good it will give is in knowledge of your Self, of its laws and of the methods of turning those laws to your permanent development. That is a good that lasts as long as life itself.

Susanna Cocroft

Address Dept. 37-K

1819 Broadway New York

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN

NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly — Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year in Advance

Entered as second class matter at the Postoffice at Evanston, Illinois

Vol. XLVIII — EVANSTON, ILLINOIS, OCTOBER 26, 1922 — No. 43

Dates of Special Significance

October 29—World's Temperance Sunday. November 5—Sunday Before Election.	Make these days count for the election of desirable officials.

NOVEMBER 7—ELECTION DAY—	Do your own duty and influence your friends and neighbors to go to the polls. Pray earnestly.

November 11-15---World's W. C. T. U. Convention November 16-19---National W. C. T. U. Convention	Come yourself and bring others to these notable gatherings

November 25-29—	World's Congress Against Alcoholism, Toronto. Intercollegiate Prohibition Association Meeting, Toronto.

RULING OF ATTORNEY GENERAL DAUGHERTY A SIGNAL VICTORY FOR PROHIBITION

The ruling of Attorney General Daugherty, which prohibits the manufacture, transportation, or sale of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes on American ships wherever they may be, is a signal victory for prohibition. President Harding on the same day ordered the Shipping Board to put in force the ruling. The decision of the Attorney General was made in accordance with the contention filed in a brief by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

The liquor interests are pressing the President of the United States to recommend modification of the law to allow foreign ships to transport and possess liquor inside the three mile limit. The law clearly prohibits this and the American ships obey it. Why not foreign ships?

Letters of appreciation should go from the members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union to Attorney General Daugherty for his ruling and to President Harding for his prompt action in ordering the decision made effective.

Both in prohibition circles and at the Department of Justice the view was taken that Mr. Daugherty's opinion was strikingly explicit in its dealing with the transportation of liquor upon foreign vessels within territory under the jurisdiction of the United States. The opinion declared with emphasis that the approach to within less than three miles of the continental United States of a foreign ship bearing beverages prohibited under the laws of the United States would constitute "transportation" within the meaning of the prohibition amendment and the Volstead act.

All American diplomatic and consular officers abroad have been instructed by the State Department to give widest publicity to the opinion of Attorney General Daugherty, barring liquor from American ships everywhere and from foreign ships in American territorial waters.

A short extension of the time in which the ruling set by Mr. Daugherty would become effective was announced by Prohibition Commissioner Haynes, and was stated to have been made because of "pending injunctions and in order to give full time for compliance." Mr. Haynes proceeded in his announcement to state that the opinion was "to the effect that the transportation and sale of liquor on American ships and foreign ships in the territorial waters of the United States" are unlawful.

Legal Battle Begins

The legal battle to determine the right of foreign-owned ships to enter ports in the United States with liquor aboard was opened October 16, with the issuing by United States District Attorney Hayward of a reply to the bills in equity brought by five foreign steamship companies to restrain enforcement of the recent ruling preventing the carrying of liquor on vessels entering American ports.

Can Not Sue United States Government

The reply makes, in the main, four contentions: That the district court, before which the cases are to be heard, has no jurisdiction in the matter; that the suits are really against the United States government; that they do not show that the government has consented to be sued, and that they do not disclose any basis for an action in equity.

Upon these grounds the defense of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, Henry C. Stuart, acting collector of customs for the port of New York, and Ralph A. Day, Federal prohibition director for the state of New York, who are made defendants in the suits brought by the companies, will be built in court.

Mr. Hayward, who is acting for Secretary Mellon, in reply, answers specifically the ground upon which the requests for injunctions are based.

As to the difficulty which the foreign steamship companies state they would suffer by reason of laws compelling them to furnish wines to members of the crew, District Attorney Hayward says that the payment of higher wages would recompense crews for the lack of such stimulant. Regarding the loss of the profit made by the foreign ships in the sale of liquor, District Attorney Hayward claims that this loss is the only one which the companies will suffer under a strict adherence to the new ruling.

To the charge of the complaining steamship companies that the Attorney General's ruling is a misinterpretation of the Volstead act, the reply states:

"If the complainants are correct in their construction of the national prohibition act, the implications involved are exceedingly serious, and the claim of the complainants, if allowed, would carry with it as a necessary corollary the right of any ship to transport liquor within the territorial waters of the United States."

Answering the plea of the carriers to permit the possession on board ships of liquors, which would be kept under lock and key during "in port" periods, "the defendants claimed that such permission would make the entire enforcement of prohibition against the importation of liquors, 'already difficult,' practically impossible."

PROGRESS OF LAW ENFORCEMENT IN STATES

Enforcement of Prohibition an Accepted Fact in Alabama

"Enforcement is such an accepted fact in Alabama," says state prohibition director Charles M. Sartain, "that practically the only violations we encounter are those by moonshiners. There is no traffic in real liquor in any form whatever. Furthermore, we have the hearty co-operation of all law enforcement agencies. The fact that under the state laws drug stores are not allowed to handle whisky or prescribe alcohol is a great help.

"There is no agitation in this state for a modification of even the state laws, which are more drastic than the federal statutes, for the people see the vast improvement which has resulted from prohibition and have no desire to see any modification whatsoever."

Lack of Intoxicants in West Virginia

"Things have been made so hot for violators of liquor laws that they are on the run," says prohibition director Charles H. Ahrens of West Virginia. "One result of all this activity is a growing lack of intoxicating liquor in this state. Agents have reported to me that at the many fairs now in progress throughout the state very few intoxicated persons are encountered. At one fair in a crowd of approximately 14,000 people an agent said he did not so much as smell the odor of liquor on anyone's breath. At another fair in a daily crowd of approximately 40,000 only two intoxicated people were seen during an entire week.

"Field Agent J. Walter Bee, paraphrasing a well known saying, says of West Virginia liquor, 'If a man drinks but little here below, he'll not be with us long,' which certainly describes the lye-fermented moonshine now on the market. Such liquor will eat up raw meat, and what will it do to a stomach?"

Whisky Traffic on Decline in North Carolina

Federal prohibition director R. A. Kohloss of North Carolina, says: "County and municipal officers in almost every instance, when requested to do so by our agents, aid in the enforcement of the Volstead Act, and the press continues to give strong support. There is also a growing public sentiment in favor of the strict enforcement of the law.

"I recently made a personal investigation throughout the state to satisfy myself as to the real condition with reference to traffic in liquor and to ascertain the general conditions. My observation is, as a general rule, that the whisky traffic is much on the decline."

Referring to North Carolina moonshine, which occasionally reaches the northern bootleg market, Director Kohloss states that he recently gave a public demonstration at which it was revealed that in each of forty-five gallons of seized liquor there was at least three inches of slime. "Most people of North Carolina know what the stuff is and will not drink it," he says.

Public Sentiment Increasing in Favor of Prohibition Enforcement

Regarding general conditions in South Carolina, prohibition director Bowen reports:

"The attitude of juries in both federal and state courts is good and that of the judges is excellent. Public sentiment toward enforcement of the law is improving rapidly, which is being reflected in the attitude of the juries. Satisfactory co-operation is being secured by our agents in practically every section of the state, while every agent on my force is exceptionally good, seemingly imbued with the idea that this office is here to enforce the law and that it means business."

Nebraska People Generally Favor Upholding of Prohibition Law

"Persons who have long been connected with the enforcement of the laws will corroborate the statement that the bootlegging industry existed before the National Act went into effect," declares federal prohibition director U. S. Rohrer of Nebraska. "In spite of the fact that liquor was easily obtained, bootlegging was carried on before opening hours and after closing hours of saloons, on Sundays and on election days. The reason so much emphasis is placed on this industry at the present time is because liquor is so hard to get, and that obtainable is totally unfit to drink. These stories may be credited in practically every instance to those people who are unfavorable to enforcement in a well defined attempt to discredit observance and enforcement of the prohibition act.

"People are generally in favor of upholding the law, whether it is pleasing or not, realizing that it is part of the Constitution of the United States and a law of the land. Sentiment in favor of strict enforcement is growing rapidly and as the drinking public becomes better informed concerning the materials used in the manufacture of the product now on the market and the conditions under which it is made there will be a noticeable falling off in the demand."

Tourists In Florida Ninety Per Cent For Prohibition

Liquor violations in Florida have decreased to a great extent, and the attitude of the public has greatly improved, reports the state prohibition director, A. L. Allen. "Patrons of bootleggers are being convinced by argument and otherwise," he says, "that they are violators of the law in as great a sense as those who sell liquor. This, coupled with the character of booze, has resulted in a bootleg slump. I think this condition is general throughout the country, judging from the attitude of the many tourists who come here. I have talked with a great many of them and I find that at least ninety per cent of them are for strict enforcement. They also state that in their travels they notice practically no drinking whatever or any accidents resulting from drunken drivers along the lines of travel.

"Our efforts in enforcement work have had gratifying results and I feel that we shall soon have practically broken up the bootlegging traffic. Smuggling along our coasts is receiving our undivided attention and has materially decreased. I am much pleased with the progress made and with the attitude of my force toward their work and expect even better results in the future."

Decrease of Smuggling

Information has been received by Federal Prohibition Commissioner Haynes that the Canadian government, with cooperation in curbing the flow of Canadian liquor into the United States, has placed a representative in all liquor-export houses whose duty it is to see that liquor consignments reach their intended destination, and requisite bonds are returned only on the receipt of a landing certificate from the port to which the cases were destined. In consequence, there has been a greatly reduced quantity of liquor landed at American coast points, according to customs officials.

Minnesota Juries Co-operate in Enforcement

It is the opinion of Federal Prohibition Director S. B. Qvale of Minnesota that the attitude of the juries in the Federal and state courts is continually getting better. It is also his belief that Federal judges are looking upon the Eighteenth Amendment in a different light than some time ago, and they are imposing severer sentences.

Bone Dry Mexico, Is Plan of Legislators

The possibility of Mexico being made bone dry is again being seriously discussed in Mexico City, according to the New York Tribune. "It is announced that it is the intention of several Deputies to propose a 'dry' bill modeled after the Volstead law in the United States as soon as Congress begins its sessions."

Evanston (Ill.) Golf Club Debars Liquor

Officials of the Evanston Golf Club recently notified the members that henceforth the Federal prohibition law will be enforced in spirit and letter. The ban was placed upon "hip" flasks as well as liquor in lockers. Public drinking of, and the stocking of intoxicating liquors and wines, as interpreted by the Federal prohibition law now in force in the United States, is prohibited at clubs or on their grounds.

Parent-Teacher Head Emphasizes Value of Prohibition

Urging support of the state prohibition act, Mrs. Elizabeth Tilton, national legislative chairman of the Parent-Teacher Association, in a recent address at a public meeting in Gloucester, Massachusetts, gave figures comparing certain Massachusetts charity organizations before and after prohibition.

"In cases in which drink figures," said Mrs. Tilton, "we find a 20 per cent decrease in Pittsfield, an 84 per cent decrease in Haverhill, a 90 per cent decrease in Cambridge and Boston, a 93 per cent decrease in Salem, a 97 per cent decrease in Fitchburg, and a 99 per cent decrease in Newburyport, Brookline, and Attleboro."

EFFORTS OF LIQUOR ELEMENT TO DISCREDIT AND NULLIFY PROHIBITION CONTINUE

The wet forces will make a frantic endeavor at the coming elections to gain their desired quota of public officials and legislators who are in sympathy with them and their cause.

Friends of the liquor traffic will spare no effort to make people all over the country—yes, and in other lands—believe that prohibition in America is only a farce. The prohibition forces must be quick to recognize these tactics of the wets and make them futile.

"Volstead Law a Lie"

The above assertion is credited by the press to Mr. Sibley, assistant treasurer of the "Constitutional Liberty League," a society seeking to return intoxicating liquor to favor as a beverage. In his plea to the voters of Massachusetts to vote against "a law passed by our legislature, requiring state authorities to join with Federal authorities in the enforcement of the Volstead Law," Mr. Sibley calls the Volstead Law a lie on the face of it, claims that it draws no line between the proper and improper use of liquor and charges that the declaration of the law that liquor containing more than one-half of one per cent of alcohol by volume is intoxicating is false. He appeals to the voters to uphold the "old Constitution" by defeating such a law.

Desecration of the Symbol of Liberty

To the lovers of the home and its purity, it seems nothing less than a sacriege that the various organizations working against the welfare of home, childhood, the state and the nation, should use the symbols of liberty on their literature. In a four-page folder put out by the "Citizen's Liberty League" there is placed under an engraving of the Statue of Liberty a pronouncement against prohibition, which has been attributed to Abraham Lincoln and given wide publicity. Although proven unauthentic, the statement is still circulated as coming from the lips of the Great Emancipator. Another organization uses a picture of Independence Hall, Philadelphia, to give its words authority, and the Illinois Division of the Association Opposed to Prohibition is placing in public places a large poster showing a likeness of the Liberty Bell, and bearing the words in display type, "Ring It Again! Let Your Protest Be Heard by Congress. Vote Yes to Modify Prohibition Laws Election Day Tuesday, November 7." This poster is printed on light blue paper with the lettering done in red and blue ink. Friends of the wet cause are also asked to display upon the windshields of their automobiles a card banded in red, white, and blue, with the Liberty Bell and a similar inscription.

Fight for National Beer Referendum To Be Renewed at Reconvening of Congress

During the closing session of Congress, not only did Representative Brennan of Michigan ask for five per cent beer, but Representative Ansorge of New York took up the plea during the last days, asking that the question should be given to the people by national referendum, contending that it would furnish positive evidence as to public sentiment with regard to modifying the prohibition laws. Some of the time-worn arguments brought up by Mr. Ansorge were that the soldiers were abroad when the matter was "put over," that public sentiment is not back of the law, that lawlessness is rampant, that a revenue would aid the soldiers' bonus, that the Federal Treasury is paying for storage and other expenses involved in making the country dry, and that a dry element has no right to prescribe for an opposing element of citizenship.

A "Liberty" Party Proposed by New York Wets

On September 26, the New York Society of Restaurateurs (an organization which seems to be made up principally of former saloon keepers who sold food with liquor) held a meeting, and according to the New York Herald passed a resolution "favoring the formation of a third political party for the purpose of keeping the anti-prohibition issue to the front and accumulating sentiment behind that issue until the dominant political parties are compelled to take notice and act upon it."

A former member of the state general assembly spoke at some length upon the advisability of a third party. "We have today scattered over our land more than twenty organizations with hundreds of thousands of members," he asserted, "all working independently for modification

(Continued on Page Six)

A WOMEN IN INDUSTRY MESSAGE FOR CONVENTIONITES AND STAY-AT-HOMES

Laura Miller, National Director Women in Industry Department

The Message to Conventionites

Are you coming to the great conventions in Philadelphia? Cut out and put in your convention note-book the Women in Industry Program:

EXHIBIT: Latest W. I. I. Posters and Leaflets—Striking Color Scheme—Special Device for Connecting Leaflets with the Posters that Represent Them—An Exhibit Worth Study by Any Live Wire Member of the W. C. T. U.

Where? Lecture Room, Chambers-Wylie Church, Broad St., below Spruce.

When? November 16-19.

W. I. I. CONFERENCE: Twenty minute talk, Women in Industry Legislation in Your State, by Florence Kelley—Six two-minute talks, Women in Industry Legislation in My State, by state superintendents, W. I. I.—Ten minute discussion by national director. Mrs. Kelley is secretary of the National Consumers League, a veteran fighter for women in industry, a compelling speaker, and—probably—will come with an interesting chip on her shoulder this year, a chip that concerns all the welfare legislation for women in your state.

Where? Chambers-Wylie Church, Group 3 Conference Room.

When? 3:30-4 P. M. Better come at two o'clock and hear the whole Group 3 program.

W. I. I. BREAKFAST: Informal Get-together, with discussion of legislation, law enforcement and membership plans. Presentation of prizes for the W. I. I. Picture Contest. Mrs. Kelley will be guest of honor. The director will preside, assisted by Pennsylvania's W. I. I. superintendent, Mrs. Geist.

Where? City Club, Broad and Spruce streets.

When? Friday, November 17, 8:30 A. M. sharp.

W. I. I. CONFERENCES: The director wants to get acquainted! But the only way to manage it in so big a crowd is through some system to start by. So—

Clip the following and give to a convention page:

Date.....

To Mrs. Laura Miller

From .....

Position in W. C. T. U.....

Permanent Address .....

.....

I should like to arrange to talk over our women in industry problems and work with you. The time that would suit me best is .....

Telephone or address in Philadelphia

.....

I am in Convention as Delegate
(Cross out one) Visitor from .....State

For Stay-at-Home W. I. I. Enthusiasts

Are you one of the folks that are longing for the thrill and inspiration of Philadelphia, but sticking to your guns at the old stand? There's just one way you can console yourself. (At least this has been my experience!) Show as much enthusiasm for the 1923 program of the W. C. T. U. as if you had gone. Prove that you're one of those valuable people equipped with a self-starter! You know without being reminded that to work to a 1923 program means to include Women in Industry. (If your faith wavers at this point, send 3 cents to the National W. C. T. U., Evanston, Illinois, for a copy of Mrs. Philip Zoercher's "Why Women in Industry Laws." It's good prohibition doctrine.)

But the best program won't really include Women in Industry unless you or somebody like you bestirs herself soon.

Wouldn't it be a good plan to hold a little personal consecration service? To read aloud our own Industrial Creed—that statement that is unequalled in antiquity, in breadth of social viewpoint, in depth of Christianity?

Your director may not dictate what your prayer should be. But she suggests that your "labor" to the same end, take some of the following forms:

1. A STATE SUPERINTENDENT. Has your state a good, active one? There was $100, for instance, appropriated for organizing Women in Industry work in your state last year. Was it used? Did your state paper carry frequent notices of the department work? Were W. I. topics urged for local meetings and cou ty conventions? If you are not gettin what you need, write your state presider urging this help. Remember that th ideal W. I. I. superintendent is a woma who has been or is employed.

2. COUNTY AND LOCAL SUPERIN TENDENTS. They are needed nov Again—prayer and labor will find th right woman if she is not already place in your mind's eye.

(Don't feel because you live in a com munity without big factories that yo have no work for a W. I. I. department The strongest contribution the W. C. T U. can make to the whole big women i industry movement is to develop a muc needed smaller-town women in industr sentiment. Write your national directo for suggestions along this line, telling he the size of the place, the character o the surrounding industries and what th men-folk chiefly do for a living, wit anything about the women you happe to think of.)

3. W. I. I. MEETING. Get your loca union to plan for at least one W. I. I meeting this winter—before the nex membership drive. Get program sugges tions from your superintendent, or fron the national director. Or get the presi dent to buy "Topical Programs for th Use of Local Unions" from the Nationa W. C. T. U. Publishing House, and b sure the W. I. I. program is used.

4. Read the PICTURE CONTEST an nouncement repeated on this page from a UNION SIGNAL of last spring. This is a good thing to interest young women and outside people in your work. There is still time to get a picture to Phila delphia.

5. Start a LAW ENFORCEMENT CAM PAIGN for your state W. I. I. and Pro hibition laws. Work quietly on violations of W. I. I. laws at first. Many good-intentioned employers do not know these laws.

Report violations of daily or weekly hour law, prohibition of night work law, minimum wage law, or one day rest in seven law, to State Labor Commissioner, at your state capital.

Report violation of fire prevention laws to State Fire Inspector, at state capital.

For violation of prohibition laws, consult W. C. T. U. officers as to proper procedure. Or send 5 cents to National W. C. T. U. Publishing House for manual of Law Enforcement.

If you don't get permanent results on your W. I. I. campaign, use publicity—all the publicity you can get. A lot of the hue and cry about "that unenforce-

(Continued on Page Ten)

CONDITIONS OF THE 1922 W. I. I. PRIZE PICTURE CONTEST

Three prizes, $5, $3, $2.

To be awarded at the 1922 National Convention.

To the 3 local unions that send in the 3 best Women in Industry pictures.

All good pictures to be made into slides for stereomotorgraph display as a department exhibit.

Subjects:

1. The Women in Industry work of a regular union must be indicated in some way by the picture. Or

2. Any activity of a W. I. I. union (that is, a union with at least three-fourths of the membership employed women) may be shown.

Size, etc.:

1. Gloss or shiny prints, such as any finisher will make.

2. Five by seven inches or larger.

3. Unmounted (preferred, not demanded).

4. Brief description attached.

5. Name and address of union and sender attached.

Time Limit:

Must reach Philadelphia not later than November 12. Send after November 1 to Mrs. Laura Miller, Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, Philadelphia, Pa. "Hold for W. C. T. U. Convention."

INDUSTRIAL CREED

of the

National Woman's Christian Temperance Union

We Believe:

In a living wage—In an eight hour day

In courts of conciliation and arbitration

In justice as opposed to greed of gain

In "peace on earth and good will to men"

And Finally We Pledge Ourselves:

To labor and to pray

That all these principles, founded upon the gospel of Christ, may be worked out in the customs of society and the laws of the land.

CALIFORNIA CITIZENS GIVE CONVINCING TESTIMONY IN FAVOR OF PROHIBITION

Forty-Niners' Celebration Demonstrated Value of Prohibition

Carl M. Warner, Pastor Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, Sacramento, California

The population of our city was doubled during the '49 celebration. The advertisements led thousands to believe that all restrictions would be lifted for the week. The spirit of the days was such as to suggest revelry. But I did not see more than two drunken men in the five days of the celebration. A man whose business is on the corner where the roughest element of the city passes constantly, told me that he had seen less than a dozen drunks during the week. A banker friend said: "I have not been a dry but the '49 week proved prohibition to me. I regard the '49 celebration as demonstrating in a remarkable way the worth of prohibition even when no state law is available for its enforcement."

Only One Drunken Man Seen During Five Hundred Mile Auto Trip

F. M. Larkin, Ph.D., Editor California Christian Advocate

Before prohibition became effective in the United States there were 4,000 licensed liquor places in San Francisco. At that time it was stated in an open meeting of the board of supervisors that there also existed in the city 1,500 blind pigs. The more than 4,000 public drinking places have disappeared. How many "blind pigs" remain, we do not know. Before we had prohibition there were two city ordinances for the suppression of the nuisances, but after prohibition went into effect, the board of supervisors quietly repealed the laws against them, presumably to make lawlessness easy.

The day after the Fourth of July, two years ago, the secular papers announced that for the first time in the history of San Francisco, the "booze tanks," where drunks are left to sober up, were empty. A few days afterwards the chief of police requested that these "booze tanks," which were formerly crowded with occupants after every holiday, be utilized for other purposes, as they were no longer needed.

During the past summer it was my privilege to take an automobile trip through California to Lake Tahoe and return, a journey of about 500 miles. We went by way of the old Placerville road, made famous by the emigrants of '49 and recorded in literature by Bret Harte and others. We returned through Emigrant Gap by the way of Donner Lake, upon whose shores has been placed the Donner Monument as a memorial to early pioneers and those who lost their lives in the endeavor to reach this El Dorado.

Persons even slightly familiar with this early history of California know that the saloon was the center of all riotousness and evil doings, and drunkenness was the common sin of the early miners. Before prohibition, at every stopping place in the entire journey, we would have found from one to a dozen open saloons, with their groups of demoralized and dissipated men. In the little town of Truckee, some fifteen miles from Lake Tahoe, a few years ago every third or fourth store on the main street was a saloon. But in this entire trip, which required about four days of constant travel and ten days visiting places in California and western Nevada, we saw but one drunken man. He was well-dressed, but, strange to say, took from his side pocket a silver flask, from which he drank, in the elegant dining room of Tahoe Tavern, the finest hotel on the entire route. During his drinking he threw at another table a partly eaten olive, which, after staining the dress of a lady, fell into the food of the person seated with her. Yet this man was at the table with the hostess of this first-class hotel. Beyond this unfortunate, not to say, disgusting incident, we saw no evidence of the drinking or drunkenness which before prohibition became effective was seen in every town and at all the cross roads where there were open saloons.

Family Life and Home Conditions Vastly Improved

William H. Nicholl, Chief, Adult Probation Department, San Francisco, Cal.

Prohibition, since it has gone into effect, has made conditions better among the people with whom this department is dealing daily.

We find that homes have been brightened and cleaned, carpets have been put on floors, curtains in windows, table cloths on tables that never had them before; that children are better dressed and better cared for by the parent or parents. This has all been accomplished through prohibition.

Also we find through reports of the probation officers who visit the homes, that even musical instruments, pianos, pianolas, victrolas, etc., never before possessed, have been introduced.

I have also been informed of a number of cases where automobiles have been purchased by the family through the earnings of the father or the wage bringer, who formerly spent this money in dissipation, so that the general tone of family conditions is better. However, I have found a number of cases coming through the courts where people who never drank in their lives have used intoxicants for the first time since prohibition went into effect, but the percentage is so small that it is hardly the right thing to make a statement, or to take this as any ill-effect of prohibition, but I feel that it is only fair that I should give this side of the question concerning what has come to my knowledge through arrests during the time the dry law has been in effect.

Business Easier to Handle—Accidents Decrease

Mr. Ready, of Murray & Ready, San Francisco, one of the largest employment agencies in the United States, giving employment to upwards of 120,000 men yearly, when interviewed by a representative of the W. C. T. U., testified that prohibition had made his business one hundred per cent easier to handle and emphatically repeated, "There is no question about the benefit."

One of the clerks in the office said: "More men reach the places to which they are sent, and reach them in better condition; they have money in their pockets and they are happier since prohibition."

"Prohibition has certainly decreased greatly the number of employes who come up to the Commission for help while under the influence of liquor," asserts Mr. J. S. Thomas, assistant secretary of the Industrial Accident Commission of California.

"Charges by employers that injuries were incurred because of the intoxicated condition of the man injured are much rarer.

"The total number of injuries has decreased greatly since prohibition went into effect, and it is only a common sense inference that a large portion of this decrease is due to prohibition."

If Habit of Moderate Drinking Makes Men Break Law, Then Moderate Drinking Should Be Abolished

Fernando Sanford, Professor (Emeritus) Stanford University, Palo Alto, in Manufacturers' Record.

I am well aware that the prohibition law is not being satisfactorily enforced, and that there is a great amount of lawlessness among men whom we have heretofore regarded as loyal citizens, but in so far as this fact becomes an argument it seems to me altogether in favor of prohibition.

If the habit of moderate drinking will make a man so regardless of the will of the majority in a republic, then it is essential to the perpetuation of republican institutions that even moderate drinking shall be abolished.

I am not discouraged as to the ultimate enforcement of the law. The irreconcilables are losing in numbers and influence all the time. The supply of standard alcoholic beverages is becoming more meager all the time, and one must be very dependent upon alcoholic stimulation to remain long a patron of the commercial bootlegger.

"When Crime Has Dared the Law to Combat Upon Any Field, There Let the Fight Be Without Quarter Until Law Stands Undisputed Master of the Field"

William H. Thomas, Attorney and Counsellor at Law of Los Angeles, California

[Judge Thomas for the last eight years has been on the bench—the first six of which he served as judge of the Superior Court in and for the county of Orange, and the last two as associate justice of the District Court of Appeals in and for the Second Appellate District of California.]

As a result of prohibition, and notwithstanding all the obstructions which have been placed in the way of enforcing the law, I am more opposed than ever to the liquor traffic. It not only has been but now is, in my judgment, the most lawless combination within the confines of our country. It has always talked regulation. It has never lived up to its own claims. As soon as a law intended for its regulation had been adopted immediately the liquor traffic would seek some avenue of escape and to find out some way to violate it without having to be sent to the penitentiary.

There is no question in the world in my judgment that the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment is one of the greatest pieces of advance legislation that have ever been adopted in our country. The liquor traffic right now is doing everything in its power to cripple enforce-

(Continued on Page Six)

OBSERVANCE FIRST ELEMENT OF LAW ENFORCEMENT, SAYS HENRY FORD

The recent decision of Henry Ford that violation of the prohibition laws by anyone in his employ will constitute cause for instant dismissal has aroused much comment, both adverse and favorable, all over the country. That Mr. Ford has reason as well as law on his side he shows very clearly in a keen analysis of the subject of prohibition, given at some length in the Dearborn Independent. The article is worth careful perusal. We quote in part:

"It needs someone to make clear at once several points which have been badly handled by the enemies of the Constitution. First, the action of the American people in destroying the artificial legal character of the liquor traffic, was a deliberate action. It was not undertaken hastily nor under stress of emotion. It was not 'put over' by a lot of anemic saints while all the red-blooded men were fighting in France—as a certain argument to the returned soldier would have us believe. (The soldier knows that the government put him under prohibition before the rest of the country got it.) The enactment of the prohibitory amendment was the culmination of seventy-five years' agitation and deliberation on the part of the American people. If the war between the states had not intervened, the liquor traffic would have been de-legalized fifty years ago. But the Civil War came, setting aside the growing national sentiment against liquor. And then the hold of liquor was greatly strengthened by the taxing of it—the so-called 'licensing' of it—a shrewd move which made it one of the pillars of government support, and harder than ever to throw down. So that the action of this people in acting after a discussion lasting seventy-five years, ranging all the way from the moral to the economic aspects of the question, can hardly be said to have been hasty or inconsiderate. Neither can it be said to be the imposition of a minority opinion upon the majority. The nation was set in its mind to do what it did, and it is done. It was the majority opinion that carried.

"Another point to make clear is that the thing which was done has a certain element of finality about it. That point is not clear to many professional agitators as yet, but it will become so. What was done was done..... Let it be repeated that what was done in the prohibitory act was done with finality; it will stand; there will be no modification; 'wet' agitation will only serve to make prohibition stronger; the present system of prohibition will endure until the last vestige of the old liquor system has vanished.

"The time has come when people with sense ought to frown upon all attempts to make the Constitution a joke and ought to withdraw from those public functions which get their whole zest by surreptitious lawbreaking under the table.

"It has been unfortunate that the enforcement of the law has sometimes been intrusted to opponents of the law. But even that has served to uncover the essential lawlessness of the thing which the prohibitory act has outlawed. It was just as lawless in the days of its power; it was just as contemptuous toward the laws that gave it its life as it now is toward the law that decreed its death. Enforcement of the law is not alone an official matter; it is a duty of the individual citizen. And the first element of enforcement is observance."

"When Crime Has Dared the Law"

(Continued from Page Five)

ment. The law abiding element should do everything it can to uphold the dignity and majesty of the law.

I agree with Judge Stone of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, when he said recently that:

"When crime has dared the Law to combat upon any field, there let the fight be without quarter until Law stands undisputed master of the field."

As I see it today, it is not a question of prohibition or no prohibition—that is already an accomplished fact as a matter of law—but rather one of respect for law and its enforcement.

Answering your query as to what has been my experience in studying this question as to the effect of prohibition on labor or the saving of money frequently spent for liquor and its use in the betterment of homes and the better care of women and children of the land, through money formerly spent for drink, I beg to state that the best answer to this that I can give is to quote the recent statement by President Harding, where he said:

"In every community men and women have had an opportunity now to know what prohibition means. They know that debts are more promptly paid, that men take home the wages that once were wasted in saloons; that families are better clothed and fed, and more money finds its way into the savings banks. The liquor traffic was destructive of much that was most precious in American life. In the face of so much evidence on that point what conscientious man would want to let his own selfish desires influence him to vote to bring it back? In another generation I believe that liquor will have disappeared not merely from politics, but from our memories."

—Manufacturers' Record.

Efforts of Liquor Element to Discredit and Nullify Prohibition Continue

(Continued from Page Three)

or repeal of the Volstead Law and the Eighteenth Amendment. But their efforts are not united.

"After much earnest thought and discussion I am convinced that the best way to get them all together under one head is by the organization of a Liberty party, a political party having for its object the preservation of the liberties we still have and the restoration of the liberties that have been stolen from us; a political party with only two planks in its platform—one denouncing the Eighteenth Amendment and its enforcement laws, and the other denouncing the 'blue laws' and sumptuary legislation and declaring for the largest possible personal freedom for the individual commensurate with public safety and private rights.....All the different associations that now are making individual fights should get together in a Liberty party and fight shoulder to shoulder against prohibition and the 'blue law' fanatics. Until the Liberty party is on its feet and in active political existence we must not overlook the importance of defeating every dry candidate, no matter for what office he may be running and no matter what ticket he is running on."

New Jersey Wets Want Legal Bureau

Lawyers all over the state of New Jersey have been receiving letters from the president of the state division of the A. A. P. A., requesting trained legal experts to defend violators of the Volstead Act from the "prosecutions" of the Federal enforcement officials. The lawyers are asked to give their services without pay as a protest against the indignities which are put upon such offenders, and assured that the names of those volunteering such aid will be placed on an honor roll kept standing in the Minute Man, a monthly publication of the New Jersey and Pennsylvania divisions of the A. A. P. A.

Such a bureau, of course, would not be for the purpose of seeing that the law is enforced, but to give every man who wishes to violate it conscious security in the backing of the "Legal Bureau."

Buying a Winery to Evade Prohibition Law

The Philadelphia North American and other papers tell of a scheme to evade prohibition laws by buying up a winery, and distributing its stock among shareholders of the corporation as "private stock." The entire purchase price is reported to be three million dollars, and each $200 share entitles the buyer to fifteen gallons of wine and five cases of champagne. When the winery changes hands its goods will be "legally" taken to New York or New Jersey and placed in a big warehouse, and then the stockholders may receive their permits to remove their stock without any fear of the law. Moreover, the men back of the "Urbana Wine Company" state publicly that if their plans meet with no federal interference the same tactics will be employed to let loose the vast supply of hard liquors now held in bond in the various distilleries. "The moral aspect of an enterprise which thus proclaims itself as formed to circumvent the Federal law and nullify the Eighteenth Amendment apparently has never occurred to the promoters," comments one reporter.

Candidates on Beer and Wine Platform in State of Washington

In spite of the fact that for over twelve years there has not been an adverse vote on any prohibition legislation in Congress from the state of Washington, four candidates "tried their luck" in running on a beer and wine platform, two for the Senate and two for the House. One of these candidates, writing to the Sanity League of America, gave as his "principles" in his campaign, "Give us this day our daily bread—with some wine and beer." The posters used on automobiles, advertising his views, told the world that "We want no saloons—no poison booze nor prohibition. They all promote drunkenness, disrespect for law, industrial unrest and homicide. Restore people's rights. Let our government dispense pure, wholesome, refreshing WINE AND BEER. Thereby reduce crime and taxes."

Despite this advertising, Mr. Casey was defeated in his district at the primaries by a majority of 37,557 to 2,306 votes, and the other wet candidates by even greater majorities.

PLACES IN PHILADELPHIA, THE CONVENTION CITY, YOU WILL DESIRE TO VISIT

Philadelphia is unique among American cities, for in it are to be seen landmarks of the actual scenes where our forefathers founded our government for the people, by the people, and of the people.

Independence Hall

First in point of historic significance is, of course, Independence Hall, the birthplace of our national life. Here Washington was appointed commander-in-chief of the army, and here, on June 7, 1776, Richard Henry Lee of Virginia moved that "these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States." From the little observatory the Declaration of Independence was read aloud.

The Liberty Bell

The Liberty Bell, that sacred treasure of our nation, is to be seen in Independence Hall, where visitors may examine it closely and read the inscription: "Proclaim Liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof." Many other sacred relics are exhibited—the mahogany table on which the Declaration of Independence was signed; the great silver inkstand into which the signers dipped their pens; the quill box and the sand shaker; the chairs in which Washington and other delegates sat, and the facsimile of the original Declaration.

The First American Flag

The home of Betsy Ross, where the first Stars and Stripes were made by that interesting woman from a design said to have been given to her by General Washington, is open to the public.

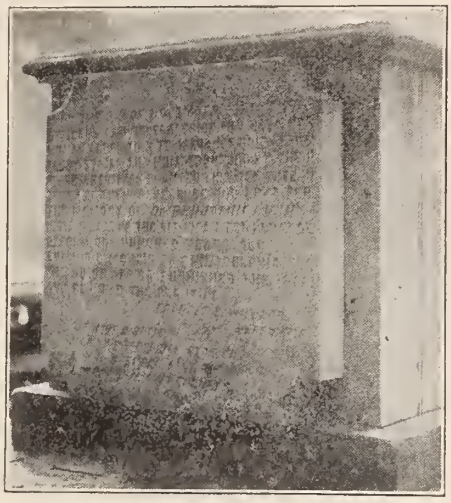
William Penn's Home

The man for whom the state of Pennsylvania is named was characterized by his contemporaries as "as fit a man as any in Europe to plant a country." William Penn belonged to the Society of Friends, and persecution of himself and his fellow Quakers inspired him with the idea of establishing a colony where there should be liberty of conscience to worship God as each man saw fit. In payment of a debt owed to his father by the British Crown, he accepted a large territory in the American wilderness, to which King Charles II gave the name of Pennsylvania. He arrived in November, 1682, on the ship "Welcome," with one hundred companions. One of his first acts was to make a league of friendship with the Indians. By paying them for the land which had been granted him by the King, he won their confidence. The house in which William Penn and his family lived became the first state-house of the province, and has since been moved to Fairmount Park, where it is preserved in its original condition. It contains various relics of the founder and is open to the public.

Benjamin Franklin Relics

Interesting relics of Benjamin Franklin are on display at the Pennsylvania Historical Society and at the University of Pennsylvania. His grave is marked by

Dr. Rush's Grave and Tree Planted by White Ribboners



Memorial Tablet to Dr. Rush

a simple tablet in the burial ground of Christ Church at Fifth and Arch Streets.

Christ Church

Christ Church, which Benjamin Franklin, George Washington and other patriots attended, is an interesting structure. The present building was completed in 1744 and in the steeple still hangs the chime of eight bells which rang in 1776 in celebration of the Declaration of Independence.

Carpenter's Hall

In Carpenter's Hall the first Continental Congress met in 1774 to frame those measures which led to the Declaration of Independence. During the Revolution the basement of the hall was a magazine for ammunition.

Congress Hall

The first Senate and House of Representatives met in Congress Hall, which adjoins Independence Hall on Chestnut Street. In this hall George Washington delivered his farewell address in 1796.

In the Vicinity of Philadelphia

Not far from Philadelphia may be seen the old forts and intrenchments where Washington's Army spent the terrible winter of 1777-78, and in the house which General Washington used as his headquarters is an interesting collection of relics. Valley Forge is now a national park of 500 acres. It is reached by the Reading Railroad, by motor, or by bus from the city.

Benjamin Rush's Grave

When the National W. C. T. U. met in Philadelphia in 1885, at the suggestion of Frances E. Willard, an oak tree was planted by the side of the grave of Dr. Benjamin Rush, who had the distinction of being the first physician to publish a warning note in regard to the danger of the use of alcohol. His famous "essay" had wide circulation. This tree is said to have prospered wonderfully, considering its situation. It is at least thirty feet high and its branches extend out over the graves of the whole Rush family. In 1886, through the efforts of Edward S. Morris, a philanthropic resident of Philadelphia, there was placed at the grave a white marble tablet bearing the following inscription:

"On the third of November, 1885, the officers and delegates of the National W. C. T. U. from forty states, and numbering three hundred, by their representatives, planted this oak tree in token of their reverence and love for the memory of Dr. Benjamin Rush, instaurator of the American temperance reform, one hundred years ago.

"Edward Morris of Philadelphia, friend of Africa, furnished the tree and planned the planting.

"Frances E. Willard, President.
Caroline Buell, Corresponding Secretary.
Mary Woodbridge, Recording Secretary.
L. M. N. Stevens, Assistant Secretary.
Esther Pugh, Treasurer."

Other Attractions in the "City of Brotherly Love"

Girard College, founded by the will of a wealthy Philadelphia citizen, in 1831, for the support and education of poor orphan boys.

John Wanamaker's store, considered commercially the greatest retail store in the world.

United States Mint, a structure that cost nearly two and a half million dollars. Visitors are taken over the building by guides who explain the interesting processes of coining money.

University of Pennsylvania, with departmental schools of medicine, dentistry, engineering, finance, law and science, occupying over seventy buildings.

Bryn Mawr College, noted educational institution for girls, is located near Philadelphia and is easily reached from the city.

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union
Evanston, Illinois

Editor-in-Chief - - - Miss Anna A. Gordon
Managing Editor - - Miss Julia F. Deane
Associate Editor - - Miss Vida I. Thompson

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors of The Editorial Department, The Union Signal, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittance of $1.50 or under.

Notice of Expiration is sent to the subscriber two or three weeks before renewal is due, so that by immediate attention to this reminder not an issue need be missed. RENEW PROMPTLY.

Remittances should be made by draft on New York or Chicago, or by Post-office Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

Change of Address. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE, $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
Foreign Postage, 52 Cents Additional

Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (Monthly) 50c a Year
Foreign Postage, 12 Cents Additional

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., post-office as second class matter. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized August 20, 1918.

Evanston, Illinois, October 26, 1922

Convention Program Grows

Among the people of note who are to speak at the World's W. C. T. U. Convention, in addition to those already mentioned in these pages, are Rev. Henry Van Dyke of Princeton University, Miss Jane Addams of Hull House, Chicago, Mabel Walker Willebrandt, United States Assistant Attorney General, Mary Anderson, director of the Woman's Bureau of the Federal Labor Department, and Hon. Sara Graham-Mulhall, formerly first Deputy Commissioner for the State of New York Department of Narcotic Drug Control.

President Harding Asks Miss Gordon to Serve on Near East Emergency Committee

The following telegram has just been received by Miss Anna Adams Gordon:

"I am appointing you one of a committee of distinguished citizens, selected from every state, to co-operate with the American Red Cross and the Near East Relief, and with the co-ordination committee made up of the heads of the organizations interested in relief work in the Near East of which Mr. Will H. Hays is chairman, in making known to all of our countrymen the great call which has come out of the Near East to the heart of the American people. More than a half million suffering human beings, the majority of them women and children, are dependent on the benevolence of America. The Red Cross and Near East Relief Committees, working in harmony and supported by all benevolent organizations, are responding to the call. The co-ordinating committee is helping to develop the money-raising campaign and bringing into concerted action all the forces possible. You will not be burdened with details, but the association of your name will be a great influence in their work in your community.

"WARREN G. HARDING,
"The White House, October 22."

Brewers as a Law Enforcement Agency

One of the major arguments advanced by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment is that a modification of the Volstead Act to make legal the business of manufacturing beer will insure the enforcement of the prohibition law. Such sophistry may impress people who are not cognizant of the past history of the brewery business or its present history as recorded in the office of the Federal Prohibition Commissioner. The suggestion of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment ought to be considered in the light of the statement made very recently by Commissioner Haynes, that "evidence has been secured showing recent violations of the prohibition law by approximately 150 breweries. In many cases the corporation or officers have been convicted and in practically every case heavy fines have been imposed. Coincident with this vigorous policy of court action is the fact that approximately $700,000 has been paid into the treasury by this class of cases as offers in compromise."

Yet the proponents of the wine and beer movement claim that enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment may be insured by reinstating and legalizing these interests that have always been notoriously lawless and at the present time are in the business of law-violation on a huge scale.

More Education

"More education, not prohibition," is the title of an editorial in a pro-liquor paper, in which the writer argues that "a nation cannot be legislated into Utopia." If we should change his title to voice our own opinion, it would, of course, read: "More education and prohibition." A new generation is growing up, forming its habits and preparing to make the history of the world for the next—decade? Yes, and more: for the next century; for eternity. The prohibition law is a protection to society, and aids in the prevention of wrong habits. It ranks with the laws against stealing, murder and other crimes.

This screed, however, is not intended as a defense of the prohibition law, but to emphasize our agreement with the editor above quoted as to the importance of education. The privilege that is ours, of sowing seed in the fertile soil of twenty million young minds in our public schools, is one that the organizations against prohibition covet for miseducation, and are doing their best to use indirectly, as shown by the books and magazine articles which are being circulated throughout the country, in which scientific facts are falsified and erroneous conceptions of liberty promoted. The supreme place that education occupies is further stressed in the words of the Missouri head of the A. A. P. A., whom we recently quoted: "Something needs to be done to keep light wines and beer once they are voted back, or else the public will raise a lot of money, carry on a campaign, and knock them out again. The people must be educated to see that beer and wine are not intoxicating, and constitute true temperance."

In many a town there is still some drinking, either of moonshine or of home brew. Even if you are so fortunate as to have no such condition in your own community, dare you say that the youth now in its public schools will never encounter the foe elsewhere? It is meet, then, for education along temperance lines to continue to be emphasized.

And there are many other places where the work of education must go on. For the past five decades have the crusaders of temperance reform been "sowing the seed beside all waters," and though at times it seemed as though it were destined to die, and the workers often watered it with their tears, "God gave it a body as pleased Him," and we see the fruit in the Eighteenth Amendment.

Can we then cease to sow? If we do not sow scientific temperance facts and the observance of and respect for law, while others are sowing misrepresentation in regard to prohibition, the seeds of "personal liberty" and disregard for law, what will result? Watch to see that scientific temperance instruction is being carried on in your public schools; that it is not being minimized or evaded as "no longer needed;" that your union is as active as in the days when there were open saloons in the town; that your papers are being furnished with facts about prohibition; that your Y. P. B. and L. T. L. are flourishing; that foreign mothers are given invitations to attend the special meetings for young mothers; that each Temperance Sunday is observed and given much prominence in all the Sunday schools in your town. All these and many other ways are there of sowing the seed. And there is both promise and warning in the words: "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

Specializing on Citizenship

"You can't talk ten minutes with Mrs. B—— without being asked by her if you have registered, for whom you are going to vote, and why?" remarked one woman to another. "I have noticed that," was the response. "Mrs. B. is specializing on citizenship up to election time. You can't seem to interest her in anything else."

One of the hopeful signs of the times is the increasing definite and practical interest of men and women in civic affairs. In past years we specialized on society, on business, became experts in golf and tennis, and other things, but we seemed to take it for granted that we could meet our responsibilities as citizens without any particular expenditure of effort.

Unfortunately, all this time there has been a large company of undesirable citizens who have been specializing on the use of their civic privileges for their own financial and political profit. They have not trusted to haphazard methods, but have systematically managed their campaigns from primary to election day, and have devoted time and money to rounding up their henchmen to register and vote for their candidates, and vote again and again, if they could put it over. Indeed, this class of people have specialized so thoroughly and successfully on civic affairs during past years that in some big cities the decent element have had little chance to express their wishes at the polls.

Not until there is a widespread "specializing on citizenship" among Christian people, will good government triumph over bad, civic righteousness gain a victory over the forces of evil. Let us make for ourselves a new beatitude, "Blessed is the nation whose people take the time to 'specialize on good citizenship.'"

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA, NOVEMBER 11-15, 1922
NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA, NOVEMBER 16-19, 1922.

"March of Allegiance to Constitution" Planned By Committee of Five Thousand In San Francisco Campaign

A spectacular parade of patriotic men, women and children in San Francisco is planned for the Saturday before election, to demonstrate their allegiance to the Federal Constitution. At the head of the procession will be carried an immense banner, proclaiming, "WE SUPPORT THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES." Before starting on the line of march, every man, woman and child who is to participate will take an oath of allegiance to the Constitution. President Harding has been asked to arrange with the American warships in San Francisco harbor to give the signal for starting the parade by a salute of guns to the American flag, and to designate detachments of soldiers, sailors and marines to lead the parade. Recruits from all the bay counties, and indeed from all the state, are expected. Children dressed in red-white-and-blue, forming huge living flags, thousands of women costumed in white, and many bands of music, will be among the picturesque features. The men will co-operate with the women in making the plan a success. The idea is a part of an intensive campaign for loyalty to the Constitution being conducted by the Women's Committee of Five Thousand, which is working for the endorsement at the polls, November 7, of the Wright state enforcement act. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union is one of the leading women's organizations identified with the movement.

Birthday Reception For Mrs. Margaret Dye Ellis

Through the kindness of Mrs. Jennie A. Warren, recording secretary of the Roseville W. C. T. U. of Newark, New Jersey, the high points of a notable reception tendered to Mrs. Margaret Dye Ellis September 30, on her seventy-seventh birthday, are given to THE UNION SIGNAL readers. Mrs. Warren says in part: "Mrs. Ellis welcomed the guests with radiant smiles, as, seated in a handsome chair trimmed with a bow of white ribbon, and backed by the Stars and Stripes, she returned our loving greetings.

"Miss Esther Elfreth, state president, Mrs. I. H. Demarest, state corresponding secretary, Miss M. Anna Lutz, president of the Roseville union, and hostess of the occasion, Mrs. E. S. Wood of Seattle, Washington, and the pastor of the Roseville M. E. church were most happy in their tributes to Mrs. Ellis, eulogizing especially her wonderful work for national prohibition.

"In reply, Mrs. Ellis spoke in her happiest vein as she expressed her deep gratitude and recalled interesting incidents connected with the work. Everyone wished she could be as strong physically as she is of mind and heart. No one values more than she the work and fellowship of the W. C. T. U. Enjoyable vocal solos were rendered by Miss Burton and a social hour followed during which dainty refreshments were served. As a slight expression of appreciation, flowers and monetary gifts from friends within and without the state, were presented to the 'birthday lady,' and Margaret Dye Ellis richly deserved the honor."

Crush The Wet Crusade at The Polls, Urges Newspapermen's Journal

The American Press, a country newspapermen's journal, asserting that "country America voted prohibition into the Constitution," in a recent issue warns "country America" of the concerted attack by the liquor interests upon prohibition. "The wets have not only planned a widespread campaign for the elections, but have already put it into action," says the editor. He maps out the method of procedure of the wets, as not at present against the Eighteenth Amendment, but as concentrated upon getting amendments to the Volstead Act, attempting to pledge Congressional candidates to modification of the law.

"They are not going to arouse the lukewarm dry element by demanding drastic amendments to the Volstead law at the very beginning. They will be quite content with 2 per cent beer, knowing that if they can make that wedge, 2 1-3 or 3 per cent beer will follow in good time. Next will come 'light' wines, the word 'light' being used to deceive because the lightest wine has 15 per cent alcohol and a very little of it will produce intoxication.....

"Most of the captains and lieutenants in the fight already waging for a wet Congress, as well as the rank and file, are foreign-born. They are bitterly against prohibition and they and their wives and families can be depended upon to go to the polls this fall to vote for the 'right' candidates.

"The question is: Does country America care enough about prohibition to put up the stiffest kind of a fight to nip in the bud this first desperate effort to nullify a part of the constitutional law of the land? The answer is due on the night of November 7."

State Conventions

Vermont, Burlington, October 24-26.
Texas, Fort Worth, October 24-27.
Iowa, Oskaloosa, October 24-27.
Mississippi, Waynesboro, Oct. 24-27.
Arkansas, Paragould, October 25-27.
Florida, Kissimmee, October 31-November 3.
New Jersey, Camden, November 9-10.

Change of Address

Mrs. Emma H. Howland, National W. C. T. U. organizer and lecturer, has moved from 541 Massachusetts Avenue, Boston, to 441 High Street, Middletown, Conn.

For God and Home and Every Land

Time of Prayer—Noontide

"It is always noontide somewhere,
And across the awakening continents,
From shore to shore, somewhere,
Our prayers are rising ever more."

The General Officers of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union urge every member of the organization to pray, work and vote for the election, on November 7, of candidates who favor the Eighteenth Amendment and its strict enforcement.

They designate Sunday, November 5, as a day of special united prayer for the triumph of prohibition at the coming election.

Opportunity

They do me wrong who say I come no more,
When once I knock and fail to find you in;
For every day I stand outside your door,
And bid you wake, and rise to fight and win.

Laugh like a boy at splendors that have sped,
To vanished joys be blind and deaf and dumb;
My judgments seal the dead past with its dead,
But never bind a moment yet to come.

Wail not for precious chances cast away,
Weep not for golden ages on the wane;
Each night I burn the records of the day,
At sunrise every soul is born again.

When deep in mire wring not your hands and weep;
I lend my arm to all who say "I can!"
No shame-faced outcast ever sank so deep,
But yet might rise and be again a man!

Dost thou behold thy dead youth all aghast?
Dost reel from righteous Retribution's blow?
Men turn from blotted archives of the past,
And find the Future's pages white as snow.

Art thou a mourner? Rouse thee from thy spell;
Art thou a sinner? Sins may be forgiven.
Each morning gives thee wings to flee from hell,
Each night a star to guide thy way to heaven.

—Walter Malone.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. HEADQUARTERS

GENERAL OFFICERS

PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL.
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, FARGO, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA.
TREASURER
MRS. MARGARET C. MUNNS, EVANSTON, ILL.

1730 Chicago Avenue, Evanston, Ill.

REST COTTAGE

RED LETTER DAYS

October 29—World's Temperance Sunday.
December 23—Crusade and Pioneers' Day.

TRANSPORTATION NOTES

WORLD'S AND NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTIONS, NOVEMBER, 1922

Have you made your reservations for the trip to the World's and National W. C. T. U. Conventions, either via Washington or via Buffalo? Since the running of special trains depends on the number of reservations, an immediate response to the passenger agents whose names will be found in the transportation notes below, will be greatly appreciated. Please read all the article carefully and act exactly according to its instructions. This may save you annoyance and will facilitate the work of the transportation committee.

The convention rate of one-and-a-half fare has been granted to California on the identification certificate plan. This rate is open to members of the organization and their families. A special identification certificate will be furnished to each person desiring one, and the round trip ticket must be purchased before leaving home. As soon as the certificates are ready they will be sent to the state presidents of Northern and Southern California W. C. T. U.'s, to whom those interested may apply.

The state of Pennsylvania does not allow reduced rates from one point in the state to another point; therefore, all delegates in Pennsylvania will be barred from the special convention rates.

At Washington, D. C., sight-seeing cars will be available on November 11. There are several tours to choose from and special arrangements will be made to accommodate the visitors.

On November 20, if a sufficient number wish to make the trip, there will be an excursion to Atlantic City; round trip fare, $2.40.

Transportation Notes

Tour No. 1. For those who wish to spend Saturday, November 11, in Washington, D. C., and who do not plan to go to Toronto.

A train on the Pennsylvania Railway will leave the Union Station, Chicago, Friday, November 10, at 10:30 a. m., arriving in Washington at 8:00 a. m. The day will be spent sightseeing, and the trip to Philadelphia will be resumed at 4:30 p. m., arriving in the convention city at 7:30 p. m. The return trip can be made at the delegates' pleasure as no special arrangements will be made by the transportation committee. Apply for reservations to W. E. Blachley, Division Passenger Agent, Pennsylvania Railway, 323 South Wells Street, Chicago.

Tour No. 2. For those who wish to attend the World League against Alcoholism meeting in Toronto, Canada, November 25-29.

A train on the New York Central will carry special cars for delegates leaving Chicago, Friday, November 10, at 5:00 p. m., connecting at Buffalo with the Lehigh Valley road. No change of cars will be necessary. Arrival at Philadelphia will be at 8:08 p. m. Apply for reservations to Mr. C. Hartigan, Ass't. Gen. Pass. Agt., New York Central Railroad, La Salle Street Station, Chicago.

Tickets on the going trip will be available on the Pacific Coast November 7 to 13 and in all other parts of the country and Canada, November 8 to 14. By either route, the one way fare, Chicago to Philadelphia, is $29.46. The return trip will be one-half of the regular fare. The Pullman fares are as follows from Chicago, either route; Lower berth, $8.25; upper, $6.60; drawing room, $30.00; compartment, $23.25.

The trip from Philadelphia to Toronto will be made on the Lehigh Valley road, leaving Philadelphia, Tuesday, November 21, at 8:40 p. m. Several hours will be spent at Niagara Falls, arriving in Toronto at 9:43 p. m., November 22. Tickets must be deposited at Buffalo by all delegates who hold tickets to any point east or west of Buffalo.

An agent of the railroad will be at the convention November 15 and 18 for the purpose of validating tickets. Immediately on arrival in Philadelphia tickets should be left at convention headquarters, the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, with Miss Elizabeth Newman, secretary of the transportation committee. On the return the final limit for leaving Philadelphia is December 1. Delegates must arrive at starting point December 3 for all but Pacific Coast points.

The fare from Buffalo to Toronto is $3.67. The pullman fare from Philadelphia to Toronto is as follows: lower berth, $5.25; upper, $4.20; drawing room $19.50; compartment, $14.75. Reservations for this trip may be made at the convention.

The Pennsylvania and New York Central railroads have prepared a special letter covering details of trips mentioned which may be obtained on application to the railroads.

It is very important that reservations for either tour from Chicago to Philadelphia should be made as soon as possible. If a sufficient number make reservations, either or both roads will run a special train for the exclusive use of the delegates.

Parties living east of Chicago may join either tour at the most convenient point; western delegates will join in Chicago.

Be sure to secure a certificate from your railroad agent at the time of purchasing your ticket. Do not make the mistake of asking for a receipt. No refund of fare will be made because of failure to secure certificate.

N. B. In order to secure reduced fare, tickets must be purchased going and returning over the same route.

Social Morality Posters

The Girl of Today 20c
Safeguarding Babyhood 20c
The Policewoman 20c
The Community's Youth 20c

These are printed reproductions in color (size 20 x 30 inches) of the hand-made posters to be used in the Social Morality exhibit at the World's and National W. C. T. U. Conventions to be held in Philadelphia in November.

Give Her a Torch 10c
(size 19 x 25, printed in sepia)
Price, set of five, 75c.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

A Women in Industry Message for Conventionites and Stay-at-Homes

(Continued from Page Four)

able Volstead law" really means that we don't enforce most of our "inconvenient" laws. A W. I. I. campaign would probably do far more to convince your townspeople of the slow, steady campaign necessary to enforce any needed law, than much prohibition preaching. Make it an object lesson and it will go home.

6. Get a real MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN for W. I. I. members started. Work for a union of employed women to meet regularly at night and to take up only two or three departments of work they are specially interested in. Providence, R. I.; Columbus, Ga.; Monticello, Ia.; Niagara Falls, N. Y.; Oshkosh, Wis.; Palmer Park, Ill., and Huntington, Pa., are on the honor list. Why don't you get on? Too big a place? Are you much bigger than Providence? The Livingston union there is six years old and still thriving. Too small? Monticello has only 2,200 people. Women too busy? Columbus women work in the mills for wearisome long hours and have only Sunday afternoons. But the union lives after three years of big obstacles. The director is proud to claim them. Can't your union do what these have done?

Make a note of the National Director's change of address. It is: Mrs. Laura Parks Miller, 20 Gramercy Park, New York City.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

BETWEEN NOW AND ELECTION DAY

HOW MEMBERS OF THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S BRANCH CAN MAKE NOVEMBER 7 COUNT FOR THE CAUSE

Press home to young men and young women of voting age their responsibility to do their full civic duty.

Ask them if they have registered, if they know for whom they are going to vote, and why?

Try to engage them in conversation on the vital issues involved in the November 7 election.

Rouse in them a real enthusiasm to have a big part in the election of dry candidates to Congress and state legislatures, and the right kind of officials for other offices.

Inform them as to the efforts of the enemies of good government to confuse and deceive the people.

Open the way to a full and free discussion of the whole prohibition question, giving the facts which will enable them to answer the arguments of the opponents.

Tell them the story of the wonderful benefits that have come from prohibition. Have your pocket full of the rainbow series of "Facts" and give them a set of these seven leaflets. (See page 16.)

Induce them to vote for the right candidates and to get their friends to do it.

Strike the high note of patriotism at the polls, loyal service at the ballot box, in all your conversations.

Magnify the privilege of every man and woman citizen to help to make the government of the United States the best government on the face of the earth.

The Queen's Question

Queen Victoria had visited one of the great provincial cities of England to perform an important public function. A large choir, composed of three or four thousand boys and girls, was gathered on a huge platform erected for the occasion. The next morning, when the Queen got back to the palace, she at once sent a message to the mayor of the city which she had visited. It had no reference to the civic formalities, but came straight from the great mother-heart of Victoria. This was her message: "The Queen wishes to know—did the children all get home safely?" Are the children safe? No more important and momentous question can be asked.—Sunday School Times.

Why I Am Proud to Be an American

Eleanor Ayres, Penn Yan, N. Y.
(Honorable Mention in Prize Article Contest)

Why am I proud to be an American? This question has never before entered my mind but when I come to dwell upon it, I see how all-important the question is and how many reasons may be given in answer to it. We do not always feel the pride we ought when we speak of our country, hear our national songs, or watch our flag hoisted into the sky where a breeze catches its folds and sends it floating like a great benediction over us all. Why am I proud to be an American?

First: Because the United States is a Christian nation.

Second: Because the United States has the greatest and best traditions of any country in the world. I, as an American, am benefited by these traditions.

Third: I am proud to be an American because other nations look to my country for a standard of leadership.

Fourth: Because, while many other nations were the result of conquest, our country was founded and our Constitution formed by God-fearing, liberty-loving men.

Fifth: Because the United States has adopted the Eighteenth Amendment, making it a safer country in which to live.

Sixth: Because of the freedom and personal liberty which America bestows upon her people.

Seventh: Because of America's educational advantages.

Eighth: Because my country is so rich in lands and products.

Ninth: Because of America's missionary work among other countries.

Tenth: Because of the large number of Christian and temperance societies throughout America which are becoming more and more efficient.

We can not help but realize, when we ponder these reasons and many others, what advantages we, as Americans, have. It seems to me that in no other country so great a majority of people live in such happy communion with God and with each other. Why should we not be proud of "the land of the free and the home of the brave"?

Who Wants to Go and Go and Not Get Anywhere?

It was Johnny the seven-year-old, who tired of the merry-go-round. The previous summer it had fascinated him, and he could not ride on it too often. This season a single trip had satisfied him, and he declined another.

"No, thank you, grandfather," he said, "you see, we ride and ride but we stay under that old tent all the time. I guess when any one gets to be seven years old they're too big to care about going and going that doesn't get anywhere."—Sunday Circle.

Two Careers and a Mission

More than twenty years ago, three boy friends attended the same public school and the same small college. And all three went to the same university—one of them into the school of divinity and the others taking the engineering course.

Last winter they met, for the first time since their graduation, and naturally they compared their experiences.

One said: "I have converted the flow of mountain streams into three hundred thousand horse power of electrical energy and have saved millions of tons of coal."

Another said: "I have bridged three gorges in the Andes and have shown a dozen towns the way to industry and profitable markets."

And the third said: "In twenty years, at our mission in the slums, nearly five thousand men and women have been converted and shown the way to the Kingdom of God."—Christian Statesman.

Going? Where? To the World's W. C. T. U. Convention in Philadelphia, November 11-16!

You are interested in World's W. C. T. U. activities, but are you informed? The following will be of assistance to you. Order at once and "read up" before you go or as you travel.

Story of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Why We Wear the White Ribbon.

Price, each 5 cents; per 50, $1.00; per 100, $1.50.

Catechism on the World's W. C. T. U.

Glimpses of Our World-Wide Work.

Price, each 3 cents; per 50, 75 cents; per 100, $1.25.

A Chinese Student's Appeal.

An International Question.

A Quarter Century of W. C. T. U. Work in China.

The L. T. L. in Mission Lands.

Our W. C. T. U. in Japan.

Co-operation With Czecho-Slovakia.

Noon-tide Hour of Prayer.

Price, each 2 cents; per 50, 25 cents; per 100, 45 cents.

Story of the Polyglot Petition.

Price, 5 cents; per 50, $2.00; per 100, $2.50.

China Awakened.

Price, 2 cents; per 50, 35 cents; per 100, 60 cents.

The Mothers of China.

W. C. T. U. Achievements in Burma.

Price, each 3 cents; per 50, 40 cents; per 100, 75 cents.

The Polyglot Petition.

Price, each 5 cents; per 50, $2.00.

Handy Booklet of the World's W. C. T. U.

Per copy, 2 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

Ready for 1923

Put the Word of God in Every Home

DO NOT FORGET THAT YOUR OWN PUBLISHING HOUSE WILL AGAIN FURNISH YOU THE BEAUTIFUL SCRIPTURE TEXT SACRED ART CALENDARS.

This Calendar will be more beautiful and attractive than ever. You can easily dispose of hundreds and thus place the daily Bible Text in multitudes of homes and at the same time earn Christmas money for yourself, your W. C. T. U., the L. T. L., the Woman's Club, or for your Literature Fund.

Send us your order early and so avoid delay or disappointment. Prices: Single copy, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.84; twenty-five, $7.50; fifty, $12.50; one hundred, $20.00; two hundred, $37.00; five hundred, $82.50.

Send us your order now and let's go to work. It is not too early to start.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois.

Gubernatorial Candidates Address Pennsylvania Convention

Special Correspondence

For the third time in its history, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Pennsylvania met in Williamsport. The president's address, the first matter of importance, was given the first morning. Its practical recommendations call for an increased membership, stressing of pledge signing, vigorous pushing of scientific temperance instruction, intensive work for law enforcement, maintaining the Christian Sabbath, and other important lines of endeavor.

The convention was strong in spiritual tone and adopted a constructive program for the coming year. It was inspiring to note the number of young women in attendance throughout the meetings.

Three counties, and fifty local unions, qualified for the respective standards of excellence. Reports showed that 1,500 temperance essays were written in the public schools and 155 afghans knitted for soldiers.

Speakers of prominence who addressed the convention were: Mayor Archibald M. Hoagland, of Williamsport; Miss Florence Dibert, president of the Federated Clubs; Dr. Bertha M. Huntingdon, president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs; Mrs. Gifford Pinchot; three candidates for governor—John A. McSparran, William Repp, and Gifford Pinchot; Mrs. Elizabeth Stanley, president of the Indiana W. C. T. U.; Hon. Clyde Kelly, Congressman from Allegheny county; Hon. John T. Davis, enforcement director for the state.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Waring delighted the convention with stirring temperance songs.

"Pep" and enthusiasm marked the convention banquet and the various original songs were sung with hearty accord. Mayor A. M. Hoagland, who extended greetings on behalf of the city, said that he had told the American Legion boys, who recently met in convention in Williamsport, that they were the "peppiest" crowd he had ever met, but he believed he could apply the same statement to the women of the W. C. T. U.

Governor's Night at State Convention

Surely "the old order changeth"—even the political order in Pennsylvania with its record for unsavory politics. The candidates for governor of three political parties appeared on the same platform on the same evening—and at a state W. C. T. U. convention! In another sense they were on the same platform, for all three are dry. We wonder for whom the wets will vote for governor of Pennsylvania. They are now in the same place the drys of the Keystone state were formerly. Mr. John A. McSparran, a Democrat, was the first speaker. He is a local preacher of the Methodist church and a Sunday school worker, and a favorite of the W.C.T.U. women. "I was with you," said Mr. McSparran, "when the cause was unpopular." The second speaker was Mr. William Repp, candidate on the Prohibition party ticket. Of course Mr. Repp is dry in practice and principle. Gifford Pinchot, the Republican candidate, spoke last. He appeared to carry the house, for the applause was loud and long. Mr. Pinchot's first plank is law enforcement and the ousting of the bootleggers. At the great banquet of the convention, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot responded to the toast, "Politics Invades the Home." Mrs. Rachel Robinson, president of the Allegheny county W. C. T. U. and a candidate for U. S. Senator on the Prohibition ticket, followed the governors, and made a good impression.

Williamsport Hotel Urges Strict Adherence to Prohibition Law

Among the resolutions adopted was one commending the management of the Lycoming Hotel for the standard which it has set both for its employes and guests in demanding the strictest adherence to the prohibition law as set forth in rules printed and posted in each room in the hotel. A placard on which is printed a copy of sections 3, 19, 23 of the national prohibition act, contains the following admonition to guests:

"The management of the Lycoming respectfully requests your co-operation in the enforcement of the 18th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, while you are a guest of this hotel.

"For your benefit and protection, you will find printed above copies of certain sections of the National Prohibition Act which pertain to hotels and guests. You will note by section 23 that it is against the law for any person to keep or carry around on his person any liquor; also note in the same section that it is against the law for any employe to effect a sale of liquor.

"The employes of this hotel have strict instructions in reference to this law and the penalties imposed by the government for any one found guilty of such an offense—'Any person found guilty under the provision of this section shall be punished by a fine of not less than $500 nor more than $1,000 or by imprisonment of not less than thirty days, or by both fine and imprisonment.'"

The officers were re-elected: Mrs. Ella M. George, president; Miss Amanda Landes, vice-president; Miss Ella Broomell, corresponding secretary; Mrs. C. Michelfelder, recording secretary; Mrs. Leah Cobb Marion, treasurer.

Wool Flowers! Attractive for Hats Bags, Gifts. Will mail wool for 12 Flowers—assorted colors—crochet instructions. Send 27 cents (coin or stamps).

Mrs. Miller, D, Box 283,
Danbury, Connecticut.

Just From the Press for Your Schools

Outlines for Health and Temperance Teaching for the Grades of the Public Schools

New Pamphlet for Scientific Temperance Instruction in the Schools. Just what you want for your teachers. See that they are supplied. Price, per copy, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.25.

Order now for immediate use as the school year opens.

Special

TWO NEW PROGRAMS FOR L. T. L.'S, NATIONAL PROHIBITION GUARDS, AND SUNDAY SCHOOLS

Uncle Sam's Prohibition Quiz. Testimony of ten noted Americans (Exercise for 11 boys or young men).

Aunt Columbia's Prohibition Quiz. Testimony of ten noted American women. (Exercise for 11 girls or young women.)

Price, five cents per copy; per dozen, 50 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois.

New For You

A Law Enforcement Playlet
"John Barleycorn Wants to Come Back"

Adapted for use in Public Meetings, Conventions, Institutes, Sunday Schools, Temperance Rallies, Boy Scout Meetings, L. T. L's. Prohibition Guards, etc. Requires two young women, one man, soloist, pianist and a number of children and young people. Price per copy, 10 cents; three copies, 25 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

High Lights of North Dakota's Convention

Barbara H. Wylie, State Corresponding Secretary.

On the sunny autumn morning when Miss Anna A. Gordon slipped quietly into the First Methodist Episcopal Church, Fargo, members of the thirty-third annual W. C. T. U. convention rose to their feet, cheering heartily, nor would they subside until the national president had mounted the platform to receive their white-ribbon cheer. With gracious words of greeting, Miss Gordon responded and her presence throughout the convention was a benediction.

Another pleasure,—wholly unexpected but none the less appreciated,—was the coming of our national corresponding secretary, Mrs. Frances P. Parks, for the opening day. After attending Minnesota's convention, Mrs. Parks had gone to Mrs. Anderson's summer home at Oak Lodge for a brief vacation. Yielding to our urgent invitation, she came to us for the get-together banquet, responding in a happy manner to the many warm welcomes voiced by Fargo's representative citizens, and giving an address the following evening.

The address of the state president, Mrs. Elizabeth Preston Anderson, was a strong, convincing and unanswerable argument for prohibition and its enforcement. The report of the state treasurer, Mrs. W. E. Black, proved the working value of the budget system, which North Dakota was undoubtedly the first state to inaugurate.

The work of organization has been greatly extended this year through the efficient efforts of Mrs. Necia E. Buck, who is also state Y. P. B. secretary. During her thirty-one weeks afield, eighteen local unions, three Y. P. B's and seventeen L. T. L's have been organized, and the work generally strengthened. Department work has received considerable attention. Nine state superintendents reached the prescribed standard of efficiency and, therefore, were entitled to railroad fare to the state convention.

Able addresses were given by Mrs. Kate S. Wilder, Mrs. Ella M. Shippy, Mrs. Leon Metzinger, Miss Isabel McPhail, and Mrs. Lillie B. Smith, who presented the prizes won in essay contests in high schools and grades.

An open forum on Law Enforcement, during which Federal Prohibition Director, Mr. Arthur A. Stone, and the superintendent of the State Enforcement League, Rev. F. L. Watkins, answered alternately, questions submitted in writing, proved of special interest.

During THE UNION SIGNAL hour, the state promoter made a pleasing digression by turning to the state president, Mrs. Anderson, and presenting her with a beautiful white ribbon seed-pearl pin. "Uncle Sam's Prohibition Quiz" and the playlet, "The Eighteenth Amendment Forever," were much enjoyed by the audience.

Members of the Fargo Y. P. B. acted as pages and ushers during the convention. The Loyal Temperance Legions of Fargo marched in with flags and banners, and gave an interesting program.

Three districts, the First, Fifth and Fifteenth, fulfilled the requirements for banner districts. Cando, Cooperstown, Fargo, Fargo Scandinavian, Gilby, Hunter, Jamestown and Kenmare were banner unions.

All new members gained during the campaign this year were known as Anna A. Gordon members, and their names—650 of them—written on special cards, were presented to our national president to whom those present were introduced by their local presidents. It was a memorable occasion of which Miss Gordon made the most, promising to take the cards with her to Rest Cottage and place them in Miss Willard's den.

Three local unions doubled their membership this year,—Epping, Devils Lake and Rolette. Fargo Scandinavian made the largest gain in membership and now numbers 310.

On Sunday morning, a helpful and uplifting "love feast" was conducted by the state vice-president, Mrs. Fred M. Wanner. Dr. Wm. C. Hodgson, pastor of the convention church, preached an excellent sermon and the chorus choir rendered inspiring music, morning and evening.

The climax of the convention was reached Sunday evening in the magnificent address of Miss Gordon as she eloquently portrayed the relation of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union to national prohibition, and reviewed, from her personal observations abroad, the prospects of its adoption by other countries.

New York Convention Holds Jubilee Jollification—Raises $135,000, Its Quota of Million Dollar Fund

Carolyn P. Lindsay, State Director Publicity

Forty-nine is only one less than half a century, and the New York W. C. T. U. has been in existence that length of time. Its forty-ninth annual convention met in the city of Gloversville, where ninety per cent of the world's gloves are made. Outstanding features included an evening of greetings from the mayor and others, followed by a beautiful reception for the delegates. Five busy days of reports, addresses and conferences sent every woman home charged with new zeal and fresh courage.

Prominent speakers were Dr. Florence L. McKay, chairman of Child Hygiene, New York State Board of Health; Mrs. Maude B. Perkins, general secretary of the Young People's Branch; Mrs. Deborah Knox Livingston, national director of the department of Christian Citizenship; Mrs. Florence D. Richard, president of the Ohio W. C. T. U.; Mrs. Florence Kelley of the Consumers League; Mrs. Martha P. Falconer, associate national director of Social Morality.

The inspiration given through music was a notable feature; the famous Gloria Trumpeters were again heard. Their rendition of Handel's Largo at the memorial service and accompaniment to Mrs. Graham's singing of "Victory" will linger long in memory. The announcement that the state jubilee money, $135,000, had all been raised was sufficient cause for a jollification in which a parade around the church, speeches and flowers figured effectively.

Department reports showed interested and intelligent service. Lecturers and organizers also demonstrated how the W. C. T. U. is constantly working and achieving in the Empire state.

Y. P. B. night brought the enthusiasm of youth and an L. T. L. playlet was attractively given. The Citizenship department put on a law enforcement skit which was most instructive and very enjoyable, a real copper still being one of the "properties" employed.

A spectacular event of the stay in Gloversville was the raiding by three delegates of one of the rooms in the hotel to which several cases of liquor had been traced—they were putting into practice the principles they preach. It was a practical demonstration of law enforcement.

The popular meetings overflowed the church, and the voting delegation numbered 350.

All officers were re-elected with the exception of Mrs. Ellen L. Tenney, who declined, having served thirty-five years as treasurer.

The convention endorsed Governor Miller after receiving his telegram in which he said: "The issue of light wines and beer is a false issue as far as the state is concerned."

"On to Buffalo" is the 1923 slogan.

When Little Red Riding Hood looked at the old wolf in her grandmother's bed she exclaimed, "Why, Grandmother, what great big eyes you have." The wolf in his gruff voice, feigning her grandmother, replied, "So much the better to see you with." So when anyone says, "Why how big the stickers are," we always answer, after the manner of the wolf, "So much easier to see and read." We actually found a member of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union right in Philadelphia who had never heard of the stickers until a few weeks ago. She wanted some at once and began to supply her friends with them, as well as to use them herself. It proves that we cannot keep abreast of the temperance news unless we subscribe to THE UNION SIGNAL. The enlarged stickers are being circulated to be used on automobile shields, in shop windows, in the windows of our homes and in all possible conspicuous places to announce the great convention of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union in Philadelphia.

Lest there is someone yet who has not used the stickers, we are going to offer them at half of the original price:

$1.50 per thousand.
$1.00 per five hundred.
$0.25 per hundred.

There are not many left of the two hundred thousand which we have had, so please send remittance with order at once to

Mrs. James B. Scott,
503 South 46th St.,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Render to Your Country This Patriotic Service

Send NOW, TODAY, 10 cents

for our Patriotic Service Package. And when received, follow instructions therein given. Stamps accepted.

DO IT NOW!

New Campaign Leaflet

"WOMEN LINE UP FOR PROHIBITION"

Refuting the charge that "mothers in many parts of the country are anxious to use their votes against prohibition." For effective use, order in quantities and distribute widely.

Price, per 100, 45 cents; per 1000, $3.75.

Campaign Posters

Vote Right! New Poster for Women. Put it in evidence everywhere, and let it gain votes for the protection of home and woman.

OTHER POSTERS:

For Their Sakes Enforce the Law. (In Colors.)

Booze Stands Between—

The Eighteenth Amendment. (Stand by the Flag and the Constitution.)

Price each, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00.

New Campaign Post Cards

INVITATION CARDS TO NEW MEMBERS

TITLES:

Our Slogan.
The Field is the World.
Help Wanted.

Each illustrated. They will suit you and help win members.

OTHER CARDS:

W. J. Bryan's "Ode to Water."
Physical Decalog.
W. C. T. U. Acrostic.

and a large variety with various titles. Price, per dozen, 25 cents; per 100, $1.75. (Please enclose remittance with order.)

Why Not Beer and Wine?

Answer the Questions With Truth Given In These Leaflets:

(All leaflets 2 cents unless otherwise noted)

Beer Is Drunk for Its Alcohol.
Beer as a Cause of Alcoholism.
When Is a Man Intoxicated?
Wine as a Cause of Alcoholism.
He Was Not Drunk But———
Primary Lesson on Beer.
Per 50, 15 cents; per 100, 20 cents.
What Benjamin Franklin Said About Beer.
A Story of Root Beer.
Wine—What Is It?
The Persistent Beer Fallacy.
Beer Quantities of Alcohol Injurious.
Dangers in the Use of Fermented Drinks.
Is Beer Intoxicating?
Prenatal Effects of Alcohol.
Is the Moderate Drinker a Safe Citizen?
Beer a Bluffer.
Wine.
Alcohol and the School Child.
Blackboard Exercise—No Beer, No Wine.
Price per 50, 25 cents; per 100, 45 cents.
Of the Poison Brand—Labeled by the Mighty Hand of Science. Cartoon poster (10 x 12 inches). Per dozen, 10 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois

A "Dry" for the District

Mrs. H. S. Kopplin

"Gentlemen, there is no time to be lost. If we don't win in this fight we are done for, forever." Thus spoke big Joe Ancor, president of the Anti-Prohibition Society, now holding a meeting.

"We must make the voters see that prohibition doesn't prohibit; that it simply creates an atmosphere that fosters lawlessness; that there has been more drunkenness and crime since the Volstead Act was passed than there ever was before. We will not work for the return of the saloon, for that killed itself, but we want to give the people the chance to get a drink of wine or beer if they want it. Everyone knows that people will drink, anyway, and if they can't get something that the government licenses they will drink moonshine and bootleg whisky. We want, not the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment (at present) but a modification of the Volstead Act to allow the sale of wine and beer."

"Congressman Thompson's time is out," said John Hanson, vice-president of the society, "and as his name is synonymous with prohibition the nation over, it seems to me it would be a fine stroke of business to center much of our effort upon him. By defeating him we could prove that the public is tired of this blue law government. What do the rest think?"

"If we could make some substantial gains in various parts of the country and then snow Thompson under at the primaries, I believe we could win, election day. At that, we need change only a few votes in either House or Senate. We must get busy at once," remarked Robert Roberts of Mississippi.

Thereupon, action was taken to notify the other organizations working for the wine and beer amendment, that an effort would be made to defeat Thompson and asking them to help carry Thompson's district.

Although Congressman Thompson received assurances from his supporters "back home" that all was well he had been in politics too long to believe that his enemies were not after his scalp.

"They have been beaten so badly in the past two elections that it looks as though they had transferred their activities elsewhere," wrote John Randall, president of the Dry League.

Congressman Thompson shook his head as he thought: "I would rather fight an enemy in the open than under cover. I cannot believe that they have given up the struggle. Time alone will tell."

To Randall he wrote: "Thank you for your enthusiastic interest and your assurance, but I cannot think that our district has been abandoned by the wets. Keep your ear to the ground and line up the drys for the primaries."

On receipt of the letter, Randall said: "Thompson is getting too skeptical. He has forgotten about the vast sums put into this district at the last election and of how he defeated the wets so overwhelmingly."

District No. 11 covered a large territory. It consisted of a few cities and towns but mostly of mining lands and many small mine locations where large numbers of foreigners, for the greater part Finlanders, Poles and Bohemians, were employed. These people, coming from lands of ideas and ideals different from those found in America, furnished good soil for propagandists, no matter what the issue.

Another meeting of the Anti-Prohibition Society was held. The secretary's report was the principal feature of the evening.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I have spied out the land for three weeks and I find that there are two things in our favor. The first is that the drys are certain we have left them for other fields; the second, that the foreigners have increased in numbers since the last election. If we work wisely and persistently I believe we can beat Thompson."

It was then decided that the officers of the society would be a committee to devise ways and means of carrying on the campaign.

The district had several W. C. T. U. organizations in its confines. They were busy as usual. This year they were stressing Americanization work. About five weeks before the primaries, the union at Pasibim held a mothers' meeting and extended to all the foreign born women in the community an invitation to attend. The department superintendent had charge of the meeting. She showed a large doll dressed like a baby. She bathed it, fixed its bottle, and cared for it according to the laws of health. With great eagerness the guests examined the baby's layette. The leader explained that the little one should have some water each day, and that intoxicants should be avoided.

This statement excited Mrs. Maki, a Finnish mother. Something evidently did not coincide with her views. The leader, noticing her concern, in a kindly way asked:

"What is it, Mrs. Maki? Don't you believe that?"

"I believe that," said Mrs. Maki, excitedly. "My man say: 'No, must have wine or beer.' Man our house yesterday say so, too. Glad you say water."

"Same man our house. Say babies need wine and beer. Make babies grow. Water no good," excitedly said another.

"Mrs. Maki," said the president, "will you please tell us about that man who came to your house and told you that beer and wine were good for babies?"

"Big man," said Mrs. Maki, her face all aglow, "dressed nice. He look at baby and say: 'Nice baby, he be big man some day.' I say: 'Big, good man, maybe!'

"He say, 'Him not look very strong.'

"'Not sick but little,' I say.

"He say: 'He need some beer or wine to make him grow.'

"My man say: 'Can't get it.'

"Other man say: 'Men and women need it, too. You get it if you vote for Tim Murphy.'"

"Who is Tim Murphy?"

"Lawyer from Brandon," said Mrs. Maki, "Big smart man, he say, 'Temperance people not fool him.'"

"Did he go to any other house, do you know?"

"Yes, he go to Pelto, Pudas, Ozema."

"Did he go to Lepisto?"

Help the Armenian Refugees

BUY HAND MADE LACE

Jerusalem Lace Work made by hand. Latest patterns of yokes from $1.40 to $3.75. Narrow lace, 15 to 35 cents a yard. Wide lace (⅝ in. width and over) to 75 cents a yard, edging or insertion. Medallions, round or square, 45 to 75 cents a dozen. Wide edging for underclothes $1.90 to $4.55, a set of 3 pieces. Lace will be sent in registered envelopes. Postage free. Apply to Misses Farah, Box 287, Jerusalem, Palestine.

SEND FOR CANDY

To sell for us. Churches, Societies, Sunday Schools, Lodges, Schools, etc., make liberal profits handling our very popular assortments of 5c Chocolate Bars, etc. Send for Illustrated Circular, Price-list, Order Blank and full particulars. Our goods sell quickly. Prompt Express shipments.

FRED D. LESURE COMPANY
6 Broad St., Fitchburg, Mass.

"No, they not yet got papers, my man say."

"Mrs. Maki, can we count on you? It will be a hard place. If you stand by us this time it will be easier for your husband to be a good husband and for your children to grow up into good men and women. Can we depend on you?"

Mrs. Maki hesitated a moment and then said in a broken voice: "I stand by you and my family." The words were spoken as by one who had made a great decision and would keep her word, no matter what the cost.

"Let us think it all over to-night, and meet tomorrow to complete our plans," said the president.

A meeting of the Anti-Prohibition Society was called for consultation and to speed up the work. This was attended by all the field workers.

"It looks as though we had them by a good majority unless there is a volcanic eruption among the drys. We have consulted every voter in Pasibim, Brandon and some of the larger locations, and will complete our work next week," said the chairman of the gum shoe campaign committee.

"Good reports have been received by officers about the work," said big Joe Ancor. "It was decided at our last executive meeting that if Tim Murphy is elected by a respectable majority each one of you field workers will receive an extra one hundred dollars and I have decided to double the amount out of my own pocket. Go back to your jobs and work as you have never worked before. Make it impossible for an 'eruption' to have any effect if it should come. If we lose this time we are goners."

The W. C. T. U. of Pasibim met the next day. After discussion the following telegrams were sent: "State W. C. T. U. Lecture Bureau: Send at once three field workers and two lecturers. Thompson's seat at stake. Wets organized and at work."

"National W. C. T. U.: Wets thoroughly organized to defeat Thompson. Send one million pages on wine and beer amendment."

"County President W. C. T. U.: Wets organized to defeat Thompson. Arrange mass meeting of all unions Pasibim next Thursday. Will notify Dry League."

"Dry League: Wets organized to defeat Thompson. Mass meeting of district at Pasibim Thursday. Get full delegation."

This done, the president said: "Now let us go to our homes, arrange our affairs, pray much and be ready for any service we may be called upon to perform."

"I hate to throw cold water on any work as important as this," said Mrs. Johnson, "but had we not better be a little careful of our money? Times are hard and if we are defeated no one will help us foot the bills."

"Mrs. Johnson," said the president tenderly yet kindly, "you are a mother; you have a sixteen-year-old son. If liquor were restored and he were swallowed up by it, would you fold your hands and say: 'Well, we couldn't do anything because we didn't have the money,' or would you wring your hands and say: 'Would to God I had mortgaged my home if necessary in order to save my boy before it was too late!'"

"You are right; we must act while there is time," quickly agreed Mrs. Johnson, who had received a new vision.

The day of the meeting arrived and the city of Pasibim and District No. 11 know that something was astir! At ten o'clock, and at the beginning of every hour throughout the day, every church bell rang for five minutes. Some rural schools also had been reached by the union of Pasibim and their bells tolled forth the story of the struggle between wickedness and righteousness, between selfishness and unselfishness.

"Why are the bells ringing?" was asked on all sides, and soon everyone knew the reason.

The wets heard the news with terror. Just when everything pointed to victory!

The drys came to Pasibim in large numbers! The place had never held such an assemblage of people. The attendance surpassed the wildest expectations of those most interested! It was generally realized that it was a critical time and that much depended upon the action that would be taken to return Thompson to Congress. Secretly and effectively the wets had carried on their campaign; now the drys must shake off all inertia and rise to the occasion—their eyes had not been opened any too soon.

"The situation requires prompt action," said the chairman, "and the combined efforts of all dry workers in the district. God grant it is not too late."

It was agreed that every voter who was not avowedly wet should be interviewed and that effort should be centered on the indifferent and half-hearted ones; that more speakers should be procured; that literature should be distributed until the whole district was "sown knee deep;" that prayer meetings should be held the afternoon and evening of every Wednesday between the time of the meeting and the primaries.

"Let us not forget to pray in our own homes, and remember that we are working under the greatest Captain that ever led any army," said the pastor of a prominent church.

The wets held their meeting at the appointed time. Big Joe Ancor called it to order:

"From all indications there was a leak in our campaign somewhere," he advised, "and it looks as though the drys would give us a merry whirl. It seems we have done everything in our power. Has anyone any suggestions to offer?"

"I was thinking how would it be if we should start some propaganda to the effect that high taxes are caused by the loss of license money and that there are many unemployed because prohibition threw so many out of their jobs. People are mighty tired of paying taxes and of having so many idle."

Big Joe Ancor smiled a big smile, a sarcastic smile, as he asked, "Do you believe that yourself?"

"No, it would not stand inspection but it is such a short time before election that the drys would not have time to refute the statement very extensively and I am sure it would make many votes for us because it sounds plausible."

"Do you remember the time we tried to prove by statistics that if we had prohibition, the farmer could not sell his corn and other grain? That was the worst thing we ever did. No, I think we better leave statistics alone. We must keep everlastingly at our previous line of action."

A determined lot of men went out from that meeting.

Primary day—a beautiful one—arrived. All nature seemed to be rejoicing. Man, the greatest work of the Creator, alone was out of harmony. There was no peace, no quiet, for a great issue was to be decided.

The churches were filled with people praying that God would lead his people aright; places known to themselves alone were filled with men plotting how best to "save the day." All looked forward to the closing of the polls and the counting of the votes.

Great excitement was there at Pasibim some hours afterward when it was announced that Congressman Thompson had won by over two hundred votes. By midnight enough returns were in from the district to assure his victory over Tim Murphy by a substantial majority.

And greatly did the righteous element rejoice thereat!

Clean Up Street Carnivals

The Country Gentleman, The Survey, the New York Tribune, and the Billboard, are some of the many well known publications that are advocating in their columns a clean-up of fairs, carnivals and other shows. Charles Ringling of the famous show of that name, in an article in a late issue of the Billboard, says: "I propose that the Billboard ask each and every tent showman to subscribe to an agreement not to operate or permit to be operated on his grounds at any time or place, games of chance, betting devices, shortchange transactions, cooch shows, 'behind the curtain' dances or shows; female impersonator playing to or annoying patrons before or during the show; 'For Men Only' shows; forty-nine or other dance hall joints; suggestive obscene stunts or acts of any nature; privilege car in which gambling is carried on or in which booze is sold either to employes or others."

Perfection
NON-ALCOHOLIC FLAVORS
Taste Better
Flavor Does Not Bake Out
A combination of pure fruit and flavoring oils with vegetable oils, which carries and distributes the flavorings as well or better than alcohol, and instead of being harmful, has more food value than an equal amount of butter. Wonderful Vanilla and eleven other flavors. Representatives wanted. A permanent source of income for Unions, Church Societies, and individuals. 100% profit. No money required under our consignment plan.
Fletcher Production Co. Ext. Dept. 429 E. 69th St., Chicago.

W. C. T. U. Badges. Made of mother of pearl. Price 25 cents each. Address treasurer W. C. T. U., Jerusalem, Palestine. P. O. Box 443.

Edeson Radio Phones
Adustable Diaphragm Clearance
We guarantee satisfaction, or your money refunded. The adjustment feature places our phones on a par with the world's greatest makes. Our sales plan eliminates dealer's profits and losses from bad accounts, hence the low price. Better phones cannot be made. Immediate deliveries. Double 3000 Ohm sets, $3.98; 1500 Ohm single set, $2.50. Circular free.
3000 OHMS $3.98 PLUS 20c POSTAGE
Edeson Phone Co. 6 Beach St. Dept. Boston Mass.

CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT

THE UNION SIGNAL ..... $1.50 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance (monthly).....50c a year
Single Copies, 5c each; per 100 .....$2.75
Club rate for ten or more Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition subscriptions, 40c a year. No other premium allowed.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER ..... 35c a year
Single Copies, 3c each; per 100 .....$2.00

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES

THE UNION SIGNAL .....$2.00 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (monthly) .....62c a year
THE YOUNG CRUSADER .....47c a year

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL Evanston, Illinois

Don't Be Late

Della F. Withers, Circulation Manager

October 31 closes all credits on seed-pearl bow pins, awards for 25 per cent gain in circulation; in fact, all premiums. November 1 cancels all credits. Send in every subscription you possibly can before October 31. Begin at once to make yourself a winner for next year.

Are You Guilty?

Two postal cards have been received by this department, one addressed to The Young Crusader with postmark Madison, Wis., the other addressed to THE UNION SIGNAL, postmark, Avon-by-the-Sea, N. J. The message side of both cards is blank. Someone is doubtless wondering why we do not reply.

Folks Say—

I do not know who is responsible for the issue of THE UNION SIGNAL for September 28, but it is just the "best ever." If all the good folks and all the indifferent ones would read that paper I believe our battle would be over. It is just thrilling with good ammunition.

Mrs. L. B. Pease, Sparta, Mich.

I don't see why every woman who belongs to our splendid W. C. T. U. doesn't take THE UNION SIGNAL. I believe women lose more by not taking the SIGNAL than when they have to miss a union meeting. Anyway, hurry up mine.

Mrs. Kate Davis.

THE UNION SIGNAL is the best ammunition to be had. Have been using it as a source for items for our local paper and in numerous other ways. It gives, in my opinion at least, more definite, effective information on all aspects of prohibition—enforcement, education, violation, the activities of the wets and the activities and plans of the drys—than any other publication. Ida G. Kast.

"My Little Friend"

We all enjoy THE UNION SIGNAL so much and find help in it on almost every problem, and so many things are brought to our attention through it. I would not know how to get along without it, and have gotten the habit of calling it my "little friend."

Mrs. John Philfer,
Clear Lake, Wash.

For the Promotion of Prohibition Sentiment

We, the members of Atkins W. C. T. U. of Atkins, Smythe County, Va., have decided to give a subscription to The Crusader to each of ten families where there are a number of children. We are hoping by this method to develop much sentiment in favor of prohibition.

Mrs. James R. Pafford,
Atkins, Va.

TRIO TEAM COUNTY HONOR ROLL

1. Jackson County, Iowa.
2. Grady County, Georgia.
3. Boone County, Illinois.
4. Barton County, Kansas.
5. Harper County, Kansas.
6. LaPorte County, Indiana.
7. Norfolk County, Mass.
8. Jewell County, Kansas.
9. Washington County, Kansas.
10. Ohio County, West Virginia.
11. Dukes County, Mass.
12. Dubuque County, Iowa.
13. Shawnee County, Kansas.
14. Big Stone County, } Dist.
15. Stevens County, } No. 12
16. Traverse County, } Minn.
17. Winnebago County, Wisconsin.
18. Walworth County, Wisconsin.
19. Strafford County, N. H.
20. Wayne County, Georgia.
21. Dunn County, Wisconsin.
22. Faribault County, Minn. (District No. 27)
23. Winnebago County, Iowa.
24. Hamilton County, Kansas.
25. Ottawa County, Kansas.
26. Woodson County, Kansas.
27. Martin County, } Dist.
28. Watonwan County, } No.
29. Jackson County, } 3
30. Cottonwood County, } Minn.
31. Cheyenne County, Nebraska
32. Kimball County, Nebraska.
33. Norton County, Kansas.
34. Clark County, Kansas.
35. Marion County, Kansas.
36. Highland County, Ohio.
37. Upshur County, W. Va.
38. Payne County, Oklahoma.
39. Stanislaus County, California.
40. Merced County, California.
41. Deuel County, South Dakota.
42. Mills County, Iowa.
43. Union County, Iowa.
44. Dakota County, } Dist.
45. Goodhue County, } No. 26
46. Rice County, } Minn.
47. Olmsted County, } Dist.
48. Dodge County, } No.
49. Steele County, } 2
50. Waseca County, } Minn.
51. Crawford County, Kansas.
52. Cass County, Iowa.
53. Polk County, } Dist.
54. Marshall County, } No.
55. Pennington County, } 14
56. Norman County, } Minn.
57. Edmunds County, South Dakota.
58. Mower County, } Dist No.
59. Freeborn County, } 30, Minn.
60. Bell County, Kentucky.
61. Chippewa County, Wisconsin.
62. Eau Claire County, Wisconsin.
63. Blair County, Penna.
64. Ness County, Kansas.
65. Blue Earth County, Minn. (District No. 21)
66. Dawson County, Nebraska.
67. Ellis County, Kansas.
68. Woodbury County, Iowa.
69. Kingman County, Kansas.
70. Lincoln County, Montana.
71. Bay County, Florida.
72. Glades County, Florida.
73. Highland County, Florida.
74. St. Lucie County, Florida.
75. Yamhill County, Oregon.
76. Creek County, Oklahoma.
77. Grant County, Wisconsin.
78. Tulsa County, Oklahoma.
79. Loban County, Oklahoma.
80. Dallas County, Iowa.

Unexcelled for repairing china, glassware, earthenware, furniture, vases, books, etc. Famous since 1876. Major's rubber and Leather Cements are good.

Three kinds, 20c per bottle at dealers, or write us.

MAJOR MFG. CO., NEW YORK

The "Money Earning Plan"

EARN MONEY FOR YOUR UNION, CHURCH, SOCIETY OR SCHOOL

For details write to
CHAS. R. DAVIS
184 Ward St.,
NEWTON CENTER, 59, MASS.

It Is Not Too Late To Use Ou Popular Display Card for Windows, Auto Shields, Exhibits, Parades, etc. "Serve America. Support the Constitution."

Enemies of Prohibition Have a Differe Slogan, Use Ours

A white star on a blue backgroun lettered in white, "Serve America. Su port the Constitution." Size 7x11 inche Order in quantities for distribution your communities. Copyright by Natio al W. C. T. U. Publishing House, Evan ton, Illinois. Per 100, $1.00; per tho sand, $7.00. Single copies, 5 cent

"Facts Are Facts"

And Cannot Be Disproved

Refute the statements of the A. A. P. A with our Seven New Leaflets on "FACTS

TITLES OF LEAFLETS:
Labor Leaders Outspoken for Prohibitio
Health Experts Favor Prohibition.
Bankers Believe in Prohibition.
Manufacturers Approve Prohibition.
Educators Commend Prohibition.
Family Life Benefited by Prohibition.
Women Want Prohibition.

Special price, each per 100, 30 cents per 1,000, $2.50. Order in large quantitie and distribute everywhere. Please sen remittance with order.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE,
Evanston, Illinois

Quiz: Redeeming the Time

1. Name some significant dates, an state the importance of each.
2. Discuss the value of the recent ru ing of Attorney General Daugherty i regard to liquor on American and foreig vessels.
3. Show that prohibition is being in creasingly well enforced in the variou states of the Union.
4. Review briefly some of the effort still being made to discredit and nullif prohibition.
5. Give a four-minute speech on th benefits of prohibition as seen by Cali fornians.
6. What does Henry Ford say in re gard to prohibition being neither sudde nor transitory?
7. Mention a few of the attractions o the Convention city.
8. How can members of the Y. P. B make Election Day count for the cause of righteousness?
9. In the brief accounts of the state conventions in this issue point out some helpful suggestions.
10. Is YOUR county on the trio team honor roll?

Straw ballots, taken by a well-known magazine recently, indicated that the readers of the magazine were almost equally divided regarding prohibition. But a straw ballot is a poor way of judging public opinion; it permits votes to be "stacked" almost at will.

The real test of prohibition is at the polls. And the results so far would indicate that the dry law is approved in almost every section of the country.

There are still many Americans who feel that their "rights" were taken away when Congress dictated just what they could drink. The number is gradually diminishing; in a few years the man who still hopes for the repeal of the dry amendment will be a curiosity, and the candidate who runs on a "wet ticket" will be looked upon as a "joke" candidate, just as the nation looked upon the prohibition ticket not so many years ago.

—Bisbee (Ariz.) Review.

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly — Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year in Advance

Entered as second class matter at the Postoffice at Evanston, Illinois

Vol. XLVIII — EVANSTON, ILLINOIS, NOVEMBER 2, 1922 — No. 44

What Shall the Answer Be?

The Friends of Orderly Government Must Unite and Be as Consistent at the Ballot Box in the Support of the Constitution as Are Its Enemies in Attempting Its Nullification.

LAW ENFORCEMENT AND SCIENTIFIC TEMPERANCE EDITION

RULING OF ATTORNEY GENERAL DAUGHERTY UPHELD BY UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT---THE CASE GOES TO UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT

On October 6, with the approval of the President and his Cabinet, Attorney General Daugherty ruled that no vessel carrying alcoholic liquors, whether foreign or American, can come within the three-mile limit of the American shore. At once the Cunard and Anchor companies, later joined by ten others, including most of the important foreign and American lines engaged in the trans-Atlantic trade, made a motion for a permanent injunction restraining Federal prohibition agents from putting into effect the Daugherty ruling. The case was heard before Federal Judge Learned Hand, of the United States District Court in New York City, who dismissed the motion and ruled in favor of the Government on all points.

The plaintiffs argued that the Daugherty ruling was in violation of the treaty rights; that the Volstead Act was unconstitutional; that foreign ships were compelled by the laws of their various companies to carry liquors for the use of their crews; and that the Volstead Act did not apply on board ships at sea.

The judge agreed that the two points at issue were that the carriage of liquor under seal was not transportation, and that liquor so carried is ships' stores, which has long been treated as part of the ships' furniture. He finally granted an injunction against interfering with the carriage of stock necessary for the crews' rations on the eastbound voyage, but required that each complainant must give bond of $25,000 conditional against the use of such stocks for any other purpose than as crews' rations. The effect of this ruling would be that while foreign ships sailing to America may carry a stock of liquor for passengers to be sold at sea, they may not bring this stock into American ports, and upon leaving the ports of the United States, they cannot carry a supply larger than is required for the needs of the crew.

In rendering his decision, Judge Hand said in part:

"Ignoring for the moment the crews, all of the stocks are avowedly intended for the consumption of persons who are now within the United States. But a substantial number of these persons are residents or citizens of the United States, the very persons whom it was the whole purpose of the Amendment to prevent drinking liquors.

"Naturally I have nothing to say about the wisdom of the Amendment or the law, but, wise, or not, one thing is clear, that a drink of whisky is as hurtful to health or morals outside as inside Ambrose Light (light which marks the three mile limit zone of New York Harbor). It appears to me inconceivable, when one is discussing the implied intent of Congress, that a statute cast in such sweeping terms should be read as indifferent to open preparations within the United States for the gratification by its citizens of exactly those appetites which it was the avowed intent of the statute altogether to deny.

"Nor do I believe that anyone would hesitate to think so who did not already repudiate the whole reform; if, for example, we were to substitute cocaine or opium for alcohol, I can scarcely think that there could be any disinterested difference of opinion.

"Suppose it were the habit of Chinese vessels to bring to our ports among their stores a proper supply of morphine and opium with the avowed purpose of dispensing it freely to passengers from the United States as soon as they cleared the league limit. Could it be seriously argued that a constitutional amendment and a statute in broad language designed to prevent citizens from using this drug did not cover so palpable a means o nullifying the very purpose of th law? . . . . .

"It is indeed different with so muc of the stocks as are kept for the cre and a much stronger argument can b made for the legality of their carriag though these also seem to me to fa within the decisions I have so ofte cited. However, that question is reall irrelevant as these cases are presente

"It is at best a delicate matter for judge to tie the hands of other publi officers in the execution of their dutie as they understand them, and the book are full of admonitions against doing s except in a very clear case. Here no only is the case not clear but, as far a I can judge, the plaintiffs have no case."

In spite of the clearness and logi with which Judge Hand made his ruling plain, the fight is not finished, as th steamship companies have already ap pealed, and the United States Suprem Court will be obliged to give the fina ruling.

The Supreme Court reconvenes o November 13, and at that time the at torneys for foreign shipping companie will go before the court and enter a motion to advance the hearing to No vember 20 on the appeal from the de cision rendered by Judge Hand. It is expected that the motion will be grant ed, and the final decision handed dow without delay.

Pending the decision by the Supreme Court, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon is reported to have restored the status as to foreign ships which obtained before the opinion of Attorney General Daugherty was published, and foreign ships may therefore, until that time, bring in under seal all the liquor they want for sale outside the three-mile limit, without interference from the United States Government.

The Pro-Liquor Press

When the National Editorial Association met at Missoula, Montana, last summer, its president, in his annual address, emphasized the necessity for the newspapers of the land, particularly those going into the homes, to stand firmly for prohibition and law observance, thus exerting their immense influence for the uplift of humanity.

The need for such action is evident when one recalls the way in which the pro-liquor press is doing everything possible to bring about the nullification of the Constitution.

Let us review a few of the ways in which, through the printed page, the liquor adherents are seeking to gain new friends and make up for the losses they have sustained.

In the days before the enactment of the Eighteenth Amendment, there were a number of professedly "wet periodicals," such as the American Brewers' Review. Since then, however, it has seemed advisable, evidently, for the anti-prohibition adherents to camouflage their activities to a greater or less extent. So we find that a number of papers which profess to be patriotic, to speak for the cause of liberty, or to be simply the mouthpiece of some trade, are in reality furnishing propaganda for the wet interests. Such are: The Restaurateur, published by the Society of Restaurateurs, in New York City; Liberty, put out by an anti-prohibition organization of California, although professing to be the organ of a labor association; the Rational American, published by the Rational America League; and others.

The Minute Man possibly should not be classed among these, as it is the official organ of the New Jersey and Pennsylvania branches of the A. A. P. A., which is a professedly "wet" society. Among recent items of interest in The Minute Man, is the statement that it will keep in print a list of lawyers, "The Legal Bureau," "composed of attorneys who shall volunteer their services to protect private individuals and to bring to punishment officers who shall employ illegal and oppressive tactics in the enforcement of prohibition in every county, who will be ready to advise all victims of official outrage in what manner to proceed in order to preserve and protect their rights."

Periodicals are neither the only nor even the most important method of disseminating the doctrines of the "personal liberty-ite." Pamphlets and leaflets are frequently appearing on the desks in offices, on the counters of stores, in the mail delivered to the homes of the voters. Two illustrations will serve: A booklet, called "Prohibition Un-American, Un-Christian, and Un-Economical," written by Frederick Lyman Cobb, published in New York, and widely circulated through that and other states; the second issued by the Citizen's Liberty League of Milwaukee, Wisconsin; both trying to convince the reader that to fight prohibition is the part of patriotism, as seen in the letter sent with the first-mentioned booklet. Clubs, organizations, and individuals are asked: "Shall we as American Citizens allow a narrow-minded fanatical and dictatorial class to take from us that which we prize above all else as a nation —personal liberty and freedom of thought and action in all that was guaranteed us under the Constitution? If our rights can be torn from us as easily as they have been by the questionable Eighteenth Amendment, where will such insanity end?.....We respectfully submit the enclosed booklet to your organization for its approval and action. The more the subject is agitated, the sooner we shall have relief from an intolerable and un-American situation."

In many of the larger cities of the United States there are maintained by the liquorites regular publicity bureaus, which systematically issue clip sheets, galley sheets, and so on, to various papers, requesting them to use the material as they please, for editorials and news-notes. Many of the large city papers publish regularly at least once a week, such matter sent out by a press bureau of the A. A. P. A., through which readers are told how bad is prohibition, how it harms the workingman, creates lawlessness, and the like. Some newspapers are

(Continued on Page Twelve)

FEDERAL COUNCIL OF THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST IN AMERICA MAKES APPEAL FOR SUPPORT OF PROHIBITION

Regarding the present moment as a critical one in sustaining the Prohibition Legislation, the Federal Council of the Churches has issued an urgent message to the churches. The immediate occasion for the statement is the announcement at Washington on October 18 by the organized forces which are fighting for the repeal of the Prohibition Legislation that they are organizing support at the coming election for candidates who will vote to legalize the manufacture and sale of beer and wine. Not only this open attack upon prohibition, but also the more subtle efforts to prevent the enforcement of the existing legislation, are pointed out and the necessity of urging the churches now to play as vigorous a part in the maintenance of respect for law as they formerly played in securing the enactment of the Prohibition Legislation.

The statement issued by the Council is as follows:

The public announcement of the program of the forces opposed to prohibition is a direct challenge to the churches and the friends of orderly government. They demand the repeal of the national prohibition act and the restoration of the manufacture and sale of beer and wine, in the face of the fact that both are intoxicating and therefore cannot be legalized without first changing the Constitution. Furthermore, the sale of beer and wine would require some agency for distribution, and so would lead inevitably to the return of the outlawed saloon with all its attendant evils.

Even more serious than the open campaign against prohibition are the sinister influences constantly at work to prevent the honest enforcement of the existing law. To disobey or disregard any law enacted by the properly accredited representatives of the people is to aid the cause of anarchy and to undermine the foundation on which all democratic institutions rest. In the ringing words of President Harding: "Whatever breeds disrespect for the law of the land is a force tending to the general breakdown of the social organization."

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America therefore appeals to all Christian people to exert every influence to secure the impartial enforcement of all laws. Since the foes of prohibition are now united to defeat the Constitution it is high time for the Christian forces of our country also to unite and to be as consistent at the ballot box in their support of the Constitution as its enemies are in attempting its nullification.

Odd Fellows Urged to Support Eighteenth Amendment

After welcoming the delegates to the ninety-third annual convention of the Pennsylvania Odd Fellows, held in Johnstown, Mayor Cauffiel entered into a discussion of the violations of the Eighteenth Amendment and urged the delegates to do all in their power to aid in enforcement. The small force of prohibition officers in the state cannot combat the liquor interests alone, the mayor explained, calling attention to the large number of deaths in the city from poison booze and to the fact that young men are in the bootlegging business, which is carried on boldly.

Hazlehurst (Miss.) Citizens Organize for Law Enforcement

Citizens of the city of Hazlehurst, Mississippi, have formed committees for the purpose of assisting in the curbing of illicit stilling, and have pledged themselves to "report all violations." They have also resolved, that in view of the fact "that courts are powerless without the proof of such violations, we further pledge ourselves to give our time and attention to the collection and furnishing of such proof to secure convictions; that committees shall have authority to secure subscriptions and raise such funds as are necessary to carry out this program; that we hereby request the sheriff to deputize reliable men in each neighborhood and furnish them with necessary forms for such warrants as to enable them to hunt for and secure evidence; and that violators are hereby given notice that the people are resolved that bootleggers and moonshiners must quit business or leave the county."

The Farmer a Friend of Prohibition

Efforts by the wets to make it appear that there is a growing sentiment against prohibition are not finding favor among the farmers, said J. R. Howard, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, recently, as quoted by the press.

"Prohibition has put money into the farmer's pockets," he said. "It has helped him with his labor. The law is being disobeyed particularly in the larger commercial centers, especially among foreigners.

"Wets are trying to make the cities believe that the entire nation is opposed to prohibition. Farmers favor it. Smaller cities are pretty well dry. Seldom do you hear of drunkenness in the country town.

"Only last week while I was in West Virginia I talked with a farmer-banker, who said that in his town which a few years ago supported twenty-six saloons, the prohibition law is now well enforced and one of the outstanding features is that in a period of eighteen months after it became effective his bank added 2,000 new depositors."

"The American public in the great farm centers would rise to oppose the wets in their campaign directed from a few of the large industrial cities if they knew of the real extent of the liquor interests' efforts," declares Charles F. Horner of Kansas City, manager of a Chautauqua agency. He continued: "Sentiment has strengthened in the country for prohibition. People see it in actual force in the rural areas and they are now favorable to it. It is in the industrial foreign sections of the country where the liquor interests are centering their efforts."

Less Insanity in Ohio With Dry Law

"Prohibition is reducing insanity in Ohio," says the Columbus (Ohio) Dispatch of recent date. "This fact is brought to the attention of the public welfare department by Dr. William H. Pritchard, superintendent of the state hospital in Columbus, in his annual report. In 1917, 43 of the cases admitted to the institution were due to the excessive use of alcohol. In 1918 this number increased to 49 and in 1919 when national prohibition became effective the first year showed a reduction to 32, while in 1920 the number was brought down to only 4. An increase to 17 was noted in 1921, but for the fiscal year ending July 1, 1922, the total number of alcoholic patients was reduced to 15, or less than one-third of what it was in 1918, just before prohibition became effective.

"Alcoholic indulgence is not infrequently a precipitating factor in mental breakdown, Dr. Pritchard says, and then calls attention to the fact that in 1917 the total number of admissions to the Columbus institution was 614, while for the year 1922 it was but 573. Of this number 43 in 1917 were classified as alcoholic patients while during the fiscal year just closed but 15 were given this classification."

Irish Women Secure Full Privilege of Citizenship

Irish women obtained all equal rights as citizens with men by some slight changes made in the Irish constitution by the provisional parliament, recently, according to the Chicago Tribune. "Article 3 now confers citizenship 'without distinction of sex.'"

Famous Brewery to Be Paper Mill

Situated in a picturesque spot at the foot of Tumwater Falls, in the state of Washington, stands the old Schmidt brewery, once one of the largest in the United States, its products being known all over the world. The plant has been purchased by the West Coast Pulp and Paper Company, according to the Olympia (Wash.) Daily Record, and it is reported that plans are being considered for the manufacture of high grade paper from rags or fir wood. This is one of several new projects which promise to greatly benefit the city of Olympia in the near future.

Analysis of Bootleg Liquor Shows Presence of Poison

Examination of two samples of liquor purchased from a bootlegger by a reporter and submitted to the Industrial Alcohol and Chemical Division of the Prohibition Unit for analysis, showed that one, a "peach brandy," was a moonshine fruit distillate, containing a trace of zinc, and the other, an imitation "Scotch" whisky, was made from alcohol and rum ether, artificially colored with caramel.

TOPICS OF THE DAY AS DEPICTED BY THE CARTOONIST

—Chicago Tribune (Copyrighted)

THE FOUR ENEMIES OF GOOD GOVERNMENT

—Star Company (Copyrighted)

YOUR PROTECTOR

—Pace in Sunday School Times

—Cincinnati Times Star (Copyrighted)

LIFE'S DARKEST MOMENT

—McCutcheon in Chicago Tribune

The wets, demi-wets, moists, and damps favor beer and light wines, but oppose the saloon.

The question arises, what will the beer and wine stores be called?

FEDERAL JUDGES DISCUSS IMPORTANCE OF OBSERVANCE AND ENFORCEMENT OF PROHIBITION LAW

Prohibition in Arkansas of Greatest Benefit Imaginable

Judge Jacob Trieber, United States District Court, Eastern District of Arkansas

In regard to prohibition and law enforcement, I would state that so far as Arkansas is concerned, prohibition has proved of the greatest benefit imaginable. There is hardly any drunkenness, so far as my experience goes.

The law is well enforced in all the courts. In those over which I have the honor to preside, jurors are just as anxious to enforce the law as I am, and whenever the evidence warrants a conviction, there is no trouble in obtaining a verdict of guilty.

By strict enforcement of the law, as in this state, it is only a question of a short time when the illicit manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors will be things of the past, as those, who after the enactment of the law indulged in the use of them in a spirit of bravado, have gotten over that, especially as they realize that the law is being enforced against those who purchase intoxicating liquors, as well as those who make or sell them.

Duty of Jurors Most Important

Judge George W. McClintic, United States District Court, West Virginia, told a jury: "We have, at all times, more or less crime. Some people seem to forget the duty they owe to their country, their duty as citizens, their duty as patriots, their duty as men and women to themselves, as well as to their posterity. It is your duty in considering all these cases to consider the laws of the United States as made by Congress and to see that nothing is spared in carrying them out. Every lawyer that practices in the United States court takes an oath to support the Constitution of the United States, and the Eighteenth Amendment is as much a part of the Constitution as any other amendment. It is the duty of all officers to respect the offices they have and uphold them."

Prohibition Enforcement Officers Should Be Educated to Their Duties

Judge Louis Fitz Henry, United States District Court, Southern District of Illinois

Answering the recent letter received from THE UNION SIGNAL concerning the National Prohibition Act, permit me to say:

A great many substantial benefits have accrued to the people by reason of the law;

A failure to enforce laws breeds a contempt for them and this contempt is the most nourishing food for anarchy known;

As to your inquiry how best to promote sentiment for prohibition and law enforcement, I reply: By a rigid, fair, impartial, intelligent enforcement. This can best be accomplished by never authorizing the operation of a prohibition enforcement officer until he knows his business. I believe that no prohibition officer should be permitted to work in the field until he has been educated to the extent that he is familiar with the Act, the powers of an officer, the constitutional rights of every individual, and in a general way the duties and responsibilities of law enforcement officers, both Federal and state. Attempted enforcement, in positive violation of both the Constitution and the national prohibition Act itself, does more harm than good.

A co-operation of Federal enforcement officers with the local law enforcement officers would be very beneficial.

I believe the Canadian system of educating the Northwestern Mounted Police applied to our prohibition enforcement officers would make for efficiency and economy.

Continue Enforcement Program

Judge John H. Cotteral, United States District Court, Western District of Oklahoma

I feel sure the national prohibition law has greatly reduced the use of intoxicating liquors in this district and also its evil consequences. Of course, I readily subscribe to the importance of enforcing this law as well as others. No practical suggestions occur to me for increasing the sentiment in favor of the existing prohibition policy. The men who appear to be on the staff here, whose influence is felt in the discovery and apprehension of offenders, seem to be capable and efficient in their work. And I am convinced that a continuance of the program on foot will result eventually in great progress in the way of reforming addicts and turning others more strongly against the vending and use of intoxicating liquors.

Must Act in Accordance With Law or Be False to Ourselves

When addressing the members of a jury, Judge Hugh Morris, of the United States District Court, Wilmington, Delaware, made the following pertinent reference to the importance of refusal to be swayed by private opinions:

"It may be that in your personal private capacity some of you are dry men—that is, men who are opposed to the sale or use of alcoholic liquors in any form, or for any purpose. Others of you may in your personal and private capacity be wet men—that is, men who do not believe in the policy of law laid down by the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States and carried into effect by the Volstead Act. But as jurors you are not acting in a personal and private capacity. In the trial of a case, judge and jurors alike hold in their keeping, in trust, the sovereign power of the United States. Its future well-being depends in no small measure upon the fidelity of courts and jurors to their official duties. If, in the trial and decision of a case, you and I are swayed and controlled by our private views and refuse to act in accordance with the law and the evidence, we are false to ourselves, false to our fellow men and false to our country."

Example Better Than Precept

Judge Edwin L. Garvin, United States Court, Eastern District of New York

I believe that the results of prohibition, generally speaking, have been beneficial to the nation. All laws should be strictly enforced.

In my judgment, sentiment in favor of law enforcement in the minds of the American people can be best promoted by example and by a clear attitude on the part of all thoughtful people, indicating their belief that this government cannot endure unless its laws are respected and obeyed.

Public Sentiment Prohibition's Final Test

Judge W. H. S. Thompson, United States District Court, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

I am in receipt of the inquiry of THE UNION SIGNAL, asking for my opinion concerning the effect of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act passed for its enforcement. In reply, I will say that the judiciary must assume that the Acts of a co-ordinate branch of the government, namely, the law-making power, are wise and beneficent, until the contrary appears through the crucial test of experience. It is the unquestioned duty of the courts to uphold, correctly interpret, and faithfully enforce, the law as it is written. As to results, time alone, not the experience of a few years but of a generation, will determine the ultimate wisdom and practical effects of the Eighteenth Amendment. As I cannot assume to be wiser than events, I will not attempt to forecast the results; but it can be stated with certainty that in the last analysis, its success or failure will depend upon public sentiment, the final arbiter of all questions involving the rights and liberties of the people.

Cause of Wets Hopeless

In charging the newly sworn in grand jury at Charlotte, N. C., recently, Judge Webb of the United States District Court, said:

"The bootlegger and the blockader are fighting a hopeless cause. The United States has never yet been whipped in any war, and it will not be whipped in the battle which has been joined by these enemies of American homes, of American traditions, of American institutions and of American destiny. The only war, I pray God, in which this republic will ever be forced to engage hereafter, is the war to drive liquor totally out of existence in our land."

"The hope in the hearts of a minority of this country that liquor is coming back is fast dying out," he added.

Laws on Statute Books Must Be Obeyed

In making his charge to a jury recently, Judge J. N. Langham, of Indiana county, Pennsylvania, in the following words warned the members of the attitude they should take toward violations of the prohibition laws:

"No matter what your personal opinion is as to whether it is right or whether it is wrong we have it (the prohibition enforcement law) on our statute books and it must be obeyed and any violation thereof is a crime which should be punished, and which will be punished when brought into court and proven. For some reason good citizens hesitate to become interested in these prosecutions, probably because they fear to incur the enmity of this class of law violators. Just now we have agents in our county sent out by the United States Government, who are doing splendid work by bringing prosecutions against these offenders, and it is the duty of our good citizens to aid them in their work. They will have the co-operation of this court at all times. It is the duty of officers of the law, grand juries and petit jurles to aid in the proper execution of this enforcement law. No matter what the expense to the county, violators of the state law must understand now that the illegal traffic in liquors will be punished."

NOTED AMERICAN PENWOMEN OUTSPOKEN FOR PROHIBITION

Most Vital Blessing America Has Experienced

Clara Louise Burnham

I consider the prohibition amendment the most vital blessing which has come to the country in my lifetime, and I hope it will never be modified. So far as I know all my women friends and acquaintances share this feeling.

A Spiritual Housecleaning of the Nation

Fannie Hurst

Anyone who harbors the delusion that the women of America favor by a majority the modification of the prohibition law to permit the sale of light wines and beer should go on some first-hand investigation tours.

I have talked to hundreds of women in small towns and large cities; in tenements and in middle class homes. There is almost universal thanksgiving among them for this greatest of sociological boons which has come to this country. Homes have been rehabilitated; men and women led up from degradation and doom. A mental, spiritual and literal housecleaning has already taken place among the people of this America of ours that justifies prohibition over and over again.

The women of this country want prohibition—except perhaps that pampered strata of them who miss their dinner cocktails, and they don't count! It is the women who desire clean, decent homes, opportunities for their children, and full dinner-pails who want prohibition and know why they want it—without compromise.

[Editor's Note: Fannie Hurst has recently come back from a European trip with the message that if the "antis" could see the conditions abroad, they would be converted to prohibition. "We have lost our perspective here," she says, "we don't see the benefits until we go abroad and compare conditions."]

Present Day Drinking a Matter of Bravado

Charlotte Perkins Gilman

Prohibition has been gradually adopted by state after state because of its proven good effects, and its Federal adoption rested on those facts.

Drinking as a matter of bravado among those able to afford present prices does not seem to me as injurious to the community as the drinking of working people everywhere, and in especial the yearly increase of drinking among boys which was necessary to keep up the business of the saloon.

We still have the demand of the dipsomaniac, and of those who think it smart to do what is forbidden; also the activity of the bootlegger, but we have not the tremendous push of invested millions trying to maintain and increase the demand for their goods. As has been wisely remarked, they cannot advertise, nor distribute freely, which certainly discourages the trade.

History of Prohibition Its Own Defense

Kathleen Norris

The history of prohibition is its own defense. It began, obscurely and humbly in one of our middle-west villages. Fighting desperately for life against every weapon that contempt and hatred could raise against it, it crept into the larger towns, into the cities, finally into the legislative fastnesses themselves.

To down prohibition now, all the prayerful and painstaking work of the past ninety years must be painstakingly undone. That is the only way in which drink can come back, legally, to America.

There is no way of legalizing wines and beers except by once more amending the Constitution, and it is not thinkable that the wet forces will ever organize, will ever increase sufficiently in power, to attempt that.

Meanwhile we Americans, citizens of the greatest, the wisest, the most generous-hearted country in the world, have an opportunity to show that just as our forefathers defended her in troubled times, and in new and untried measures, and in humane and glorious laws, through all the hundred and fifty years of our history, so we are ready to defend her now. America needs American women to defend this law, as she never needed them before.

STUDYING THE EFFECT OF THE DRY LAW FROM THE BENCH

Judge Herbert Utterback, Des Moines, Iowa

For eleven years I have been one of the judges of our courts, beginning as a municipal judge in 1911. For the first three years I had full charge of our police court work. Since then I have been one of the judges of our District Court and as such I have had charge of the Criminal Equity and Law division of said court at different times during the eight-year period. In addition to my other work, I have had charge of the Juvenile department of our courts for the past three years. During the time I was municipal judge, I handled 18,461 cases, over seventy per cent of which, I estimate, were arrests for intoxication. In 1919, I had charge of the Equity division, and in that one year alone I disposed of, in one way or another, 1,426 divorce cases. As judge of the Juvenile division I have had hundreds of cases having to do with dependent, neglected, delinquent and defective children. Last year alone, I disposed of 1,825 different children.

In trying and disposing of the thousands of cases which have come before me, I think I have had an unusual opportunity of studying the effects of prohibition and I am glad to give it to you as my judgment, that the enactment of the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States was the greatest step forward that has ever been taken in this country since the adoption of the original Constitution.

There is some agitation looking toward the amendment or repeal of the Volstead Act. The liquor forces know that it will never be possible for them to secure the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. No other amendment to the Constitution in one hundred years was adopted by so large a per cent of the states of the Union—forty-six out of forty-eight states have ratified the prohibitory Amendment. Their only hope is to nullify the Eighteenth Amendment by securing the repeal of adequate enforcement legislation; by electing Congressmen who will not appropriate adequate funds to enforce the law, and by electing, if possible, local officials who are not in sympathy with the enforcement of the law.

In my judgment, they will not succeed, to any considerable extent, in their plans. The public generally in all of our communities knows of the benefits of prohibition. While there is some bootlegging, the truth is, it is a very small per cent in proportion to the amount of liquor formerly sold. I have made the assertion many times in public address that Bob King, who owned and operated one of the eighty-six saloons formerly in our city, sold more booze in one night, than all the bootleggers in Des Moines and Polk county together, in an entire month, under prohibition.

Many men who formerly spent a considerable portion of their wages for intoxicating liquors are now buying homes and paying for them; their wives and children are better clothed. More of their children are in school and in church, and hundreds of families whose homes were formerly poorly furnished are now living under much more favorable conditions, not only as to material things, but also as to moral surroundings and influences.

Many people have thought that the best way would be to let each person have liberty to drink or not as he or she saw fit, but I have long since learned that we cannot solve the problem in that way. If all the evils from the use of liquor could be visited upon the man or woman who uses it, still better upon the man who sells it, it might be different; but when one realizes that there are many others who must suffer even more than the one who uses the liquor to excess, then we realize the danger of leaving the matter to the judgment of the one who drinks.

Much of poverty, most of the strife, at least three-fourths of the crime, a large part of the divorce cases, much of the neglect of wife and children is directly or indirectly traceable to the use of intoxicating liquor.

When our prohibitory laws are enforced, the future manhood and womanhood of America will be cleaner and stronger physically, will be better educated, will have a higher regard for things moral and spiritual, and the United States of America will be a greater and better nation than it has ever been before.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

AN APPOINTMENT WITH UNCLE SAM

"Hello, Rob," called Tom Gridley, as he seated himself by the side of Robert Fletcher in the subway. "Glad I found you. Take lunch with me today at the Plaza, will you? I've something special to talk over."

"Sorry, Tom, but I can't. I've a previous engagement, an important one, too."

"Who's the girl?" laughed Tom.

"It's not a girl, please know, my friend," replied Rob seriously, "it's no less a personage, if one may so speak, than Uncle Sam. Have you forgotten, old top, that tomorrow is election day?"

"Almost," laughed Tom. "Must confess it doesn't loom very large in my young life but even if it is election day, it surely isn't going to take you from early morn to dewy eve to deposit your ballot in the box, is it? That's no excuse, old chap. Come on to that luncheon, there are to be a dozen good fellows there and we've something worth your while to talk over."

"No, it doesn't take me all day to vote, long as the ballot is, but I'm not a gentleman of leisure and have a lot of regular work to do at my desk at the office; so I planned to utilize some of my time at noon, in looking after this list of my fellow citizens, for whose voting I have made myself responsible." Robert pulled out a sheet of paper containing a long list of names.

"Well, I'll be jiggered. I didn't know you had turned politician, Rob. Going to run for office? How much is there in this stunt for you, anyway."

"A whole lot of satisfaction, and not another thing," answered Rob, flushing.

"Who are the fellows you are going to drag to the polls, anyway?"

"If you really want to know, they are some of my fellow members of the Brooks Bible Class. A few of us who want to see the decent people represented at the polls tomorrow are taking it upon ourselves to jog the memory of these perfectly good American citizens, who are liable to forget their duty on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November and let the liquor politicians run things their own way."

"My, but you are taking this election mighty seriously," exclaimed Tom. "Wherefor, if you don't mind telling me, I didn't know there was a president or anything like that to be elected."

"Tom Gridley, do you mean to say you are such a Rip Van Winkle that you don't know there is a great big vital issue to be decided at the polls tomorrow. Don't you know that all of the House of Representatives and one-third of the United States Senate is to be elected or re-elected, that a large number of the state legislators are up for election or re-election, and that the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment is moving heaven and earth to get the people to vote for men pledged to modify the prohibition law to make possible the return of wine and beer?"

"Well, now you refresh my memory, I believe I have heard something like that. But why get so excited over it? Suppose they did elect a Congress that brought back wine and beer, what harm would it do? They don't want the saloon returned."

"You benighted heathen," said Rob, with whimsical impatience, "what has become of the logical mind and clear reasoning powers for which you were noted in college? If they vote to make the manufacture of wine and beer legal under the Eighteenth Amendment, how do you suppose they are going to distribute it? If not in saloons or places licensed for that purpose, they will do it through groceries or soft drink parlors. Would you like to have your sister Isabel sipping her glass of lemonade in one of those places while old Ben Bobbins sits at the same, or a nearby table, drinking his beer? Do you want to see the brewers returned to political power? Don't you know that over 90 per cent of the business done by the saloons before prohibition was the beer business?"

Tom looked sheepish. "Guess I am a back number. But really you know everybody is saying that prohibition is a failure, so why not try a modified form of it and see if it won't work better?"

"Everybody saying prohibition is a failure! Don't talk nonsense, Tom. Everybody isn't saying anything of the kind. Everybody worth while is saying the exact opposite. The bankers are not saying prohibition is a failure. The Comptroller of the Currency has given a statement to the effect that the number of savings depositors has increased 764,085 in the last year, and the amount of deposits $88,499,000. I could show you a score of testimonies from big bankers saying that prohibition has tremendously increased savings accounts. The chambers of commerce of big cities and the mayors are not saying prohibition is a failure. Out of twenty-two letters received from mayors of our big cities in reply to the question as to the effect of prohibition on civic life, twenty were strongly favorable. The masters of state granges are not saying that prohibition is a failure. At an unofficial meeting some months ago, the masters of thirty-three state granges voted unanimously in favor of prohibition, and testified to its value to the people in the country districts. The women of this country don't say it's a failure. Everyone of the big worth-while women's national organizations like the Federation of Women's Clubs, League of Women Voters, Mothers Congress and Parent-Teacher Association, the National Woman's Trade Union League, Young Women's Christian Association and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union are for prohibition. The health experts are not saying prohibition is a failure. The first full year after national prohibition went into effect was the healthiest in history. There is a class of men who are saying prohibition is a failure—they are the men who want their drinks and the men who want the dollars that come from the traffic in drink—those are the ones who are doing all this yelling about prohibition being a failure."

"Whew, Rob, you are some orator. Must admit you're mighty convincing. Wish you were a candidate and I'd vote for you. You ought to go to Congress."

"Thank you, but I'm not a candidate, just a common young American citizen, with the welfare of this country at heart. And so are you, if you'd only give yourself a chance to think about it. How are you going to vote tomorrow?"

"How am I going to vote, man? Why I'm going to vote for the candidates you tell me are 100 per cent dry. My patriotism may be somewhat anaemic compared with yours but it isn't dead. I'll go on to that luncheon, but I'm going to get every one of those eleven lads I've planned to invite to do as you are doing—keep their appointment with Uncle Sam, and get out and hustle for the dry candidates."

Stand Fast For Prohibition

Stand fast for prohibition, ye of the Y. P. B.
The fight, though won, still rages. Our land is not yet free.
The grip of drink is broken, the hand of right is strong,
Fight on, fight on, ye valiant, and overcome the wrong.

To falter now is failure, our strength must firm remain,
Christ leads us in the battle, the fight shall not be vain.
Your work will not be finished, O noble Y. P. B.,
Until our glorious nation is made entirely free.

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union
Evanston, Illinois

Editor-in-Chief - - - Miss Anna A. Gordon
Managing Editor - - Miss Julia F. Deane
Associate Editor - - Miss Vida I. Thompson

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors of The Editorial Department, The Union Signal, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittance of $1.50 or under.

Notice of Expiration is sent to the subscriber two or three weeks before renewal is due, so that by immediate attention to this reminder not an issue need be missed. RENEW PROMPTLY.

Remittances should be made by draft on New York or Chicago, or by Post-office Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

Change of Address. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE, $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
Foreign Postage, 52 Cents Additional

Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (Monthly) 50c a Year
Foreign Postage, 12 Cents Additional

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., post-office as second class matter. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized August 20, 1918.

Evanston, Illinois, November 2, 1922

Delegates from Overseas Visit National Headquarters

On the register in the reception room of National W. C. T. U. Headquarters at Evanston there are being written the names of W. C. T. U. comrades from many distant lands. Exery day workers at Headquarters are having the joy of meeting and greeting many of the delegates and visitors to the World's Convention. Among the first to arrive were Mr. and Mrs. George Milne from Scotland. Mrs. Milne is the vice-president of the Scottish W. C. T. U. Mrs. Lydia B. Johnson and daughter, just arrived from Sweden, where the former has been speaking and working in the wet and dry referendum campaign, were among recent visitors. Miss Mary Campbell, World's W. C. T. U. organizer, and Miss Helen Root stopped for a few hours, long enough to tell of the wonderful enthusiasm in India for prohibition. The Japanese delegation spent a large part of one day. The party consisted of Mrs. Kubushiro, niece of Madam Yajima, and corresponding secretary of the national W. C. T. U. of Japan; Miss Utako Hayashi, leader of the temperance forces in Osaki; Mrs. Ito, wife of the head of the Men's Purity League, and Mrs. Aikawa, who has been in educational work in Korea. Both Mrs. Ito and Mrs. Aikawa are being sent by the government of Japan, the former to study the art of making American dresses, the latter to learn methods of education in girls' schools.

Among the latest visitors were Mr. and Mrs. John McLeod from Australia. Mrs. McLeod is the president of the Australasian W. C. T. U., and both she and her husband are making personal investigations of the actual results of prohibition all along the line as they travel, visiting city officials and business men, and neglecting no opportunity to secure evidence to take back with them for use in their campaign for national prohibition soon to be inaugurated.

That Deplorable 53 Per Cent

If George Washington or any of the worthy "fathers" of our country should come back to earth and stand over against the polling booth on election day, what would be their feelings to see only about fifty per cent of the legal voters of this great United States exercising the privilege bequeathed to them? Well might they wonder if their sacrificial efforts to establish this government of the people, for the people, were really appreciated.

Only about 53 per cent of the citizens voted at the last Presidential election, according to Prof. Arthur M. Schlesinger of the Iowa State University, who has made a careful study of the statistics relating to elections. The decline in voting from 80 to 53 per cent in the last fifty years, as shown by Prof. Schlesinger's chart, is a grim comment on the apathy of the people. This is all the more distressing when one considers that there is every reason to suppose that under improved transportation conditions the vote would grow larger, rather than smaller. In the early days of the nation it was difficult to get to the polls. The head of the family had to leave his work, hitch up the team, and take the long drive to town. Today, it is only a matter of a few minutes, even for those living in the rural districts, to hop onto the interurban car, or into the Ford or limousine, and ride to the election booth.

It is an axiomatic truth that the business of functioning democratic government is a most important present-day duty, but the practical question is how to drive that truth home and get the nation permeated with a dynamic spirit of patriotism.

Giving publicity to the fact that only approximately half of the men and women entitled to exercise the right of franchise avail themselves of that privilege, might shame some delinquent voters into doing their duty next week. If every woman who reads these words would make "that deplorable 53 per cent" the theme of a telephone conversation between now and election day, it would help to quicken the civic conscience of some citizens.

King Over All

"Remember the battle and set aside
While thrones and powers confess
The king over all the children of pride
Is the press, the press, the PRESS."

Thus Kipling. And many another has spoken or thought in similar fashion concerning this, the most powerful of all agencies for education and propaganda—"the quickest and surest medium of intelligence in our day, and therefore, at once a blessing or a blight; an influence that is wholesome or hurtful; a power that destroys or constructs."

It is well to ponder the worth of a newspaper to the community. If it presents only the salacious and sensational; if it apparently looks upon the breaking of the Ten Commandments as the only news worth publishing; if it ofttimes insinuates untruths in order to get a "scoop"; if, no matter how hard he strives for the best interests of the people, it criticizes a public official who differs from its policy, or shields from blame, and praises another, regardless of how crooked, corrupt, or immoral he may be, because he belongs to the party that it represents;—if all this is the case, what influence has the publication upon its readers?

A Chicago daily paper lately asserted that prohibition was not being enforced in the city, and after speaking of the activities of bootleggers and their patrons, asked the question "Why is this?" A paper published in a neighboring city remarks that if the statement is true, the editor need look no farther than his own newspaper for the answer in part, and calls to mind the columns of its various pages so frequently open to the wails of the thirsty who are terribly worried about prohibition, the cartoonist who at least twice a week has some variation of bootlegging as his theme, and the editorials themselves, which are constantly endeavoring to indict prohibition. The paper, "which seeks to sway opinion, devotes little of its space to pleas for observance, but a great deal to the campaign for destroying respect for the law. Then, with a sudden rush of morality, it demands to know why the prohibition law is not enforced."

"King over all is the press." The pro-liquor organizations realize the truth of Kipling's statement. Through pamphlet, newspaper, poster, sticker,—in all possible ways they are using this immeasurable power to tell the people of America that the Eighteenth Amendment is unnecessary, that the Volstead Code wrongly defines the intoxicating content of alcoholic beverages, that lawlessness is rampant, and a hundred other falsehoods or half-truths. Examples are given in this and other issues of THE UNION SIGNAL of some of the ways in which they have made use of the almost unlimited powers of this "king over all," to promote only selfish ends. Surely members of the W. C. T. U. who read of their efforts will let pass no single opportunity to foil them, themselves using the influence of the press for a good, and not an evil cause. By magazine article, poster, sticker, leaflet, letter to newspapers, demanding that the truth be printed—in these and a hundred other ways, we should be able to educate, to keep before the public the highest ideals, and thus force the "king over all" to reign for the good of the realm.

Not Quoted by A. A. P. A.

It is an exceedingly interesting coincidence not mentioned in the literature put out by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment that during the period that has elapsed since national prohibition went into effect there has been a phenomenal increase in savings deposits. Only last week the Comptroller of the Currency announced that the increase in savings in the United States during the past year has been $88,499,000, and the number of savings depositors increased to 764,085.

These statements, confirmed and interpreted by bankers of the standing of John Jay Abbott, vice-president of the Commercial and Continental National Bank of Chicago, and James G. Forgan, of the First National Bank of Chicago, furnish incontrovertible arguments in favor of prohibition.

Money does talk and in this case it appears to be speaking up quite eloquently to voters, to cast their ballots for the continuance of a policy that is for the best economic interest of the nation.

CONVENTION NOTES

Mrs. Kathleen Norris of California, said to be one of the most popular novelists of the United States, is expecting to attend the National Convention, and speak on "San Francisco and Its Committee of Five Thousand," the story of the spectacular campaign the women of San Francisco are waging for the success of the referendum on a state-wide enforcement law.

District of Columbia white ribboners are planning to entertain at a luncheon all delegates who spend Saturday, November 11, in Washington. Sightseeing cars will take the guests, at reasonable rates, around the city and environs.

From Argentina and Uruguay will come a delegation of five: Senora Berta de Maria de Santiago and her husband, and Rev. Gabina Rodriguez and his wife, Senora Isabel Gonzalez Rodriguez. With them will be Hardynia K. Norville, World's W. C. T. U. representative for South America.

Canada's delegation includes the eight general officers of the Canada W. C. T. U., with many others, including Mrs. Louise McKinney, member of parliament for the province of Alberta.

For God and Home and Every Land

Time of Prayer—Noontide

"It is always noontide somewhere,
And across the awakening continents,
From shore to shore, somewhere,
Our prayers are rising ever more."

The General Officers of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union urge every member of the organization to pray, work and vote for the election, on November 7, of candidates who favor the Eighteenth Amendment and its strict enforcement.

They designate Sunday, November 5, as a day of special united prayer for the triumph of prohibition at the coming election.

On the Battle Line in Southern California

Julia D. Phelps

In California the battle between the enemies of the Eighteenth Amendment and its friends is joined in deadly earnest. The thirty and more pro-liquor organizations of the country would consider that they had scored a great victory on November 7 if they could count as their chief prize the defeat of the prohibition enforcement act in California. This act, which is the concurrent law for the state, was passed by the last legislature but was held up by a referendum secured by the Grape Protective Association, the title under which the "wets" hide themselves.

The ballot will contain thirty measures to be voted on besides the names of all the candidates, from governor down to police judges; the position of the prohibition enforcement act is fortunate, as it is Number 2.

The temperance organizations of the state are loosely joined in a conference committee which consults as to plans; each one, however, manages and finances its own work. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Southern California is devoting every energy to the campaign; the state officers form a campaign committee and each county has a like committee composed of the county officers, and the local union is organized in the same way. This plan has resulted in prompt, concerted and efficient action. New methods are constantly developed.

The huge task of reaching each Woman's Missionary Society, Ladies' Aid, Parent-Teacher Association and Women's Fraternal Organization, was the stent we set for ourselves. Many methods have been used: Church service addresses, ten-minute speeches (in which we have become adepts), campaign meetings and leaflets, have all helped. The first step in these conferences was to secure the pledged attendance of one member from each woman's organization in the territory included. Some one of the state officers would then take charge, following detailed information on the prohibition enforcement by a complete outline of a short and a long speech, securing a promise from each representative present to carry the message to her own organization.

Our entire staff of state lecturers, as well as the state officers, are constantly in the field, often getting in two speeches in an afternoon and another in the evening. We have all learned how to send home to the heads and hearts of our listeners the sad story of the disloyalty of our beloved state in continued and active disobedience to the Constitution of the United States. Eyes glisten and faces take new lines of resolution as the message rings out "Vote 'yes' on Number 2 and redeem California;" a deep sense of responsibility seizes upon the audience until it is felt as a spiritual force compelling to duty.

Election day plans are many; women of leisure are urged to dedicate November 7 to the duty of getting voters to the polls by furnishing automobiles, taking care of the children while mother goes to vote, and helping the semi-invalid and the old to get out to the polling place.

Los Angeles county has a Tambourine Sextette which travels about holding evening street meetings with great success. They distribute a leaflet which bears the law enforcement quotation from President Harding's Fourth of July address; it contains the song "Work for Enforcement," which is distributed among the crowd, often hundreds strong, and is sung with telling effect. Other counties have their own original plans and all are hard at work.

Special effort is made to utilize the great opportunity of the state and county fairs by having a very fine exhibit and specially selected leaflets.

Remembering the large number of children in every Sunday school whose parents do not attend church, we have printed a card which says:

SAY DAD! SAY MOTHER!
Will you be loyal to the Constitution?
Will you protect me from the bootlegger?
Will you vote "Yes" on the Wright Act, November 7?
Thanks!

Father _____ Mother _____

Thousands have already been used. Pulpits are generously open to our speakers, for the pastors are staunch and active workers for the act.

Seventy thousand copies of the concise and yet clear leaflet, "Radiogram to Patriots," have been printed and widely scattered. "Facts," the new National W. C. T. U. leaflet, serves to dispel the notion that "prohibition is a failure."

Nor have we forgotten that dry laws need dry officials, so a list of candidates with their wet or dry records will be published in the next White Ribbon for the enlightenment of voters.

With prayerful hearts and high endeavor we fill the days and look forward eagerly to November 7, trusting to win a great victory for California.

Kathleen Norris Trys "Walt Mason Stuff" to Aid Law Enforcement

The following "prose-verse" by Kathleen Norris, the famous novelist, who is to speak at the National W. C. T. U. convention, was published the other day in the San Francisco Journal, "with apologies to Walt Mason":

"I've often wondered if it's bluff, this easy-running, rhyming stuff, that all the papers print to read like prose; I've thought, 'It can't be hard, Walt Mason does it by the yard; some day I'm going to see just how it goes! I'll try it out myself someday, when I have something true to say—it may turn out to be a waste of time, but on the other hand, of course, the rhymes do add a little force; people remember what they read in rhyme!' And with this little plan in mind, imagine my delight to find that I can lisp in numbers just like Walt; my new Corona can disburse a ready little stream of verse that never seems to hesitate or halt. Well, I have said this all before, but there's no harm in one word more, one little special message straight to you: It's this, 'Let's keep our country's law—fight in this patriotic war—vote YES on State Amendment Number Two!'"

"State Amendment Number Two," is the Wright Enforcement law, passed by the California state legislature, and referred to the people by the anti-prohibitionists at the November 7 election. For several months Mrs. Norris has been giving volunteer service as a speaker in the campaign.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. HEADQUARTERS

GENERAL OFFICERS

PRESIDENT
MISS ANN A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL.
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, FARGO, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA.
TREASURER
MRS. MARGARET C. MUNNS, EVANSTON, ILL.

1730 Chicago Avenue, Evanston, Ill.

REST COTTAGE

RED LETTER DAYS

December 23—Crusade and Pioneers' Day.

SCIENTIFIC TEMPERANCE INSTRUCTION

PRIZE WINNERS IN ESSAY CONTESTS, 1922

College—Harrison Orians, Northwestern College, Naperville, Illinois; Subject, "The Significance of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act." Honorable mention: Hortense Huston, Fisk University, Tennessee; Frances Kenney, Georgia Normal and Industrial College, Milledgeville, Georgia.

Teacher-Training—Hazel Warren, Kansas City, Missouri; Subject, "Best Methods of Teaching Temperance." Honorable mention: Eva Crenshaw, Georgia Normal and Industrial College, Milledgeville, Georgia; Mrs. W. J. Roberts, —— Oregon.

Senior-Junior—Ralph Kennedy, Enterprise, Oregon; Subject, "Why the High School Student Should Fight the Cigaret." Honorable mention: Lola Baggett, Winter Park, Florida; Bayard Butchart, Eureka, Illinois.

Sophomore-Freshman—Greta Osborne, Southampton, New York; Subject, "What Two Years of Prohibition Have Meant to Our Country." Honorable mention: Evelyn Man, Wheaton, Illinois; Manda Boe, Mayville, North Dakota.

Seventh and Eighth Grades—Alice Thrall, Eighth Grade, Oberlin, Ohio; Subject, "What is the Harm in Beer, Wine and Home-Brew?" Honorable mention: Helen J. Patten, Saratoga Springs, New York; Marie Robertson, Clatskanie, Oregon.

Fifth and Sixth Grades—Billy Burgess, Fifth Grade, Springfield, Missouri; Subject, "The Harmful Effects of Tobacco." Honorable mention: Gladys Harrison, Milford, New York; Robert C. Hunt, Hayden, Arizona.

POSTER CONTESTS

High School—Wm. Welsh, Jr., Wayne, Pennsylvania. Honorable mention: Olga Boruck, Passaic, New Jersey; Robert Waltz, Strasburg, Ohio; Earle Sprague, Nooksack, Washington; Marie Ritter, Cranford, New Jersey.

Grades—Harold Ford, Seventh Grade, Kansas City, Missouri. Honorable mention: Glen Jones, Strasburg, Ohio;———, Joseph Singerly School, Eighth Grade, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Milton Smith, Wheaton, Illinois.

HONOR ROLL OF STATES

Illinois, 6 points; Kansas, 3; Missouri, 4; New Jersey, 3; New York, 5; North Dakota, 3; Ohio, 4; Oregon, 5; Pennsylvania, 8; Tennessee, 4; Washington, (West), 5; Wisconsin, 5.

EFFICIENCY STANDARD FOR STATE SUPERINTENDENTS

Missouri, first, 95 per cent; Oregon and Washington (West) tying for honorable mention, each receiving 90 per cent.

TRANSPORTATION NOTES

WORLD'S AND NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTIONS, NOVEMBER, 1922

Have you made your reservations for the trip to the World's and National W. C. T. U. Conventions, either via Washington or via Buffalo? Since the running of special trains depends on the number of reservations, an immediate response to the passenger agents whose names will be found in the transportation notes below, will be greatly appreciated. Please read all the article carefully and act exactly according to its instructions. This may save you annoyance and will facilitate the work of the transportation committee.

The convention rate of one-and-a-half fare has been granted to California on the identification certificate plan. This rate is open to members of the organization and their families. A special identification certificate will be furnished to each person desiring one, and the round trip ticket must be purchased before leaving home. As soon as the certificates are ready they will be sent to the state presidents of Northern and Southern California W. C. T. U.'s, to whom those interested may apply.

Convention rates will apply locally within the state of Pennsylvania, for amounts above sixty-seven cents.

At Washington, D. C., sight-seeing cars will be available on November 11. There are several tours to choose from and special arrangements will be made to accommodate the visitors.

On November 20, if a sufficient number wish to make the trip, there will be an excursion to Atlantic City; round trip fare, $2.40.

Transportation Notes

Tour No. 1. For those who wish to spend Saturday, November 11, in Washington, D. C., and who do not plan to go to Toronto.

A train on the Pennsylvania Railway will leave the Union Station, Chicago, Friday, November 10, at 10:30 a. m., arriving in Washington at 8:00 a. m. The day will be spent sightseeing, and the trip to Philadelphia will be resumed at

(Continued on Page Eleven)

Why Not Use Post Cards With a Purpose?

Everybody uses post cards. Why not use our new member persuaders? Here is the message carried by one of them:

"Our Slogan.
Who are we?
Who are we?
Willing workers
Don't you see ?
Will we do it?
Well, I guess!
A million members?
Yes! Yes!! Yes!!!
We want a million members
In our W. C. T. U.
For we're out for Law Enforcement
And we Need
You!"

Equally compelling are those entitled "Help Wanted," "The Field Is the World," "Courage, Comrade, Courage," and numerous others. All these are illustrated in colors. The "Ode to Water" by William Jennings Bryan, The Rest Cottage and Frances E. Willard cards are all well worth using. They carry a worth while message and give needed publicity to our organization and our cause.

All post cards, 25 cents per dozen; $1.75 per 100.

(Please send remittance with order.)

We record here the names of friends and comrades who have recently passed to the higher life.

MRS. ADALINE ELDRED, of East San Diego, California. At the age of nearly eighty-two she retained every faculty and discussed with great pleasure the days when she lived in Muskegon county, Michigan, and, as president of the local and county W. C. T. U., entertained in her home J. B. Finch, Frances E. Willard, Anna A. Gordon, Susan B. Anthony, Colonel Bain, and many others equally prominent. At the time of her home-going Mrs. Eldred was a member of San Diego First union. Her beautiful character and devotion to the cause endeared her to her white ribbon companions.

MARY R. WARE, of St. Louis, Missouri. Miss Ware, who was seventy-nine years old, had been for years an active and loyal member of the St. Louis W. C. T. U. As she was returning with her sister from the state convention at the Planters Hotel, she was struck by an automobile, and fatally injured.

MRS. JENNIE S. KILLAN WEBBER, of McCook, Nebraska. With an inheritance of generations of New England Christian culture, she was a controlling factor in religious activities in the Iowa home of her early womanhood. Later she and her husband did missionary work in New Mexico and made many successful evangelistic tours through the South, finally settling in Colorado Springs, Colorado, where for thirty years she went about her Father's business, being particularly helpful in the white ribbon army. Her interest in prohibition was maintained when she located in Nebraska, where, in the last membership campaign, at the age of eighty-four, she secured twelve new members. She was ever an inspiration and a benediction to all with whom she came in contact.

Prominent Speakers Bring Stirring Messages to Maryland Convention Delegates

Special Correspondence

Reports and discussions of departmental work filled the day sessions of the forty-seventh annual convention of the Maryland W. C. T. U. held at Walkersville, and special programs with splendid addresses were given each evening. Wednesday night the Loyal Temperance Legion of Woodsboro entertained with songs, recitations, and the playlet, "The New Alice in Wonderland." Mrs. Maude B. Perkins, national general secretary of the Young People's Branch, delivered a splendid address. "We must impress upon young people what the future of prohibition shall mean to them," she said. "Let us have homes, not merely houses. Every child has the right to be well born.....Every young mother in the United States should be a worker in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Let us not be deceived by the plea for light wines and beer. Let us not lose the Christ ideal; rather shall the young men and women of Maryland stand firm to combat evil legislation and the making of laws that discredit their noble state."

In conducting a noon-tide service in her devout manner, Mrs. Deborah Knox Livingston made application of it to our work. "Jesus saw a possible witness, a leader, in the blind man at Siloam, and he restored his sight. Prohibition came to us that we might give the vision to others. Our freedom, our salvation, depends upon our faithfulness to the work in which we are engaged."

Hon. S. E. Nicholson of Washington gave a strong talk upon "International Peace." "Justice is better served in conferences of peace than in clash of arms."

The address of the state president, Mrs. Mary R. Haslup, was replete with poignant facts. She urged the need for greater vigilance against the wets than ever before. "The challenge for a million members is before us. The A. A. P. A. proposes to destroy the fifty years' service of Christian men and women, 'to trench the drys by 1924.' But we say America has never yet been defeated and she will not be in the battle of right versus money. Maryland needs the votes of the W. C. T. U. women as never before—see to it that we are alert and vote right."

At an evening meeting the Reformed church was filled with people eager to hear Mrs. Livingston speak on "World Prohibition." "The eyes of the world are watching this new experiment in democracy. If we prove prohibition a success here, then European countries will join hands with us in this great movement. To make law enforcement perfect we must have co-operation—units alone are useless. The United States of America will be able to enforce her law adequately only when other nations join in prohibitory laws. Let us remember: The light that shines brightest at home is the light that send its beams to the farthest parts of the earth. Let us agitate and educate for world prohibition and, when no nation for the sake of revenue shall have a right to debauch her sons and daughters, the task will be done."

A thank-offering of $350 from the county unions was received for the work at the Community House in Baltimore.

The report of the press superintendent showed that in each county press workers have turned to THE UNION SIGNAL for authentic and up-to-date information.

A ten-minute talk upon Near East Relief work was given by Rev. Harold F. Pellegrin of Baltimore.

The closing session of the convention was given over to law enforcement and Mr. Crabbe, of the Anti-Saloon League, gave a stirring address.

Much interest was manifested in the National and World's W. C. T. U. conventions.

Momentous Days Are These

1922	NOVEMBER					1922
Sun.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thurs.	Fri.	Sat.
			1	2	3	4
5	6	7	8	9	10	11
12	13	14	15	16	17	18
19	20	21	22	23	24	25
26	27	28	29	30

World's and National W. C. T. U. Conventions in Philadelphia, November 11-21, 1922.

Transportation Notes

(Continued from Page Ten)

4:30 p. m., arriving in the convention city at 7:30 p. m. The return trip can be made at the delegates' pleasure as no special arrangements will be made by the transportation committee. Apply for reservations to W. E. Blachley, Division Passenger Agent, Pennsylvania Railway, 323 South Wells Street, Chicago.

Tour No. 2. For those who wish to attend the World League against Alcoholism meeting in Toronto, Canada, November 25-29.

A train on the New York Central will carry special cars for delegates leaving Chicago, Friday, November 10, at 5:00 p. m., connecting at Buffalo with the Lehigh Valley road. No change of cars will be necessary. Arrival at Philadelphia will be at 8:08 p. m. Apply for reservations to Mr. C. Hartigan, Ass't. Gen. Pass. Agt., New York Central Railroad, La Salle Street Station, Chicago.

Tickets on the going trip will be available on the Pacific Coast November 7 to 13 and in all other parts of the country and Canada, November 8 to 14. By either route, the one way fare, Chicago to Philadelphia, is $29.46. The return trip will be one-half of the regular fare. The Pullman fares are as follows from Chicago, either route; Lower berth, $8.25; upper, $6.60; drawing room, $30.00; compartment, $23.25.

The trip from Philadelphia to Toronto will be made on the Lehigh Valley road, leaving Philadelphia, Tuesday, November 21, at 8:40 p. m. Several hours will be spent at Niagara Falls, arriving in Toronto at 9:43 p. m., November 22. Tickets must be deposited at Buffalo by all delegates who hold tickets to any point east or west of Buffalo.

An agent of the railroad will be at the convention November 15 and 18 for the purpose of validating tickets. Immediately on arrival in Philadelphia tickets should be left at convention headquarters, the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, with Miss Elizabeth Newman, secretary of the transportation committee. On the return the final limit for leaving Philadelphia is December 1. Delegates must arrive at starting point December 3 for all but Pacific Coast points.

The fare from Buffalo to Toronto is $3.67. The pullman fare from Philadelphia to Toronto is as follows: lower berth, $5.25; upper, $4.20; drawing room, $19.50; compartment, $14.75. Reservations for this trip may be made at the convention.

The Pennsylvania and New York Central railroads have prepared a special letter covering details of trips mentioned, which may be obtained on application to the railroads.

It is very important that reservations for either tour from Chicago to Philadelphia should be made as soon as possible. If a sufficient number make reservations, either or both roads will run a special train for the exclusive use of the delegates.

Parties living east of Chicago may join either tour at the most convenient point; western delegates will join in Chicago.

Be sure to secure a certificate from your railroad agent at the time of purchasing your ticket. Do not make the mistake of asking for a receipt. No refund of fare will be made because of failure to secure certificate.

N. B. In order to secure reduced fare, tickets must be purchased going and returning over the same route.

Going? Where? To the World's W. C. T. U. Convention in Philadelphia, November 11-16!

You are interested in World's W. C. T. U. activities, but are you informed? The following will be of assistance to you. Order at once and "read up" before you go or as you travel.

Story of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Why We Wear the White Ribbon.

Price, each 5 cents; per 50, $1.00; per 100, $1.50.

Catechism on the World's W. C. T. U.

Glimpses of Our World-Wide Work.

Price, each 3 cents; per 50, 75 cents; per 100, $1.25.

A Chinese Student's Appeal.

An International Question.

A Quarter Century of W. C. T. U. Work in China.

The L. T. L. in Mission Lands.

Our W. C. T. U. in Japan.

Co-operation With Czecho-Slovakia.

Noon-tide Hour of Prayer.

Price, each 2 cents; per 50, 25 cents; per 100, 45 cents.

Story of the Polyglot Petition.

Price, 5 cents; per 50, $2.00; per 100, $2.50.

China Awakened.

Price, 2 cents; per 50, 35 cents; per 100, 60 cents.

The Mothers of China.

W. C. T. U. Achievements in Burma.

Price, each 3 cents; per 50, 40 cents; per 100, 75 cents.

The Polyglot Petition.

Price, each 5 cents; per 50, $2.00.

Handy Booklet of the World's W. C. T. U.

Per copy, 2 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

Render to Your Country This Patriotic Service

Send NOW, TODAY, 10 cents for our Patriotic Service Package. And when received, follow instructions therein given. Stamps accepted.

DO IT NOW!

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois.

Organization the Keynote of East Washington W. C. T. U. Convention

Special Correspondence

The keynote of the East Washington W. C. T. U. convention, held in Spokane, was "Organization," and there was great rejoicing over the fact that during the past six months there has been an increase of nearly fifty per cent in the number of new unions organized. "Law Enforcement" received probably more discussion than any other subject. Federal officer Roy C. Lyle presented the work of his aids in such a way that all felt the need of supporting them and realized how much bravery it requires to engage in enforcement work at this time. Mr. Lyle said: "Without the W. C. T. U. there would be no Eighteenth Amendment and without its support enforcement would be impossible."

The reports of the superintendent were well prepared and well received. Such an earnest body of workers will accomplish much.

It was a treat to have with us Mrs. Elizabeth Preston Anderson, recording secretary of the National W. C. T. U. Her address on "The Present Crisis" served to arouse her auditors to the dangers of indifference at this time.

The white ribbon was tied upon several little folks, one mother, accompanied by both grandmothers, bringing her three children to be made recruits.

The banquet was a delightful affair. We were welcomed by representatives of the churches, schools, university, Woman's Federation of Clubs, and Chamber of Commerce. Dr. Dunn, president of the university, said: "Your organization proves that women can organize and finance a great cause. When you secured the teaching of scientific temperance in the schools it was one of the greatest things accomplished for prohibition."

Great credit is due the Spokane women for the dispatch with which plans were carried out. Not a moment was lost from the time they met the delegates to the end of the convention. Everything possible was done for the comfort and convenience of the women. Delightful music was furnished for the programs.

Such conventions inspire those who attend to press forward with renewed zeal and enthusiasm.

Our president, Mrs. Alice Methven, and Mrs. Anna Niesz will attend the World's and National W. C. T. U. conventions.

New Campaign Poster "Vote Right"

A Woman's Appeal to Women. Attractively illustrated. Order in quantities. Use in every available place where it will reach the eyes of women. Price, single copy, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00; per 100, $7.50. Please send remittance with order.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

Two New Programs

Fine for your Public Meeting, L. T. L., Y. P. B., Christian Endeavor Society, Sunday School Class, National Prohibition Guards, etc.

Uncle Sam's Prohibition Quiz. Testimony of ten noted Americans (Exercise for 11 boys or young men).

Aunt Columbia's Prohibition Quiz. Testimony of ten noted American women. (Exercise for 11 girls or young women).

Price, each, five cents per copy; per dozen, 50 cents. Please send remittance with order.

Look Here! For Election Day, November 7

Decorate Autos, Windows, Store Fronts and all Available Places With Our Patriotic Slogan:

"SERVE AMERICA, SUPPORT THE CONSTITUTION"

A white star on a blue background, lettered in white, "Serve America. Support the Constitution." Size 7x11 inches. Order in quantities for distribution in your communities. Copyright by National W. C. T. U. Publishing House, Evanston, Illinois. Per 100, $1.00; per thousand, $7.00. Single copies, 5 cents.

Order Now. Please send remittance with order.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois.

The Pro-Liquor Press

(Continued from Page Two)

paid so much a column, advertising rates, to print this material, but it is not at all likely that the general public on reading it will stop to question whether or not it is being furnished by the wet interests.

A different method, but one which doubtless is found very effective, is pursued by the "Illustrated Liberal Cartoon Service," with offices in Buffalo. This company issues posters against prohibition, with pointed statements, and cartoons to illustrate. One of the posters advises the voter to "get out and register and follow it up by voting for liberal men who are not afraid to tell you how they stand." The cartoon portrays a long-faced prohibitionist with a private "cellar" behind him, reading the declaration, "I'll let the whole world die before I give in," while at his feet lies a paper with the headline, "Twenty-five die of poisoned liquor in New York." Mr. Legislator is on the fence, stating: "I know I'm wrong, but unless the liberals force me, I'll stick with selfish R. E. Former," while beneath the cartoon are the words: "Give them beer, then they won't take poison. Co-operate with any movement that will bring another shoulder to the wheel. Have the courage to back your own convictions." Naturally these attract much notice and often a reading from those whose attention could not be secured by the papers. Linked with them are the posters and stickers found in many a city. During the recent drive in Chicago, to gain signatures to the petition for a referendum, large posters with a likeness of the Liberty Bell were used, and stickers with the same insignia on the windshields of automobiles.

Then there is the wonderful "battle hymn" of the wets, copyrighted by the New York division of the A. A. P. A., a satirical prophecy of the return of legalized alcoholic beverages, the refrain of which closes with the words: "That's the thing we want and that's the thing we'll get! The thing we're fighting for."

Articles in magazines is one of the chief methods by which the Constitutional Liberty League (along with like organizations) leads its "educational campaign." This League is using newspaper advertising, press publicity, pamphlets, billboards, the foreign language press, and finally, articles in the most reputable magazines, deprecating prohibition, in endeavoring to reach and "educate" the public. That last article you read in your favorite monthly, which made you wonder for a moment if after all there could be some reason on the other side—did you stop to think whether or not it was written by someone who was paid not only by the publishers for a readable article on a popular subject, but who also received something from the pro-liquor interests?

In the old days, before prohibition went into effect, it was the custom, in strike emergencies, to close all the saloons. Even then it was recognized that whisky was bad. And in war times, when every energy of every loyal American was bent toward securing the greatest efficiency in fighting Germany, wartime prohibition was put into effect.

If prohibition is a good thing in times of stress, if it is a necessity then, why should it not be in times of tranquility? Yet the liquor interests, masquerading under the pretense of wanting only light wines and beer, are trying to break down the prohibition laws by seeking to amend the Volstead enforcement act.

Let the Volstead Act stand as it is.

—Gadsden (Ala.) Times.

WOOL FLOWERS! Will mail wool, assorted colors, for twelve flowers, crochet instructions for flowers and wool hats. Send 27 cents coin or stamps. Mrs. D. Miller, Box 283, Danbury, Conn.

One of our dear leaders compared the size of the stickers announcing the Convention of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union with the Red Cross stickers. Let us think of the difference in purpose. The latter are simply a receipt for our money and we pay a cent apiece for them, whereas the W. C. T. U. stickers are for advertising and the larger they are the more easily they can be read. We are especially anxious that those who are not interested in prohibition shall have their attention attracted to the great convention in Philadelphia so that they will read the notices in the daily papers even if they are too far away to attend the sessions. See that all of your friends know about this event. There is no better way to impress them than to supply them with stickers. Present school children with stickers for their notebooks and some mothers will hear of the convention for the first time, and others, who have heard about it, will have it impressed on their minds. Place in conspicuous locations. Stick some on your church calendars. It is interesting to hear of the many unique ways in which our members and friends are using them.

They are going, so you would better order your supply at the reduced price: $1.50 per thousand; $1.00 per five hundred; $0.50 per hundred.

Please send remittance with order to Mrs. James B. Scott, 503 South 46th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Unexcelled for repairing china, glassware, earthenware, furniture, vases, books, etc. Famous since 1876. Major's rubber and Leather Cements are good.
Three kinds, 20c per bottle at dealers, or write us.
MAJOR MFG. CO., NEW YORK

"No Quarter for the Enemy" Slogan of Wisconsin Convention Delegates

Eva C. Lewis

The two hundred delegates and scores of visitors will long remember the forty-ninth convention of the Wisconsin W. C. T. U. as one of great inspiration and enthusiasm despite disappointment over results at the late primaries. As a paper put it, "One could not but be impressed with the energy and seriousness of these ladies." Each succeeding convention seems better than the one before. As the battle for our beloved cause grows fiercer, it arouses the determination and fighting spirit of our women, as in the Crusade days, and is sure to have a telling effect in the near future.

Words cannot picture the autumnal beauties of northern Wisconsin and the ideal Indian summer weather, that was matched by the whole-hearted hospitality of the Rice Lake people. The auto trip through the wonderful woods to the Isle of Pines on the banks of the beautiful lake, where a fine dinner was served, will long linger in memory.

The special musical selections, and the song service under our musical director, furnished restful relaxation in our strenuous meetings.

The president's splendid address, the reports of officers, the speeches at the banquet so well and bountifully served by the ladies of St. Joseph's church, with "The Raging Battle" the general theme, all sounded the keynote of optimism.

The superintendents' addresses on "How My Department Promotes Law Enforcement" revealed great activity and gratifying results.

"Candidates' Night," was unique. Both those who had met with success at the recent primaries and the defeated, spoke: Mrs. Mary Scott Johnson, our state president, now independent candidate for assemblyman; Mrs. Ella Sanford, state organizer, candidate for lieutenant-governor; and Hon A P Nelson, who in speaking of his defeat for re-election to Congress said: "I glory in the fact that I have stood foursquare for my convictions in spite of promises of support if I would 'trim my sails,'" and all white ribboners glory with him.

Mr. Hicks, attorney for the Anti-Saloon League of Wisconsin, our guest during the convention, also spoke on the recent campaign and its results. "Let us forget the past and concentrate our thoughts on the work ahead," he said in closing.

The convention sermon, delivered by Dr. W. A. Ganfield, candidate for the United States Senate, was scholarly, forceful and inspiring. "With the Cross of Jesus and the Stars and Stripes in one hand, and the Book of God and the Constitution in the other, I challenge you to go forward."

Mrs. Ben Hooper, Independent candidate for the United States Senate, also spoke. Long having been a lobbyist for the cause of suffrage, Mrs. Hooper has a clear, inside knowledge of practical politics.

Mrs. Florence D. Richard, president of the Ohio W. C. T. U., spent three days with us and gave the closing address of the convention. She handled the subject, "The Wet Woman's Part in a Dry Campaign," in her usual highly instructive and entertaining manner.

The annual report of the treasurer showed a net gain of 1,112 members and that finances are in excellent condition. We have four house-to-house workers and five organizers constantly in the field.

The retiring corresponding secretary, Mrs. E. W. Follett, was made secretary emeritus and presented with gifts in token of the love and esteem of her friends for her many years of faithful service.

We wish to send this word to the white ribbon sisters of other states: No matter what may be said by the liquor journals, the anti-prohibitionists, and certain daily papers, Wisconsin temperance people have not conceded an inch to the liquor interests. If we have failed to take new trenches, or rout the enemy, we still "hold the fort" and in God's own time "Wisconsin shall be free."

New Campaign Leaflet

"WOMEN LINE UP FOR PROHIBITION"

Refuting the charge that "mothers in many parts of the country are anxious to use their votes against prohibition." For effective use, order in quantities and distribute widely.

Price, per 100, 45 cents; per 1000, $3.75.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois

The Man of Science

never was more alert to the importance of pure vitamine-bearing cod-liver oil, as a helpful means of building health, than now Likewise

Scott's Emulsion

never had the confidence of so many friends in thousands of homes as now. Every drop of Scott's Emulsion is easily digested and helps build sturdy children and grown people.

Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J. 22-43

W. C. T. U. BADGES

Made of mother of pearl in Bethlehem. Price, 25 cents each. Orders must be accompanied by price sent by N. Y. or London draft, cashiers' cheque or foreign postal order. Coin or stamps not accepte Orders for less than two badges are refused. Address treasurer of W. C. T. U., Jerusalem, Palestine. P. O. Box 443.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS

THERE is no more fitting memorial for heroes of the Great War than the public drinking fountain.

Temperance Unions everywhere appreciate this fact and we have furnished many attractive fountains with memorial tablets designed especially for the purpose.

Write us for full information and prices.

The J. L. MOTT IRON WORKS

Fifth Avenue and Seventeenth Street, New York

A Joke—Who?

Lea Watson Walker

Mrs. Fielding settled down in her seat, determined to make the best of an unpleasant situation. The wait at the junction for the main-line train had been a long and tiresome one. For months she had anticipated taking a trip in an opposite direction. Then she had broken her eyeglasses, necessitating the expenditure for a new pair, of the money laid aside for recreation purposes.

Behind her sat two men. The one on the inside had come first. On taking her seat, she had cast a sweeping glance over his thin, lanky form. The other had entered at the first station. They had greeted each other in friendly fashion, evidently having arranged previously to sit together.

From inquiries about kinfolk and acquaintances they drifted into business talk. Both men were middle-aged and, as indicated by their conversation, possessed of means. Judging from the note of caution in the voice, guarded questions and hedgy replies of one fellow, he was an ultra conservative, of the tricky type. She concluded to call him Sneak Easy.

Every word the other uttered had the ring of a dare. His simplest statement seemed to gain his listener's closest attention. Mrs. Fielding termed him in her own mind the Sure Thing.

The scenery did not interest her and it was impossible to read without glasses. The two men talked so distinctly she could not avoid hearing what they said. At times Sure Thing made remarks she preferred not to listen to, yet to turn around and request them to lower their voices would seem senselessly prudish. After a brief lull Sneak Easy hesitatingly asked:

"Reckon we can work it?"

"Sure as shooting," declared Sure Thing. "Chisholm's got to get out."

"He has some pull, hasn't he?" returned Sneak Easy, as if to feel his way.

"Yep," snapped Sure Thing, "but not so big it can't be squelched. It's ticklish, I admit, but the pressure from the third will fix him."

Through aversion to committing himself further, Mrs. Fielding suspected, Sneak Easy blandly switched off:

"How'll the women in your county vote?"

"They're not worth considering. The poor things don't know how to get together, or stick after they come to a decision. They go entirely by their prejudices or what they hear their men folks say."

"The W. C. T. U.—that's what you call 'em, I believe—used to stand pretty close against liquor selling," Sneak Easy tentatively remarked.

"I'll hand that to 'em," agreed Sure Thing, "but the sisters must have lost their grip. Don't hear much from 'em nowadays. May be they've got an influence of sorts, but I set 'em down, politically speaking, as a joke."

Sneak Easy was seized with a coughing spell. When his throat was restored to a normal state, he solemnly requested a peach-crop estimate.

One thought fairly tumbled over another in Mrs. Fielding's mind. Chisholm? There was only one man of that name of any prominence. So Sure Thing and Sneak Easy were going to the city to lobby, hobnob and honeysnuggle among legislators to outvote Alan in order to put in some henchmen who would, in turn, appoint a train of lesser henchmen to do the bidding of the big boss, were they? The building up of the political machine about which she had been advised, warned and urged to oppose, was not mere conjecture, then, after all. There was no need to consult any Witch of Endor, either, to spot the source of its financial backing.

Oust Alan Chisholm; pressure from the third congressional district and the W. C. T. U. in Sure Thing's town a "joke," she repeated to herself over and over.

Alan Chisholm's mother was president of the W. C. T. U. in the town where he was born and reared. "Brought up" in the L. T. L., he had been educated to know the evil results of liquor drinking. He was upright and level-headed, too, and not to be drawn into any money grabbing scheme. Consequently, since the machine could not convert him into some cog, pulley or lever, he was going to be scrapped.

Lot's wife, Mrs. Fielding bade herself keep in mind, wrote a finis to her future by looking back. Not one movement, gesture or sound from her should let those two arch plotters know that any "joke" of a W. C. T. U. was present, taking notes with a steadily stiffening backbone.

One drawback continually suggested itself. Not many men, she knew from experience, will talk to a woman candidly on political matters, or treat her with the same open-minded consideration they show each other in any work in which men and women are jointly engaged. Suppose Alan Chisholm listened to her with cool courtesy, tactfully gave her to understand she was a meddlesome busybody, or, with a bow and a smile, intimated she had jumped at unwarranted conclusions.

That would be an egregious blunder on his part, she laughingly reflected, and decided the one course for her was to go ahead in the same direct, straightforward way in which she had done her share in disposing of vexatious matters heretofore.

In time the train rolled into the terminal station. Sure Thing and Sneak Easy hurried out. Following leisurely behind them, she took care not to glance their way lest they spy the little bow of white ribbon over her heart.

An hour later she was sitting opposite Alan Chisholm in his study.

"From the description you've given me I readily recognize those two men," he laughingly observed. "I could tell you volumes about their political windings and turnings, but that is neither here nor there. We want to get to work as speedily as possible. Those letters you suggested must go out on the next mail, and it will be a busy day for us tomorrow."

Three days later, on taking her seat to begin her return trip, a delivery boy entered the coach, and called her name. The box he put into Mrs. Fielding's hand proved, when she peeped under the wrapping, to be a generous-sized gift of candy. A smaller package bulged in the center and this, she found, was an engraved silver case for eyeglasses, bearing a card which said:

"May you always see as clearly and act as efficiently as you did in one special instance. A. C."

On reaching the station where she changed cars, the man she had dubbed Sure Thing stepped off ahead of her.

"Heigh, there!" shouted a man on the platform, immediately falling in step toward the waiting room. "So Chisholm got in, anyhow. How'd it happen?"

"Search me," Sure Thing grouchily replied. "If I knew I'd corner it for future use. Jim Hale says it was a bunch of women that threw in the monkey wrench. His mother belongs to that W. C. T. U. and he figured in the children's organization when he was a boy. About a dozen or so of those women pounced down on as many representatives and senators and yanked them into line right off. Got every man in the third, too. Pretty come-off, I say."

"Let's 'jine' 'em," grinned the other, slapping him on the shoulder.

"Have to, it looks like," snapped Sure Thing.

"Ah—ha! The yeast of reformation is working," chuckled Mrs. Fielding, passing on. "I don't begrudge having to buy new glasses if it has done that for you, my friends. I'm persuaded you know now who is the 'joke'."

New Patriotic Prohibition Campaign Stickers

NOW IS THE TIME TO USE THEM

HERE ARE THE TEXTS:

The 100 Per Cent American Respects and Obeys His Country's Laws.

Without Reverence for Law Nations Perish.

Prohibition Does Not Make Law Breakers, It Simply Reveals Them.

Obedience to Law is an Essential Element in Patriotism.

These stickers are of different colors and shapes. Use them wherever stickers can be used, on packages, letters, etc. Price, per 100, 25 cents, of one kind, or assorted.

Why? Why?? Why???

"WHY A MILLION MEMBERS FOR THE W. C. T. U.?"

Read the above leaflet and find out WHY! If the beer and wine forces win in the present campaign prohibition will be set back fifty years.

Order the above named leaflet and see for yourself what is the purpose of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. Buy a quantity and circulate them among your neighbors and church people. Price, per 100, 45 cents. (Please send remittance with order.)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

ROCHE'S HERBAL EMBROCATION
RELIEVES SAFELY AND PROMPTLY
CROUP OR WHOOPING COUGH
Also wonderfully effective in Bronchitis, Lumbago and Rheumatism
All druggists or
W. EDWARDS & SON, London, England
E. FOUGERA & CO., 90-92 Beekman St. N. Y.

CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT

THE UNION SIGNAL ..... $1.50 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance (monthly).....50c a year
Single Copies, 5c each; per 100 .....$2.75
Club rate for ten or more Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition subscriptions, 40c a year. No other premium allowed.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER ..... 35c a year
Single Copies, 3c each; per 100 .....$2.00

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES

THE UNION SIGNAL .....$2.00 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (monthly) .....62c a year
THE YOUNG CRUSADER .....47c a year

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL Evanston, Illinois

Clean Slates!

Della F. Withers, Circulation Manager

Do you remember away back in the very unsanitary days when school children used slates and the order given by the teachers, "Clean Slates," was followed by a display of great energy (we will draw the curtain on the scene)? At last everything was rubbed out and all was ready for a new lesson.

November 1 started a new year at National W. C. T. U. Headquarters. Figuratively speaking, "slates were cleaned," new credit cards were started, new records of gains made, begun. What a real gain will be ours if in the next twelve months we acquire greater intelligence in the performance of W. C. T. U. duties.

"Knowledge is power." Write this in large letters and place (shall we say?) in the mirror, or over the kitchen sink, so every day it will be borne in upon us that we must gain in knowledge to be workmen "that needeth not to be ashamed."

Comrades, shall we make this W. C. T. U. year more intelligent than any previous one in our history? We know you want to, and will answer emphatically "Yes."

Now, first of all, ask yourself these questions:

Will not THE UNION SIGNAL supply me with facts, figures, plans for work, encouragement, inspiration? "Yes."

Do I need what it supplies? "Yes."

Is it my duty to support our own periodicals, THE UNION SIGNAL and The Young Crusader? "Yes."

Really and truly could I not afford these papers if I sincerely wanted to? "Yes."

Shall I subscribe now? "Yes."

Shall I suggest at our very next meeting that our union become a Trio-Team union, the three officers subscribers for the weekly UNION SIGNAL, the money to be taken, if necessary, from the treasury? "Yes."

Shall I not offer a resolution that an active promoter of our periodicals be appointed, and that she report her efforts and results at the meetings? "Yes."

Clean your slate of ignorance, indifference, lack, and write boldly, knowledge, enthusiasm, plenty, whenever the call comes to progress in our good and great cause.

Will you? Please say it loud so we may hear. "YES."

TRIO TEAM COUNTY HONOR ROLL

1. Jackson County, Iowa.
2. Grady County, Georgia.
3. Boone County, Illinois.
4. Barton County, Kansas.
5. Harper County, Kansas.
6. LaPorte County, Indiana.
7. Norfolk County, Mass.
8. Jewell County, Kansas.
9. Washington County, Kansas.
10. Ohio County, West Virginia.
11. Dukes County, Mass.
12. Dubuque County, Iowa.
13. Shawnee County, Kansas.
14. Big Stone County, } Dist.
15. Stevens County, } No. 12
16. Traverse County, } Minn.
17. Winnebago County, Wisconsin.
18. Walworth County, Wisconsin.
19. Strafford County, N. H.
20. Wayne County, Georgia.
21. Dunn County, Wisconsin.
22. Faribault County, Minn. (District No. 27)
23. Winnebago County, Iowa.
24. Hamilton County, Kansas.
25. Ottawa County, Kansas.
26. Woodson County, Kansas.
27. Martin County, } Dist.
28. Watonwan County, } No.
29. Jackson County, } 3
30. Cottonwood County, } Minn.
31. Cheyenne County, Nebraska
32. Kimball County, Nebraska.
33. Norton County, Kansas.
34. Clark County, Kansas.
35. Marion County, Kansas.
36. Highland County. Ohio.
37. Upshur County, W. Va.
38. Payne County, Oklahoma.
39. Stanislaus County, California.
40. Merced County, California.
41. Deuel County, South Dakota.
42. Mills County, Iowa.
43. Union County, Iowa.
44. Dakota County, } Dist.
45. Goodhue County, } No. 26
46. Rice County, } Minn.
47. Olmsted County, } Dist.
48. Dodge County, } No.
49. Steele County, } 2
50. Waseca County, } Minn.
51. Crawford County, Kansas.
52. Cass County, Iowa.
53. Polk County, } Dist.
54. Marshall County, } No.
55. Pennington County, } 14
56. Norman County, } Minn.
57. Edmunds County, South Dakota.
58. Mower County, } Dist No.
59. Freeborn County, } 30, Minn.
60. Bell County, Kentucky.
61. Chippewa County, Wisconsin.
62. Eau Claire County, Wisconsin.
63. Blair County, Penna.
64. Ness County, Kansas.
65. Blue Earth County, Minn. (District No. 21)
66. Dawson County, Nebraska.
67. Ellis County, Kansas.
68. Woodbury County, Iowa.
69. Kingman County, Kansas.
70. Lincoln County, Montana.
71. Bay County, Florida.
72. Glades County, Florida.
73. Highland County, Florida.
74. St. Lucie County, Florida.
75. Yamhill County, Oregon.
76. Creek County, Oklahoma.
77. Grant County, Wisconsin.
78. Tulsa County, Oklahoma.
79. Loban County, Oklahoma.
80. Dallas County, Iowa.
81. Osceola County, Florida.
82. Buchanan County, Missouri.
83. Ramsey County, Dist. No.
84. Washington County 23, Minn.
85. Allen County, Kansas.

Edeson Radio Phones
Adustable Diaphragm Clearance

We guarantee satisfaction, or your money refunded. The adjustment feature places our phones on a par with the world's greatest makes. Our sales plan eliminates dealer's profits and losses from bad accounts, hence the low price. Better phones cannot be made. Immediate deliveries. Double 3000 Ohm sets, $3.98; 1500 Ohm single set, $2.50. Circular free.

Edeson Phone Co. 6 Beach St. Dept. Boston Mass.

COFFIN NAILS AND MOONSHINE

are killing our young men, boys and girls faster than war. Do your bit toward combating this evil by using our Temperance and Anti-Tobacco Post Cards liberally. Each one carries a sermon with a punch. High grade cards. Package of twenty, all different, postpaid, 25 cents. Five packages for $1.00. Satisfaction guaranteed.

UNIVERSAL SUPPLY COMPANY,
3537-33rd Avenue South. Minneapolis, Minnesota.

Keep your Youth

SLENDER lines and a springing step make you feel and look years younger. Today, to be attractive, you must have the glow of health—sparkle in your eyes—clear skin—and wholesome cleanliness.

Weigh what you Should

There is some reason if you are not well, or if you do not weigh what you should—a reason peculiar to YOU. This can be corrected—and in Nature's way, without medicine. The method is simple. With proper direction in exercise and diet you can accomplish this easily. But your exercise and diet must be suited to your needs.

Individual Instruction
—by a woman, for women

I have helped over 100,000 women to regain their health and beautiful, graceful figures. I have studied the needs of each—and to every one of them I have given individual instruction.

This has been my life work. For over 20 years I have been helping the women of America to reduce or increase their weight, to look well, feel well, BE well. They have followed my easy directions in the privacy of their homes—and the results have been positively MARVELOUS.

My Booklet Free

You, too, can weigh what you should. You, too, can keep or regain your youthful figure. Write for my free booklet illustrating how to walk, stand and breathe. Tell me your height, weight and age. If you have physical ailments, tell me about them. I never betray a confidence. If I cannot help you, I will tell you so frankly. Write for my booklet today.

I can give you a part of my exercises on phonograph records. I will send you a trial record for Fifty Cents.

Susanna Cocroft

Address Dept. 379

1819 Broadway, New York

Quick Relief to
BRONCHIAL SUFFERERS

Coughs, nasal and bronchial colds are relieved promptly by the vapor of Cresolene—the standard drugless treatment with forty years of successful use its guarantee. The most widely used remedy for whooping cough and spasmodic croup.

Introduced in 1879 Vapo-Cresolene "Used while you sleep"

Send for Descriptive Booklet 44C For Sale by Druggists
VAPO-CRESOLENE CO. 62 Cortlandt St., New York

THE UNION SIGNAL,
Evanston, Ill.

For the enclosed $....., please send THE UNION SIGNAL (weekly, monthly) to

Name.....

Street.....

City.....State.....

Price:
Weekly, $1.50 per year.
Monthly, 50c per year.
NATIONAL W. C. T. U.,
Evanston, Ill

Where Was I - - - To Get the Money?

—and then Emma Broach told me about her "Magic Purse Filler"—an ideal way to earn extra money each week without having to step out of the house.

HOW we were going to manage was worrying me almost sick. I hadn't had anything new for so long that I was getting ashamed to go anywhere. And I wanted things for the house —new curtains and a long list of other items.

Everet's teeth needed attention. So did mine. And there were some bills six months overdue.

But where was the money to come from?

We were paying for a home. That and the butcher's and grocer's bills and other necessary expenses took every cent almost as fast as Everet could earn it. No matter how we skimped and squeezed and went without, there was never anything left over.

I COULDN'T NEGLECT MY HOME

"If I could only earn some extra money!" I kept thinking. But it seemed like wishing for the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow.

Nearly every day I had my work all done by one or two o'clock or a little after. Often I was all through by ten or eleven in the morning. It seemed a shame to let all that spare time go to waste when I needed money so badly.

But what could I do?

I couldn't neglect the housework—so a place in a store or office requiring regular hours was out of the question. Except for plain mending, I couldn't sew. I knew I was not cut out for selling—and I was too sensitive about what the neighbors would say to try anything so public. Rack my brain as I would, there seemed nothing else left.

EMMA HAD A LOT OF NEW THINGS

One afternoon last spring when I was feeling blue and discouraged, Emma Broach came over. We had been friends since our school days. But we now lived so far apart that it was often a long time between visits.

Of course I was glad to see her. But I must confess that in a way she made me feel more blue and discouraged than ever. From head to heels everything she had on was new—she looked as if she had just stepped out of a fashion plate. I couldn't help envying her.

When she mentioned a little trip she had taken the week before, and some new furniture she had just ordered for her living-room, my envy doubled. I knew her husband didn't make any more than Everet. I wondered how she did it. Finally I blurted right out and asked her.

I WAS ALL EARS

"Really Helene," she answered, "I have bought so many things in the last few months that I know people must think some rich relative has left us all his money. But it's even better than that. I call it my 'Magic Purse Filler.'

"Helene," she went on. "I've found the ideal way to earn money at home—in spare time. It's so easy and interesting that it doesn't seem like work at all."

I was all ears—maybe Emma's "Magic Purse Filler" would solve my troubles, too.

"You know how popular wool hose have become," she continued. "Even in summer—for golf, tennis and other sports. And in winter everybody wants them. That's the secret of all my new things—I earn them by knitting hose."

"Oh, no!" Emma explained, in answer to my question. "Not by hand. I knit them on a wonderful little hand knitting machine—my 'Magic Purse Filler.' I can knit a pair in so short a time. And I get fine pay for every pair I make."

Mrs. Helene Himberg, 261 Wyckoff St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

EMMA TELLS THE WAY

"But who pays you?" I asked, "and how did you get started?"

"There is a concern in Rochester, New York," Emma answered, "that wants all the home-knit hose it can get—to supply to stores. You know how nearly everybody thinks genuine home-knit goods are so much better than the factory kind. It's the Home Profit Hosiery Company. You get the knitter from them. They show you how to use it—how to knit hose, sweaters and many other articles. They also furnish free yarn—it doesn't cost you a penny. You do the knitting entirely at your own convenience—sit down at the machine just whenever you feel like it. Then, as fast as you finish a dozen or more pairs, you send them to the Home Profit Hosiery Company and they send you a check. It's the easiest way to earn extra money I have ever heard of."

If Emma could do it, why couldn't I? She had a booklet with her that told all about the plan. I eagerly read every word of it, and then immediately sent for a machine.

With the machine came a book of instructions that made everything simple and clear. After a little practice—simply following directions carefully—I quickly got the knack of it and have been doing fine ever since.

MY FIRST CHECK

The first week—just sitting down at the machine whenever I had nothing else to do—I knit four dozen pairs. A few days later I received my first check—and how happy and proud I was. Since then the postman has brought me dozens of such checks—many of them for much larger amounts; but none has ever given me such a thrill as that first one did—for it meant that at last I had found the way to keep my pocketbook filled instead of empty—a way to end all the old skimping and worrying and doing without.

Operating the Home Profit Knitter looked so easy that Everet—who at first sort of pooh-poohed the whole idea—got interested and tried his hand. Now, many an evening he fills his pipe and sits down at the knitter and knits two or three or a half dozen pairs of hose before going to bed—says he would rather do it than read.

I NO LONGER HAVE TO DO WITHOUT

Before long I had all the back bills paid up and enough money to blossom out in new clothes. Also for the first time in my life I now have a little money in the bank—all my own. And the amount is steadily growing larger each month.

It's really surprising what a difference a little extra money can make. More than once I have earned enough in a single week to pay for a nice new dress. The biggest check I ever received in all my life came one week when Everet helped me every evening. Everet said last night maybe we would be better off if he were to quit his job as a painter and give all his time to knitting hose—and at that perhaps there's more truth in his remark than he realized.

MRS. HELENE HIMBERG,
261 Wyckoff St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

NOTE—The above is an actual experience. It was related by Mrs. Himberg to one of our representatives, and is printed practically in her own words. Mrs. Himberg's signed statement as to the facts is on file in our office.

IT'S HELPING HUNDREDS OF OTHERS

All over America, the Home Profit Knitter is helping girls and women (and men, too) turn their spare time into money—helping people get out of debt—helping them pay for homes—helping them dress better—helping them buy new furniture and pianos and phonographs—helping them provide for trips and vacations and other pleasures—helping them to lay up money to send their boys and girls to college—helping them build bank accounts—helping them buy cars—helping them get more comfort, more enjoyment and more self-respect out of life.

Knitting socks on the Home Profit Knitter is easy, rapid, profitable and pleasant. You can also knit sweaters, golf stockings, ladies' stockings or children's stockings, and many other articles. All you have to do is to follow the simple instructions. You can send all your work to the Home Profit Hosiery Company and get good pay for it—all on a guaranteed basis—or you can buy your yarn and sell the finished work direct to friends and neighbors and local stores just as you choose. Either way you can earn extra money every week the year round — the amount depending on how much time you give to the work.

THE MASTER KNITTER

If your regular income is not enough—if there are things you want or need—why not at least write to the Home Profit Hosiery Company and get full information? Through their simple and guaranteed plan you can easily bring an end to your worries about money—and without having to step out of the house. Use this coupon. Do it right away—it may make a difference of hundreds of dollars a year to you.

COUPON

Home Profit Hosiery Co., Inc.
DEPT. B-11 872 Hudson Ave.
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Send me full information about making money at home in my spare time with the HOME PROFIT KNITTER. I am enclosing 2 cents postage to cover cost of mailing, and I understand that I am not obligated in any way.

NAME .....
STREET .....
CITY .....
STATE .....

Write Name and Address Plainly

Home Profit Hosiery Co.

Dept. B-11

872 Hudson Avenue Rochester, N. Y.

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN

NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly — Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year in Advance

Entered as second class matter at the Postoffice at Evanston, Illinois

Vol. XLVIII — EVANSTON, ILLINOIS, NOVEMBER 9, 1922 — No. 45

(Adapted from cartoon in Sunday School Times.)

Election is over! Through your public officials, new and old, the coming year's endeavor must be concentrated upon keeping secure against the forces of evil the barrier without which home and childhood are in constant danger. "Work for enforcement where you are!"

OFFICIAL WASHINGTON

THE DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

LENNA LOWE YOST, National W. C. T. U. Legislative Representative, Washington, D. C.

The Department of Labor is steadily increasing in importance, due to the rapid growth of movements affecting industry in the United States. The Department formerly was affiliated with that of Commerce, when the unit was known as Commerce and Labor. Its growth, since Congress made it independent, and its head a member of the Cabinet of the President, apparently has justified the innovation.

Welfare of Wage Earners Fostered by Department

The Secretary of Labor is charged, briefly, with the duty of fostering the welfare of the wage earners of the United States, improving their working conditions, and advancing their opportunities for profitable employment. This is a pretty big job, but the present Secretary and his predecessors seem to have measured well up to the mark. The head of the Labor Department must be somewhat of a diplomat, as he is called upon on occasions to mediate either personally or thróugh his subordinates with men whose feelings have been aroused by real or fancied wrongs. In fact, much of the work of the Department is along mediation lines.

The present Secretary, as did his immediate predecessor, graduated from the ranks. Secretary Davis began working at the age of eleven, and learned his trade as a puddler in the iron and steel works at Sharon, Pennsylvania. At an early age he became affiliated with the union labor organization composed of employes in the iron and steel industries. This experience has qualified him for personal contact with men who earn their living by manual labor.

Duties of Department Head

The head of the Department of Labor is called upon to:

Foster and promote the welfare of wage earners;

Improve their opportunities for profitable employment;

Act as mediator and appoint commissioners of conciliation of labor disputes whenever necessary;

Collect statistics of conditions of labor and production and distribution of products of same;

Collect data from other departments and publish this information;

Supervise the immigration of aliens;

Direct child and women's welfare matters;

Direct administration of naturalization laws;

Report to the President and the Congress on the work of his department.

Activities May Extend to Other Countries

Any one of the activities to which the Labor Secretary must give his attention furnishes ample opportunities for useful and constructive work. He does not have to confine his work relative to the gathering and publication of information concerning labor to this country; he may, and is expected to, extend this activity to other countries.

The law under which the Department of Labor was created provides that at the time of the passage of the law all duties performed and all power and authority possessed or exercised by the head of any executive department in and over any bureau, office, officer, board, branch, or division of the public service, whether of an appellate or advisory character or otherwise, are vested in and exercised by the head of the said Department of Labor.

It will be seen from this language, therefore, that when a department was created for special attention to the interests of labor, anything pertaining to this work with which any other department had to do was taken up root and branch and transferred to the new executive division. A fact not generally known is that the Secretary of Labor is given authority and directed to investigate and report to Congress a plan of co-ordination of the activities, duties, and powers of the Secretary of Labor with the activities, duties, and powers of present bureaus, commissions and departments so far as they relate to labor and its conditions, for the purpose of bringing about harmonious relations, etc.

Divisions of Department

The Department of Labor has, in addition to the Secretary, an Assistant Secretary, a Chief Clerk, a Disbursing Clerk, an Appointment Clerk, a Division of Labor and Supplies, a Bureau of Labor Statistics, a Bureau of Immigration, a Children's Bureau, a Bureau of Naturalization, a Women's Bureau, and the United States Employment Service.

The particular function of each of these divisions has already been presented to the public, but much of it has been done in such a quiet way that the men and women of the country probably do not realize the extent to which it goes. Of particular interest, naturally, to the women of the nation is the work being done by the Children's Bureau and the Women's Bureau. The head of the former is Miss Grace Abbott, and of the latter, Miss Mary Anderson.

Children's Bureau

Miss Abbott, who succeeded Miss Julia Lathrop, has as her assistants Dr. Anna E. Rude, Chief of Hygiene; Miss Emma O. Lundberg, Chief of Social Service, Dr. Robert M. Woodbury, Chief of Statistics; Miss Ellen Nathalie Matthews, Chief of Industry, and Miss Katherine F. Lenroot, Chief of the Editorial Department. Miss Anderson has an assistant director of the Women's Bureau, Miss Agnes L. Peterson.

The act establishing the Children's Bureau provides that it shall investigate and report upon all matters pertaining to the welfare of children and child life among all classes of the people of this country, and shall specially investigate the question of infant mortality, the birth rate, orphanage, juvenile courts, desertion, dangerous occupations, accidents and diseases of children, employment, and legislation affecting children in the several states and territories. The bureau is also empowered to publish the results of these investigations in such manner and to such extent as may be prescribed by the Secretary of Labor.

Under this authority a vast amount of work has been done in behalf of the children of the United States. Their welfare even from the time before birth and on up through the period of babyhood and childhood is a matter of concern to the Children's Bureau. It has justified its creation many times, and gives promise of continuing to do a noble work.

Women's Bureau Deals With Women in Industry

The duty of the Women's Bureau is to formulate standards and policies to promote the welfare of wage-earning women, to improve their working conditions, increase their efficiency, and advance their opportunity for profitable employment. The bureau has authority to investigate and report to the Department upon all matters pertaining to the welfare of women in industry.

This bureau formerly was known as the Women in Industry Service. Later it became a statutory bureau by specific act of Congress. It first functioned under an item in the sundry civil appropriations bill. The army of working women, particularly in industry, is not as great as it was during the war but, as compared to pre-war standards, it is on the increase. The bureau devoted to its service, therefore, not only has con-

(Continued on Page Three)

WHAT IS AN AMERICAN?

Let me answer the question by asking and answering yet another—what Americanism is not. Americanism is not a matter of birth and ancestry, for the American is self-made, not born. Americanism, being ever in the making, is of present content and not of ancient context; is not a birthright privilege but a lifelong responsibility.

America is not a place, not a region, not a locality; America is an atmosphere, an ideal, a vision as yet unfulfilled.

No man is an American who does not place America first, before himself. He must serve America: America must not serve him. . . . He is no American who cherishes prejudices, whether these be social, or racial, or religious. All this is only another way of saying that an American is a conscious, vigilant, fraternal, unwearied creator of America who scorns the notion that America bears a charmed life, and that democracy, even though it be of the American brand, guarantees the automatic solution of its own problems.

* * * * * * * * * *

Not America for Americans, but Americans for America, and America for the world.

—Rabbi Stephen S. Wise.

Official Washington

(Continued from Page Two)

ditions of the past and of the present to consider, but so far as wage-earning women are concerned its director must consider the problems of tomorrow.

Threatened walk-outs by members of organized labor in the transportation services, and in the mining industry, one at least of which has materialized fairly recently and on a large scale, have given the Secretary of Labor and his mediation assistants tasks calling for much tact and ability. In a gratifying number of cases the Secretary has been enabled to avoid a strike. That he was not always successful may not in fairness be charged to the administration of the Department, as its history shows no stone was left unturned by it to prevent situations which were certain to have serious economic results.

United States Employment Service

One of the most valuable branches of the Department of Labor is the United States Employment Service. During the period of depression following the war, the head of this Bureau did yeoman service in finding positions for those out of employment. The branches of his office throughout the country functioned efficiently, and a vast amount of good was done. This branch continues to initiate efforts looking to the finding of employment for those out of work, and to co-operate with private and state agencies for the relief of unemployment.

All in all, the Department of Labor is a busy place, and it justifies its name. There seems plenty for all of the bureaus to do. The reports issued from time to time by each of these are readable, and many of them, particularly that having to do with immigration, are of deep human interest.

Candidates Not Proud To Have Names Endorsed by A. A. P. A.

Recently the press gave a list of candidates who were regarded by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment as being "safe" for the wet forces to put in office at the November election. It now appears that these "safe" candidates are not at all proud of the fact that they are so rated, and in fact, many of them are openly repudiating the statements made concerning them, refusing to be thus "endorsed." The Christian Science Monitor prints statements from several of these people. Charles W. Beal of Brokenbow, Nebraska, running as Democrat and Prohibition-Progressive, states, "This organization is mistaken as to my views on the liquor question. I am opposed to any modification of the Volstead Act or any backward step on prohibition." Frank Gillespie, Democratic candidate from Bloomington, Illinois, says: "My record, publicly and privately, is the other way. I also voted for woman suffrage ten years ago when in the legislature." Senator King of Utah writes his private secretary in Washington: "I am in favor of the enforcement of prohibition. The publication of my name by the Association Opposed to the Prohibition Amendment was without any authority from me. I have expressly repudiated any connection with that association or adherence to its policies or aims." Mr. Cook of Indiana states: "My position on prohibition has been misrepresented and in order that I may not be misunderstood I make the following statement: The Eighteenth Amendment prohibits the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor and if elected to Congress I shall support every law necessary to enforce it. Please give this statement publicity."

Other denials have come from various candidates, among them Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, four candidates from Missouri, and one from Oklahoma. Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League, says that this is an indication that the so-called wets are beginning to "get out from under." "These Congressmen know that the program of the Association Against Prohibition is simply a scheme to defeat the enforcement of National Constitutional Prohibition," says Mr. Wheeler. "Senator Hitchcock, former Democratic floorleader, Senator King, Congressman Humphreys and many others took this position and declared that as long as the Eighteenth Amendment is in the Constitution, they will not vote to weaken the Volstead Act."

Another Anti-Prohibition Association To "Veto Volstead"

Our attention has been called to a circular gotten out by The Practical Association, "a common law company, operating under a Declaration of Trust," with headquarters at Norfolk, Va. According to this circular, The Practical Association is organized "to utilize and consolidate public sentiment for the purpose of amending the Volstead Act and capitalize same on a commercial basis for the original shareholders." The proposition is to raise $25,000 by selling shares, the money thus secured to be used to organize clubs in every community. These clubs are to pay a specified sum and initiation fees to the "parent body." The circular goes on to state that with shares at $1.00 and each shareholder binding himself to get as many pledged voters each year as possible "signed up on a contribution basis of one dollar per year for five years and to vote for the candidate in favor of our cause," they expect to have an annual income "on conservative estimate" of more than $50,000, "enough to pay a dividend of 100 per cent and still leave an amount equal to the original capital for carrying on the work and further increase our membership."

The heading of the circular is "Veto Volstead." The proposition is held out as a good financial investment, and a scheme to work "patriotically" to do away with the prohibition law, which they term "a menace to law and order as well as to personal liberty."

Heartbreaking Scenes In Near East

A cablegram received at the Near East Relief headquarters in New York from Dr. Esther Lovejoy describes the many heart-breaking scenes she witnessed while in maternity work among the women refugees awaiting embarkation. She worked day and night caring for mothers and newly born babies. "Never was a group of babies brought into the world under stranger or sadder surroundings. Many were born on planks of the wharf where a constant stream of panic-stricken humanity surged around the mothers in their agony, protected from the crush only by the thin white line of American sailors. It was deeply affecting," says Dr. Lovejoy, "to see how the refugees on the quay coveted places nearest the American Consulate, as if they felt a sense of security under the American flag."

American Ships In Any Part Of Globe Must Bar Liquor, Says Judge Hand

American steamships cannot carry or sell liquor in any part of the world, Federal Judge Learned Hand holds in his decision dismissing the suit of two American steamship companies to enjoin enforcement of the ruling of Attorney General Daugherty in regard to prohibition on the high seas. The decision was supplemental to the one recently rendered by Judge Hand, dismissing the application of foreign ship lines attacking the validity of the Daugherty ruling which held that no ship could enter or clear from an American port with liquor on board.

"It would be a curious thing," Judge Hand said, as quoted in press reports, "if a country professing under its fundamental law to forbid the use of intoxicants were to allow them without stint upon the ships that sailed under its flag. The only distinction pressed is that consequences will be disastrous to an American merchant marine, if, of all ships at sea, ours alone are within this ban.

"In the first place, the discrimination applies only to passenger vessels, which are a small part of any merchant marine. The whole argument, however, is misconceived. The Eighteenth Amendment involves the destruction at a blow of property values far greater than that of the whole passenger fleet. The motives which directed it disregarded ordinary commercial interests. It was a reform based upon the belief that the use of alcohol was one of the greatest evils of modern life, against whose utter extirpation no present rights of property must stand. I conclude that a ship of American registry at sea or within a foreign port is within the scope of the Amendment and of section 3, and the bills must be dismissed."

Appeals from the decision of Judge Hand have been filed in the Supreme Court.

Club Women of New York City Uphold Law Enforcement

When the 972 representatives of three hundred women's clubs of New York City assembled in convention a few days ago, their stand on prohibition was made clear by the way in which it was stressed by the various speakers. An address by Mrs. William M. Potter on "Patriotism and Law Enforcement," a stirring appeal for the enforcement of law, was followed by a significant admonition by the president of the Federation, Mrs. Richard M. Chapman, "not to forget citizenship responsibilities on election day."

One People—One Union

In his address before the annual convention of the Audit Bureau of Circulation, held in Chicago, recently, Attorney General Daugherty declared that no organizations nor combination of organizations, no matter what their pretended purpose, could be above the law. "We must be one people—one union—and that the American Union," he asserted, according to the press.

Next to the home, school and church, the newspaper has the greatest power for good or evil, declared Mr. Daugherty. "Whenever a newspaper ridicules a law, plays up a policy of contempt for law and its enforcement, and in its news and editorial columns fosters lawbreaking, that newspaper is doing more to destroy American institutions than a Federal judge can do to maintain them."

DEPARTMENT OF CHILD WELFARE

Elizabeth A. Perkins, National Director

The work of the department of Child Welfare is in four principal divisions: 1. Research work as related to all phases of child life, and a campaign of information and education; 2. Specific pieces of child welfare work given immediate attention; 3. Emphasis on the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Code in their beneficent relation to child life; 4. Interesting every young mother in the program of the department, and in our organization known as Organized Mother Love.

These divisions are based on a five-pointed program, that to every child belongs the right:

To be well born
To an education
To protection from child labor
To be morally safeguarded
To spiritual training.

DIVISION 1. Research work as related to all phases of child life and a campaign of information and education.

(a) To secure surveys and studies of child laws and child conditions in the state and in the local community.

(b) To assist in promulgating the findings of the Iowa Child Welfare Research Station, in which Station, through our financial gift, we have so large an interest and part.

(c) Through our Child Study Classes, Mothers' meetings, Exhibits and Literature to disseminate child welfare information and education.

DIVISION 2. Specific pieces of child welfare work given immediate attention:

(a) The local unions will make a survey of local child needs, find what work is being accomplished, and select some specific need for attention and help.

DIVISION 3. Emphasis on the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Code in their beneficent relation to child life:

(a) Emphasize to parents and to child welfare workers the fact that the Eighteenth Amendment has accomplished more for child welfare than can ever again be accomplished through any single measure.

(b) Through our literature, law-enforcement exhibits, and the ballot, work for the enforcement of the prohibition laws.

DIVISION 4. Interesting every young mother in the program of the department and in our organization known as Organized Mother-Love:

(a) We need EVERY YOUNG MOTHER to stand with Organized Mother-Love against the enemies of children; mothers who shall say, "The legalized liquor traffic in any form, under any guise SHALL NEVER RETURN."

(b) We have much to give EVERY YOUNG MOTHER—Our research findings, our literature, our special papers, our friendship and help for expectant mothers, our mothers' meetings, all these we have to give to the young mother.

STUDY THESE DIVISIONS—STUDY THE PROGRAM OF SERVICE

FIND WORK FOR YOUR UNION IN THIS CHART

RESEARCH WORK:
Study state and community child laws.

WHITE RIBBON RECRUITS:
Use Special Consecration Service.

CHILD WELFARE EXHIBITS:
Attractive—educational. Where? Everywhere.

CHILD WELFARE LITERATURE:
We have it—on physical, moral or spiritual up-building.

STORY HOURS:
Study the Story Hour; What to tell—How to tell it.

W. C. T. U.
CHILD STUDY CLASSES,
Open to all women.

MOTHER-CHILD CENTERS,
DAY NURSERIES.

BE BIG SISTERS TO EXPECTANT MOTHERS.

FURNISH A LOAN
MOTHERS' COMFORT KIT
for emergency cases, and layettes.

PLACE CHILD WELFARE
BULLETINS IN LIBRARIES.

MOTHERS' MEETINGS:
Small children cared for in separate rooms.

SAFEGUARD THE CHILDREN
LAW ENFORCEMENT EXHIBITS

INDIVIDUAL AND GROUP STUDY of our
TWO SPECIAL PAPERS EACH MONTH.

CHILD WELFARE POSTER CONTEST either among children or adults.

ENLIST EVERY YOUNG MOTHER
as a MEMBER of the W. C. T. U.

WHY THERE SHOULD BE NO WINE AND BEER A MENDMENT TO THE VOLSTEAD ACT

Cora Frances Stoddard

> Our government can only be what the people make it. Enlightened, informed public opinion means enlightened, informed government. Worth while citizens who realize their obligations to their government do not set themselves up as superior to the law, or in the name of personal liberty flaunt the laws created by those chosen by all the people to think and act sanely and honestly in their behalf.
>
> —Attorney General Daugherty.

1. Restoring beer and wine would re-establish the liquor traffic. Selling agencies, whether called saloons or by some other name, would become agencies for organizing the liquor traffic into a position where it could again exert political power for legislation to further its own interests. "I think the movement to get beer and wine back is in the interest of the open saloon," wrote a Lansing (Michigan) banker to the editor of the Manufacturers' Record. "Politicians can corral votes better and cheaper that way, hence the drive."

"To stop commercialization of strong drink it is necessary to include weak drinks," wrote another contributor to the symposium. "I stand upon the platform of prohibition of the commercialization of debauching products. While drinking may be a matter of personal freedom, the commercialization of intoxicants is a matter of community, in distinction from personal, concern."

2. It would bring back the same degrading influences as those exerted by the old saloon. An investigator in Sydney, Australia, visited 16 "wine bars" and counted in them 126 women and girls, all drinking, and many of them were intoxicated. Some had children in their arms. These wine shops are described by Smith's Weekly (April 1, 1922) as "noisome dens where vice runs riot. The average Sydney wine shop is a dirty and demoralizing thing where there can be no allurement except for the drunken and debased."

"To allow light wines and beer to be made would be to unlock a door that is now securely locked; once unlocked, the door would be wide open and we would go back to the same old rotten conditions."—F. M. Hodge, President Kalamazoo Paper Company, in the Manufacturers' Record.

"I do not see how any man having proper regard for the best interests of his country could conscientiously vote to bring liquor back or vote to license the sale of light wines and beer, which would in the end in actual results be the same thing."—R. T. Jones, President Canton Cotton Mills, Ga.

"I am confident, if any weakness in the enforcing of the Prohibition Amendment were shown, in the way for example of allowing wine and beer to be sold, we would have a return of the saloon at once."—James C. Egbert, Columbia University, New York City.

3. It would open the door to the illicit sale of whisky, rum and other distilled liquors under cover of the wine or beer.

"The idea that the present evils of bootlegging could be mitigated by restoring the sale of wines and beers, if such a thing were possible, is pure rubbish. It would be a great deal easier to sell whisky, brandy and gin as the legitimate side partners of legalized beer and wine than it is today, and no man has yet suggested a method of legalizing the sale of beer and wines that would not bring back on our heads the whole foul horde of the liquor industry."—W. T. Beatty, President and General Manager of the Austin Manufacturing Company, Chicago, Ill.

"I found in countries such as Norway, Sweden, Belgium, and Finland," reports Mr. Samuel Adams, who was commissioned by the American Farm Bureau Federation to investigate the liquor problem in these countries, especially in relation to the sale of wines and beer, "where the sale of whisky, gin, brandy, etc., was prohibited, or the sale was supposed to be controlled by a permit system, or sale allowed only in bottles not to be opened on the premises, that the strong alcoholic drinks were sold illegally and freely at the cafes, hotels, beer gardens, and other places that were licensed to sell only light wines and beer. My investigation showed that it is impossible to separate the sale of light wines and beer from the strong alcoholic drinks, and that in the places where light wines and beer were permitted to be sold were to be found many immoral women who frequented them to secure their victims.

"In other words, the places that could legally only sell light wines and beer were flagrantly violating the laws of their country, and were securing a large part of their revenue and profit from the illegal sale of unlawful liquor."—Christian Science Monitor (Oct. 26, 1922).

4. It would nullify the Eighteenth Amendment by preventing its enforcement. The object and purpose of the Volstead Act is to provide for the proper enforcement of the prohibition amendment. Its provisions were carefully worked out from the experience of the states in enforcing state prohibition or other liquor laws. As experience had shown the necessity of including beer and wine, they were so included by the adoption of a standard of alcoholic strength similar to that already in force in most of the states. Exempting beer and wine from the national prohibition law would nullify it without removing it from the statute books. Such nullification would create disrespect for all law as well as for this particular law.

"Any juggling with the question, such as permission to sell and use light wines and beer, would be as pernicious as the repeal of the whole amendment."—Dr. John M. Dodson, Dean of the Medical College and University of Chicago.

"It would be unthinkable for any amendment to be adopted permitting beer and light wines, because it would be nothing more or less than an acknowledgment of the inability of America to enforce her laws."—Harry H. Willock, Secretary and Treasurer of the Waverly Oil Works, Pittsburgh, Pa.

5. It would injure general trade in the interests of the liquor trade. The money spent for beer and wine would lower the standard of living in thousands of families to what it was in pre-prohibition times; it would cause a falling off in the purchase of the necessities of life; this in turn would lessen the demand for labor in their production.

"We do not want to see wine and beer industries saddled on the country because of the economic problems involved, in addition to the well known hygienic objections to the use of alcoholic beverages."—Warren P. Lombard, Professor of Physiology, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor.

6. It would bring direct injury to health and general welfare, because wine and beer are not harmless drinks. Even the first slight effects, the pleasant effects for which the drinker desires wine or beer instead of non-alcoholic drinks, weaken judgment, self-control and the power of self-criticism.

The late Sir G. Sims Woodhead of Cambridge used to tell a story illustrative of the narcotic action of alcohol in connection with his old college chief at Glasgow University. On the last evening of the term there was an evening party of students and friends, with dinner, wine, addresses, and song. The wine worked the brain changes, the "self-consciousness and self-criticism" disappeared, and the "well-being" became aggressive in the following fashion, as Woodhead's chief used to express it: (1) At the beginning of the banquet one was talking and all were listening; (2) halfway through, many were talking, and few were listening; (3) at the end, all were talking and nobody was listening.

Alcohol effects brain changes, paralyzing the judgment centers, and sets free a torrent of inflated garrulous talk, not seldom running into obscenity and quarrels. That is the "social outlook" engendered of alcohol, and as far as the change has taken place, sanity has given place to insanity.—British Temperance Advocate (September, 1922).

7. Beer and wine are the beverages with which the drink habit begins. Their return would mean a new generation of drinkers. One of the injurious effects of the weaker liquors is the gradually increasing desire for larger amounts of alcohol, which grows out of the effects of smaller amounts. Vance Thompson, who has lived and traveled extensively in the wine-drinking countries of southern Europe, calls wine a starter for the stronger alcoholic drinks.

"The only reason a man drinks," he says, "and I don't care whether it is wine he drinks or beer, is to get alcohol into his system. There is an immense amount of hypocrisy about this wine drinking business. You will hear pompous old men talking about 'rare vintages' and wagging their heads over the 'bouquet.' The fact remains that they drink it for the sake of the alcohol. The wine-drinker downing his eight or ten or fifteen per cent of alcohol is only a few laps behind the brandy drinker who goes in for forty or fifty per cent of the same thing....He drinks in order to get the intoxicating effect of the beverage, no matter whether it is beer, wine or whisky. What the wine drinker is really doing is taking his dose of alcoholic poison in the way that pleases best his palate and gives him the precise degree of intoxication that he wants. And mark this: He is a good little drunkard in the making. Of course he will tell you that he is a 'moderate drinker.' All right. What of it? Moderate drinking is a stage; it is not a fixed point.

"There is no moderate drinker who is not going on to the next stage of his journey—unless he has bone and courage enough to halt and turn and get back to the world of sober people. The wine-drinker is always going on. His goal is precisely that of the whisky drinker—only he isn't going quite so fast. He is going to the same goal of mental and physical degradation."

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE OBSERVANCE OF IMMIGRANT'S DAY, DECEMBER FOURTH

Culla J. Vayhinger, National Director Americanization

The National Educational Association and American Legion have sent out a program in the making and carrying out of a part of which our department of Americanization has been asked to co-operate. It is for the observance, as Immigrant's Day, of December 4, in American Education Week, which is Dec. 3-9.

Sunday, Dec. 3—For God and Country—Ministers urged to preach on education.

Monday, Dec. 4—American Citizenship Day—Immigrant's Day—in which we are asked to co-operate and suggestions for the observance of which are found herewith.

Tuesday, Dec. 5—Patriotism Day.

Wednesday, Dec. 6—School and Teacher Day.

Thursday, Dec. 7—Illiteracy Day. Slogan, "No illiteracy in 1927!"

Friday, Dec. 8—Equality of Opportunity Day.

Saturday, Dec. 9—Physical Education Day. Slogan, "Athletes All!"

We were asked for suggestions for the observance of Immigrant's Day, Dec. 4, and gave some of the following, which we pass on to you:

1. Ask the teacher to send a letter to the foreign-born mothers of her pupils, inviting them to visit the school on that day. Have the child introduce the mother to the teacher and then show her about the building. It will probably be the first time she has ever been inside of it and so will all be new and interesting.

2. Offer some recognition to the room getting out the largest per cent of mothers of this class.

3. Help prepare an interesting and instructive program of music and recitations to be given by the children. Have each pupil name one noted American born in the country of his father or mother and if possible tell something of what he has done.

4. Where it can be done, inject into the program something of temperance truth by song, recitation, repetition of the pledge or the yell of the L. T. L. This is a wonderful opportunity for co-operation that will count for our principles.

5. Have a short spicy talk in the simplest possible English on "America—Our Opportunity and Our Responsibility."

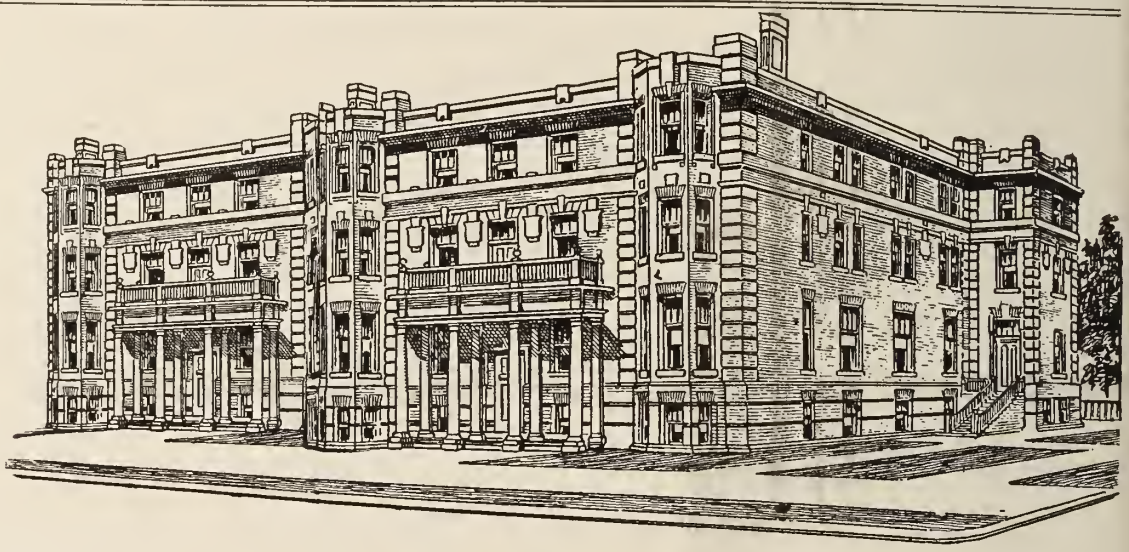
6. Encourage the children to help the mothers learn English and urge the mothers to register for English with some agency doing this work, Explain to them how to become citizens.

7. Let the pupils of each nationallty sing a verse of their National Hymn, then close wlth "America," in which all join.

8. Place the flag in a prominent position and see that every child shows it due respect. Decorate the room with branches and flowers where possible and with pictures and posters meaningful for the day.

SEE THE TEACHERS AND THE LEADER OF THE AMERICAN LEGION. LET THEM KNOW THAT WE ARE CO-OPERATING FROM THE NATIONAL DOWN IN THE OBSERVANCE OF THIS DAY, AND OFFER YOUR SERVICES. DO NOT FAIL TO DO IT NOW!

Canadian Memorial to Frances E. Willard



Among the many buildings that have been named after Frances E. Willard, the one located in Toronto, Canada, deserves special mention. The new wing of Willard Hall, which has been in construction for some months, was recently formally opened, Mrs. F. C. Ward, president of the Toronto District W. C. T. U., the organization which "planned for, worked for and prayed for the extension of the hall," presiding. As a home for young girls, the building is a model of completeness, comfort and convenience. The sleeping apartments are located on the second, third and fourth floors, with a limited number on the ground floor, and are designed for one, two or three occupants. Sunlight penetrates to every corner of every apartment at some time during the day. A well-equipped laundry, situated at the top of the building, is at the disposal of the girl boarders. In the basement is a huge swimming tank, with shower baths and dressing rooms nearby and in the older part of the basement is a fine gymnasium. Charges for accommodation in this ideal establishment vary from $6.00 to $8.00 per week, according to the number in a room.

When "Scotch" Loses Its Flavor

If the statements of the defendants of the right to maintain a "wet" ship subsidy were to be believed, the "dry" ships are empty, and the ships with bars are overcrowded, the three-mile limit being scarcely reached when the bars are crowded with drinkers. But in spite of the talk of "personal liberty," S. Fred Hogue, correspondent of the Los Angeles Daily Times, writing from London, tells us that Americans are being won over to prohibition "in spite of themselves," and are not taking advantage of the opportunities that prevail in other countries to secure liquors of all sorts. "On the high seas, in Great Britain, and on the continent," says Mr. Hogue, "their conversation is wet, but their habits are decidedly dry." He goes on to substantiate his statements by the following:

"The American bars in the Strand hotels are so little patronized that they are likely to be closed before the season is over, although the hotels themselves are fairly overflowing with Americans.

"'It was not so before the war, sir,' the head barkeeper of the Cecil informed me: 'Then business was excellent. The Americans are here now. I never saw so many of them; but they seem to have gotten out of the habit of drinking, sir. We have more Canadian and Australian customers than Americans.'

"A similar complaint was made to me by the buffet steward on the ocean liner 'France,' which brought me across. He said that they did not sell more than one-third as much liquor per trip as they did in 1913.

"I had expected a great rush for the clubroom when we should cross the three-mile limit, and I went into the lounge an hour after we had dropped the pilot, expecting to find it crowded. But a single table was occupied and the three guests were talking French.

"There were about 250 Americans among the first cabin passengers; but they spent little time in the lounge, and I did not see a single case of intoxication.

"There is something puzzling about the way the average American of the good-fellow class talks when he is in his home town and the way he acts when as much drink as he may desire can be had for the ordering. The psychology of the situation is somewhat bewildering.

"I can only relate my own experience, and it seems to be that of the average American who travels abroad. When I

(Continued on Page Twelve)

W. C. T. U. REPRESENTATIVES FROM OVERSEAS GIVE IMPRESSIONS OF PROHIBITION AMERICA

One of the first questions asked the visitors and delegates to the World's W. C. T. U. Convention who come from overseas is, "What is your impression of the United States under prohibition?" The answers, as given in interviews, are unanimous in one respect—that in marked contrast with non-prohibition countries, virtually no intoxicated persons are to be seen in our cities.

LOOKED LIKE A CITY THAT HAS HAD ITS FACE WASHED

Mary Campbell, World's W. C. T. U. organizer and worker in India under five years' commission, in this country for a short furlough, declared she had searched diligently for corroboration of the statements made by the pro-liquor press as to the disastrous effects of prohibition, but failed to find anything to warrant the unfavorable assertions. "What I have said over and over again when asked my impression of prohibition in the United States," said Miss Campbell, "is that when I first landed in New York and looked around, comparing it with the last time I had seen it, it looked to me like a city that had had its face washed, for I no longer saw all the old dirty saloons and the liquor advertisements. That was the impression made upon me when I reached Chicago, with its more than 7,000 saloons no longer in evidence, and so with all America. Of course I know there is drinking carried on illegally, but outwardly everything is different from ante-prohibition days.

"I have been impressed also with the appearance of the poorer people, who are so well dressed, and cannot help contrasting America with India and its poverty."

"Have you seen much drunkenness since you reached the United States?" Miss Campbell was asked. "I have not seen one drunken person," replied Miss Campbell emphatically, "and I have journeyed from Topeka, Kansas, on the west, to Newport, Rhode Island, on the east, and as far south as Knoxville, Tennessee. I have been traveling almost every day, and not an intoxicated individual have I seen. The nearest to it was the smell of liquor on the breath of my colored porter in the Pullman. I have gone into all sorts of cafeterias and cheap lunch rooms, to see if I could find anything out of the way, and I haven't found it. Whatever drinking is done is out of sight.

"I was interested in the conversation of my fellow passengers on the 'Lapland,' the steamship on which I came over from Europe. Early in the voyage, some of the Americans claimed rather loudly that they could get liquor whenever they wanted to in the United States. I immediately took out my note book and said, 'Please give me the names of the places where one can get liquor, also the street and number.' They said, 'Oh, no, we wouldn't give them away like that.' Six days passed and on the last one before we reached New York, they urged each other to drink all the beer they wanted, saying, 'You will not get any more now that we are coming to dry America.' 'Oh,' I exclaimed, 'I don't understand. Can't you get liquor in the United States?' 'Don't you know the United States is dry?' they replied. 'But I thought one could get it anywhere,' I retorted. How they glared at me! But I had to go down to Rhode Island, one of the two states that has not ratified the Eighteenth Amendment, to be convinced that prohibition in the United States has come to stay. While there I was taken by an English Methodist for a drive about beautiful Newport and we talked about the benefits of prohibition. I asked him if he saw any improvement in Newport and he said, 'Yes, indeed. We had fifty open saloons and many speakeasies. We then had ever so many more speakeasies than we now have bootleggers, because the bootleggers have far more trouble hiding than did the speakeasies of the old saloon days, for they could hide under the shadow of the open saloon. I would not touch liquor, but while I am not radical, that is the way I see it.'"

NINETY-NINE DRUNKEN MEN SEEN IN SWEDEN TO ONE IN U. S. A.

"You have just come from Sweden, where some of the residents claim they have an ideal system of restriction or regulation. What do you think of it compared with our national prohibition method?" Mrs. Lydia Johnson was asked upon her return to this country.

"There is no comparison," replied Mrs. Johnson. "In Sweden, drinking is taken as a matter of course in social intercourse among certain classes of people. They claim one cannot have a good time without it. My year's visit in Sweden convinces me that no half way measures will reduce the consumption of liquor. Under the present system any head of a family can have from two to four litres a month. Mr. Bratt, the author of the system, is said to have acknowledged that it has not accomplished what he expected. There is a great deal of violation of the law, through the use of other people's books. There is also a great deal of smuggling of liquor from other countries. One of the arguments raised against prohibition is that it would result in the smuggling of large quantities of liquor. It could hardly be worse in this respect than at present."

"How about drunkenness as compared with this country?" was asked. "There is no comparison," was the reply. "I should say that we saw ninety-nine drunken men over there to one in this country. As a matter of fact we have seen only one intoxicated man since we returned and we have traveled quite a little—that man was in New York."

"How about drinking on the boat on which you came over?" "We sailed on the 'Stockholm' of the Swedish-American line," said Mrs. Johnson, "and there was very little drinking, none at our table. One of the men told us that the use of liquor on this line had greatly lessened since America had prohibition."

GOOD TO SEE BAKERIES, CANDY SHOPS IN PLACE OF SALOON

"The outstanding change in our beloved country which appealed to me most after our two years' sojourn in Syria," said Mrs. Elizabeth V. Perrine, "was the absence of the ever-present corner saloon of the old days. As to the many benefits we have observed as a result of prohibition, I am afraid I can say nothing more convincing, nor add anything new to what has already been said as to changes wrought by the Eighteenth Amendment, even though imperfectly enforced.

"Since our return we have seen few intoxicated men and no women. It is a great satisfaction to have the odor of beer eliminated as we walk our streets. The buildings formerly occupied by saloons on our most prominent thoroughfares have been rented for other purposes—bakeries, candy shops, florists, etc.

"But the greatest change for the better, I believe, is the moral influence which the abolishing of the liquor traffic will have on our rising generation. We trust and hope and pray and vote that there may be no modification of our present prohibition law."

AUSTRALIANS HEAR TESTIMONY FROM CONVERTED ANTIS

"We came by way of San Francisco, for we were specially desirous of seeing a big city that had been under license before national prohibition," said Mr. and Mrs. MacLeod of Australia. "We were astonished at the quiet in the streets and the general order prevailing everywhere. We passed through Los Angeles, Denver and Kansas City and spent some time in Chicago, and everywhere we noticed this orderliness. We have been impressed by the testimony of a good many men we have met who are not abstainers and who were not for prohibition, but who now believe in it. Several Americans on the boat and others in the towns we have visited and also on the trains have so spoken. A prominent business man of Chicago was one of them. He declared saloons will never come back. 'The advantages of prohibition are too evident. I have a boy fifteen coming on, and so I am going to vote dry.'

"An American gentleman who boarded the boat at Pago Pago, Samoan Islands, said he was a Chicago musician, but had lived in various parts of Germany, and admitted that he had taken drinks on special occasions 'to show that he was not a fanatic.' Nevertheless, he was greatly in favor of prohibition, for he had observed that it promoted efficiency." Mrs. MacLeod, who by the way is the president of the Australian W. C. T. U., is deeply interested in the Travelers Aid. She asked every representative of that organization along the way from the Pacific Coast to Chicago their opinion of the dry law, and all testified that it had improved conditions greatly.

REPRESENTATIVE FROM BURMA SEES MARKED IMPROVEMENT

Mrs. F. King Singiser, recently returning after several years' absence in Burma, says:

"Testifying as to the benefits that have come as a result of prohibition, since my return to America I have noted: (1.) The improved material conditions of the poorer class of citizens, in all communities; (2.) the improved prosperity and happiness of families within my own knowledge hitherto impoverished owing to the drink evil; (3.) absence of the beggar class; (4.) the changed character of those who frequent the mission halls in our large cities; (5.) the absence of loafers and bums, together with their drunken brawls, around the saloons, who formerly made themselves obnoxious to all passersby; (6.) the striking transformation in the celebration of our great holidays—Fourth of July, Labor Day, Christmas and New Year's."

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union
Evanston, Illinois

Editor-in-Chief - - - Miss Anna A. Gordon
Managing Editor - - Miss Julia F. Deane
Associate Editor - - Miss Vida I. Thompson

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors of The Editorial Department, The Union Signal, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittance of $1.50 or under.

Notice of Expiration is sent to the subscriber two or three weeks before renewal is due, so that by immediate attention to this reminder not an issue need be missed. RENEW PROMPTLY.

Remittances should be made by draft on New York or Chicago, or by Post-office Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

Change of Address. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE, $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
Foreign Postage, 52 Cents Additional

Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (Monthly) 50c a Year
Foreign Postage, 12 Cents Additional

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., post-office as second lass matter. Acceptance for mailing at special ate of postage provided for in Section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized August 20, 1918.

Evanston, Illinois, November 9, 1922

As we go to press the citizens of this great nation are registering their sentiments on vital issues at the ballot box. By the time THE SIGNAL reaches our readers they will know through the general press the outcome. If the good people of this country have been true to their civic obligations they have gone to the polls in large numbers and have expressed themselves in an overwhelming majority for a dry Congress and officials pledged to the enforcement of our prohibition laws.

The Clans Are Gathering

The last of this week the delegates and visitors to our World's and National conventions will assemble in Philadelphia. The "White Ribbon Special" on the Pennsylvania Road will leave Chicago Friday morning, November 10, at ten o'clock, carrying many of the National Headquarters workers and delegations from the West. On arriving at Washington Saturday morning, they will be met by a company of District of Columbia white ribboners, who will entertain them at luncheon. Sightseeing cars, at reasonable rates, will be available for those who desire to see the Capital City and environs. The party will leave on the afternoon train for Philadelphia, reaching there in time for the reception at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel that evening.

What Shall the Answer Be?

Colonel Gillett of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment is reported to have said: "Give us $100,000 a year for four years and we'll ruin the Volstead Act. Give us $100,000 a year for six years and we'll blow the Eighteenth Amendment out of the Constitution."

What is the answer of the temperance forces to this challenge? Give us the prayers and the devoted service of the Christian men and women for four years, and we'll create such a cyclone of public sentiment for national prohibition, that it will blow the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment out of the United States.

Give us the prayers and devoted service of the Christian men and women for six years, and we'll blow the liquor traffic off the face of the civilized world!

A. A. P. A. Consistency

There is one way to prove that a law upon the statute books is unworthy to remain there—it is to enforce it to the last jot and tittle of its provisions. If it is a bad law, such a course will bring about its speedy repeal by the voters. The San Francisco Examiner, in a somewhat belated appeal to the voters of California to "approve the Wright Act," calls attention to the shortsightedness of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment in opposing it. "People who don't believe in prohibition, as well as those who do, should vote for the Wright Act. It is likely to bring any existing dissatisfaction with prohibition to a climax, and obviously that is what the non-prohibitionists want. If the Wright Enforcement Act will help toward that end, then even more obviously they should favor that act."

Rather a neat challenge to the sincerity of purpose of the anti-prohibitionists, is it not? Do they really want prohibition subjected to the acid test of rigid enforcement? Then why didn't they join with the drys in demanding the passage of enforcement laws and then work to make those laws effective? The reason is self-evident. They are afraid to have this done, for they know well from the history of state prohibition that wherever the law has had half a chance to show what it could do for a community, it has won such high approval that it has forever silenced its enemies. For example, in the state of Kansas, where the dry law has been given an opportunity to demonstrate its value, public sentiment is so overwhelmingly in its favor that a candidate who attempts to run for any office on a wine or beer platform is a joke and stands no more show of election than would one who stood for the return of slavery.

A Postscript of Particular Import

Recently all former graduates of the University of Wisconsin were sent a letter, asking for their presence at the 1922 Homecoming. To those who are proud of the fact that their undergraduate days were spent in this school, an additional reason for pride in their alma mater is found in the postscript accompanying the invitation:

"We are asking your fullest co-operation in helping to dissociate Homecoming and Booze. Every drink taken at that time is a blow at Wisconsin ideals; leave it at home."

Could anything speak more clearly of the growth of sentiment for prohibition and for observance of law? If this home-coming gathering condoned, if not actually fostered "hip liquor," the influence upon a group of students at the most impressionable period of their growth would have a most serious effect upon the future of the great commonwealth of Wisconsin. This request will have an influence which will mean much, we feel sure, in encouraging a development along lines of law and order which some have believed almost impossible for such a "thirsty" state.

If Beer Should Return

If the voters who were persuaded to cast their ballots in favor of candidates endorsed by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment could have been made to foresee the actual result if the law were modified to permit the return of beer, it might have given them pause.

William P. Goodsmith, former medical director of the Washingtonian Home of Chicago, gives us a glimpse of what he believes, from his long experience with inebriety, would follow the return of the beer regime. "My personal experience and the records of the institution with which I was connected, containing thousands of cases treated during the nearly sixty years of its existence, show that practically every patient commenced with the use of intoxicants of a low alcoholic content, and if the Volstead Act is amended so as to allow light wines and beers it will be necessary for the association to build at once."

It will be remembered that with the coming of national prohibition the Washingtonian Home in the city of Chicago, which for years had been filled to capacity with the victims of that city's 7,000 saloons, was obliged to close because of lack of patrons. What more significant commentary can be made on the proposition of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment that beer is non-intoxicating and the legalizing of the brewing business will make possible the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment.

What Is Your Reply?

We stand at the threshold of another year's work. What will the next twelve months hold in the way of progress for our local and National W. C. T. U.? Or better, what will the organization be able to accomplish in the way of service to the various communities? We may find the reply to this in the answer we are compelled to make to the following queries:

How long would it take my community to become law-abiding if every other resident obeyed every law and regulation just as well as I do?

How long would it take to make the whole nation perfectly obedient, and cheerfully and intelligently so, to the prohibition laws, if all members of the W. C. T. U. gave of their time and prayers and knowledge and money as I do?

How long would it take to make the whole world "dry" if all W. C. T. U. members worked as hard to make it so as I do?

Let us test ourselves in another way as to our work, and our value to the cause we wish to promote. Perhaps the request comes to us to serve on a committee, to gain new members, to lead a meeting, to serve in some other way. During the past month, when the call has come, what has been your reply?—"I will not"; "I can't"; "I don't know how"; "I wish I could"; "Perhaps I will"; "I can do it later"; "I'll think about it"; "I'll let you know"; or "I'll do it!"

Perhaps a new year's resolution would be quite in keeping with our glance at the opportunities of the coming year—and a prayer that the Lord's Kingdom may not fail of coming or His will of being done, because we do not do our part.

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA, NOVEMBER 11-15, 1922
NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION, PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA, NOVEMBER 16-19, 1922.

Miss Lella Sewall Honored by France

In recognition of aid given the French war orphans through the Flower Mission and Relief department of the National W. C. T. U., Miss Lella M. Sewall, national superintendent, has received from France an appropriately designed medal, the gift of the national organization of the Pupilles de la Nation.

The letter accompanying the medal reads as follows: "We consider it a great honor and privilege to present you with this symbol of France's gratitude to those who have served and helped our fatherless little children. Through the Fraternite Franco-Americaine and through thousands of our widows and orphans, we have heard of the magnificent work achieved by you on their behalf. Allow us to join our heartiest thanks to theirs and with this small token of our everlasting gratitude, accept the assurance of our admiration and of our true friendship."

Wedding Bells Ring for Frances Wang

Invitations in both English and Chinese to the wedding of Frances Willard Wang were recently received at National W. C. T. U. Headquarters and Rest Cottage and warm congratulations have been sent to the newly established home in Shanghai of Dr. and Mrs. Herman C. E. Liu. A late letter from our organizer in China relates that the brief honeymoon trip was largely spent in attendance on the meeting of the national committee of the Chinese Y. M. C. A., to whom Dr. Liu, as the chairman of the educational department, submitted his plan and a budget.

Ten days after her marriage, Mrs. Liu resumed her duties as Student Secretary of the Chinese W. C. T. U. and writes enthusiastically of the added power for work that has come into her life. Dr. and Mrs. Liu will be traveling much of the time, he for the promotion of the Y. M. C. A. and she for the W. C. T. U. The heartfelt interest these gifted and consecrated young people feel in one another's activities is really the bond that has united them, and their home is a shining light in a country where thousands have still to learn that a Christian marriage unites "two heads in counsel, two beside the hearth."

W. C. T. U. Doing the Finest Kind of Work, Says Bishop

Bishop Thomas Nicholson of the Methodist Episcopal Church, writing to our National W. C. T. U. president, says: "I follow the work of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union with unabated interest. We surely need your women at this time, and everywhere I find they are doing the finest kind of work. We have a big fight before us and we rejoice more than I can tell you in the splendid co-operation which your great organization gives under your noble and efficient leadership."

Articles of Interest in Current Periodicals

"Eliminate Flapperism, Male and Female," an editorial by Barton W. Currie; "The Machine and the Woman," by Harriet Taylor Upton; "Harnessing Industry With the Vote: What Can Women Do for the Women and Children Who Work?" by Elizabeth Fraser; "What Our Schools Will Be in 1932," by Charles A. Selden; in Ladies' Home Journal for October.

"Child Labor on the Farm," by Raymond G. Fuller; "Your Children and Their Books," by Frances Pierce White; "The Rights of the Unborn," Harvey W. Wiley, M. D.; "Letters from a Senator's Wife," by Frances Parkinson Keyes; in Woman's Home Companion for October.

"The Good Citizenship Bureau" and "Campaigning with Women Candidates," by Anna Steese Richardson, in the Woman's Home Companion for November.

"As this article goes to the printers, we are informed that:

"721 women in twenty-six states are holding political offices to which they were elected by the votes of their fellow citizens;

"356 other women are serving in executive or administrative capacity in state, county or municipal government because their appointment was demanded by the combined man-and-woman vote; and

"215 women are running for office in the November elections, particularly for state legislatures and U. S. Congress.

"These figures, furnished by political committees and women's organizations, I believe to be conservative. They are also representative, because they were gathered in city and rural communities alike—East, West, North and South."

"Don't Believe All You Read Against Prohibition," editorial; "Remember Child Labor," by William Frederick Bigelow; "The Hearthold of the Household," by Anne Shannon Monroe; "Letters from a Senator's Wife," by Frances Parkinson Keyes; "Child Labor in Our Cities," by Raymond G. Fuller; in November Good Housekeeping.

"Making Home Work Count," by Angelo Patri; "The Lady of Moonlight," by Charles Hanson Towne; in the November Delineator.

"Am I My Sister's Keeper?" editorial by Ida Clyde Clark in the November Pictorial Review.

"Let us remember then that we are our sisters' keepers. That so long as any innocent women and children suffer in the coal-mines or the railroad centers or the industrial world, there is something for us to think about, something for us to do. Just as women, working with men, have done much to bring statesmen to see that arbitration is the sane method of settling international disputes, and that war is hideously cruel and appallingly expensive, so women can convince labor and capital that there must be some way of settling honest differences except by strike. We are our sisters' keepers!"

For God and Home and Every Land

Time of Prayer—Noontide

"It is always noontide somewhere,
And across the awakening continents,
From shore to shore, somewhere,
Our prayers are rising ever more."

How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things! Romans 10.15.

The Gathering of the Clans

They are coming, they are coming!
The all-conquering hosts of God!
Fair, white lilies, springing stately,
Mark the paths their feet have trod.
From the far-off Afric plain lands;
From dark mountains, and from sea;
From far islands, and from main-lands,
March God's hosts to victory!

They are coming, they are coming!
Heart to heart and hand to hand;
Best and truest from all nations,
Our own brave white-ribbon band!
One, though far-off seas divide them;
One, though first e'en now they meet;
One in thought, and one in purpose,
One in service—bond most sweet!

How our hearts rise sweet to meet them,
White-robed children of the light!
Gladly would we strew with roses,
Each step of their pathway bright.
Gladly do we hail their coming
As a foretaste of that day
When as one, all climes shall gather
'Neath our Master's glorious sway.

Oh! our ears have caught the music
Wafted from the heights above;
"God is love, and he is God-like,
Only he, who lives to love."
Love is service—fullest, freest,
Seeking naught, but giving all,
Pouring forth in glad libation
Life itself at duty's call.

They are coming, they are coming!
Marching to this music sweet;
What though long the road and weary,
What thought now of bleeding feet?
God is guiding, God is calling,
His own need is voiced through man's,
And each heart responds, "Send me, Lord,"
At this "gathering of the clans."

—Katharine Lent Stevenson.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. HEADQUARTERS

GENERAL OFFICERS

PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL.
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, FARGO, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA.
TREASURER
MRS. MARGARET C. MUNNS, EVANSTON, ILL.

1730 Chicago Avenue, Evanston, Ill.

REST COTTAGE

RED LETTER DAYS

December 23—Crusade and Pioneers' Day.

AMERICAN PRISON ASSOCIATION DISCUSSES ALL PHASES OF REFORM ACTIVITIES

Minnie B. Horning, National Superintendent Prison Reform

For fifty-two years a group of advanced thinkers have consecrated their trained minds to the solution of the great problem of prisons and prisoners and as their plans and efforts have year by year gained a wider hearing, their number has been augmented.

This year at Hotel Statler in the city of Detroit, a large assemblage of men and women, members of the American Prison Association, met to consider and discuss vital questions concerning crime, the prisoner, proper housing, the care and training of the child before he becomes an offender, and every phase of the reform.

It is most gratifying to realize the emphasis this congress puts upon prevention. It was divided into groups for the morning sessions, when the child, juvenile delinquency, the reformatory, juvenile courts—how to train, safeguard and better the condition of the child—and kindred subjects were under discussion.

The care of the prisoner, his recreations, education, health and food, rereceived much attention. An especially interesting address on the classification of prisoners was given by Dr. Katherine B. Davis, secretary of the Bureau of Social Hygiene of New York City. She discussed the question, "Do the courts send prisoners to the right institutions?"

There was a great deal of exploitation of psychiatry, which is comparatively new in science. There was not much of newness in the ideas advanced, but it is the constant reiteration of known facts that secures results.

Dr. Valeria H. Parker, executive secretary of the U. S. Interdepartmental Social Hygiene Board, and also director of Social Morality for the National W. C. T. U., spoke before the medical section on "The Responsibilities of Prison Physicians for Progressive Methods in Diagnosis and Treatment of Venereal Diseases." She showed the great opportunity before the prison physician, in having his patients daily under his observation, and asserted that it is his duty to see that they have every care and the best of treatment.

Mrs. Martha P. Falconer, of the American Social Hygiene Association, and Dr. Parker's associate in the National W. C. T. U. department of Social Morality, is chairman of the committee on Community Agencies and Delinquency, and presided at its sessions. Her section meetings were especially interesting and she was able to bring out some very strong utterances for prohibition. "What Prohibition is Doing to Lessen Delinquency" was discussed. Judge Henry S. Hulbert, judge of the Juvenile Court of Detroit, spoke encouragingly of the effect of prohibition but he condemned the man of means who brings the law into contempt before his children, by having liquor, known by all to be illegally procured, in his home and served openly. The bad influence thus exerted was effectively shown.

Mention should be made of the most excellent paper, "Our Duty to the Criminal Class," by Mrs. J. A. Leavitt of the Nebraska Society for the Friendless. Strong and clear were her words in support of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act.

Several excursions were planned for the delegates: An automobile drive through the city, with supper at Belle Isle as the guests of Detroit, another to the Detention Home, and a third to the House of Correction, Plymouth Farm.

The "Christian way of recovery rather than the pagan way of revenge," seemed to be the keynote of the congress. Surely the combined efforts of so many earnest and devoted people will bring the prison reforms so long desired.

News for Your Schools

Outlines for Health and Temperance Teaching for the Grades of the Public Schools

New Pamphlet for Scientific Temperance Instruction in the Schools. Just what you want for your teachers. See that they are supplied. Price, per copy, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.25.

Order now for immediate use.

Scientific Temperance Instruction Charts

Animals and Alcohol.
The Effect of Tobacco.
Construction or Destruction.
Diagrammatic Scheme of Brain Centers.
The Smoker's Heart.

Price, each 15 cents; Explanatory Manual, 50 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, EVANSTON, ILL.

The Sunset State Hurrahs!

Leora Lobban Brewer, Vice-president Arizona W. C. T. U.

Arizona has doubled in membership. We say "Hurrah!" Some of us were determined Arizona MUST reach the goal set by Mother National, so put our wits and hands and tongues to work. Winslow gained the largest per cent and received the state banner; Tucson doubled, Phoenix and others made substantial gains. Several new unions were organized: Tombstone by Lora S. La Mance; and Winkelman, Hayden, Florence and the Tucson Mexican by the writer. A state publicity committee to communicate with THE UNION SIGNAL and to have published the material from the national publicity department consists of Mrs. Stevens, Phoenix; Mrs. Webb, Tombstone; Mrs. Wilbur, Mesa; Mrs. Day, Winslow, and Mrs. Brewer, Tucson. Arizona has a good list of UNION SIGNAL subscriptions. Tucson union not only subscribes for the trio team, but includes also the local recording secretary. No one in the rank and file, much less an officer, can do her best work without the inspiration and information received from the SIGNAL.

Prize essays were sent this year to Mrs. Middleton. A number of medal contests were also held, one of these by the Tucson Mexican union.

Mrs. Etta Sadler Shaw, national evangelist, has been in our state several months during the past year and has been most helpful. She has made a number of addresses in churches, schools and union meetings. She always pleases and instructs. Miss Willard, niece of our sainted Frances Willard, has been in Phoenix.

Robert Hercod, Litt.D., director of the International Temperance Bureau of Switzerland, called upon the writer en route from San Antonio to Los Angeles. He is making a personal tour of the United States so that he may take first-hand truths about prohibition to his own country. He told about entertaining our Miss Gordon and Miss Deane when they were on their world tour, and thought it quite possible he would attend our November conventions.

Senator Ashurst is home. The writer had the pleasure of hearing him in a recent address. It was splendid. His reference to prohibition brought forth enthusiastic applause. We are proud of his record. Our Prohibition Director Cassidy, too, is ardently at work and making for himself a splendid and clean record. Judge Sawtelle is truly a friend to law enforcement, and violators have learned that with such men as these and their co-workers, they can expect nothing less than the penalty they deserve.

Miss May Tousley, a former state organizer in North Dakota, has been elected superintendent of the Mary J. Platt school. This is a Methodist

(Continued on Page Twelve)

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

WHO AM I?

CAN YOU GIVE THE NAMES OF THESE GREAT WOMEN OF AMERICA?

(Answers will appear next week)

From my girlhood I had strong convictions against the use of alcoholic liquors and was trained by my parents never to use them. In my young womanhood I discovered that many of the people I met in social life believed in social drinking, and thought me old fashioned and fanatical because I held such radical ideas, but I knew I was right and held my ground. I married and my husband was honored by being elected to the highest office within the gift of the people. When I came to live in the White House I discovered that it had been the custom to serve wine at social functions; indeed, it was considered almost necessary in entertaining diplomats from other countries. But my conscience told me that there was a law higher than social rules of procedure, a law that says, "Eat no meat if it make thy brother or sister to offend," and my husband and I decided that while we lived in the White House there should be no wine served.

WHO AM I?

In my young womanhood I prided myself on being an expert needlewoman and had a great reputation for embroidering and darning. There was a story told of a young woman of my city who wanted an elaborately embroidered frock mended, and when I had finished it, the owner said my darning was the handsomest part of the garment. I married young and like many of my girl friends I saw my husband march off to serve as a soldier in the war, never to return. As a widow I returned to the upholstery trade to support myself. One day a great general who later was to be the President of the United States came into the place and asked me to embroider the ruffles on his shirts. Later he, with others, came in to ask my aid in making a new flag representing the growing spirit of Americanism. The general showed me a rough sketch of a square flag with thirteen stripes of red and white and thirteen stars in a blue field, and asked if I would make one like it, and I did. For more than fifty years I was employed to make the government flags, my daughters and nieces, and later my granddaughters, helping me.

WHO AM I?

When I was eleven years old my brother David was seriously injured by a fall from the roof of a new barn at our Massachusetts home in the country and for two years was an invalid. Before that I had been a very lively child, fond of outdoor sports, but I soon found I liked caring for the sick, too, and the doctor told me I was a very good and patient nurse during the two years, in which, without even one half holiday, I cared for my brother. The neighbors used to say, "That child's a born nurse." Years later thousands of men made me very happy by saying the same thing. When in the sixties President Lincoln called for volunteers, and the wounded began to return from the battlefield, there was no provision for caring for them. I put an advertisement in the paper asking for supplies and money for the injured men. The response was so generous I had to rent a warehouse. When the wounded were sent back I did all I could to care for them but I kept thinking if only they could have attention just after they had fallen, hundreds of deaths might be prevented. Finally permission was given me to go upon the battlefield and through all the weary years of the war I stayed at my post, giving medicine to the sick and wounded, nourishing food to the faint, and comfort to the dying. To recuperate from the long strain I was sent to Switzerland and from there was called to help care for the soldiers in the Franco-Prussian War.

WHO AM I?

A little group around my mother's knee studying a book and afterward going with her into father's flower garden, where she plucked rewards of merit for us in the shape of pinks and pansies, is my earliest memory as a student. Later I attended a district school near our prairie home, a boarding school in a distant city, and a big university, from which I was graduated to become a teacher, a principal, and a dean of the women of my alma mater. I loved the profession of teaching, but became so interested in the temperance cause, then in the Crusade stage, that I determined to enter that work in the face of tempting offers to teach in New York City and other centers. I felt that I had at last found my vocation, and learned the secret of a happy life, which rests on two changeless sources: the belief in God, and the habit of hard work toward useful ends. Many of my friends remonstrated with me for wasting my "talents" on an unpopular and hopeless cause, but I replied, "You may walk in your dainty slippers on the sidewalk, but as for me I shall walk in the middle of the dusty street with the throngs of humanity whom I can help."

For years it was my privilege to be numbered in the great army of noble Christian women engaged in a holy war against an age-old evil, strongly entrenched in custom and in law, which was to end in that transcendant day of triumph when the drink traffic was outlawed from the land. Later, it was my supreme joy to have the women of the world respond to my earnest call to unite in a movement for the purity, protection and exaltation of the home.

WHO AM I?

Well do I remember the days of the Stamp Act and oppressive taxes that stirred the colonists and made them rebel against the Mother Country. Like many other patriot women I ceased using tea at my table, refused to buy cloth and other goods of English manufacture. No less than sixteen spinning wheels were kept busy at my house weaving homespun cloth for the family's clothing. During the trying days that followed, when my husband led the troops in battle, I joined him always when the army went into winter quarters. I am proud to go down into history as "the wife of the greatest of our soldiers and the purest of our patriots." I lived to see him not only the Commander-in-chief of the Army but elected President of the United States.

WHO AM I?

I lived in the early colonial days before the American Republic was born. When I was only ten or eleven years old there was great excitement among my

(Continued on Page Twelve)

Maryland Young People Meet in Conference

The first conference of the Maryland Y. P. B., held at state headquarters in Baltimore, Mrs. George McCullough presiding, opened with a devotional service conducted by Mrs. Maude B. Perkins, national general Y. P. B. secretary. Basing her remarks on the parable of the talents, she made a touching, powerful and convincing appeal to the young people for complete consecration to Christian service.

Mrs. Perkins and Mrs. McCullough then briefly outlined the plan of the state organization and a committee on Constitution and Finance was appointed.

Dr. Bourdeau-Sisco opened a discussion on the possibilities of the Young People's Branch. Mr. Webster, president of the Jubilee Branch, spoke on financial problems, and Miss Marden on "How to Win New Members." There was an open discussion after each talk.

The subject of the state organization was again taken up and after discussion, pro and con, it was decided unanimously to organize temporarily with the view to actually federating next year. Officers were elected and fifty-five dollars pledged for the work.

At the evening session the Jubilee Branch presented to the state W. C. T. U. a beautiful electric sign which had been placed in front of state headquarters. The presentation was made by Mrs. Webster and the speech of acceptance in her gracious manner by Mrs. Mary R. Haslup, president of the Maryland W. C. T. U.

Notes From Our Publishing House

The winter season is coming with its opportunities for evening meetings, entertainments, medal contests, etc., with the numerous afternoon meetings too, at all of which you will be wanting to use something in the way of playlets, programs, etc., amusing, instructive and entertaining. We offer for your assistance a number of playlets which may easily be used in a church, a public hall, a club house or home parlor. (See this page and page 13 for titles, prices, etc.)

Among our more pretentious Life Plays are: "Thy Brother's Keeper," a morality play. Price, 20 cents. "The Child in the Midst," a Child Welfare play. Price, 10 cents. "Sound the Jubilee," for a number of adults and children. Price, 15 cents. "Lessons in English," an amusing and instructive Americanization life play. Requires a Price, 15 cents. "His Flag," a patriotic Americanization life play. Requires a number of adults and children. Very effective. Price, 10 cents.

Our Book of Socials presents 64 pages of suggestions, etc., for socials, games, stunts and other forms of entertainment for the Y. P. B., church societies, and all other social gatherings. Something suited to every month in the year. Price, 50 cents.

We shall need to continue our educational work for prohibition for many years to come. In order to help the people understand the truth abut why and how the Eighteenth Amendment was secured we recommend among other things the following leaflets for study in meetings, institutes, etc., and for public distribution: "Prohibition Progress as Portrayed by Some Decisions of the United States Supreme Court"; "The Eighteenth Amendment an Expression of the Will of the People"; "Did They Put It Over on Us While We Were Over There?" These are each two cents per single copy, or 50 copies for 25 cents, any one kind or assorted.

"Twenty Years of Prohibition Legislation by the United States Congress," the "Quiz on National Constitutional Prohibition," and the "Questionnaire on Federal Prohibition Code" are invaluable for information and circulation. Price, each 2 cents; fifty copies for 40 cents, or 75 cents per 100.

"The Prohibition Unit of the Treasury Department, United States Government—Why and What?" and "A Vision of American Sovereignty" are most excellent for the information they contain and the inspiration they will give for further service in the interest of prohibition. Price, each per 100, 45 cents.

As most local unions, in common with other societies of similar character, are usually in need of money, we suggest your consideration of the "calendar plan" for adding funds to the treasury. Note on page 14 our advertisement of the new Scripture Calendar for 1923; send us your orders for quantities and be early in the field. You can easily sell several hundred in almost any locality and thus net a good profit. Order promptly and please send remittance with order.

Helps for Local Officers

Recording Secretary's New Record Book. Treasurer's New Record Book.

These make the work easy and accurate. Price, each, $1.20.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois

Who Am I?

(Continued from Page Eleven)

people and one day a swift runner came among us saying, "The white captain is caught." A little later he was brought in and because of my pity for him I pleaded with my father, the chief, to save his life, and my plea was granted. I loved the people of the white race and although only a young girl I was able to do them many kindnesses, and to save them from danger. While still a young woman I met and married one of their men. As his wife, I journeyed across the sea to England, where I was received with great honors as a foreign princess and was presented to the King and Queen, but although all were very kind to me, I was homesick for my own land and my own people, to whom I never returned.

New Rhode Island Union Enrolls as Charter Member Centenarian

Lora S. La Mance, National W. C. T. U. Organizer and Lecturer

Rhode Island has broken the record. On October 10, in a rain that fell unceasingly, a W. C. T. U. with forty members was organized at Hope Valley. The very first name on the list was that of Mrs. Hannah Matteson, a beautiful, serene old lady who will be one hundred years old next March, when the union plans to give her the biggest birthday ever!

Another recruit was Virginia Girard, the eight-year-old daughter of the treasurer. Mrs. Edith Girard and Miss Jennie Crandall, both officers, worked all day in the deluge to get the people out. The Y. P. B. of Bradford came in a body and two "W.'s" sent representatives.

At Chepachet, a town with difficulties to meet, eight women have paid state dues, and are looking for a leader, and when they have found one, the hard-working state president, Mrs. Ethelyn Roberts, has promised to organize them.

These are straws which show which way the wind is blowing in "Little Rhody." The white ribbon women are in desperate earnest. They are standing on this platform: (1) Americanize Rhode Island's large foreign population; (2) push the S. T. I. work; (3) elect dry men to office and make the dry women vote a power in the state.

A gentleman told me that there had been a marvelous change for the better in Rhode Island's foreign population, especially among the Italians. This fall the W. C. T. U. succeeded in getting the state S. T. I. superintendent and another worker into the schools of Newport, which hitherto have been chained, bolted and padlocked against them. Other strategic points opened their schoolhouse doors to the work for the first time. Much is being done along the line of Christian Citizenship, especially among women voters. At a certain political convention, such was the faith in the W. C. T. U. that a dry worker called up the state president late in the afternoon and asked if the next day but one she would have one thousand white ribbon women in the galleries by nine o'clock in the morning to use their influence in a sudden emergency created by the wets.

In a fifteen days' "Before the Election" campaign carried on in Rhode Island, we visited thirteen towns and gave thirty-nine talks and lectures. We also gained over sixty members.

Rhode Island is going to win out. She knows she cannot do it in twelve months, but she intends to add three hundred members a year, take the state absolutely for law enforcement, and inside of five years make it as dry as Kansas!

The state convention was as fine as some national conventions. There were special Rhode Island poems and songs, fine addresses and a banquet which reached a high water mark for wit and strong, sane, but uncompromising utterances. Special addresses were made before church and club women and to the colored people.

The Sunset State Hurrahs!

(Continued from Page Ten)

school for Mexican girls and young women. Several of these young women belong to our Tucson Mexican union. White ribboners are very glad to welcome Miss Tousley and also Mrs. Minnie Morris, state organizer from Missouri.

Mrs. Imogen LaChance, state president, Mrs. F. B. Stevens, corresponding secretary and state superintendent of Americanization, and Mrs. Emma T. Benson, superintendent of Fairs and Exhibits, are busy preparing an exhibit for the Arizona state fair. We have a wonderful field in our state for Americanization work. Fully half our population are Mexicans. Many of them do not understand English. Since Miss Whiting was here last fall, house-to-house calls have been made to some extent. She showed us how to do this work and we hope to extend it more and more. The Mexican Baptist church in Tucson has made the request that we supply a teacher each Monday for their woman's meeting. The class is growing in interest and attendance.

A Federal hospital for disabled soldiers who have tuberculosis is located in Tucson. Mrs. A. W. League, state and local superintendent of this work, makes frequent visits and takes to the ones in bed (generally numbering 100), flowers, magazines and delicacies.

When "Scotch" Loses Its Flavor

(Continued from Page Six)

was arranging for my trip I selected a French boat with an eye to the conditions that would prevail after I had escaped from the clutches of the Volstead act.

"But when I found myself on the high seas, where liquid refreshment in any quantity could be had for the asking, I suddenly discovered that I had no special desire for it. I had actually lost my taste for liquor and it was like acquiring the habit all over again. Scotch had lost its flavor.

"I talked to a number of fellow Americans and they all confessed to me that they felt the same way. I found also another element entering into the problem, a kind of latent patriotism.

"One never feels what it means to be an American until he passes a season under another flag. He has to go away from home to find out how much of an American he really is.

"I felt a kind of repugnance against doing something under another flag that would be the violation of a law at home. One comes to honor his country by observing its laws when the observance is no longer compulsory. This is something that must be experienced to be understood. It is rooted in the subconscious mind and is independent of the will.

"But such a feeling exists. I have talked the matter over with a score of Americans who are spending their vacations abroad and they all confess to a similar feeling,"

Convention Marks Epoch for Tennessee W. C. T. U.

Amanda Neal Wheelock, Corresponding Secretary

For the second time, Springfield proved herself a most hospitable hostess to the state convention.

The sessions of this forty-first annual meeting were held in the First Methodist church. Inspiring music, delicious noonday luncheons, gracious hospitality in the homes, generous use of automobiles, beautiful decorations and much else contributed to the comfort and pleasure of the conventioners. The program was interesting and inspiring and marked a splendid epoch in the onward march of the Tennessee W. C. T. U. The spirit of the delegates, more than one hundred in number, from all sections of the state, was one of thankfulness for the successes of the past and a hopeful determination to win future victories.

The various churches served the luncheons and the superintendents who were in charge of the social hour afterward were particularly happy, both in demonstrating the work of their departments and in contributing to the general pleasure of the convention.

During the four days of the convention prominent speakers delivered interesting and informative addresses on up-to-date themes. Those taking part in the program were: Dr. Harry Clark of the Tennessee Baptist board; Dr. Morgan, president of the University of Tennessee; Mr. Noah Cooper, Mr. Robert White, state director of Civilian Rehabilitation; Dr. John Royal Harris, president of Cumberland University and Mrs. Nelle G. Burger, president of the Missouri W. C. T. U. Each speaker brought a broader vision and a more comprehensive view of social duties.

On welcome night, brief addresses were delivered by representatives of the various civic and religious organizations. Col. Glenn spoke for the city fathers, Mr. Tomerlin for the Kiwanis Club, Rev. E. M. Bryant for the pastors, Superintendent McNeely for the schools, Mrs. H. T. Stratton for the Parent-Teacher Association, Mrs. S. O. Murphy for the Music Club, Mr. Don Langford for the press, and Mrs. D. A. Payne for the local W. C. T. U. Response was made by Mrs. L. T. Manker. She complimented the city on its good taste in wanting a W. C. T. U. convention to convene there.

The splendid address of the state president, Mrs Minnie Allison Welch, was a reminder of the indomitable leaders of the past and the soul-stirring enthusiasm that put prohibition on the statute books. "Today, in the full sunlight of truth, which has made us free from strong drink," she made plain the path of the many goals set for us to reach.

A beautiful message from the national president, Miss Anna A. Gordon, was read by Mrs. Welch and the convention, standing, resolved that their "captain" could depend on Tennessee.

Mrs. Elizabeth D. Collins, state treasurer and editor of the state paper, was thanked by the convention for the historical sketch written for the state history now being prepared by the author and state historian, Dr. John Trotwood Moore. Dr. Moore asked for this history of the state W. C. T. U. as being of great importance in preparing a history of the state.

The officers were re-elected: Mrs. Minnie Allison Welch, president; Mrs. Grace Williams Robbins, vice-president; Mrs. Amanda Neal Wheelock, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Elizabeth D. Collins, treasurer.

Mrs. Grace W. Robbins gave a very interesting and instructive UNION SIGNAL demonstration, a playlet, "The Trio Team," acted by the state officers. Sunday the pulpits were occupied by W. C. T. U. speakers and Sunday afternoon a mass meeting of the young folks and children proved edifying. Sunday evening Mrs. Burger addressed a large congregation of all the city churches on the subject, "The Challenge to Americanism."

The following day, addresses were made by representatives from the State Federation of Women's Clubs, Woman Voters' League and all the many civic and philanthrophic agencies and organizations of the state. It was in reality a social congress and the spirit of cooperation was manifest.

The report of the corresponding secretary showed that seventeen unions had been organized during the year, through the faithful, loyal effort of Mrs. Rose Nipher and Mrs. Lem Gilreath, assisted by Mrs. La Mance, Miss Shaner and Mrs. Parrott. There are now, in all, 129 unions with 536 new members.

Mrs. Elizabeth D. Collins, the treasurer, reported a balance in the treasury. Mrs. Mary P. Bang, honorary president and chairman of legislation, brought forward a set of ringing resolutions which were unanimously adopted. The state "adopted" a school founded by Dr. Lillian Johnson, daughter of the first president of the Tennessee W. C. T. U., as the basis for mountain settlement work.

Mrs. C. C. Hines, the former capable and enthusiastic promoter for THE UNION SIGNAL is able to resume her duties again. This means good times for THE SIGNAL in Tennessee.

You Are Looking for Playlets? Try These!

John Barleycorn Wants to Come Back. Requires two young women, one man, soloist, pianist, and a number of children and young people. Per copy, 10 cents. Three copies to one address, 25 cents.

Uncle Sam's Prohibition Quiz: Testimony of ten noted American men. Requires eleven young men or boys.

Aunt Columbia's Prohibition Quiz: Testimony of ten noted American women. For eleven young women or girls. Price each, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.

A New Alice in Wonderland: (For seven children). New, easily rendered, and out of the ordinary. Per copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 40 cents.

His Flag. (Patriotic Americanization). Requires a number of children and adults. Price, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00.

World-wide the Joy. A Prohibition Hymn with pantomime. May be used with or without the latter. Price, 5 cents, single copy; per dozen, 25 cents.

The Binnybakers. Amusing and instructive; the plot centers about "home-brew." Easily arranged. Per copy, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00.

Lester Brown's Battle. (Total Abstinence and Anti-Cigaret). Per copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 35 cents.

The Eighteenth Amendment Forever. A very attractive playlet exactly suited to present needs; could be used on Temperance Sunday. Per copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.

A Sick Baby. (For 12 little girls and one boy). Attractive as an interlude for a county or local institute meeting, club meeting, etc. Per copy, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00.

A Lark at Nonotuck Hall. An amusing and instructive expose of the true character of "patent medicines." Suitable for a group of young women or high school girls. Per copy, 20 cents.

An Old Fashioned Mother. (Requires several men, women and children). Per copy, 35 cents.

The Marshland Round Table. (A mercy program for a number of children). Per copy, 15 cents.

Patriotic Prohibition Drill. For six boys and girls. Per copy, 3 cents; per dozen, 15 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois

MAJOR'S CEMENT

Unexcelled for repairing china, glassware, earthenware, furniture, vases, books, etc. Famous since 1876. Major's rubber and Leather Cements are good.
Three kinds, 20c per bottle at dealers, or write us.
MAJOR MFG. CO., NEW YORK

The "Money Earning Plan"

EARN MONEY FOR YOUR UNION, CHURCH, SOCIETY OR SCHOOL
For details write to
CHAS. R. DAVIS
184 Ward St.,
NEWTON CENTER, 59, MASS.

Perfection
NON-ALCOHOLIC FLAVORS
Taste Better
Flavor Does Not Bake Out
A combination of pure fruit and flavoring oils with vegetable oils, which carries and distributes the flavorings as well or better than alcohol, and instead of being harmful, has more food value than an equal amount of butter. Wonderful Vanilla and eleven other flavors. Representatives wanted. A permanent source of income for Unions, Church Societies, and individuals. 100% profit. No money required under our consignment plan.
Fletcher Production Co. Ext. Dept. 429 E. 69th St., Chicago.

THE UNION SIGNAL,
Evanston, Ill.
For the enclosed $....., please send THE UNION SIGNAL (weekly, monthly) to

Name.....

Street.....

City.....State.....

Price:
Weekly, $1.50 per year.
Monthly, 50c per year.
NATIONAL W. C. T. U.,
Evanston, Ill

Me and Patsy

Mrs. W. B. Dingham

Well, me Patsy an' me we comed to America! They tilled me as how silver dollars grew on ivery bush. They tilled me, too, how America had gone dry, which plaised me more than the bush wid the silver dollars did. "Thank Hiven," I said, whin I stipped foot on American soil, "Me Patsy now will be a-comin' home sober! He's tried, I'm sure, an' God knows, he's wanted to git away from the fellers that be a coaxin' him, but they knowed his wakeness, an' they were continually a-temptin' him!" Ah, monny's the toime he'd kiss the big Book an' say, "Jus' thry me wance more, Bridget, an' I'll prove to yez that I'm boss of the liquor!" And monny's the toime me heart would ache an' be so sore wid blasted hopes! But that's gone by now! We're livin' in America!

For mebbe six months me Patsy comed home ivery night, sober, and me heart was light as the billowy foam in me wash tub! No saloon a-temptin' him, or a-beckonin' to come in! No tratin' on pay night by onny of the byes! I was glad, and belave me, me Patsy was just as glad.

But wan night he comed home from his work, an' whin I reached up for me usual kiss, he turned his head away, an' thin I knew the worst! He'd been a-drinkin'! Me heart, me soul, me whole bein' cried out agin' it! "But," sez I, "this is no toime for tears! I must be afther a-gettin' busy!"

"Ah, Patsy," sez I, "the divil has surely been afther yez! He's found yez even here in America! But we'll put a shtop to that! We have the law on our side, and we'll enforce it! Be a good bye now, Patsy, won't yez, and till me where yez been afther a-gettin' the drinks.'

Poor Patsy was weak in mind and body, for that's the way the divil always trates him. "Ah," says he, shamed loike, "Tim Hooligan would niver be afther a-forgivin' me if I told on him!"

"Ha, ha," sez I, "Tim Hooligan's the man that's carried the divil's broth to your lips, is he? For shame on him! But I'll fix him! Never yez fear for me! Now, Patsy, yez better go lie down for I suspect yez a purty sick man! Don't try to get up, until I sez ye may!"

Wid that I shteps outside. I looks for wan of thim polacemen. Sure enough, I sees wan comin'. I sez, "If it plaze yer honor, I wants the law enforced!"

He looks glum an' sez he, "What's the trouble now?"

I tould him how Hooligan had been a sellin' whisky to me man agin' the law, an' I wanted the law enforced!

"Ah, well," sez he, "we're obliged to have the ividence! Bring in your ividence, an' we'll see what we can do for yez!"

"Ah," sez I, "me ividence is not able to come at this toime. He's a-slapin' off the effects of Hooligan's whisky!"

"Oh," sez he, "my good woman, yez best be a-sayin' nothin' more about it! Ef yez gets Hooligan down on yez, 'twill be the worse for yez!" "Oh," sez I, "I'm not a-carin' about that! But what will it be whin I tills ye, I'm down on Hooligan?"

He laughs an' sez, "Ah, whin ye've been in America longer, ye'll do as the Americans do! But," sez he, "I'll nades to be hustlin'! I'm due at the precinct this minute!" an' he walks away.

"So," sez I, to mesilf, "this is enforcement of the American law. But I'll not be givin' up so aisy. I'll try wance more!" Purty soon I sees a lady coming down the shtrate, an' she had a little white ribbon pinned to her coat. "Ah," sez I, "that little ribbon means timperance!" Me heart was that heavy and ached so harrd, I could have died, but I made bold to say, "O please, me lady, I'm in trouble, an' your little white ribbon tells me yez can help me!"

She smiled like I think the angels must smile when they sees a prodigal a-comin' home, an' she sez, sez she, "I'll be glad to do anything in my power! Tell me what you would like!"

So thin I tills her me story. I tills her what a good man me Patsy was whin he'd be lettin' the liquor alone; how he'd been a-livin' a sober, steady, industrious life for nearly six months; how Hooligan had given him the stuff that kills men's souls and bodies, and breaks women's hearts; how I'd been told we had the law on our side, why thin could we not enforce it?

Her eyes snapped and she said, "Hooligan! Hooligan! Why, we've been a-watchin' out for him! The law shall be enforced!"

She goes quick to wan of thim places where there is a hole in the wall, an' a little black horn a-coverin' up the hole, an' she talks fast, an' ends by sayin', "You'll come quick, won't you?"

Well, in less toime than it takes for me to tell it, in comes a man, an' he says at once, "Thank Hivin we've got the ividence!"

Well, me toime's up, but they arristed Hooligan and sint him to jail, wid a foine to pay besides; me Patsy is wance more the man I wants him to be. Oh, it's not so hard to enforce the American law, when ye really sets out to do it, an' look at all the good you're a-doin'!

SEND FOR CANDY

To sell for us. Churches, Societies, Sunday Schools, Lodges, Schools, etc., make liberal profits handling our very popular assortments of 5c Chocolate Bars, etc. Send for Illustrated Circular, Price-list, Order Blank and full particulars. Our goods sell quickly. Prompt Express shipments.

FRED D. LESURE COMPANY

6 Broad St., Fitchburg, Mass.

READY FOR 1923

Put the Word of God in Every Home

DO NOT FORGET THAT YOUR OWN PUBLISHING HOUSE WILL AGAIN FURNISH YOU THE BEAUTIFUL SCRIPTURE TEXT SACRED ART CALENDARS.

This Calendar will be more beautiful and attractive than ever. You can easily dispose of hundreds and thus place the daily Bible Text in multitudes of homes and at the same time earn Christmas money for yourself, your W. C. T. U., the L. T. L., the Woman's Club, or for your Literature Fund.

Send us your order early and so avoid delay or disappointment. Prices: Single copy, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.84; twenty-five, $7.50; fifty, $12.50; one hundred, $20.00; two hundred, $37.00; five hundred, $82.50.

Send us your order now and let's go to work. It is not too early to start.

National W. C. T. U. Publishing House

Evanston, Illinois

Reliable Cure for Drunkenness

"My husband has reached the stage where he admits that drinking is ruining his health. He is talking of taking the Keely cure. What is your opinion of it? What will help him overcome this craving? Is there any way to prevent my two boys ever taking up this habit?" Thus writes Mrs. H. L. A. as reported in the Health section of Good Housekeeping for November.

To which Dr. Wiley replies: "If your husband really wants to stop drinking, ask him to notify the prohibition officers of the persons who are selling him the liquor. They will be arrested and fined heavily and sent to jail. If the bootlegger disappears your husband will necessarily go dry. If your husband is in earnest he need not go to any Keely institute; he can join the prohibition officers and help clean up this dastardly business. If prohibition can be practically enforced, there will be no danger of your boys forming the habit. I should think the example of their father would be sufficient to steel them against it."

CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT

THE UNION SIGNAL ..... $1.50 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance (monthly).....50c a year
Single Copies, 5c each; per 100 .....$2.75
Club rate for ten or more Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition subscriptions, 40c a year. No other premium allowed.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER ..... 35c a year
Single Copies, 3c each; per 100 .....$2.00

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES

THE UNION SIGNAL .....$2.00 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (monthly) .....62c a year
THE YOUNG CRUSADER .....47c a year

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL Evanston, Illinois

Why Take the Union Signal?

Della F. Withers, Circulation Manager

1. It is the official organ, the mouthpiece for the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the sender forth of "tried and tested" methods for the furtherance of all our work. It is your own paper. It is your duty to support it.

2. To keep in close touch with activities of anti-prohibitionists, and plans and activities of the "drys"; to get definite information on all aspects of prohibition.

3. To be provided with a course of study for women voters on the "why and how and when" of political duties.

4. To obtain interesting, instructive material for programs for each meeting. An excellent program can be arranged by the use of the "Quiz." Clip from THE UNION SIGNAL articles on news in answer to the "Quiz" questions, and distribute for reading or summarizing.

5. To gain a broader, fuller concept of the work the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is doing in our thirty countries and the way some of our Million Dollar Jubilee Fund is being invested in other lands; to be so informed as to be in a position to interest the missionary women in the churches to become members of the W. C. T. U.

6. To be familiar with the work of the W. C. T. U. in Americanization, Child Welfare, Social Morality, Women in Industry, Medical Temperance, Scientific Temperance Instruction and all departments.

7. To create public sentiment in upholding and enforcing the Eighteenth Amendment; to instruct others and be a live, alert, intelligent member of the W. C. T. U.

THE UNION SIGNAL IN EVERY W. C. T. U. HOME.

Edeson Radio Phones
Adustable Diaphragm Clearance

We guarantee satisfaction, or your money refunded: The adjustment feature places our phones on a par with the world's greatest makes. Our sales plan eliminates dealer's profits and losses from bad accounts, hence the low price. Better phones cannot be made. Immediate deliveries? Double 3000 Ohm sets, $3.98; 1500 Ohm single set, $2.50. Circular free.

Edeson Phone Co. 6 Beach St., Dept. Boston Mass.

TRIO TEAM COUNTY HONOR ROLL

1. Jackson County, Iowa.
2. Grady County, Georgia.
3. Boone County, Illinois.
4. Barton County, Kansas.
5. Harper County, Kansas.
6. LaPorte County, Indiana.
7. Norfolk County, Mass.
8. Jewell County, Kansas.
9. Washington County, Kansas.
10. Ohio County, West Virginia.
11. Dukes County, Mass.
12. Dubuque County, Iowa.
13. Shawnee County, Kansas.
14. Big Stone County, } Dist.
15. Stevens County, } No. 12
16. Traverse County, } Minn.
17. Winnebago County, Wisconsin.
18. Walworth County, Wisconsin.
19. Strafford County, N. H.
20. Wayne County, Georgia.
21. Dunn County, Wisconsin.
22. Faribault County, Minn. (District No. 27)
23. Winnebago County, Iowa.
24. Hamilton County, Kansas.
25. Ottawa County, Kansas.
26. Woodson County, Kansas.
27. Martin County, } Dist.
28. Watonwan County, } No.
29. Jackson County, } 3
30. Cottonwood County, } Minn.
31. Cheyenne County, Nebraska
32. Kimball County, Nebraska.
33. Norton County, Kansas.
34. Clark County, Kansas.
35. Marion County, Kansas.
36. Highland County. Ohio.
37. Upshur County, W. Va.
38. Payne County, Oklahoma.
39. Stanislaus County, California.
40. Merced County, California.
41. Deuel County, South Dakota.
42. Mills County, Iowa.
43. Union County, Iowa.
44. Dakota County, } Dist.
45. Goodhue County, } No. 26
46. Rice County, } Minn.
47. Olmsted County, } Dist.
48. Dodge County, } No.
49. Steele County, } 2
50. Waseca County, } Minn.
51. Crawford County, Kansas.
52. Cass County, Iowa.
53. Polk County, } Dist.
54. Marshall County, } No.
55. Pennington County, } 14
56. Norman County, } Minn.
57. Edmunds County, South Dakota.
58. Mower County, } Dist No.
59. Freeborn County, } 30, Minn.
60. Bell County, Kentucky.
61. Chippewa County, Wisconsin.
62. Eau Claire County, Wisconsin.
63. Blair County, Penna.
64. Ness County, Kansas.
65. Blue Earth County, Minn. (District No. 21)
66. Dawson County, Nebraska.
67. Ellis County, Kansas.
68. Woodbury County, Iowa.
69. Kingman County, Kansas.
70. Lincoln County, Montana.
71. Bay County, Florida.
72. Glades County, Florida.
73. Highland County, Florida.
74. St. Lucie County, Florida.
75. Yamhill County, Oregon.
76. Creek County, Oklahoma.
77. Grant County, Wisconsin.
78. Tulsa County, Oklahoma.
79. Loban County, Oklahoma.
80. Dallas County, Iowa.
81. Osceola County, Florida.
82. Buchanan County, Missouri.
83. Ramsey County, Dist. No.
84. Washington County 23, Minn.
85. Allen County, Kansas.

W. C. T. U. Badges. Made of mother of pearl. Price 25 cents each. Address treasurer W. C. T. U., Jerusalem, Palestine. P. O. Box 443.

Maternity Apparel
With No Maternity Look

LANE BRYANT Maternity Clothes enable you to dress stylishly during all stages of maternity—and after baby comes, as well. Very latest modes, cleverly designed to conceal condition. Patented adjustments provide expansion.

76-page Style Book, picturing latest styles in Maternity Coats, Suits, Dresses, Skirts, Corsets. Sent Free. Write for it today.

Style Book FREE

Lane Bryant Address Dept. U1 38th St. at Fifth Ave. New York

NEVER FOUND WANTING

JERSEY CROWN FLAVORING Powder—the Master Non-Alcoholic Vanilla Compound—the National Prohibition Flavoring—has been subjected to the most thorough trials and severest tests for over twenty years, and has never been found wanting.

JERSEY CROWN is flavoring perfection.

It is positively non-alcoholic.

Its flavor is ever delicate and rich and full to the last drop.

It costs much less, goes much farther and gives better results than alcoholic brands.

THAT IS WHY---

That is why JERSEY CROWN finds instant and lasting friendship wherever it is once used; that is why our guarantee is so broad and complete, and why we are able to make a definite business proposition which involves no cash investment or risk whatever on the part of our representatives; that is why JERSEY CROWN offers such a remarkable opportunity for Unions and members to engage in an attractive and profitable occupation, and why so many unions and members and others have been successfully handling JERSEY CROWN continuously over long periods of years.

Here's Concrete Evidence

These are extracts from a few of the many letters we have received and are receiving daily.

Mrs. May Walkley, Greeley, Colorado:
"I have sold JERSEY CROWN for twelve years and have never heard of a dissatisfied customer. I consider it the best flavoring on the market. It is a ready seller."

Mrs. L. M. Crouse, Ex-President W. C. T. U. Schenectady, N. Y.:
"I have used JERSEY CROWN for eleven years and it is the best I have ever used. I am selling it to many members of the W. C. T. U. and others and all pronounce it good."

Mrs. L. E. Burton, Lingle, Wyoming:
"I have been using JERSEY CROWN for seven years and have been keeping it on hand for the members of our W. C. T. U., and am glad to state that we all think it the best vanilla flavoring preparation we have ever used."

Mrs. Wm. N. Stults, Rocky Hill, N. J.:
"All that I have sold JERSEY CROWN to are well pleased. I have used it for over ten years and have never found anything to equal it."

Mrs. M. E. Manlove, Knoxville, Tenn.:
"All customers agree with my own opinion—that JERSEY CROWN is the purest and best flavoring ever put up. After one package is used no other kind will satisfy."

Representatives Wanted ---No Money in Advance

We want Sales Representatives in every section of the country to introduce JERSEY CROWN and take orders. You send no money in advance. We will send you one or two or three dozen packages of JERSEY CROWN on our "Special 30-Day Consignment Plan," and you pay us when you sell it—not before. We will keep you supplied on this plan indefinitely. We guarantee sales, and will take back, at our expense, any part of the order which you cannot sell.

71 % to Over 85 % Profit

The net profits on the sale of JERSEY CROWN range from 71 per cent to over 85 per cent—and without any investment on your part. Selling JERSEY CROWN is easy, pleasant and sure.

Send at once for our "Special Business Proposition" for the W. C. T. U., Church Societies and their members; also for full particulars about JERSEY CROWN, and special order form. Or, better still, send now for a trial dozen and see how easy it is to sell the Powder to your neighbors and friends. Address

Jersey Crown Vanilla Co.

Department S. VALPARAISO, INDIANA

If You Once Use Brendlinger's NON-ALCOHOLIC Flavors You Will Never Have Any Other

They offer a Nation-wide service to Housekeepers who are particular about the food products they use.

The advantages to be obtained that will justify your using them in preference to any other are

1. You do not have to pay for alcohol.
2. Will not bake out or freeze out.
3. Purity, delicacy and strength are retained.
4. More economical, because you use less.
5. Will not harden or coagulate eggs.
6. Give perfect satisfaction wherever used.
7. Will not spoil under any conditions.
8. Positively NON-ALCOHOLIC, therefore employees will not use it for beverage purposes.

We guarantee our Flavors to be wholesome, pure, free from all deleterious matter, economical and strictly free from alcohol, without which it has heretofore been considered impossible to produce extracts.

PRICES—

	Vanilla	Lemon	Orange	Almond
Quart	$3.85	$3.60	$3.60	$3.60
Pint	2.15	2.15	2.15	2.15
6 oz.	.75	.75	.75	.75

Prices for

Wintergreen, Peppermint, Maple, Strawberry, Raspberry, Peach, Pineapple, Grape, etc., given upon request.

IF YOU WANT TO EARN MONEY, WRITE US ABOUT OUR PROPOSITION TO CHURCHES AND UNIONS

Guaranteed to Comply With All Pure Food Laws

None genuine without the signature "Brendlinger's" in red on the label.
Endorsed by Pennsylvania State W. C. T. U.

BRENDLINGER COMPANY

Pioneers in the Making of

NON-ALCOHOLIC FLAVORS

5221 Ellsworth Ave. Pittsburgh, Pa.

N. B.—Brendlinger's X'MAS assortment of four flavors, consisting of 1-6 oz. bottle Vanilla, 1-2½ oz. Lemon, 1-2½ oz. orange, 1-1½ oz. Almond mailed to any address in the U. S. postage paid, for $2.25. A gift worth while for your friend.

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN

NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly

Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year in Advance

Entered as second class matter at the Postoffice at Evanston, Illinois

Vol. XLVIII EVANSTON, ILLINOIS, NOVEMBER 16, 1922 No. 46

Brussels (Belgium) W. C. T. U. Rejoices Over Opportunity to Introduce Temperance Teaching in Schools

FOR ELECTION NEWS SEE PAGE 3

AN ANALYSIS OF THE NOVEMBER POLL

LENNA LOWE YOST, National W. C. T. U. Legislative Representative, Washington, D. C.

The announcement of the Association Opposed to the Prohibition Amendment that they have gained more than seventy members in the 68th Congress for modification, is not borne out by facts revealed in the final returns of the election. In the 67th Congress the opposition never mustered at any time more than 133 votes and in the 68th Congress it is doubtful if they ever total more than 150 for a beer and wine amendment to the Prohibition Act.

In the Senate prohibition has a net gain. The election in New Jersey of Governor Edwards, the national idol of the wets, is offset by the defeat of Pomerene in Ohio. Missouri returns Senator Reed, an avowed supporter of the opposition, but Mississippi and Georgia are sending two drys to take the place of Senator Williams and the late Senator Watson, and in Nebraska the newly elected Senator Howell, a "dry," defeated Senator Hitchcock. In Pennsylvania the two dry Senators, Pepper and Reed, who have been members by appointment for a short period, have both been elected and for the first time in years that state has a solid dry delegation in the upper house. In other states like Michigan, West Virginia and Washington, where there were changes, there will be no loss to the prohibitionists.

Nowhere was the issue on wine and beer so clearly drawn as in Ohio, where an amendment to the Constitution was proposed, permitting 2.75 per cent beer and there this proposal was defeated by nearly 200,000—a vote so decisive as to leave no doubt as to the sentiment in the President's state. The Illinois vote means nothing unless there was secured a majority of all the votes cast for the proposal. The defeat of the prohibition amendment code in Massachusetts leaves the state without any state law, but this in no wise affects the enforcement of the Federal law. Latest reports from California indicate that the Wright Enforcement Act has carried.

Sentiment in the great states of the West, middle West and South, which were dry long before national prohibition became effective, shows no change. A few states in which large cities are found, like New York, New Jersey and Massachusetts, cannot swing the entire country on any phase of this question.

The defeat of Congressman Volstead, though his successor is dry, is to be regretted because, as chairman of the House Committee on Judiciary, the vacancy caused by his retirement goes by seniority rule to a man opposed to prohibition.

The 68th Congress holds out no promise of success to those who hope for modification of the enforcement law, yet, the victory of the campaign and a few successes gained here and there by "modifications" indicate clearly the necessity of renewed and sustained efforts on the part of the prohibition forces.

SAN FRANCISCO'S MARCH OF ALLEGIANCE

The March of Allegiance, staged recently in the city of San Francisco by the Women's Committee of Five Thousand, might safely be called one of the greatest demonstrations against the liquor traffic ever held by the women of the West. Approximately ninety automobiles, filled with women who could not walk, followed the several thousand on foot. Nine mounted policemen led the parade. Next came a band, then seven divisions of women marchers under the general direction of Miss Margaret Le Seur, executive secretary of the Y. W. C. A., with Mrs. Paul Raymond, Mrs. Kathleen Norris and Charlotte M. Eddy, chiefs of staff. A mammoth banner, stretching almost the width of Market street, and bearing the inscription, "Uphold the Constitution," was carried at the head of the procession by a number of boys from the Y. M. C. A. of Stanford University. The majority of the marchers had donned the official uniform chosen for the occasion, consisting of a full length white robe, white cap and gloves. Across their breasts were pinned streamers upon which were printed the words, "The Women's March of Allegiance." Before the concourse swung into line each woman was handed a card on which appeared the oath of allegiance. With right hand uplifted, each white-robed marcher chanted: "I do solemnly swear that I will support the Constitution of the United States and the constitution of the state of California. The state of California is an inseparable part of the American Union, and the Constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land."

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Northern California, headed by the president, Mrs. Addie Garwood Estes, and other state officers, offered a striking feature in a decorated baby buggy, containing an infant. This perambulator, which bore on the side the inscription, "By These Ye Shall Know Them," was wheeled in front of the division.

Practically all clubs of the city and county federation were represented, the W. C. T. U., Parent-Teachers' associations, California Congress of Mothers, Y. W. C. A., Girl Reserves and church women, university girls, Overseas Women, San Francisco County Nurses' Association, Daughters of the American Revolution, Daughters of California Pioneers, G. A. R. Relief Corps, California Girls' Training Home, Federation of Colored Women, and others.

Youth and age in the persons of a child of seven and a grandmother of ninety-one, lent color to the assembly. A band of Indians, purporting to be the last of a tribe exterminated by the use of liquor, marched at the head of a column.

The procession was probably the largest composed exclusively of women that has ever marched through the city, and it is doubtful if ever there has been one more significant of the power that women have been wielding in recent years in the affairs of the nation.

Loss of Efficiency Through Drinking Has Ceased, Says Head of Studebaker Factory

Loss of efficiency through drunkenness has ceased to be a problem at the Studebaker factory, according to the statement of Dr. C. H. Lippincott, head of the cooperative department of the Studebaker Corporation, as quoted by the Christian Science Monitor. "Although my work has brought me in contact with men in all branches of the factory," says Dr. Lippincott, "I can think of not one serious case since the enactment of the Prohibition Amendment. It is true that a prohibition movement had already begun with the men before the federal enactment and that there were active temperance organizations among them. This may account in part for the support which the men give to the law. Whatever may be the cause, however, the result is certain; drunkenness is practically unknown among our employees."

That this condition is an improvement over the past is indicated by observations made by W. W. Austin, production manager, plant Number 1, who has long been connected with the Studebaker corporation. He says: "When the Amendment first went into effect, we began to keep records of after-pay-day absentees, to compare with previous records. After making note of the numbers for several weeks, the difference became so apparent that we did not think it worth while to continue the records. Although I no longer have the copies, the circumstances remain clearly in my mind. After-pay-day absentees soon became a negligible factor as compared with the number before prohibition went into effect."

Closing of Bootlegging Cafes Forward Step in Enforcement Battle

The closing of the "Paradise," a restaurant and cabaret in New York City, for a period of one year, is considered by enforcement officials to be a great step forward in the battle against the illicit liquor traffic. The "Paradise" is the first place of importance in the Southern District of New York against which the abatement provision has been invoked.

Eight cafes in San Francisco were recently closed for a period of one year by United States District Judge William C. Van Fleet.

Federal Judge George W. Jack has just ordered the closing of about twenty establishments in and about New Orleans while cases are pending against them in courts.

The hotel of Fritz Griebs, at Mount Ephraim, N. J., has also been closed on account of repeated violations of the liquor law, causing it to be classed as a public nuisance by Federal Judge Bodine. This hotel is believed to be the first one in the state to be served with an injunction.

Similar injunction proceedings against other well known places throughout the country are pending, it is reported, and upon proof of violation action will immediately be taken.

W. C. T. U. LEADERS REPORT ELECTION RETURNS

CALIFORNIA DRYS JUBILANT OVER PASSAGE OF WRIGHT ENFORCEMENT ACT—BEER AMENDMENT SNOWED UNDER IN OLD CRUSADE STATE

Columbus, Ohio, November 8, 1922.

Praise awaited for Thee, O God, in Zion, and also in the Old Crusade State. The beer amendment has been snowed under. Drys will win by at least one hundred thousand. The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment are laying all the blame for their defeat on the women.

Florence D. Richard, President Ohio W. C. T. U.

Wine and Beer Not an Open Issue in North Carolina

Greensboro, North Carolina, November 8, 1922.

From returns available, all old members of Congress re-elected. Practically same result with legislators. Wine and beer not an open issue anywhere in state. In two cities women elected registers of deeds.

T. ADELAIDE GOODNO, PRESIDENT NORTH CAROLINA W. C. T. U.

Oklahoma Drys Victorious

Tulsa, Oklahoma, November 8, 1922.

All national Congressmen elected are pledged to support the Eighteenth Amendment and oppose light wines and beer.

JOSEPHINE M. BUHL, PRESIDENT OKLAHOMA W. C. T. U.

California Hopes for Dry Victory

San Francisco, California, November 8, 1922.

Congressional delegation no change; seven dry, four wet. Legislature very strongly dry. Governor and lieutenant-governor absolutely dry. Wright Enforcement law hangs in the balance. San Francisco wet majority cut.

MARY HELEN McLEAN, EDITOR CALIFORNIA (N.) STATE PAPER.

LATE NEWS.—Wright law wins by good majority.

Indiana Wets Go Down to Defeat

Liberty, Indiana. November 8, 1922.

Ex-Governor Samuel Ralston elected U. S. Senator from Indiana. He is a Christian gentleman and absolutely dry. All wets defeated as far as heard from.

ELIZABETH T. STANLEY, PRESIDENT INDIANA W. C. T. U.

Iowa White Ribboner Elected State Superintendent of Schools

Des Moines, Iowa, November 8, 1922.

United States Senator Brookhart, dry, wins. All but one of the eleven Iowa Representatives in Congress dry. District Judge Utterback, of Des Moines, the boys' friend, elected. Miss Frances, a white ribboner, elected state superintendent of schools. United States Senator Robinson, third district, won by big majority over wet opponent.

LUCILE W. SHADLE, TREASURER IOWA W. C. T. U.

Successful Colorado Candidates on Water Wagon

Denver, Colorado, November 8, 1922.

United States Representatives re-elected and all dry. State officers dry. Only avowedly wet candidate was lieutenant-governor. He was snowed under, although running mate was elected.

ADRIANNA HUNGERFORD, PRESIDENT COLORADO W. C. T. U.

Tennessee Candidates Pledged to Law Enforcement

Clarksville, Tennessee, November 8, 1922.

So far as we have been able to ascertain, every candidate elected in Tennessee is pledged to strict law enforcement and the maintenance of the Volstead Act.

GRACE W. ROBBINS, VICE-PRESIDENT TENNESSEE W. C. T. U.

Seventeen of the Eighteen Texas Congressmen Dry

Austin, Texas, November 8, 1922.

Out of eighteen Congressmen elected from the state of Texas, November seventh, seventeen are known to be in favor of enforcement of our prohibition laws.

MRS. CLAUDE DE VAN WATTS, PRESIDENT TEXAS W. C. T. U.

Majority of Michigan Legislature And Enforcing Officers Dry

Detroit, Michigan, November 8, 1922.

Senator-elect Ferris absolutely dry. Eleven out of thirteen Congressmen elected are dry. Grant M. Hudson, former Anti-Saloon League Superintendent, one of the eleven elected. McLeod, Republican, and Clancy, Democrat, both wet, representing Detroit districts. Majority of legislature and enforcing officers dry.

A. C. Graham,

FOR MRS. E. L. CALKINS, PRESIDENT MICHIGAN W. C. T. U.

W. C. T. U. Woman Elected to State Legislature

Springfield, Missouri, November 8, 1922.

Eight elected Congressmen dry. Mrs. Edward I. Smith, Republican, W. C. T. U. woman, elected to state legislature Second district St. Louis county. Missouri swept by Democratic landslide. Senator Reed and almost entire state ticket elected. Fighting spirit of drys aroused.

NELLE G. BURGER, PRESIDENT MISSOURI W. C. T. U.

Idaho Representatives Strong For Temperance

Payette, Idaho, November 8, 1922.

Returns not all in but from reports so far it is believed without doubt that Representatives French and Smith are both re-elected. Our Senators are not elected this year. Both Smith and French are strong for temperance and all good measures.

DR. EMMA F. A. DRAKE, PRESIDENT IDAHO (SOUTH) W. C. T. U.

Temperance Advocate Leading in Race For Governorship

Casper, Wyoming, November 8, 1922.

Election returns though incomplete at this date indicate that we will send dry men to represent us in Congress, returning John B. Kendrick, Democrat, to Senate; Charles E. Winter, Republican, to House. William B. Ross, Democrat, strong temperance advocate, leading in race for governor.

MRS. S. E. BAILEY, PRESIDENT WYOMING W. C. T. U.

Returns From Pennsylvania Gratifying

Lititz, Penn., November 8, 1922.

Pennsylvania election returns gratifying to the drys. Will have nineteen drys in Congress. A dry majority in both houses state legislature. A dry governor.

A. VIRGINIA GROSH, EDITOR STATE W. C. T. U. PAPER.

Kentucky Re-Elected Dry Congressmen

Lexington, Ky., November 8, 1922.

All Congressmen in Kentucky re-elected. One new one, M. H. Thatcher from Louisville, Fifth district, dry Republican. Gilbert, Barkley, Kincheloe, John Thatcher, Fields, Robison, Langley reported dry.

NORAH B. TAYLOR, TREASURER KENTUCKY W. C. T. U.

Vermont Elects Dry Governor

Swanton, Vt., November 8, 1922.

Vermont elected Redfield Proctor, dry Republican governor over J. Holmes Jackson, wet Democrat; Frank L. Green, dry Republican U. S. Senator over William B. Mayo, dry Democrat; Frederick G. Fleetwood, dry Republican U. S. Representative, over James Kennedy, wet Democrat. Porter Dale, dry Republican U. S. Representative, over J. Wilson, wet Democrat.

ELSIE PEASE BARNEY, PRESIDENT VERMONT W. C. T. U.

Georgia Wet Candidate Polls Only 500 of 9000 Votes Cast at Primaries

Atlanta, Georgia, November 8, 1922.

All nominees elected are dry. This was settled at the primaries. The only light wines and beer candidate for Congress was in the Fifth district, running against W. D. Upshaw, and he received only five hundred out of nine thousand votes at the primaries.

LELLA A. DILLARD, PRESIDENT GEORGIA W. C. T. U.

Dry Congressman Elected

Boone, Nebraska, November 8, 1922.

R. B. Howell, who had announced his opposition to any modification of the Volstead Act, elected U. S. Senator.

LELA G. DYAR, PRESIDENT NEBRASKA W. C. T. U.

Congressmen in Dry Column

Rochester, N. H., November 8, 1922.

Re-elected Congressman Wason, dry. Elected Congressman Rogers, with wet record but gave pre-election pledge against any weakening of Volstead Act.

CHARLINE ABBOTT, PRESIDENT NEW HAMPSHIRE W. C. T. U.

(Continued on Page Fifteen)

CHINA'S WORST ENEMY

Christine I. Tinling

One day last fall we were holding a meeting for the women prisoners in a Shansi gaol. There is a great difference in Chinese prisons. I have seen men crowded together, perhaps fifty of them, in a little room suggestive of the Black Hole of Calcutta, where there was nothing to do except quarrel and not light enough to read a paper if they had been so fortunate as to have one. But this other was a modern institution. The women were neat and clean and seemed interested in their industrial work. They were making wadded garments and there was considerable variety in their tasks. They laid aside their sewing and gathered for the gospel temperance meeting in the light and airy room.

"Chin Tan" China's Chief Curse

We talked about home and the things that may destroy its happiness. I asked them to mention some of these and the answer came back instantly, "Chin Tan." Now "Chin Tan" means "Golden Pill." They spoke also of other things, such as gambling and drink, but Chin Tan had by common consent an evil pre-eminence. Is it then possible that little pills are seriously menacing the happiness of China's homes? Indeed, it is only too true that in some sections they are the greatest curse known. All the women were in prison for selling morphine or opium, as were forty of the two hundred men in the adjoining building.

Missionaries sometimes feel it necessary to warn us before we begin work that in their districts alcohol is but a secondary evil and drugs come first. Even the children in the schools know of the havoc that they cause. When a question is asked about the dangers that threaten China they promptly mention opium and morphine. They say "wine" also, but the drinking, while general, is moderate for the most part and so its evil effects are not as fully realized. The human wrecks that one sees on the streets are usually the victims of opium and its derivatives.

When the agreement was signed in 1907 between Great Britain and China, it provided for the cessation, within ten years, of the foreign trade in opium subject to the extinction of the native product. The world has not forgotten how thoroughly China sought to fulfill her side of the contract, how large were the financial sacrifices made or how summary the punishment dispensed to those who broke the law.

Nevertheless the outcome of the effort has been sadly disappointing. While Great Britain has done her part and no opium has been exported from India to China, since 1913, the central government of China has not been strong enough to enforce the prohibition. At the present time about seven thousand tons are annually produced.

It is chiefly in the western provinces that the poppy is now being raised, namely in the great fertile plain of Szechuan and in mountainous Kweichow and Yunnan. It is also grown in the northern province of Shansi. The military governors are in a number of cases responsible for its recrudescence, sometimes giving their tacit consent, sometimes their active assistance and not seldom actually forcing the farmers to produce the crop.

Soldiers are left without wages for months together and when unpaid are a continual menace to the country. The generals find that raising opium and trafficking in the same is the easiest way of getting money for the payment of troops.

The Christian general, Feng Yu Hsiang, on the other hand, has taken drastic measures towards the suppression of opium in Shansi. His men are forbidden to sell or use it and are commanded not to protect the cultivation of poppy or impose any taxes. He says: "If a Chihli soldier breaks the order, even though he be an officer, he will be shot to death immediately." Would that men like General Feng were the rule instead of the exception!

In Yunnan the price of opium per ounce fell from one dollar in February, 1920, to fifty cents in March and thirty cents in May. The price is a fairly reliable indication of its plentifulness.

To leap in thought from the far west to the far north, I learned in Manchuria that opium was being openly used even by women. A medical missionary told me that her wealthier patients smoked it as a matter of course and sometimes offered the pipe to her!

The customs service is not by any means inactive and large quantities of opium and its alkaloids are continually being confiscated. But the officials themselves say that the total amount seized is but a small fraction of what is brought into the country or shipped from one province to another. These things are so portable and so easily concealed that the enforcement of the law would be a baffling problem even for a strong government.

Smuggling Devices of "Celestials"

When Miss Frances Wang and I were traveling in Hunan, in Central China, we had occasion to wait for a boat at the port of Yochow on the Tong Ting Lake. The little store-room of the Custom House was a veritable museum of smuggling devices. The officer said that he had then on hand about $73,000 worth of opium. There were shoes, whose soles were largely made of it. There were carpenters' tools, the wooden handles of which were hollowed and filled with the drug. We also saw three-tiered food cans, of blue enamel, containing some apparently innocent lunch, but between the true and false bottom of each can there was opium. Some geese had come in, ostensibly for market, but they were found to have had their internal organs replaced by the same thing Every officer would need to be a Sherlock Holmes to cope with such a traffic. All this was native grown and was smuggled by the Chinese themselves.

Similar evil ingenuity is shown in connection with what is brought in from abroad. I have in my possession a piece of a Japanese rug, of brown wool. When whole there was nothing unusual-looking about it. But it came under suspicion and the official scissors revealed that it consisted of rolls of opium, each about the thickness of a pencil, round which the wool was cunningly wrapped. I have also seen a sample of false bricks. Opium is put up in small tin containers and these again are dropped into moulds which are then filled with concrete. The resulting bricks are by no means suspicious in appearance. The "Celestials" are fond of sea-slugs and some clever rogue has imported opium by stuffing quantities of their skins with it.

The morphine menace is even more terrible than that of opium, both because the alkaloid is physiologically more potent and more destructive and because of the ease with which it can be concealed.

The Chinese do not understand the preparation of morphine. It requires very complicated chemical processes and special apparatus. So the vast quantity now being consumed and by which this great nation is in process of being done to death, all comes from abroad. Of a truth poor China is more sinned against than sinning.

Bulk of Morphine Comes From Japan

Most of the morphine comes from Japan. She is manufacturing it in large quantities and she also imports it. As Great Britain ceased exporting to Japan in 1918 and the United States in 1920 it must come from some other source, probably Europe. Though indeed, in spite of these recent laws of England and America, preventing direct export to Japan, a good deal continues to find its way there indirectly. Much goes from Great Britain through the United States under customs bond but it is hoped that the Jones-Miller bill will soon put an end to this "transit" trade. Smuggling is also extensively carried on. That American made morphine is getting into China by way of Japan is proved by the labels on confiscated packages.

The record quantity of opium derivatives imported into Japan in any one year previous to the prohibition of opium in China was 32,201 ounces. In 1920 the sum total was 800,000 ounces, being an increase of 2,733 per cent. Of this amount Japan could legitimately use for medical purposes perhaps one-hundredth part. Ninety-nine parts were evidently intended for the drugging of China. Even this is not all. Much comes into Kobe harbor and is there transshipped to some vessel bound for Tsingtao, and since it does not land in Japan there is no mention of it in official records.

The Japanese have imported thousands of cases of morphine into Shantung and they have usually been labelled "government stores." In Tsinan, the capital of the province, Dr. Balme of the University School of Medicine sent out confidential agents to ascertain how widely morphine might be obtained. They were able to purchase it in ninety-four drug-stores in that one city.

French Railroad a Medium for Spreading Drug Evil

When we made our trip into Shansi last fall we heard a good deal about the French railroad as a medium for spreading the poison into that inland province. In one case it was found behind the panels in a first-class carriage. Shansi has a very enlightened governor, Yen Hsi-shan, who fights this and other evils with earnestness if not always with success. He offers a reward of three dollars for the seizure of a small package of Golden Pills but the agents give twice as large a bribe to those who smuggle it in. Employes on the railroad earn from ten to forty dollars a month. A man comes along and promises the engineer two hundred dollars cash down if he succeeds in hiding a large parcel of morphine under the coal or elsewhere. The temptation is too great for poor human nature unchanged by the gospel. For that matter, in our lands of greater privilege and clearer light, there are plenty of prominent men who are no better than this average Shansi engine driver.

Governor Yen a few years ago proposed that the province should buy the French railroad out and out, however great the cost, so as to be able to handle the situation. But the political difficulties were insuperable. So against the will of the provincial authorities and in spite of their strenuous resistance, Shansi is being deluged with poison.

People Made Hopeless Victims

The Anti-Opium Society estimates that in 1920 enough morphine entered China to provide 1,675,200,000 injections or four doses for every man, woman and child in the nation, reckoning the population at four hundred millions. This although in several provinces the alkaloid is scarcely known at all, opium itself being generally used.

Morphine is taken in two ways, by injection and in pills and other pharmaceutical preparations. In the coast provinces the former method is general; up in Shansi it appears to be but little practiced and the chief curse is the aforesaid Chin Tan. As regards the hypodermic use, wealthy people carry their own needles and indulge the craving in their homes. Poor folks go to some shabby little shop, where they can pass an arm through a hole, along with a few coppers, and no questions are asked. They thus receive an injection and depart, largely ignorant of what they are doing to themselves.

The pills are eaten whole and are looked upon as a panacea for several of the ills to which flesh is heir. Naturally the morphine temporarily relieves pain and when that returns the logical thing is to take more pills to relieve it again. Thus in a few weeks the sick person is the hopeless victim of something far worse than the original disease.

It often happens that working hard in the fields during the harvest time the country people get some intestinal trouble, specially as their food is none of the best. A neighbor recommends the pain-killing, wonder-working pill. There is no indication on the wrapper that it contains any dangerous ingredient. But in a little while they are caring for nothing else on earth; business is neglected, family love has fled, the sense of right and wrong seems dead. They sell the clothes off their backs to get the pills; some have been known even to part with their famine relief supplies in order to obtain them. Women have sold their babies to satisfy the craving.

Depths of Degradation

In Taiyuan, the capital of Shansi, we were told that some of the beggars on the streets were rich men three or four years ago. The misery of the Oriental beggar is something that baffles description, yet to this depth of degradation the Golden Pill will bring a man. The craving cannot be satisfied without an ever-increasing dose of the drug, and some are driven to eat ten dollars worth of pills a day till their money has all gone.

At the time of our visit the officials had just made a raid on the stores and seized no less than $480,000 worth of Chin Tan and other opium products. When it is realized that this quantity of poison was in stock in one city at one time, some faint idea of the extent of the traffic may be obtained.

People of all classes, rich and poor, educated and uneducated, are bewitched by the thing. A Tientsin missionary tells of a young fellow in foreign dress, a returned student, apparently from America, speaking English better than Chinese, who was crazy through morphine. He escaped through the window of the hospital in the night, got pneumonia by wandering half-clad in the terrible cold, and when found and brought back had to be tied to the bed to prevent him from injuring himself and others.

Saddest of all is it to hear of those who were once faithful and earnest Christians, and have fallen before this temptation. In Korea a doctor told me of his helper in the hospital, formerly so capable and dependable. He had done well for himself, bought a little land and seemed to have a happy future before him. But morphine got the better of him and now he has gone to the dogs.

Responsibility of Christian World

Another missionary told of the brightest and best of their Christian teachers, a man with an educated wife, who was also a teacher. Morphine has ruined them. He squandered his own money and hers too and now everything has gone and men point him out as a "mission wreck." If the Christian world could only think in terms of human souls instead of in avoirdupois ounces, would it not make an end of this iniquity in a very short time?

Taiku in Shansi is not a large place; most people probably have never heard of it. But the missionaries say that in that one town and the out-stations connected with it, they have about a thousand drug patients a year.

The "Anti-Dirt Society" Doing a Fine Work

The International Anti-opium Association is known to the Chinese as the "All Countries Driving Out Dirt Society." Opium was formerly called "foreign dirt"; now it is just plain "dirt." This organization is doing a fine work. Its new book, "The War Against Opium" is a veritable mine of information. It may be obtained from the headquarters in Peking for two dollars Mexican, plus postage.

While the association is accomplishing great things in the line of investigation, it finds that the difficulties connected with bringing offenders to justice are all but insurmountable. On account of them the local organization in Tientsin was obliged to disband in December of last year. The most important part of their work was the detective phase and apparently it was only too well done. On one occasion they raided a "Benevolent Hospital" owned by a Chinese doctor of western education. They had heard that he was running a lucrative side-business in "anti-opium pills." So two of the force posed as would-be customers and carried a large quantity of silver to the hospital. While the physician was in the act of counting out to them seventy thousand opium-containing pills, they blew the whistle and brought in the police. This sort of thing proved too effective to please certain persons high up in the political world. The leading militarists engaged in the traffic made a great disturbance when any of their own property was seized. False charges were trumped up against the detectives and they were kept in prison through three hot summer months, later being declared innocent by the court. Although an appropriation was voted by the Provincial Assembly for the carrying on of this work, only a small fraction of it was ever paid, and the civil governor turned a deaf ear when appeals were made to him. These facts give a mere hint of the difficulty of fighting the traffic.

The editor of the leading English paper in North China, the Peking Tientsin Times, has done yeoman service in the cause. When morphine began to supplant opium he instituted a careful enquiry and published in his paper a "Black List" of the stores dealing in it. There were between three and four hundred names on the roll. But in an interview that I had with him, when lately in Tientsin, he told me it seemed no longer of any use to follow this method. Formerly his conviction had been that since morphine was being substituted for opium, we should strenuously oppose the new evil. Now, however, as opium itself is back again, even so strong and earnest a man as Mr. Woodhead feels no better than Dame Partington with her mop.

A Million Dollars Made by Destroying Souls

Of course, as all the world knows, the two great causes of China's enslavement to drugs are the helplessness of the Government and the ignorance of the masses of the people. But even were the Government stable it would probably be unable to prevent the introduction of these things. When the lining of a man's coat can hold hundreds of dollars worth of morphine, how can smuggling be prevented? One woman is known to have had actually forty pounds weight hidden on her person. At Hongkong eighty thousand taels' worth of opium—a tael is an ounce of silver--were found in the coal bunkers of a ship, nailed down behind steel plates. The authorities, having cause for suspicion, searched the ship twice without success. Only after they had gone over the plans and found a part which did not correspond with them, were they able to locate the opium.

A few months ago an American who had come over on business was boarding his steamer at Shanghai, to return to the States. As he bade good-bye to China, he boasted to a friend that he had made a million dollars on this one trip. He had made it in morphine.

Only Hope in Limitation of Production

China is pitied and more or less criticized for her internal weakness. Her leaders cannot deny the impeachment. But with what feelings of loathing must they look upon foreigners who take advantage of this weakness to murder a harmless people wholesale, and all for the sake of filthy lucre!

Since for the love of money men will always be found ready to destroy their fellows and sell their own souls, it seems clear that no amount of legislation that deals with the distribution of the drug will ever solve the problem. The only hope lies in the limitation of the world-production of opium to the amount necessary for medical purposes. It is this question of production, not the minor question of distribution, which is now confronting the human family.

"Oh, when shall all men's good be each man's rule through all the circle of the golden year?"

Anti-Alcohol Lectures in Schools of Belgium Arranged by White Ribboners

In a recent letter, Mrs. Elizabeth Jacqmain tells of the success of the white ribboners of Brussels, Belgium, in interesting the heads of the schools in anti-alcohol teaching. She writes as follows:

"A committee was appointed by the Ruban Blanc to confer with the superintendent of the Brussels schools and find out if we could introduce scientific temperance instruction into the schools by means of a magic lantern and other demonstrations. We took turns in stating our reasons for so desiring. While the Germans killed 60,000 Belgians in the war, alcohol kills 20,000 each year, we explained. The war has ceased but deaths from the effects of alcohol continue. Among other things we told the superintendent that the Belgian people possess too many excellent qualities to have them destroyed by the curse of drink. They are patient, skillful, industrious, courageous and kind—would not he as an educator use his influence to lead them to see the destructive effect of drink and help preserve his people? He finally said: "Quand desirez vous commence ces causeries, la semaine prochainc?" ("When do you wish to commence these lectures? Next week?"). We almost expired from the shock of surprise. Too good, too sudden! We now have the privilege of going into the schools twice a month with our lantern and doctors. Today we went to a very large boys' school and gave a lecture to one division, and are to return next month to give one to the older division. It was a real pleasure to see those boys listening to the intelligent speaker whose sincere effort showed in his earnest face as he explained the pictures. After the lecture one of the white ribbon women tells about the Ruban Blanc, its work and plans, and we also distribute good leaflets of latest and best thoughts on the subject."

Later Mrs. Jacqmain wrote: "We have thirty schools on our list this year and at the request of the school cabinet we are having invitation cards to parents printed. At each lecture a white ribboner tells of the hopes and aims of the Ruban Blanc. Posters made from pictures in THE UNION SIGNAL are displayed."

Sir George Paish Finds Big Advantage in Sober Nation

One of the many distinguished visitors from Great Britain who notes the advantages of the dry law in this country is Sir George Paish. In an interview recently he is reported to have predicted the adoption of prohibition by England. He added, "Such a prophecy may seem like a strong statement, but that's the way it looks. The experiment in America is being watched by our people very carefully, and it need not surprise you if we follow in your dry steps within the next few years."

To another questioner who argued that in the event of Great Britain's adoption of prohibition the bootleggers would benefit rather than the nation, Sir George answered: "You can depend on it that if Great Britain goes dry there will be no bootleggers. The British public's respect for law would prevent it."

He estimated that the British spend annually between £400,000,000 and £500,000,000 sterling in drink. "If half of that were saved," he said, "it would supply an amount of capital just about equal to the new capital that is needed in Great Britain." He continued:

"The question of prohibition has a most important bearing on the savings of the working classes, because from now on it is the working classes who will be obliged to put up the capital. There can be no doubt that the working classes will grow in power and that they will secure a greater and greater share of the wealth they produce.

"Spending everything will stop progress. Saving is absolutely necessary. The abstention from the use of alcohol would not only encourage thrift, but would conduce to the efficiency of the producer of wealth."

Denmark Demonstrates Prohibition a Health Measure

Medical Correspondent of London Observer

When the United States put prohibition into its Constitution, that act was here described as the greatest public health measure in history. Subsequent figures abundantly support that statement, but we refer to a European experiment, made perforce during the war, and studied by one of the masters of modern dietetics, Professor Hindhede of Copenhagen. His paper, contributed to the recent Congress of the British Medical Association, will be found in the British Medical Journal for August 12, and is of absolutely first-class importance.

In 1917, the Danes were urgently compelled to take effective action if they were not to starve. Under the advice of a committee on which Dr. Hindhede sat, they very nearly put an end to the eating of meat and the drinking of alcohol. The cereals necessary to feed pigs or to be fermented were saved for the people, who avoided starvation and "carried on" under an extremely unusual diet, very short in proteins, fats and alcohol. The statistical results have been critically and exhaustively studied, and are remarkable and significant in the highest degree. In the first place, the sudden change over to a diet consisting mostly of vegetables produced no ill effects, and certainly did not lower resistance against tuberculosis.

Not merely were the Danish people saved from starvation by being reduced to a Spartan diet, but their death-rate fell in a sensational fashion. In the case of men, and omitting epidemic and infectious disease, the death-rate fell by 34 per cent, and in the case of women by 17 per cent. Careful examination shows that the practical prohibition of alcohol was the cause of these results. The death-rate among men came down close to that of women, thus demonstrating the truth of the view which some of us have long maintained, that alcohol is the chief factor of the higher male death-rate generally observed. Dr. Hindhede is of opinion, after taking into account our English life insurance figures, that a continuance of the new regime would have reduced the male death rate by one-half, and adds, "What this would mean for families, as well as for society in general, needs no further explanation." During the discussion on the Licensing Bill, some fifteen years ago, I made a statistical inquiry showing the shocking number of widows and orphans made by the trade in alcohol, and its effects upon male mortality. This is the best of all replies to the argument that all attempts to restrict this trade are an injury to the "widows and orphans" whom it supports. Dr. Hindhede's figures suggest that, at any rate in Denmark, the proportion of widows and orphans made by alcohol is even larger than any English figures showed.

Cure for France's Depopulation

Dr. Hindhede finds from his figures that, as Sir Victor Horsley and Dr. Mary Sturge have shown in their valuable book "Alcohol and the Human Body," "the effects of alcohol are not limited to drunkards only." The American evidence and the British are the same. The strictly moderate drinker pays in years of life, though he has never once exceeded, nor ever would do so.

Thanks to the alcohol restriction and to the drastic simplification of diet, "the death rate for the entire country dropped from 12.5 to 10.4 per thousand, which is the lowest mortality figure that has been registered in any European country at any time. This is, therefore, probably the greatest hygienic advance ever made in so short a time."

Dr. Hindhede concludes by suggesting what such a saving of life would mean to our own country, and to France—in which latter, as he observes, "the growth of the population would increase from 1 to 8 per thousand and the critical question of repopulation would be solved."

No Patience With Light Wines and Beer Advocates

"I have no patience with the people in the United States who talk of the likelihood of rescinding the Eighteenth Amendment," said Hon. William W. Thomas, former United States minister to Sweden, returned from that country, to an interviewer. "I have no patience with the proposal to legalize light wines and beer. The Volstead act is now a part of the law of the United States, and as such it must be observed. We must and will have enforcement. The time will come when prohibition in the United States will be so absolute that the younger generation will have forgotten what liquor looked like.

"America has prohibition. It is only a question of time before all the other nations will follow suit. I am confident that Sweden will swing into line; just as confident as I am that the sun will rise tomorrow morning.

"All the recent referendum means is that the prohibitionists must wait for a little time before they attempt to secure a national prohibition law."

"This is only a minor setback," he said with emphasis. "People in Sweden who understand the situation realize that it has little significance. It was merely a referendum to gather an expression of opinion, you know. It had no binding quality.

"Sweden has operated for as many years as I know anything about it under certain restrictions. The system is far from ideal. I do not believe in any compromise on the liquor question. It will be the happiest day of my life when I see an absolute prohibition law in Sweden, and the prohibition law absolutely enforced in the United States. I admit, however, that the time is not quite ripe for such action in Sweden at the present moment. The prohibition forces must bide their time, but it need not be a long time. The vote was very close, and always it must be remembered that the anti-prohibition forces had the best organization and put up a strong campaign. With the prohibition forces equally well organized, the result might easily have been different. Next time they will have a strong organization at their command, and a prohibition chapter will be written into the history of Sweden."

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

Study the Truth! Know the Truth!

Maude B. Perkins, National General Secretary

Some one has said, "It is not enough to know wrong, it must be defeated. It is not enough to know right, it must be made prevalent."

It is the aim of the Young People's Branch to defeat wrong and to make right attractive so that "it will prevail."

Every age and generation of young people have had problems to settle. The young people of today are no exception. One need not be an alarmist to realize that there is propaganda being circulated with the thought of overthrowing some of the ideals that have come down to the young people.

By right of heredity we are the guardians of the principles which our forefathers have established. It is ours to study and know why these ideals have come to us, what they have brought to us and then to pass them on to the next generation.

There is no more interesting study for young people today, in lines of social service, than "The History and Achievements of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union." If we are to hold our prohibitory law, the facts given in this history must be known. The enemies of our cause are active and we must know the truth about the temperance movement from the beginning.

We have in our Y. P. B. study course "Studies in Government" and the "Law Enforcement Manual." If we exercise our citizenship privileges, we can work our ideals into the government in such a way that the enemies of that for which our country stands may not deprive us of our heritage. In order to meet their attacks we must be well equipped, through our study courses, for our citizenship duties.

"My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge," the Bible tells us. Our opponents are clamoring for "so-called light wines and beer." They would destroy what we have worked so long to secure for the protection of youth.

That we may intelligently combat their vicious propaganda, there has been prepared a new study book, written by Cora Frances Stoddard. In this volume the author has given the latest scientific facts which we must know in order to intelligently wage our campaign of education. "Alcohol in Experience and Experiment" is the name of the book. Miss Stoddard has given the very best of herself in preparing this contribution for the Young People's Branch. Let us show our appreciation by getting it not only before our Branch members, and introducing it into the school room and into organized Sunday school classes, but by calling it to the attention of every organization of young people.

We must be active in our efforts to hold our law so that "right may be made prevalent." This book throws the searchlight of modern science upon alcohol and its effects. Prohibition is the right way to deal with the liquor traffic, and science is back of the Eighteenth Amendment.

WHICH STATE WILL LEAD IN THE NUMBER OF GRADUATES IN 1923?

STUDY THE TRUTH! KNOW THE TRUTH! TEACH THE TRUTH AND PREACH THE TRUTH!

Young People's Night at the Georgia State Convention

Special Correspondence

From the moment when, on October 20, Mrs. Maude Perkins entered the convention hall, to be greeted by cheers and "'Rah! 'Rah! 'Rah! Perkins! Perkins!" from a large group of college delegates massed upon the platform, to the minute that marked the last fall of the gavel, practically the entire program of the last afternoon and evening of the Georgia state convention was given over to the young people. Mrs. A. W. McLarty, the state Y. P. B. secretary, is also president of the hostess union of Douglasville and, of course, lost no opportunity to keep the Branch in the forefront through the whole convention.

Friday evening's program began with the rendition of several folk songs by the pupils of the Negro grammar and high school of Douglasville. These young people, seated upon the platform and ranging in age from the tiniest tot to young men and young women of probably eighteen years, silently declared their sympathy with the W. C. T. U. by wearing the white ribbon as part of their costumes. They sang most inspiringly.

Douglasville Y. P. B. presented "The Melting Pot," which was received with much enthusiasm. The young people taking part were unusually talented and their costumes splendidly symbolized the countries of the Old World.

Cox College staged a marriage ceremony, the contracting parties being Mr. Volstead Act and Miss Cox College. Little daughters of Mrs. A. W. McLarty and Mrs. G. P. Shingler preceded the party, scattering flowers, and the solemn clergyman was in full clerical regalia. Amid much applause, the bridal couple, after faithfully promising to stand by each other "until death do us part" exchanged white bows as a sign of their union.

The State College for Women then took the platform with a dramatization of the "Alliance between Whisky and the Cigaret." As these two old cronies greeted one another at one side of the platform and bargained to stand by each other against the young people of our land, a group of youths at the other side realistically presented the various downward steps taken by the average youthful cigaret smoker.

The main event of the evening, of course, was the address of the national general secretary of the Young People's Branch, Mrs. Maude B. Perkins. The audience which packed the house to the very doors listened sympathetically and enthusiastically to her appeal. Mrs. Perkins has been in Georgia several times and is always joyously welcomed by the white ribboners of the state.

Causes of Lawlessness

Donna Swain

There are three distinct causes of lawlessness: Diversified domestic surroundings, the inability to control the mind, and the indifference to laws established for our common safety. The purpose of the laws made by our government are: To define and make known the rights and duties of individuals, to keep order and protect life and property, to enforce the performance of duties and punish, if necessary, those who disregard them.

The domestic surroundings of the child have a very great influence on the future of the man. If he is brought up in a family that respects the laws and never thinks of disobeying them, he will have his mind developed along the line of thought for the good of his community and country. If, on the other hand, the child is reared in a family where the parents are disobeying the laws in every possible manner, and think they are clever in "putting it over" the Federal authorities, they are unconsciously establishing evil principles in the young and it will take years of training in the opposite direction to set them on the right track for a good and useful life.

Few people would care to stay long in a community where everybody did just what they pleased, and when. No family could be happy whose members conducted themselves that way. No base ball team could be successfully managed on any such principles. Now, on a larger scale, no goverment could long endure without some laws to guide or control the people's actions.

Children and young men and women cannot always educate their minds to the correct line of thought. That is why we are asked to read selected literature in school and why community civics is now required in any high school course. The young people must be educated to be better citizens and to try to correct bad ideas that get a firm root in the minds of people often through wrong associates and the vivid evils that are brought before their eyes by the movies. True, the movies are instructive and many good lessons are taught by them,

(Continued on Page Fourteen)

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union
Evanston, Illinois

Editor-in-Chief - - - Miss Anna A. Gordon
Managing Editor - - Miss Julia F. Deane
Associate Editor - - Miss Vida I. Thompson

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors of The Editorial Department, The Union Signal, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittance of $1.50 or under.

Notice of Expiration is sent to the subscriber two or three weeks before renewal is due, so that by immediate attention to this reminder not an issue need be missed. RENEW PROMPTLY.

Remittances should be made by draft on New York or Chicago, or by Post-office Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

Change of Address. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE, $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
Foreign Postage, 52 Cents Additional
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (Monthly) 50c a Year
Foreign Postage, 12 Cents Additional

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., post-office as second class matter. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized August 20, 1918.

Evanston, Illinois, November 16, 1922

Aftermath of the Election

Although only incomplete returns have been received, it is evident that there will be a substantial dry majority in both houses of the Sixty-eighth Congress. We regret that the valiant champion of prohibition, the Hon. Andrew J. Volstead, author of the Enforcement Code, is not to be returned. His defeat at the polls, however, is not in any sense a victory for the wets, for his successor is said to be equally dry in principle, practice and politics.

We rejoice with Ohio in her signal victory over the beer and wine interests. Ohio has always been known as the "key state" of the Union and on November 7, as many times in the past, she again spoke for the nation in her triumphant vote at the polls against legalizing the traffic in beer and wines. The much advertised majority for wine and beer on the Illinois referendum does not represent the sentiment of the people of that commonwealth. The dry forces of the state recommended that patriotic citizens should not vote, either for or against the beer and wine proposal, basing their decision on the fact that the result of such a vote, under the Public Policy Act, would have no legal effect on legislation and no binding effect on legislators, and that by voting on the question proposed the drys were admitting that the Eighteenth Amendment, although a part of the Constitution, could be nullified or made of no avail. This explains the preponderance of wet votes.

Telegrams received from our state W. C. T. U. representatives, given on page 3, indicate a most encouraging outlook in the majority of the states.

The Biggest Thing in History

Advocates of prohibition in India place a high valuation on the law for which they are working. A member of the Madras (India) Legislative Council said to one of the missionaries not long ago that if he were given an opportunity to vote on the question of prohibition for his country, he would not hesitate to cast his ballot in favor of it, adding, "I have been told that it will cost me my seat if I vote that way, but it would be worth it to put myself on record for that which will be the BIGGEST THING in the history of our country when we get it."

Happy that nation whose law-makers can appreciate big moral values in its national life and even at great personal cost are willing to work to incorporate them in legislation.

The United States having put into its Constitution "the biggest thing in history," it behooves good Americans to be eternally vigilant in keeping it "the biggest thing" in the eyes of the general public, and not permit it to be obscured by the misrepresentations and falsehoods of those who would belittle it. We must continue to keep it before the people as a big thing economically, since it has, on the testimony of the bankers, made for thrift in a remarkable degree. We must continually remind the people that it is a big thing in health promotion, as medical men and health authorities agree that the years since the law went into operation have been phenomenally healthy. We must not let the people forget that it is a big thing morally, for it has improved the home life and made possible redeemed manhood and womanhood, and safeguarded childhood.

If a Hindu is ready to risk his political future to secure what he considers this "biggest thing," we in the United States ought to be willing to invest our efforts, money and time to hold fast that which we have gained.

Hiding Behind the Baby

The most contemptible bootlegger on record has been discovered and brought to justice in Philadelphia. He did not himself deliver the moonshine he manufactured but at the point of a pistol forced his wife to transport it to his customers in a baby carriage, tucking the stuff around his three-months-old baby. It is difficult for the normal imagination to picture anything more despicable than this attempt of a law-breaking father to hide his criminality behind his innocent offspring. The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment would disclaim any responsibility for this type of villain and yet he has been encouraged and even justified in his act by the propaganda that this "respectable organization of citizens" has been putting out, discrediting and defaming the prohibition law. Indeed, this "most contemptible of bootleggers" may have found his inspiration for carrying on his illegal business under protection of an innocent baby in some of the so-called arguments used by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment to camouflage their nefarious purposes. We have in mind the declaration which appears in one of their campaign documents, "The young men and women of our country are being constantly exposed to the dangers of strong drink as never before." Demanding a return of wine and beer for the protection of the rising generation is in its essence "hiding behind the baby."

What parent doubts that prohibition, even when poorly enforced, is a safeguard to youth? Ask Kansas, where a whole generation of children have grown to maturity without seeing a drunken person or a saloon, if it would not be a good thing to bring back beer so that its young people might be better protected? Ask the social welfare workers in our big cities, who have to deal with delinquent girls and boys, if it would not be a safeguard to these young people if they could get wine and beer as easily as they now get lemonade, and at places legalized for the sale of these beverages? The answer given would be an emphatic negative—that to legalize the sale of wine and beer would be to place before the youth of our country an ever-present temptation to drink, create in them, as well, an appetite for stronger liquors, and start them on the path to degradation and destruction of health and character.

The Hope of the World

Some months since, an essay contest for children was held by the Westminster Gazette on the subject, "What I should do if I were prime minister." Commenting on the results of the contest, the paper stated that it had "revealed the fact that almost every child had something to say about the evils of drink."

The above is sufficient ground for the surety that England will tread the same path the United States has followed—and God grant that she may do so with even swifter step! If American children had not been educated to the evils of drink, we should not today have an Eighteenth Amendment. And it needs little keenness of vision to see that much of the violation, and much of the talk against the prohibition laws comes from those who, born in other lands, were not taught the bad effects of alcohol upon the human system. But today, the young people in foreign countries, as well as in America, are learning to think in terms of others, and to reason with clarity upon the prohibition question.

And the fact that today young people are thinking for themselves at a far earlier age than was the case a generation ago, trying to solve national and world problems; that they are, through the increasing complexity of social life, driven to see and hear more than ever before, and so come in contact with much that for their parents was hidden till the days of childhood were past makes it imperative that children of the native and alien alike shall continue to be given scientific temperance instruction. For their own sakes, for their country's sake, for the sake of the world, we must see to it that the teaching is continued.

The Neutral Person Aids the Foe

Someone calls "indifferentism" one of the most threatening evils of the twentieth century. It is not a new fault, however, as readers of Dante know, for in his descent to hell he found a hell beneath the others reserved for those who were neutral in the fight against wrong. And before his day we recall the vision of John, when the Angel of the Seven Churches sounded a special and solemn warning against those who would be cast out of His presence because they were "neither cold nor hot."

Even yet, after the long fight to hold prohibition, there are some who call themselves neutral—neutral, in the face of one of the most momentous issues that the world has ever faced; neutral, when to be neutral means a lack of realization, if nothing worse, of what is needed in the way of protection for home and childhood; neutral, when all instincts of patriotism should be calling aloud for observance of the laws written into our Constitution; neutral, when neutrality means that the forces of evil are allowed to go unmolested.

These forces of evil are never neutral. Why should those who would not be called other than good, declare that they are neutral on this particular question? Is it not because they are not as yet as well informed as they should be?

We have had the opportunity given us to register and to vote. Doubtless for most of us it was an opportunity carefully and prayerfully used. Now that elections are past, what is the next step? That must be decided upon, and immediately, and it must be wisely taken.

An exchange publishes a letter from a foreign-born citizen on the subject of prohibition. He says, "It is indeed true that the foreign-speaking element is looked upon as the safety valve of this nation, and I think it should be the duty of the different churches with which the foreign-born are affiliated, and also the duty of the press to fight the good fight. . . . If it is true that we Europeans were used to drinking wine and beer, that is no excuse for continuing in indulging in such error. The phrase 'personal liberty' as applied to the Eighteenth Amendment originated with the director of the Foreign Language Newspaper Association, who printed and distributed a 'reading matter' serial to all the foreign-language papers in this country. Who paid for all this propaganda before and after the enactment of the Volstead Act is easy to guess.

"What is needed is a campaign of education through foreign-language newspapers uniformly conducted all over the United States, just like the campaign which was conducted and is conducted now by the dry forces."

In the face of such a statement as the foregoing, it is plain to be seen that to be indifferent is to be criminal. As a matter of fact, the neutral person is arraying himself beside the foe.

In the recent elections we were not neutral in our fight to elect dry Congressmen. Let us not backslide now that election day is past. And let us rank among our number, as soon as may be, those whom we are apt to call indifferent, because they have been uninformed.

Mrs. Boole in Debate With Representatives of Association Against the Prohibition Amendment

Mrs. Ella A. Boole, National vice-president-at-large, was one of the two prohibition speakers who accepted the challenge of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment to meet its representatives in debate. This occurred in the Town Hall, Brooklyn, N. Y., on the morning of November 4. A large audience of people, most of whom would never have come to a temperance meeting, was in attendance. The speakers in favor of beer and wine were Miss Alice Carpenter, the executive secretary of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, and Miss Elizabeth Marbury, a member of the National Democratic Committee from New York. Mrs. Charles L. Tiffany, a member of the League of Women Voters, and Mrs. Boole took the negative on the question, "Shall light wines and beer be legalized?" Each speaker had a half hour. Miss Carpenter talked sixteen minutes and had to stop for lack of material. She stated the plan of the Association was to secure the repeal of the Volstead Act by next summer, and follow it up with the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. Then, she said, the society would have something to submit that all temperance people would join with them in working out, but she did not tell what it was. Miss Marbury did not refer to the beer and wine proposition but talked bitterly against prohibition, using all the old arguments, as, for example, that the law had been "put over" while the nation's defenders were overseas. She dwelt on the violation of the law and wanted to know how many people who were there had liquor in their cellars, inferring that everybody had. Mrs. Tiffany is reported to have made a fine presentation, and her speech carried great weight. Mrs. Boole was the last speaker, and it goes without saying that in her usual masterly fashion she demolished every argument raised by the opponents of the dry law, and brought her hearers to the conclusion that prohibition has proven a success and is deserving of the support of all citizens who have at heart the welfare of their country.

The Woman Citizen Takes a Straw Ballot on Prohibition

In its issue dated October 7, the Woman Citizen printed a ballot on prohibition, using the most prominent page of the magazine, and calling attention to it in other pages. The ballot was an exact copy of the one used in the extensive and famous poll taken by the Literary Digest some months since.

In its first report of results, made in the issue for November 4, the Woman Citizen states that thus far, 918 votes had been sent in, 833, or 91 per cent, of which are in favor of the strict enforcement of the Volstead Act, and there was an "overwhelming volume of testimony in favor of strict enforcement," and "an unusually large percentage of these people were not content to mark their own ballots, but wished to have others recorded with them. One member of a woman's club said that her entire club stood behind her vote." Further figures are to be given in later issues of the magazine.

Promoted to Her Heavenly Home

At the age of eighty-nine Mrs. Margaret J. Nott, of Menomonie, Wis., has gone to her heavenly home. For many years "Grandma" Nott was interested in all that pertains to the growth of Christ's Kingdom, and particularly that which has to do with the branch of His work denoted by the W. C. T. U. Whenever it has been possible for her to do so, Mrs. Nott has attended the various National conventions, and delegates will all remember her smiling face as she was introduced at Washington, D. C., St. Louis, and San Francisco, as "our oldest delegate." Last year Mrs. Nott celebrated her eighty-eighth birthday on the "White Ribbon Special" as it made its way toward the western coast, and the occasion was made memorable by the gift of a gold white ribbon bow pin, set with seed pearls, presented by her fellow passengers, and pinned on her dress by the loving hands of the National president, Miss Anna A. Gordon. This year Mrs. Nott had set her hopes upon being present at the National and World's conventions in Philadelphia, but less than two weeks before the opening day she was taken ill, and passed to the heavenly land. She will be missed by a wide circle of friends and acquaintances who always looked for her at the annual meetings, as well as by the "inner circle" of loved ones.

For God and Home and Every Land

Time of Prayer—Noontide

"It is always noontide somewhere,
And across the awakening continents,
From shore to shore, somewhere,
Our prayers are rising ever more."

Shut In

Julia H. Thayer

Shut in—with God—the world outside.
Its discord tones, its sordid pride,
Its feverish haste on futile quest,
And through and through its deep unrest.

Safe-shielded so, what quietness
In confines only meant to bless!
Narrow the space that has been given,
But room enough for all of Heaven.

Love's peace bestowed, grief disappears
In purifying rain of tears.
Shut in—with God—oh, that should be
The very soul of ecstasy!

AMERICA THE GOLDEN

Lalla P. Smoot

America, the golden!
With love and freedom blest;
Beneath thy contemplation,
Sink peoples sore oppressed.
We know not, O! we know not
What sorrow theirs to bear;
What joy is ours to help them,
What joy beyond compare.

They stand our halls of freedom,
All jubilant with song,
And bright with truth and justice,
And power against the wrong;
Our God will surely help us
To serve the nations weak,
And e'er in march of righteousness
The weaker's claim bespeak.

O sweet and blessed country,
With Truth to guide alway;
O sweet and blessed country,
Our God will haste the day
When men and nations rally
To mercy, peace and love;
When all shall live as brothers,
Hearts filled with joy above!

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. HEADQUARTERS

GENERAL OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL.
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, FARGO, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA.
TREASURER
MRS. MARGARET C. MUNNS, EVANSTON, ILL.

1730 Chicago Avenue, Evanston, Ill.

REST COTTAGE

RED LETTER DAYS

December 23—Crusade and Pioneers' Day.

MORE COMFORT BAGS, PLEASE

Rebecca Naomi Rhoads, National W. C. T. U. Superintendent Department of Social Welfare

Soon the two great conventions in Philadelphia will be upon us. Yet before we become too engrossed in them I want to sound a call for more and yet more comfort bags. Yes, they are still needed. The demand far exceeds the supply. Let every union plan to make and fill at least three of these bags at the earliest possible moment. When ready send them by parcel post directly to Claude S. Harkey, Chaplain U. S. Army, Corozal, Canal Zone. It is important to have them ready to send by December first. Will all who read this message prepare at once for this special work? In a letter dated October 20, Chaplain Harkey writes as follows:

"I can use as many comfort bags as you are likely to be able to supply. About January first we will have approximately five hundred men going into the jungles and they will remain there for several months. If I could secure comfort bags, I am sure the men would much appreciate them, and would have a good opportunity to read and digest the literature contained therein.

"I could use to good advantage for the cause several more copies of THE UNION SIGNAL. I believe there is here a splendid opportunity for the distribution of proper literature.

"With many thanks for your continued co-operation in the work, I am

"CLAUDE S. HARKEY."

Our imagination pictures these men going into the jungles of Panama. I am sure this appeal will meet with a ready response, and it will come, I hope, from every state in this great country of ours, for, without doubt, practically every state is represented in the United States Army of that district.

Pamphlets and Books for School Use

Sidelights from Shakespeare on the Alcohol Problem.
It Is Written. (Bible Stories for boys and girls).
Temperance Tales. (A collection of stories for younger children).
Each per copy, 20 cents.

About Ourselves. (For use of pupil).
A Handful of Hints. (Outline lessons for the leader).
About Our Country. (A manual on prohibition for teacher and pupil).
Price, each 15 cents.

BOOKS:

Compendium of Temperance Truth. Per copy, 50 cents.
The King and His Wonderful Castle. Price, 50 cents.
Temperance Helps for Primary Teachers. Price, 50 cents.
Handbook of Modern Facts about Alcohol. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.
Alcohol and the Human Body. Price, $1.25.
Alcohol and the Human Race. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.25.
Tobacco. Paper, 35 cents; cloth, $1.15.
Physical Effects of Smoking. Price, $1.20.
Ethics for Children. A guide for teachers and parents. Price, $2.00.

Please send remittance with order.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois

W. C. T. U. Notes

In honor of the one hundred members recently enrolled in the Adrian (Mich.) W. C. T. U. a reception was given at the First Methodist Episcopal Church, with two hundred members and friends of the W. C. T. U. in attendance. The long tables at which the women were seated were attractively decorated in red and blue, the colors chosen by the contesting teams in the recent membership contest. Mrs. F. Bryant, captain of the blue team, was victorious over Mrs. W. T. Cunningham, captain of the reds. A fine program was presented.

The Oil City (Pa.) W. C. T. U. recently held a reception for new members in the banquet room of the Y. W. C. A. During the year the Oil City union has added to its list 162. Mrs. Charles W. Roess secured, from October 1, 1921, to October 1, 1922, one hundred and thirty-six new members, the highest gain made by any person in the state. In all she had secured one hundred and fifty-two new members. In appreciation of her notable work she was given by the state W. C. T. U. a gold bow pin, set with pearls, and received special recognition at the reception.

At the suggestion of Mrs. W. W. Bearby, an Ohio Crusader, resident in Creswell, Oregon, Constitution Day was observed at a union meeting of the churches on the Sunday evening nearest the anniversary. Following the devotional service a history of the Constitution and amendments was given by Mrs. E. K. Barnes, superintendent of the public schools, closing with a salute to the flag. One pastor spoke on "Respect for the Law"; another, on the necessity for emphasizing the fact that the Eighteenth Amendment is the law of the nation, and a violator of that law a criminal in the eyes of the law. A third pastor urged greater diligence on the part of citizens in preventing and punishing violation of the law. The church was decorated with American flags and bunting, and the veterans of all the wars were guests of honor.

One of our organizers, on board a train away out west, going to her next appointment, was busy musing. Her attention was attracted by a traveling man who was entertaining some fellow passengers with a lengthy, far-fetched tale about liquor violations, the ease with which drink could be obtained, etc. Praying for wisdom, she felt impelled to take some action. Drawing from her bag a law enforcement manual and her organizer's card she quietly introduced herself to the speaker, and asked him earnestly to "read, mark, and learn" the contents of the manual. There was no more discussion. As she returned to her seat a man nearby congratulated her on what she had done, saying: "As I passed, I noticed that you had your Bible." He was a Methodist pastor and promised his assistance to the worker when she came to his town to speak and organize.

Medal Contest work is being carried on most successfully among the foreign boys of the College of the Pacific, California, under the management of Mrs. Mattie Patterson, of College Park. For a Victory Day program, boys of every nation were invited to participate in an open discussion on prohibition as it has affected their countries. These lads and others from different parts of California have become interested in the medal contests, and through these young orators the anti-alcoholic message is being spread among foreigners.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the District of Columbia will hold its annual convention November 22 and 23. The state corresponding secretary, Mrs. M. M. Pollock, in sending the announcement, says, "We have made the dates as late as possible, hoping that delegates from the great conventions in Philadelphia may be able to attend."

Missouri Holds Rousing Convention

Fannie L. Taylor

For the fifth time in the history of the Missouri W. C. T. U., St Louis comrades were hostesses at the state annual meeting. The convention was housed in the Planters Hotel, which convenient arrangement made it possible for delegates to give their undivided attention to all sessions, conferences and committees.

President Nelle G. Burger presided in her usual vigorous and tireless manner. Every minute was full of interest. The vice-president, Miss Roena E. Shaner, in the field as a national lecturer, was greatly missed.

The report of the corresponding secretary, Mrs. Lettie Hill May, was a proof of her wonderful ability to manage a multitude of details. She has kept numerous workers in the field, sent out quantities of literature and letters and rendered other valuable assistance. Her resume of the work of the local unions was an important item. The treasurer, Mrs. Bernice Van Matre, who has rounded out her first year of service in that capacity, pleased the convention with her method of taking care of our funds and her solution of perplexing problems. Her interesting report heartily commended those who had met their obligations. The recording secretary, Mrs. Emma G. Pitzer, was ably assisted by Mrs. Dorcas C. Ireland, and gave "up-to-the-minute" journals throughout the busy sessions. Greetings were read from our National President, Miss Anna A. Gordon, the former state treasurer, Mrs. Neva Thomas, now residing in California, and Miss Shaner. Many distinguished guests were introduced and spoke words of commendation for the W. C. T. U.

Mrs. Margaret Platt, representing the National Publishing House, brought greetings and gave a most helpful talk and met the needs of the delegates with all sorts of supplies. The UNION SIGNAL demonstration, given by Mrs. Platt, assisted by Mrs. Mary Harrington and Miss Fanny D. Robb, was so convincing that many were moved to give subscriptions.

Mrs. Elizabeth O. Middleton, national S. T. I. director, earnestly urged the continuance of this department in the schools as an aid to law enforcement. Mrs. Rosa M. Webb, state S. T. I. superintendent, announced the state S. T. I. prizes.

The following important resolution was adopted:

"Whereas, the voters of Missouri are today confronted with a supreme political crisis,

"We, the Missouri Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in convention assembled, do express our righteous opposition to the election of any candidate of any party who is opposed to the Eighteenth Amendment, or who stands for the weakening of the Volstead Act or our state enforcement code, and

"Whereas, the plea for the modification of the Volstead Law is a preconceived and well defined movement of the wet propagandists for the return of the saloon with all its attendant evils, Be it

"Resolved, that we, as an organization, give our support and votes to such candidates only as adequately represent our principles and ideals. Be it further

"Resolved, that as an organization we repudiate the candidacy of Senator James A. Reed, and pledge our support and votes, regardless of party, to the election of Hon. R. R. Brewster, to the United States Senate from Missouri."

The feature of greatest interest in the convention was the annual address of the state president, who paid high tribute to the loyalty and faithfulness of Missouri white-ribboners. In eloquent and scholarly terms she reviewed prohibition history, successes and benefits, pointed out the tactics of the opposition, and aroused the crusade spirit in the hearts of white-ribboners, with her clarion call to accept the responsibility of citizenship and defend our cause with our ballots, voting for dry candidates regardless of party. "No one has a right to vote a straight ticket unless every man on that ticket is straight." The many facts and valuable statistics in her address make it a document of great usefulness to all seeking information. It was received with thanks and prolonged applause. By request Mrs. Burger made one of the evening addresses on "The Challenge to Americanism." This was a stirring appeal to Christian Americans to uphold the Constitution and the law of the land and thus fling back our defiance to those who are teaching un-Americanism and law violation.

Rev. Mary Sibbitt, national organizer of Kansas, gave a practical message in the interest of Social Morality and better movies. Hon. C. M. Hay, recognized as a brilliant silver-tongued orator, husband of the president of St. Louis Federation, spoke in masterly manner upon "Law Enforcement Our Only Alternative."

At the "law-enforcement dinner" Dr. R. C. Matthews, personal representative of Major Roy Haynes, Federal Prohibition Director, Washington, D. C., gave an address full of logic, wit, pathos and wisdom which moved the heart, fired the imagination and aroused the hearer to patriotic effort for this burning issue, "Law Enforcement." Speaking on "Upholding the Constitution," Attorney General Jesse Barrett emphasized the individual responsibility of each citizen of Missouri for the enforcement of the prohibition law. After citing the difficulties in the way, he urged that we demand of the next legislature the establishment of a law enforcement bureau. Mrs. C. M. Hay, president of the St. Louis Federation, made a rousing patriotic appeal in speaking of "Women as Citizens."

The report of the Americanization centers, which belong not only to these cities but to the state, was given for Kansas City by Mrs. C. W. Mehornay and for St. Louis by Mrs. M. L. Lovey. Both have done exceptionally fine work in neighboring our foreign sisters.

The budget system for financing state work was adopted, and the amount set at $1.00 per capita. Three honor-rolls were established to encourage early payment of the fund with the expectation that all would pay by June 1. The first dollar for the budget was paid by Mrs. Julia A. Colby, of Springfield, eighty-five years of age, the second by "Aunt" Maria Haynes, of Carondalet union, St. Louis, who is ninety-four years old.

Mr. Gus O. Nation, prohibition director of the St. Louis district, who had his temperance training in our Y. P. B., was enthusiastically greeted as he addressed the convention on the work of his office and made a stirring appeal for the W. C. T. U. to stand by with votes and voices.

Dr. R. S. Vitt, president of State Board of Health, including the division of Child Hygiene, gave some astonishing statistics in his address on his work. An interesting discussion followed, led by Mrs. S. O. Ware, state superintendent of Child Welfare.

The six state officers were re-elected on the nominating ballot—the greatest expression of loving confidence the convention could give. Flowers and other gifts were further proof of appreciation.

A fine board of superintendents was elected, including "Mother Carlton" for the Y. P. B. Her report and plans for the year were a direct appeal to county and local presidents.

"First Aid to Busy Women" was a message from Miss Louise Stanley, director of Home Economics department of the Missouri University. Radiograms were bright, spicy, entertaining broadcasts from St. Louis, Mrs. C. M. Hay, Kansas City, Mrs. May Huffman, St. Joseph, Mrs. Roy Bealls, Springfield, Mrs. Cora Banfield, and Hannibal, Mrs. P. H. Rutherford. The superintendents' council was a new feature of the convention and met each morning an hour before convention. These were most profitable to delegates. The invitation of St. Joseph was accepted for the 1923 convention. An expression of gratitude and love was given to all St. Louis comrades, the beautiful and talented singers, the many organizations who welcomed and greeted us and all who helped to make the fortieth convention the very "best ever."

Do Not Pass This By

We offer you a fine assortment of Total Abstinence Literature For Sunday Schools, Public School Work and general distribution.

(All leaflets 2 cents unless otherwise noted).

Facts About Beer.
Alcohol and the School Child.
A Story of Root Beer.
Teachings of the Divine Saviour Concerning Wine.
Temperance Talk—Sin in the Heart.
Temperance Talk—Watch! The Thief Is Alcohol.
Temperance Talk—Look Not Thou Upon the Wine.
Blackboard Exercise—The Total Abstainer on Safe Ground.
Blackboard Exercise—No Beer! No Wine! No Rum!
Blackboard Exercise—The Choice!
Alcohol the Arch Enemy of Life Forces. (Words of a Catholic to Catholics).
Professors of Medicine Say Whisky Not Needed.
Medical Temperance Quiz.
Druggists Say Alcohol Not Needed as Medicine.
The Persistent Beer Fallacy.
Wine—What Is It?
Beer Quantities of Alcohol Injurious.
What Benjamin Franklin Said About Beer.
Does Booze Benefit Baseball Players?
Dangers in the Use of Fermented Drinks.
Is Beer Intoxicating?
Pre-Natal Effects of Alcohol.
Is the Moderate Drinker a Safe Citizen?
Are Beer and Wine Harmful?
Drinking to Avoid Drunkenness Is Not the Whole Story.
Man or Beer?

Per 100, 45 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

Educational Blotters

SECURE THEIR USE IN SCHOOLS.

Envelope size. Three colors, red, blue, yellow. Price, per 100, 40 cents.

TITLES:

Are You Loyal?
Take Notice!
Remember!
Andrew Carnegie to Young Men.
The Cigaret Boy.
"Hurry Up Yost" Says—
A Cold Water Blotter.
Pure Air.
Dimes and Health.
What Is It?
A Cigaret Arithmetic.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois

Notes From Our Publishing House

It is not too early to select Christmas gifts for your friends. Let us help you. Consult our advertising pages for suggestions. White ribbon pins in a variety of styles and prices; books in large variety: "The Life of Frances E. Willard," by Anna A. Gordon; "A Great Mother," Frances Willard's charming story of the life of her own mother; "Glimpses of Fifty Years," Miss Willard's delightful history of her own half-century

The new Y. P. B. Study Book, entitled, "Alcohol in Experience and Experiment," is just from the press and is valuable as a study book not only for the Y. P. B.'s but for young people's societies of whatever class. It need not be confined to the young either. The public speaker, the student and the members of local unions will find that this pamphlet of 52 pages will well repay their thoughtful consideration. Single copies, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.50.

We have now ready for our friends and patrons a fine photograph of the new Administration Building of the National W. C. T. U. The view presents the eastern front and includes the famous chestnut tree planted by Frances E. Willard many years ago. Size of photo, 11x14 inches. Price, $1.50.

If you are planning for an Institute, either local, county or state, or for a medal contest or public meeting, or reception or occasion of any kind where music is desired, why not use some W. C. T. U. music? Whether solo, quartette, or congregational music is desired we can furnish you something with the distinctive W. C. T. U. flavor. Among other songs are "Victory" (soprano solo), per copy, 15 cents; "Love Light" (solo), price 30 cents; also the popular song "John Barleycorn, Goodbye," 15 cents. "Jubilee Songs" are always useful and may be used anywhere. Per copy, 10 cents; per 100, $5.00.

Christmas Gifts

Why Not Gladden the Heart of a Friend or Loved One With a White Ribbon Badge?

What better than our beautiful gold pin set with seed pearls? It makes a charming gift. Price, $5.00.

Other Badges: Loop Bow Pin, white enamel on sterling silver, with letters W. C. T. U. Price, 90 cents.

Same pin, smaller size; price, 75 cents; per dozen, $8.00.

Flat Bow, white enamel on silver, without letters. Price, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Same on gilt. 30 cents each; per dozen, $3.35.

Same (gilt) with safety clasp, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.75.

Scotch Clasp Pin, 20 cents; per dozen, $1.80.

Same, stick pin, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.25.

Blue Enamel Pin, worn by honorary or active members, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.75.

Y. P. B. Pin, blue enamel on gilt. Should be worn by all honoraries. 30 cents each; per dozen, $3.35.

L. T L. Pin, Coin silver, enameled; 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Order early. Allow ample time for delivery. Please send remittance with order.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

Delaware's State Convention Sounds the Battle Cry

Special Correspondence

Many and varied were the special features of the forty-third annual convention of the Delaware W. C. T. U., which was held in the M. E. church of Smyrna. The fact that the city was the home of Mrs. Kate E. Smithers, a pioneer in W. C. T. U. activities (having served a quarter of a century as president of Kent county and a number of years as state president), added interest to the occasion. Mrs. Smithers, the pastor of the church, and others, most cordially and heartily welcomed the delegates.

The address of the state president, Mrs. Georgia Pierce, was forceful and convincing and was heard with deep and appreciative interest. We were especially favored in the presence as honor guests of Mrs. Ella A. Boole, vice-president-at-large of the National W. C. T. U.; Miss Naomi Rebecca Rhoads, national superintendent of Social Welfare; Mrs. Myra Miller-Stauffer, associate national L. T. L. secretary; Mrs. Maude B. Perkins, national general secretary Young People's Branch; and Dr. James M. Yeager of Philadelphia. The business sessions brought enthusiastic reports from the state superintendents and notes of cheer appeared in the reports of the corresponding secretary and treasurer.

Three Loyal Temperance Legions of the state received the victory banner. A gold medal contest was an interesting feature of the convention.

A telegram was sent to President Harding "heartily endorsing the stand taken by Attorney-General Daugherty on the three-mile limit" and assuring him of the heartiest co-operation of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Delaware. All of the officers were re-elected and Mrs. Smithers elected honorary president.

West Virginia to Stress Scientific Temperance Instruction and L. T. L. Work

Special Correspondence

A spirit of renewed consecration to the great cause characterized the annual convention of the West Virginia Woman's Christian Temperance Union held in the First Methodist church of Buckhannon, Mrs. Olive C. Barnes, state president, presiding.

The state treasurer, Mrs. Lillie May Fisher, reported a net gain of 586 members. There is now an enrollment of 4,100, the largest in the history of the West Virginia W. C. T. U. Each union that had doubled its list was presented with a sterling silver pin. A substantial gain was also shown in subscriptions to The Young Crusader and THE UNION SIGNAL.

Miss Amy Spaulding, a field secretary for the national Americanization department, gave a very interesting and instructive address. She will spend a month in West Virginia this year holding Americanization institutes. She was invited to visit the college and high school with Mrs. Cora Ogden, state vice-president, and talk at the chapel hour.

One hundred and sixty-five guests attended the delightful banquet given by the Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church, in honor of the delegates. Mrs. Barnes presided and in eloquent rhyme introduced each speaker. Addresses of welcome were made by William S. O'Brien, representing the city; Rev. James Ferguson, the churches; Hon. U. G. Young, the bar; Professor W. R. Grose, the public schools; Dean T. W. Haught, the college; Will T. Burnside, the press; Hon. J. M. N. Downes, the Chamber of Commerce; Professor Richard Aspinwell, the Rotary Club; Iva Cooper Gould, the W. C. T. U. Miss Amy Spaulding gave the response. The white ribbon recruit demonstration, under the direction of Mrs. S. E. Leith, was an impressive feature of an afternoon meeting.

The Loyal Temperance Legion, under the leadership of the state secretary, Mrs. Mildred Barker Harman, reported a substantial growth during the past year. The state had the honor of receiving the national victory pennant last year, and this year it was awarded to the Broad Oaks legion. A silk flag, offered by the state to the new legion having the most victory members, was won by Wheeling Island, and a large silk banner went to Haywood for having held the most medal contests. Victory pennants were awarded the victory legions. It is expected that during the coming year the number of legions will be doubled.

Hon. W. G. Brown, of Charleston, state prohibition commissioner, left the work of his busy office to address the convention. He expressed the opinion that the prevailing laxity in law enforcement is due to ignorance of the injurious effects of alcohol, and urged the women of the W. C. T. U. to see to it that the teaching of scientific temperance in the schools is not neglected. Mr. Brown told of how he was handicapped in trying to enforce the law by having to depend upon local enforcement officers—justices of the peace, constables, and the sheriff and prosecuting attorney of each county—and suggested that if the people will try to elect to such offices the right sort of men, the most important step toward law enforcement will be taken.

Dr. G. D. Smith, pastor of the Methodist church, was another speaker. He gave an inspiring address. Dr. T. M. Hood, in a very happy and informative talk, reviewed briefly the part the medical profession has had in the temperance work of the country, and gave assurance that in the fight for prohibition and law enforcement the majority of physicians would stand back of W. C. T. U. workers, on whom he bestowed many words of appreciation.

The officers were re-elected.

In Defense of the Eighteenth Amendment

Emphasize Scientific Temperance Instruction. Supply all schools with these new helps:

Outlines for Health and Temperance Teaching for the Grades of the Public Schools. Price, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.25.

Poster Book. Prepared especially for use with the set of 12 Why America Went Dry colored posters. Should be in all school rooms. Price of 12 posters, $1.50. Poster Book, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.50.

Program for Temperance Day in the Schools. A unique program in the form of a Scientific Temperance Instruction Pageant. May be used in part or as a whole. Offers opportunity for a large or small number to participate. Price, 5 cents; per dozen, 45 cents; per 100, $3.00. Less than 100, at dozen rates.

Alcohol in Experience and Experiment. Confined to a study of the effects of alcohol upon the human system and a careful analysis of the reasons for total abstinence. Per copy, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.50.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

"The United States Forever Dry" Cry Ohio Conventioners

Sara K. Meredith, Recording Secretary

Tho slogan, "The United States Forever Dry," sounded forth in every song, every prayer, and every speech heard at the forty-eighth annual convention of the Ohio W. C. T. U., held in the First M. E. church of Findlay. Despite the activities of the wets, who are forcing Ohio, the Crusade state, to vote on the wine and beer proposition this fall, a spirit of optimism prevailed.

Findlay and Hancock county white ribboners, under the capable direction of Mrs Ruth K. Stephens, president, had made ideal arrangements, not only for entertaining the delegates, but for expediting the work of the great meeting.

Reports were most encouraging. Finances are in good shape and there has been a gain in membership.

All available space was taken at the banquet, and at its close a splendid program was given in the church auditorium.

The music was an outstanding feature. The Biglick Quartet, composed of farmers, the College Quartet, and the Athenean Club were all favorites. Findlay is rich in musical talent and our own musical director, Dr. Effie L. Bertholf, always delights the conventions.

County presidents and superintendents gave good reports of work done during the year. The Mother-Child center at Toledo, in charge of Mrs. Stone, is growing in interest and efficiency. The Americanization center in Cleveland, under the management of Mrs. Hauserman, is constantly extending its work and finds much favor with the citizens of the community. Both of these centers appreciate the financial help that has come to them from the National W. C. T. U.

Thirty-two Crusaders graced the platform one afternoon. Back of them was suspended Ohio's Crusade banner. They read the Crusade Psalm in concert and one of their number, Mrs. Smith, offered prayer. Mrs. Bertholf led in the singing of the Crusade hymn, "Give to the Winds Thy Fears." Mrs. Davis, a Crusader, secured fifty new members this year.

Ohio's plan of work for the ensuing year was printed and placed in the hands of the delegates. One of its suggestions reads: "Watch THE UNION SIGNAL all through the year for new ideas and helpful suggestions."

Ohio W. C. T. U. is deeply grateful for the instruction and inspiration imparted by our convention guests. One of the speakers, Mr. Gifford Gordon of Melbourne, Australia, who has traveled over our country for more than a year investigating the workings of the Eighteenth Amendment and of the Volstead Enforcement Code, pronounced the success of these measures "the miracle of the twentieth century." Mrs. Nelle G. Burger, president of the Missouri W. C. T. U., of charming personality, in an able eloquent address won the hearty approval of her large audience. She was an inspiration all through the convention. Another appreciated guest was Miss Mary B. Ervin, general secretary of the L. T. L. Branch.

Mr. James White, superintendent of Ohio Anti-Saloon League, sounded a clarion call to all dry voters of Ohio to vote at the November election.

Tho annual address of our own beloved state president, Mrs. Florence D. Richard, will long be remembered by those who heard it. It abounded in historic facts and temperance truths and voiced righteous indignation against the forces of evil that are seeking through wine and beer amendments to overthrow the most beneficent law ever enacted by our government. The women were exhorted to summon all their powers to help bring victory on election day. The entire address was given with the force and energy peculiar to Mrs. Richard.

Voting delegates to the number of 605 were in attendance. Mrs. Florence D. Richard was re-elected president for the eleventh time by the largest majority of all the years; Mrs. Viola D. Romans, vice-president; Mrs. H. D. Van Kirk, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Sara K. Meredith, recording secretary; Mrs. E. S. Loomis, assistant recording secretary, and Mrs. Frances E. Fuller, treasurer. All these officers received the support of the delegates, as did our highly prized editor, Mrs. Lucy E. Van Kirk; Mrs. Fannie Drummond, Y. P. B. secretary, who did such remarkable work in schools and colleges the past year, and Miss Nadine Motts, L. T. L. secretary, always interested in the boys and girls.

From this convention Ohio W. C. T. U. gained enough dynamic force to make this a record breaking year of work.

"Mother National" can count on our white ribbon women to do their part to keep inviolate the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Enforcement Code.

NEW MUSIC

It Is There to Stay. (Popular Eighteenth Amendment Song.) Price, per copy, 15 cents.

He's Only Changed the Place of His Address.
Over the Whole Wide World.
Hats Off to the Flag.
A Knot of White Ribbon.
Price, each, 25 cents; 2 copies to one address, 40 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

Law Enforcement Idaho (North) Convention Keynote

Mrs. Jennie Cross, Corresponding Secretary

The keynote of the eighteenth annual convention of the North Idaho Woman's Christian Temperance Union, held in Sandpoint, was enforcement and loyalty to the work and officers of local, county, state and national organizations. Each session, reports of the splendid work done in all departments during the year were presented. The devotional services, conducted by Mrs. Nannie Hogue, for many years our state Evangelistic superintendent, were most helpful and made us realize the presence and power of a real and mighty God.

We were glad to welcome Mrs. Elizabeth Preston Anderson, the recording secretary of the National W. C. T. U., who made a most helpful address on "The Present Crisis," and gave much valuable information and advice.

By the courtesy of Mrs. Ella Farmin, a former state president, the delegates enjoyed a trip on the beautiful lake. An auto trip under the auspices of the chamber of commerce to points of interest around the city was given up owing to the heavy rain.

The officers for the year are: Mrs. Mabel McCrea, president; Mrs. Olive Lawry, vice-president; Mrs. Jennie Cross, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Martha Blackmore, recording secretary; Mrs. Emma Wood, treasurer

After a two days' session, the convention adjourned, to meet in Spirit Lake in 1923.

Colorado Urges America to Guard Prohibition Crown

Special Correspondence

The forty-third annual convention of the Colorado Woman's Christian Temperance Union proved a revelation to many new members and an inspiration to the old ones. It was held in Pueblo, the courage of whose citizens in rising above the disaster of the great flood is exemplified in the white ribboners who entertained the convention.

Mrs. Ella A. Boole, honorary treasurer of the World's and vice-president-at-large of the National W. C. T. U., the honor guest, was first introduced at the banquet served in the Congress Hotel. After full justice had been given the sumptuous repast, eager attention was paid the speakers. Welcomes, extended in behalf of the city, churches, schools and hostess unions, were ably responded to by the state vice-president, Mrs. Anna E. Keenan. The keynote of the afterdinner speeches was "America, hold fast to that which thou hast! Let no man, or set of men, rob you of your prohibition crown." This note of warning was expanded by an eminent physician and surgeon, Dr. R. W. Corwin; an educator, Prof. James H. Risley; and a law maker, Senator W. O. Peterson. The music added greatly to the enjoyment and the message by Mrs. Boole was a fitting close to a delightful and profitable evening.

The reports of state officers showed a gain in membership and all national obligations met because ninety per cent of the unions had paid the budget in full. The mornings were filled with business and discussions; the afternoons with information and uplift. Mrs. Henry, social worker for the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company, gave a glimpse of the Americanization problem in a smelter town and showed the way one large corporation is trying to solve it. W. C. T. U. teachers from Denver related experiences with their foreign pupils.

"Child Welfare" was presented by Mrs. Stella Mathews, executive secretary, Colorado Child Welfare Bureau, and Miss Miriam Dawley, in charge of the Pueblo Child Welfare clinic. The influence of the W. C. T. U. on early childhood was beautifully illustrated, when Mrs. Boole led the consecration service for white ribbon recruits and tied the snowy bow on eight tiny wrists. The work of the Cottage Home, as reported by two officers of the board and the devotional leader, aroused much sympathy. "Some Social and Moral Problems," discussed in a frank, earnest way by Rev. L. W. Coffman, left a deep impression on the women. Mrs. Boole won the affection of all who heard her informal, intimate description of "Our Great Leaders," while her evening address was masterly and inspiring.

The pageant, depicting the value of Scientific Temperance Instruction and the danger of wine and beer, was a fitting introduction to the final program. The address of the evening, on "Prohibition and Its Enforcement" was given by Attorney George A. Crowder, legal adviser to the federal prohibition commissioner of Colorado.

All former officers, with the exception of the L. T. L. secretary, who could no longer serve, were re-elected on the first ballot. They are: President, Mrs. Adrianna Hungerford; vice-president, Mrs. Anna E. Keenan; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Myrta M. Dodds; recording secretary, Mrs. Belle M. Shields; treasurer, Mrs. Hobart Johnston; Y. P. B. secretary, Miss Winona R. Jewell; L. T. L. secretary, Mrs. Edna M. Conkling.

They Are Still Needed What?

PATRIOTIC PROHIBITION STICKERS
Their Terse Truths Will Be Needed a Long Time Yet

HERE ARE THE TEXTS:

The 100 Per Cent American Respects and Obeys His Country's Laws.

Without Reverence for Law Nations Perish.

Prohibition Does Not Make Law Breakers, it Simply Reveals Them.

Obedience to Law Is an Essential Element in Patriotism.

These stickers are of different colors and shapes. Use them wherever stickers can be used, on packages, letters, etc. Price, per 100, 25 cents, of one kind, or assorted.

The World Must Know The Truth

Our Educational Work Must Continue and Increase

Find Helps Here for Teacher and Pupil

BOOKS:

Handbook of Modern Facts About Alcohol. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Poster Book. Explanatory of the 12 posters "Why America Went Dry." Price, 15 cents.

Outlines for Health and Temperance Teaching for the Grades. Per copy, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.25.

Alochol and the Human Race. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.25.

The King and His Wonderful Castle. Price, 50 cents.

Alcohol and the Human Body. Cloth, $1.25.

Compendium of Temperance Truth. Per copy, 50 cents.

The Liquor Problem. Price $1.15.

Ethics for Children. A Guide for Teachers and Parents. Price, $2.00.

Temperance Helps for Primary Teachers. Price, 50 cents.

Alcohol—Its Relation to Human Efficiency and Longevity. Price, $1.00.

Jukes-Edwards. A study in heredity and environment. Price, 75 cents.

Training of the Human Plant. Price, $1.00.

POSTERS:

Why America Went Dry. Set of 12 illustrated posters in colors. Single copies, 15 cents; set of 12, $1.50. The 12 posters with the Poster Book, $1.65.

Set of Five S. T. I. Charts entitled:

Animals and Alcohol.
The Effect of Tobacco.
Construction or Destruction.
Diagrammatic Scheme of Brain Centers
The Smoker's Heart.

Price, each 15 cents; Explanatory Manual, 50 cents.

OTHER POSTERS FOR SCHOOLS:

Lincoln on Reverence for Law.

Lincoln's Prophecy. (Each with portrait).

Physical Decalog.

Booze Stands Between—

Price, each 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00.

College Smokers and Non-Smokers.

The Cigaret Condemned.

Each, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.50.

The Ten Commandments.

Single copy, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.60.

Law Enforcement Manual. Should be a familiar handbook for all who approve the Eighteenth Amendment. Price, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00.

Studies in Government. By Deborah Knox Livingston. A Study Course for Women's and Young People's Societies, Clubs, etc. A handbook for popular use. Per copy, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.50.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois

Illinois White Ribboners Firm for Prohibition Enforcement

Special Correspondence

A large and enthusiastic audience greeted the state president, Miss Helen Hood, when she called to order the forty-ninth annual convention of the Illinois Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

The attraction of the first day is always our chieftain's annual address. Miss Hood has never failed to bring a fine message, but that of this year exceeded all her former efforts. She answered many of the falsehoods of the enemy by giving a history of the long and rocky road through Congress of the Eighteenth Amendment before it became a part of the National Constitution.

We had the pleasure of having with us our National treasurer, Mrs. Margaret C. Munns, who greatly enthused the delegates and spurred them on to new activities. She gave a magnificent evening address.

The county presidents' decoration of a membership map was a surprise to some who were not familiar with the unorganized places in their counties.

The superintendents are to be congratulated on the excellent reports given in the superintendents' contest.

There was no uncertainty as to the stand the delegates wished to take on the wine and beer proposition.

A determination to go forward with more energy than ever before was manifested throughout the convention.

The officers were re-elected.

Oklahoma Holds Its "Best and Largest" Convention

The fourteenth annual convention of the Oklahoma W. C. T. U., which met recently in Enid, was the best and largest ever held in the state. "Law Observance and Increased Membership" was the keynote of the meeting.

Following the "Quiet Hour" led by Mrs. Ida Wygant, state evangelistic superintendent, Mrs. Josephine M. Buhl, state president, opened the convention. Each session had a definite aim in view, which greatly enhanced the effectiveness of the program.

At the "Welcome" banquet, Mrs. Buhl introduced a galaxy of talented women prominent in the affairs of Oklahoma, all of whom we are pleased to call our very own: Mrs. Abbie B. Hillerman, honorary president and candidate for the state legislature; Mrs. Katharyn Van Leuven, assistant attorney general; Mrs. Angelina Russell, reader and impersonator and our new Y. P. B. secretary; Mrs. Ethel Elliott, state superintendent of Women in Industry, and Mesdames Alice M. David, Ida M. Wygant and Elizabeth House, state officers, who aptly replied to the toasts on "Woman's New Day." Each sub-topic was cleverly prefaced by Mrs. Buhl with quotations from Frances E. Willard.

The president, in her address, dwelt upon the law observance and increased membership themes and in a comprehensive and convincing way explained just why we need more women in our ranks to carry on through the various departments the new, advanced program. The peculiar need for each of these lines of work during the present transition period, was clearly defined.

The county presidents reported progress. Increased membership, paid-up pledges and trio team goals all drew forth expressions of appreciation. The chairman of the state superintendents' board, Mrs. Alice M. David, had offered a prize of a beautiful seed pearl pin for the best state superintendent's report. The interest was keen and the reports the "best ever." Mrs. Charlotte B. Seaton, Flower Mission superintendent, received the award.

Dr. E. B. Brandt of Muskogee gave a rousing address on citizenship at an evening meeting. Other attractive features of the convention were the exceptionally fine gold musical and grand gold oratorical contests held under the supervision of the state superintendent, Mrs. Pearl Dalton. Miss Clara Davison and Louise Whitson, both of Oklahoma City, carried off the honors.

The officers for the ensuing year are: Honorary president, Mrs. Abbie B. Hillerman; president, Mrs. Josephine M. Buhl; vice-president, Mrs. Ida M. Wygant; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Elizabeth House; recording secretary, Mrs. Ida B. Fleenor; treasurer, Mrs. Annie D. De Walt. Mrs. Angelina Russell was elected Y. P. B. secretary, Mrs. Jennie Duffy, L T. L. secretary.

Get an Early Start

Supply Yourself Now With Your Stock of Christmas Post Cards

Let us help you. We have an excellent assortment of beautiful cards. Per dozen, 25 cents; per 100, $1.75.

Also a pleasing variety of birthday, congratulation, condolence and friendly message cards. Also a new card containing the famous "Ode to Water" by William Jennings Bryan.

Order early and avoid disappointment. Per dozen, 25 cents; per 100, $1.75.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois

Causes of Lawlessness

(Continued from Page Seven)

but the weaker minds are always sure to grasp not the moral, but the immoral lesson. The yellow and red covered paper novels, filled with wild adventure, murder, crime, and easy punishment, are eagerly seized upon by boys and girls from the ages of twelve to eighteen, a period when the mind is growing and principles that will last through life are taking root. Gene Stratton-Porter has begun her fight against indecent literature. In a word to parents she says: "It is a wise parent who, during the ages of twelve to eighteen, can place the right books before her children, and while allowing them to follow their natural inclinations, can curb and control those inclinations without allowing children to know that this is being done." "And concerning the type of literature for children," she continues, "Out of the mass of matter from which reading for a child can be selected, good, hard, common sense on the part of the parent is essential in choosing what is best. Properly transcribed Bible stories are always good. Bird and animal stories true to nature and human nature are fine."

There are many societies trying to correct the evils of the present day, and among the foremost of these are the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and the Young People's Branch. The great war has brought us more evils to correct, but with ceaseless efforts, in the near future we hope every citizen may become law-abiding with only good, true thoughts and ideas for bettering the country in which he lives.

UNION AND MEMBERS MAKE GOOD MONEY

Selling JERSEY CROWN FLAVORING POWDER (Non-Alcoholic) to their neighbors and friends on our liberal consignment plan. No money down. We furnish the powder and guarantee sales. You pay us when you sell it, or return at once for our "Special Business Proposition."

JERSEY CROWN VANILLA CO.,
Dept. S, Valparaiso, Indiana

Fine Program Inspires Nebraska Delegates

Special Correspondence

Delegates to the forty-eighth annual convention of the Nebraska W. C. T. U., held in the Congregational church at Lincoln, were enthused and inspired by the exceptionally fine program that had been arranged. Ample provision had also been made for their physical comfort and for their entertainment.

Rev. Marie Wilcox, state evangelistic superintendent, led in the first devotional service, taking as her subject "A Fishing Trip."

In her annual address, Mrs. Lela G. Dyar, state president, recommended that this year when, regardless of the statements of various candidates to the contrary, prohibition is an issue, white ribboners should be especially careful to support "dry" men.

The address of the evening was made by John Grant Shick, who spoke on "The Passing of the Uncrowned Queen," referring to Frances Willard as he knew her in girlhood, and to the great work she accomplished. We were glad to have again with us Mrs. Frances Heald, for several years state president, who gave reminiscences of former days, and Mrs. Anna Bunting, at one time vice-president. Both now live in California.

"The Supreme Question" was the subject chosen by Rev. Marie Wilcox for her annual sermon, in which she urged the women to be firm in their Christian life if they desire to be successful in the work of the organization.

Reports of the superintendents showed that much had been achieved during the year. The Anti-Narcotics superintendent, Mrs. Lizzie Jenkinson, outlined a plan to enroll all young boys as Nebraska Guards. They are to sign a pledge that they will not use tobacco in any form until they are twenty-one years of age, and a little bronze button, in outline like Nebraska, with the word "Guards" across it, is to be worn.

The memorial service was led by Mrs. M. M. Claflin, who, in a few touching words, expressed regret at the loss of so many faithful workers. Mrs. C. G. Ryan, president of the League of Women Voters, was one of those who in addressing the convention, urged the necessity of getting the uninterested women out to the polls.

"Stunt night" was popular. Every union that had made a gain in membership or had raised the budget was allowed to participate. This gave opportunity for a display of talent and originality. Among the many deserving special mention are Unadilla union, and Frances E. Willard union, of Lincoln.

Mrs. Ella A. Boole, national vice-president-at-large, spoke on the "World Wide Work," giving a great vision of the task at home and abroad. In the evening, at the Methodist church in University Place, she urged that every possible effort be made to make the prohibition laws popular, and to uphold the enforcement officers.

William Jennings Bryan, a most popular speaker, paid a glowing tribute to the organization as the pioneer leader in the national prohibition movement and said that it was the combined temperance element of both the political parties that won the victory. "This nonpartisan effect is largely due to the fact that in the fight at Washington the Democrats and the Republicans shared in equal degree the glory of the victory."

Federal Enforcement Officer U. S. Rohrer told of the difficulties in connection with law enforcement in the state, and pointed out the defects that gave the offender the advantage and in many instances delayed the prosecution, besides making it very expensive to procure a conviction.

Mrs. Mary Hight of Chicago addressed the convention the last evening, giving many reasons why women do not vote, and repeating the various excuses they offer for not being interested in politics.

Mrs. E. Simonds, president of the newly organized Cuban W. C. T. U., gave a short talk on local conditions and explained the difficulties in getting supplies and literature in their language. One hundred dollars was voted to help in getting the work started in Cuba. Nebraska is especially interested, as Mrs. Simonds is one of our own "girls."

It was voted to hold seven district meetings in the state this year, the program to be arranged to suit the needs of the district. The film, "The Beginning of Life," of which we are the proud possessors, is to be shown at each meeting.

Provision was made to put in the tubercular hospital in Kearney a radio machine for the soldiers, which we hope will be a source of comfort to them. Seventy-five Bibles are also to be placed in the state reformatory for men.

The exhibits of the state superintendents, on which they had put hours of thought and labor, with a view to making them profitable, were very fine. Those worthy of special mention were Women in Industry and Peace and International Arbitration.

The same officers were retained for another year.

The Law on Our Side

Agnes E. Volentine

When Mrs. Applegate, W. C. T. U. superintendent of Prison Work, called at the county jail one afternoon, she found a new face—and yet it was not exactly a new face, either.

"Where have I seen you before?" she asked this man, who, though rough and hard-faced, was not unfriendly.

He looked down a moment. "It was in my old saloon on Fremont, several years ago," he told her. "I recollect well enough about you and two or three other ladies makin' me a call."

"O! Now I remember. We came to ask you to stop selling liquor to the son of one of our members. But since he was just over age, and couldn't yet be termed a drunkard, you just laughed at us. You said the law was on your side."

At the recollection, her voice was not quite so kindly. But, remembering her mission, she tried to show interest by asking, after a pause, "And what brought you here?"

"Bootlegging," she was informed briefly.

Now, although Mrs. Applegate was good-hearted and averse to "kicking a man that was down," she also had a sense of humor that made her unable to resist the temptation to improve so good an opportunity. So she said:

"The law is now on our side!"

And the ex-saloon-keeper, ex-bootlegger (by necessity) had the grace to smile and answer, with a sad shake of his head, "So I'm findin' out."

Unbounded Faith

Years ago Grandmother learned that the secret of health is to keep the powers of resistance strong. That is why her faith in remains unbounded. For fifty years it has had world-wide recognition as a tonic which is rich in health-building vitamines, to nourish and help keep the powers of resistance strong.

Scott's Emulsion

Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J. 22-44

W. C. T. U. Leaders Report Election Returns

(Continued from Page Three)

Illinois Holds Her Own

Chicago, Illinois,
November 8, 1922.

Illinois will have in the Sixty-eighth Congress about the same number of "dry" men as in the Sixty-seventh, with possibly more added as results or contests to be made.

HELEN L. HOOD, PRESIDENT ILLINOIS W. C. T. U.

"Dry" Is the Word From Montana

Fort Benton, Montana,
November 9, 1922.

For United States Senator, B. K. Wheeler, Democrat; for Representatives, Scott Leavitt, Republican, and John E. Evans, Democrat. All dry.

MRS. A. E McLEISH, RECORDING SECRETARY MONTANA W. C. T. U.

ROCHE'S HERBAL EMBROCATION

FOR CROUP OR WHOOPING COUGH FOR

Relieves promptly and safely the Terror and Distress of these dreaded afflictions of Childhood.

120 years of successful use

Applied externally only. Wonderfully effective in Bronchitis, Lumbago and Rheumatism.

All druggists or

W. EDWARDS & SON, London, England — E. FOUGERA & CO., 90-92 Beekman St. N. Y.

CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT

THE UNION SIGNAL ..... $1.50 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance (monthly).....50c a year
Single Copies, 5c each; per 100 .....$2.75
Club rate for ten or more Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition subscriptions, 40c a year. No other premium allowed.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER ..... 35c a year
Single Copies, 3c each; per 100 .....$2.00

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES

THE UNION SIGNAL .....$2.00 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (monthly) .....62c a year
THE YOUNG CRUSADER .....47c a year

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL Evanston, Illinois

The Story of the Two Big Philadelphia Conventions

The story of the World's and National Conventions, with a large part of the national president's address, the reports of the national corresponding secretary and treasurer, and addresses delivered by the leading speakers at both meetings, will be given in THE UNION SIGNAL issues of November 23, November 30 and December 7. Notable among these discourses will be those by Federal Prohibition Commissioner Haynes and Evangeline Booth. Place your order early for these numbers. Price, for the three, fifteen cents.

Striking Coal Miners Demonstrate Value of Dry Law

Striking coal miners of Cape Breton have demonstrated that prohibition is a good thing for Nova Scotia, according to the Christian Science Monitor. They were determined to win the strike and do it by fair means and knew that lawlessness would defeat their object, so they decided that prohibition should be enforced to the letter. For two weeks or more not one drop of liquor was sold or offered for sale in the mining districts—not even for medicinal purposes. The mining towns were bone dry. The miners won the strike.

"The action of the Nova Scotia miners is a convincing demonstration of the fact that prohibition, properly enforced, can be made absolute," says the Monitor "The man who argues that prohibition does not prohibit is the man who does not want it to prohibit; who wants either to drink freely and openly or who wants to return to the old order of things purely for gain."

Photographs of Prohibition Officials in Demand

It has been officially reported that the bootleggers are making special effort to obtain possession of the photographs of various prohibition officials, some stating that they expect to get complete files of all working in their states. The Philadelphia North American tells us that it is a matter of knowledge that Camden saloonkeepers are paying $5.00 each for photographs of three prohibition agents working in New Jersey, that these pictures are printed on ordinary postcards and are being displayed in prominent places in New Jersey saloons. In this way the law can be more easily evaded.

Oregon in Convention Reports Live Enterprises Successfully Undertaken

Roselma F. Strohmeyer, State Corresponding Secretary

Royal welcomes and unlimited hospitality on the part of the hostess union and friends, noted speakers, and a large attendance, all served to make the thirty-ninth annual convention of the Oregon W. C. T. U., held in McMinnville, a notable event.

The "Welcome" evening was one to be remembered. A banquet, attended by over 300 guests, was given in the dining room of the church, and the delegates were welcomed by representatives of the city, churches, schools and the prominent local organizations.

Reports from officers and superintendents showed that much had been accomplished during the past year, among the achievements being the organization of thirty new unions. The state president, Mrs. Mary L. Mallett, gave a very inspiring address. The first evening's program was in the interest of the Children's Farm Home, which is being mothered by the Oregon W. C. T. U. The big, breezy presentation of the humanitarian spirit of the organization gave the keynote for the whole convention. Mrs. Ada Wallace Unruh, campaign manager of the Home, presided. Judge Walter H. Evans of Portland, one of the leading jurists of the state and a member of the Farm Home board, delivered the address of the evening.

The second afternoon was devoted to educational work, with Mrs. G. L. Buland, state S. T. I. superintendent, presiding. Scholarly addresses by college presidents from all parts of the state upon topics of interest to the women of the W. C. T. U., and in keeping with the many live enterprises which are being undertaken by Oregon women, were much appreciated. The Oregon superintendent of schools, who is, we are told, the only one in the United States who prepares a Willard Memorial program for Frances Willard Day, was to speak but was detained because of illness. Superintendent Churchill is also encouraging in every possible way Bible study in the schools, giving credits for this work.

In the evening Rev. Bryant, pastor of a Portland city church, gave a unique and entertaining address on "Seeing Portland by Night." The police department of Portland detailed special men to show Rev. Bryant the horrifying night scenes of lawlessness of every kind—gambling and illicit dancing, as well as liquor violations. This address sent the people home with a profound impression that prohibition work is far from completed.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Mary L. Mallett; vice-president, Mrs. J. J. McAllister; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Roselma F. Strohmeyer; recording secretary, Mrs. Iva L. Colcord; treasurer, Mrs. Jane M. Donaldson.

Empty Bottles Bearing Genuine Whisky Labels Imported From Canada and Sold to Bootleggers

According to reports received by Prohibition Commissioner Haynes, empty bottles bearing genuine whisky labels are being imported from Canada and sold to bootleggers. Inquiry by customs officials elicited the information that the bottles are shipped to a chain of stores ostensibly for "bottling vinegar," according to the report. The bottles are chiefly of the type of well-known brands, but are peddled with home-made, over-night concoctions of denatured alcohol or doctored moonshine.

The same condition exists on the Mexican border, it is said, dealers in Juarez finding a ready market for empty liquor bottles, and double price is paid when labels are not broken. Drinks resembling whisky, wines, beer, tequilla and other liquors of Juarez, containing injurious elements, although sealed as genuine, have been found on this side.

WHOOPING COUGH

Asthma, Spasmodic Croup
Bronchitis, Coughs & Influenza

The most widely used remedy for whooping cough and spasmodic croop. The little lamp vaporizes the remedy while the patient sleeps.

Introduced in 1879 Vapo-Cresolene "Used while you sleep"

Send for Descriptive Booklet 44A Sold by Druggists
VAPO-CRESOLENE CO., 62 Cortlandt St., New York

Prohibition Is Here to Stay, Says President Harding

The dry act is on the statute books to stay and America will never depart from it, President Harding told a delegation of the Allied Christian Agencies who visited the nation's capital. Some features of the law are difficult of enforcement, but the spirit of prohibition will be carried out and there will never be a return to the open saloon or manufacture of liquor, he asserted.

Jail Sentences for Dry Law Violators, Policy of Some New York Judges

"The attitude of the Federal courts in the state of New York in respect to prohibition cases is very commendable," says Federal Prohibition Director R. A. Day of New York. "The judges, irrespective of personal opinions, are 'for the law' at all times, letting no opportunity pass to show their favorable attitude toward enforcement. Both within and without the court room they have expressed the opinion that since this law is now a part of the constitution it stands upon the same plane as any other Federal law, and must be given the same respect and be likewise obeyed. They are imposing heavier jail sentences and fines. In fact, some judges in the Eastern District not only have announced a policy of 'no more fines' but hereafter every conviction will carry a jail sentence, or both fine and imprisonment."

Unexcelled for repairing china, glassware, earthenware, furniture, vases, books, etc. Famous since 1876. Major's rubber and Leather Cements are good.
Three kinds, 20c per bottle at dealers, or write us.
MAJOR MFG. CO., NEW YORK

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN

NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly — Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year in Advance

Entered as second class matter at the Postoffice at Evanston, Illinois

Vol. XLVIII — EVANSTON, ILLINOIS, NOVEMBER 23, 1922 — No. 47

High Points of World's and National W. C. T. U. Conventions

Philadelphia, Pa.

Delegates En Route to Philadelphia Received by President Harding at White House.

Record-Breaking Audiences Attend Conventions. Overflow Meetings to Accommodate Crowds Held Afternoons and Evenings. Both Conventions Largest in History of Organization.

Great Rejoicing Over Three-Fold Victory: (1) United States House of Representatives Retains Dry Majority; Increased Majority in United States Senate; (2) California Gives Big Majority for Wright Enforcement Law; (3) Ohio Defeats Wine and Beer Measure by Overwhelming Majority.

Anna Adams Gordon Elected President World's W.C.T.U.; Dagmar Prior of Denmark, Vice-President; Agnes E. Slack of England and Blanche Read Johnston of Canada, Honorary Secretaries; Ella A. Boole, Honorary Treasurer.

Officers of National W. C. T. U. Re-elected: Anna Adams Gordon, President; Ella A. Boole, Vice-President-at-Large; Corresponding Secretary, Frances P. Parks; Recording Secretary, Elizabeth P. Anderson; Assistant Recording Secretary, Sara H. Hoge; Treasurer, Margaret C. Munns.

FIRST CONVENTION NUMBER

OFFICIAL WASHINGTON

THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

LENNA LOWE YOST, National W. C. T. U. Legislative Representative, Washington, D. C.

The Department of Justice, which is presided over by the Attorney General of the United States, is by many times over the biggest legal institution in this country or the world. As chief law officer of the government, the Attorney General is called upon to give advice as to more important and perplexing problems than come to a judge or an attorney in a long and varied experience The Department of Justice is one part of the government which does its work quietly and unostentatiously. It grinds as a rule slowly but exceeding sure.

It is seldom that the Attorney General in person appears in the Supreme Court room at the Capitol, but occasionally he does when matters of especial gravity and importance are to be submitted. The function of the Solicitor General is to appear in the highest court of the land and represent the Government and the head of the Justice department. In other instances the assistant to the Attorney General or one of the Assistant Attorneys General represents the chief.

The small army of United States attorneys and United States marshals in the states and territories are under the general superintendence and direction of the Attorney General. In addition, there is a solicitor for the Departments of State, Treasury, Interior, Commerce, Labor, and for the Internal Revenue Bureau, who function through the legal department.

Prosecutions of offenses against the government as well as the handling of civil cases in which the government is a party are the duty of the Attorney General. With the exception of cases having to do with the Army and Navy, all applications for executive clemency must come through the Department of Justice, there being under the Attorney General an attorney in charge of pardons and a superintendent of prisons. The pardon attorney handles all details in connection with petitions for clemency coming to the department, advising with the Superintendent of Prisons in the handling of the same, before forwarding his conclusions to the Attorney General.

United States Prisons

The Superintendent of Prisons as a rule is and should be one who is a humanitarian as well as a person of sound judgment and high character. He is in charge of all matters relating to the United States prisons or prisoners, including the support of such prisoners in both Federal and state penitentiaries, in reform schools, and in county jails. He has supervision over all construction work in progress at United States penal institutions, and is president of the boards of paroles of the prisoners in these or other like institutions.

Director of Bureau of Investigation

Under the very unimpressive title of Director and Chief of the Bureau of Investigation, this officer of the department is in charge of the work which, if it could be public, would provide material for more thrilling stories possibly than any other branch of the government service. The Bureau of Investigation is the real secret service bureau of the government. In the Postoffice Department the Chief of Inspectors has a force of men who look into mail robberies, improper use of the mails, etc., and in the Treasury Department there is a secret service force which has to do with the apprehension of counterfeiting and other offenses against the treasury.

Bureau of Investigation

But, it is to the Bureau of Investigation that falls the work of locating plotters against the government itself, and these plotters proceed in many and devious ways. The activity of the bureau is covered in the phrase, the "detection and prosecution of crimes." Agents of the bureau are scattered to the four winds. They are alert, trained, ready to face any possible situation which may arise, and men of courage and resourcefulness.

Irregular situations growing out of transactions connected with the departments other than the Treasury and the Postoffice, call for attention from agents of the Bureau of Investigation. It is necessary that their work be done quietly. Often they are compelled to resort to dual personalities in order to get the evidence necessary to support an arrest and a prosecution following an arrest.

In the department, in addition to those officers already listed, there is a chief clerk and administrative assistant, a disbursing clerk, an appointment clerk, a private secretary, assistant to the Attorney General, an Attorney in Charge of Titles, a chief of the Division of Accounts, all located in the main building which houses the Department of Justice in Washington.

The assistant to the Attorney General, who acts in the absence from his duties of the latter, has special charge of all suits and other matters arising under the Federal anti-trust and interstate commerce laws. By personal direction of the Attorney General, other duties may be assigned to him.

To the several Assistant Attorneys General, in addition to the usual and ordinary duties they may have under the law, particular subjects are assigned, and they transact the business arising under these subjects with the United States attorneys, other departments, and private parties in interest. One of these assistants, who is in charge of the interests of the government in all matters of reappraisement and classification of imported goods in litigation before the several boards of United States general appraisers and the Court of Customs Appeals, is located in New York City.

Women Attorneys General

A recent innovation was the appointment of women as Assistant Attorneys General. There have been two and both have made fine records in this work. The presumption is that from now on women will be given recognition in this connection, and it is of course probable that more of them will be found occupying this important position in the important department of the Federal Service.

The private secretary and assistant in the Legal Department is a person of much more importance than is usual in one holding this type of a position. In addition to the usual duties devolving upon a private secretary, he is required to consider and investigate the qualifications of all applicants for appointment as United States judge, United States district attorney or marshal, and other applicants for positions under the department.

Titles

One of the busiest offices of the department is that of the Attorney in charge of Titles, who prepares opinions upon the title to lands belonging to or sought to be acquired by the government for public purposes and the opinions upon all legal matters growing out of the same. He has charge of all proceedings to acquire land under eminent domain.

CALENDARS OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

The Calendars of the House of Representatives are five in all, but the bulk of the business is transacted by three, to which are referred matters reported from the Committees. These are the Union, House, and Private Calendars.

The others are Unanimous Consent and Motions to Discharge Committees.

1. To the Union Calendar, known as Calendar on Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, are referred bills of a public character, directly or indirectly appropriating money or property.

2. To the House Calendar are referred all bills affecting the general public, but having no relation to raising revenue, or directly or indirectly appropriating money or property.

3. The Private Calendar on the Committee of the Whole House carries bills for pensions or claims for the relief of some individual, church, or corporation, or any other private bill.

4. After a bill is reported favorably, a member may file with the clerk a motion that he desires a bill placed upon a special Calendar, which is known as the Calendar for Unanimous Consent; on days when it is in order to move to suspend the rules, the Speaker, immediately after the approval of the Journal, directs the clerk to call all the bills which have been for three days upon this Calendar. Should any objection be made to the consideration of any bill so called, it is stricken from the Calendar.

5. The Calendar on Motions to Discharge Committees is almost obsolete, because the Committees usually make their reports before the motions on the Calendar are reached.

In addition to the above, there is what is known as the suspension of rules, which can be done by a vote of two-thirds of the members voting, a quorum being present, and this motion can be made on the first and third Mondays of each month, preference being given the first Monday to individuals and on the third Monday to Committees, and during the last six days of the session.

WORLD PROHIBITION, WORLD PURITY, WORLD PEACE OUR INTERNATIONAL GOAL

PROHIBITION MAGNIFICENTLY JUSTIFIED

Anna Adams Gordon, National W. C. T. U. President

Address (In Part) at National W. C. T. U. Convention

The campaign of 1922 has been a lively one. The drys were stirred but not "scared" by the reckless propaganda of the wets. The bravado of the "Battle Hymn of the Wets" did not fire our voters as did the home appeal of the "Battle Song of the Drys." "There's something in the air!" sang the wet soloists. Yes, we agree that there is something in the air—but it's a song of love, liberty and law, not the praise of wine and beer. It is the tender lullaby, the cradle song of mothers as they croon to sleep their little ones; it is the campaign chorus of the great multitude of constructive drys who, in community, city, state and nation are upholding America and her Constitutional liberties; it is a song of gratitude that we live in a land whose flag floats over homes free from the demoralizing saloon.

Would-be nullifiers of the Constitution sent out as a rallying slogan, "The Liberty Bell Must Ring Again," and thereby trampled unpardonably upon the sacred inheritance of this "land of the free and home of the brave." We hereby remind the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment of the glorious fact that the Liberty bell did ring again on January 16, 1919, when the proclamation for Constitutional Prohibition was written in the office of the Secretary of State at Washington, and once more liberty was proclaimed "to all the land and to all the inhabitants thereof." We know they are suffering from the dry wind that daily blows from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Great Lakes to the Gulf. We congratulate ourselves that the frightened forces of the wets have been driven to copy the Jubilee plans of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, with numerous state divisions, seems to be working for a million members and a million dollars! 1924 is our Jubilee Year. "Out of the Dry Trenches by 1924" is one of the choice slogans of the wets. "To Elect a Beer Congress by 1924" is their announced aim. "To Hold a Dry Congress" is the firm determination of the temperance forces. We urge our anti-prohibition friends to "get the hang of the Declaration of Independence" as Champ Clark termed it, and to feel at home with us in the dry trenches.

Philadelphia, the home of Benjamin Franklin, is a good locality in which to forge the thunderbolts of righteous indignation and informed public opinion which shall put a final quietus upon the disloyal plans and purposes of the notorious anti-prohibition associations. For "Historic Philadelphia" is the patriotic heart of our great republic—the city of brotherly and sisterly love. Here was framed that immortal document, the Constitution of the United States, into which recently has been written the Eighteenth Amendment prohibiting the manufacture, the sale, the transportation, the importation and the exportation of intoxicating liquors.

In yonder Independence Hall, Liberty had its birth. On July fourth, 1776, the Liberty Bell pealed out its marvelous message. How eminently appropriate it is that in historic Philadelphia the voice of the representative motherhood of the world should interpret to the farthest corner of this war-sick, sin-sick, alcohol-sick world the true liberty, the real freedom that yet shall come to all the world—a freedom from the subtle, scheming enemies of home and childhood; of health and business prosperity.

* * * * *

Our Family of Nations

Assembled today in the forty-eighth annual "Harvest Home" of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, we are encompassed by a delightful atmosphere of international, intersphering comradeship. Our World's W. C. T. U. convention, with its superb personnel, was a mighty inspiration and education. We rejoice that many of our white ribbon leaders from other countries—women who have traveled many thousands of miles over sea and land—tarry with us for our national meeting. Warmly we welcome you, honored and beloved comrades and friends. Together we have learned to think internationally; together we have reasoned of justice and unselfishness in international relations and have discussed new ways of promoting the speedy coming of world-prohibition, world-purity, and world-peace. Together we have cultivated the international heart as well as the international mind. With reverence and a devout spirit we have been sitting together in heavenly places. "The heart of the world is singing a song and its burden is 'be free.'" It is only as we apply to suffering and backward peoples the Golden Rule of Christ, that the "fetters forged for a million years shall break."

* * * * *

Our white ribbon organizers, following the watchword adopted by the United States W. C. T. U., "Agitate, Educate, Organize, Legislate," have closely united in our World's W. C. T. U. forty-two countries—a White Ribbon League of Nations—a hopeful prophecy of the day of universal brotherhood and peace.

The nations grouped in our promising "Family," because the W. C. T. U. has been organized in each and is nationally strong in many, are:

Argentina, Australia, Belgium, Bermuda, British Honduras, Bulgaria, Brazil, Burma, Canada, Ceylon, China, Costa Rica, Cuba, Denmark, England, Egypt, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Iceland, India, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Korea, Madagascar, Madeira, Mexico, Newfoundland, New Zealand, Norway, Panama, Scotland, South Africa, Sweden, Syria, Switzerland, Turkey, Uruguay, United States, West Africa.

Twenty-seven of these sisterhoods have been represented by delegates at the World's W. C. T. U. Convention just closed.

* * * * *

The World's W. C. T. U. was organized in 1883 and held its first convention in 1891 in Boston. Our international program preceded, by nearly forty years, the world temperance movement in which today we are gladly co-operating. We anticipate the opportunity we shall enjoy of sharing in the proceedings of the first convention of the World League against Alcoholism, soon to meet in the queenly city of Toronto. God, in His gracious providence, placed W. C. T. U. women, mothers of the race and protectors of the home, in the vanguard of nineteenth century temperance educators, organizers and legislators. Now we march side by side with our brothers and with the militant hosts of the churches of all denominations, in noble campaigns in many lands for total abstinence and prohibition.

Co-operation with church and other temperance organizations is essential to successful progress toward our common objective. It will require prayer, patriotism, push and "pep"; preaching from pulpit, platform and press; parades, posters, publicity, patience, perseverance and political sagacity, combined with plenty of cash, consecration and common sense to reach the haven of world prohibition! But temperance reformers delight in large undertakings! We are thrilled by the belief that we shall win "the fight for a clear brain—the holiest fight this side Jehovah's throne."

No other temperance organization has laid such strong foundations for world-wide victory as has the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Our sacred resolve to help meet the unparalleled need of every land calls for increased faith, and demands a greatness and a grandeur of consecration that links up with the heroic men and women who, in the world-war, patriotically answered the call to the colors. With thankful hearts the members of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, nearly a million strong, in forty-two nations of Europe, Asia, Africa, Australasia, North and South America, greet and co-operate with every temperance force engaged in the fight for a clear brain.

There must be a renaissance of the Polyglot Petition, that sacred document which was bequeathed to us by the founder of the World's W. C. T. U. Its great mission is not yet fulfilled. This petition is addressed to all the governments of the world, hence, its name, "Polyglot," and it prays all governments to strip away from the drink traffic and the opium trade the safeguards and sanctions of the state. A generation has grown to manhood and womanhood since this petition started on its eventful journey. This past year our young people have been adding signatures to its historic rolls. The huge document, representing more than 7,000,000 petitioners, has been presented to the mother country and to the United States and Canada. We sincerely hope it may, ere long, become a sentiment-maker in the Orient, Africa, Europe and in South America, through its formal presentation to government leaders. Forty-nine countries are represented in this remarkable appeal. Miss Willard says that to enumerate the languages in whose characters the beliefs of women have been moulded to action by this far-reaching petition would be to make a list of almost every tongue that has survived the confusion of Babel. Catholics, Protestants, pagans—all are represented. Almost every nation, tribe and people of the earth unites in this prayer for deliverance from the great curses of the world.

NO COMEBACK FOR BEER AND WINE; WOMEN DEMAND THIS GUARANTEE, TO SAFEGUARD CHILDHOOD

Prohibition history is repeating itself. In the United States we began our "drying" process with the small unit of the locality. To secure more adequate enforcement in the locality required the extension of the dry area to the next larger unit—the county. Then came the state campaigns and when thirty-three commonwealths had themselves ousted the traffic, we were ready to secure the Federal law. Now we are faced with the compelling need of converting to the prohibition standard the largest area—the world itself—the many lands with which great oceans connect us. Hence, our complete dedication to the glorious, inspiring proposition of a world redeemed from the greatest curse of civilization.

The Christian student of history is always an optimist. We believe that world prohibition of the beverage liquor traffic will come and that we shall live to see that triumphant day. This significant gathering will hasten the coming of the victory, for the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in its spirit and platform, is as broad as the universe, as high as the sky above, and as deep as the unfathomable pathos of the human heart.

(At this point Miss Gordon gave outstanding events of the past year.)

* * * * *

The Eighteenth Amendment has been in force less than three years but in this short period of time it has magnificently justified the hopes and predictions of those who toiled to bring about its adoption. There are violations of the law—many and flagrant; the Federal machinery is not yet adequate to meet the demands of the situation. In spite of these adverse conditions, which are steadily improving, the benefits of prohibition to the business world are universally acknowledged. The important fact has been established that revenue from the liquor traffic is not needed to help run the Government. Bar-less hotels, far from being obliged to close their doors for lack of custom, are so prosperous they cannot take care of would-be guests and must provide larger accommodations for their vastly increased patronage. Best of all, the saloon—"the recruiting station of new drinkers"—has been banished forever. White ribboners know that a prohibitory law does not legislate away appetite and avarice and that for a period of years ahead we must face a stubborn fight for law enforcement in which our now enfranchised women will be active participants.

(We regret that limitation of space will not permit giving the fine testimonies on the benefits of prohibition listed by Miss Gordon.)

No Comeback for Beer and Wine

The brewing and distilling business in Uncle Sam's domain must continue to be referred to in the past tense. So the electorate of the United States declared at the general election, November 7. So we predict the newly elected Sixty-Eighth Congress will soon affirm. So says the latest edition of the Encyclopedia Americana—published, by the way, on Philadelphia presses—which states that beer and wine and the names of other intoxicants are obsolete. This valuable conpendium rightly takes cognizance of the constitutional law of the United States, and in its treatises on intoxicating liquors, so far as the United States is concerned, consistently substitutes the past for the present tense. Any saloon property salvaged by its owners in the hope that the manufacture and sale of beer and wine will again be legalized, might as well be sold for constructive business purposes. Its gilded mirrors and mahogany bars have had their direful day.

* * * * *

That distinguished American statesman, philanthropist, philosopher, and diplomat, Benjamin Franklin, ever will be associated with the history of Philadelphia's renowned men and women. Born in Boston in 1706, the fifteenth of seventeen little Franklins, Benjamin in his early teens secured a position in a Philadelphia printing shop. His many discoveries regarding laws that regulate electricity brought him world renown and honors, and he was made an associate of the Academy of Sciences at Paris, as Leibnitz and Newton had been before him. In his youth, Franklin resided for a year in London, England, and while there, made a statement about beer which has become famous and which is here recorded for the benefit of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, and all those who are striving to bring back to the United States the legalized manufacture and sale of beer and wine with more than one-half of one per cent of alcohol:

"At my first admission into this printing house (at London) I took to working at press, imagining I felt a want of the bodily exercise I had been used to in America, where presswork is mixed with composing. I drank only water; the other workmen, near fifty in number, were great guzzlers of beer. On occasion, I carried up and down stairs a large form of types in each hand, when others carried but one in both hands. They wondered to see, from this and several instances, that the water-American, as they called me, was stronger than themselves, who drank strong beer! My companion at the press drank every day a pint before breakfast, a pint at breakfast with his bread and cheese, a pint between breakfast and dinner, a pint at dinner, a pint in the afternoon about six o'clock and another when he had done his day's work. I thought it a detestable custom; but it was necessary, he supposed, to drink strong beer, that he might be strong to labor. I endeavored to convince him that the bodily strength afforded by beer could only be in proportion to the grain of flour of the barley dissolved in the water of which it was made; that there was more flour in a penny-worth of bread, and, therefore, if he would eat that with a pint of water, it would give him more strength than a quart of beer. He drank on, however, and had four or five shillings to pay out of his wages every Saturday night for that muddling liquor—an expense I was free from. And thus these poor devils keep themselves always under."

Theodore Roosevelt, while police commissioner of New York City, refuted in characteristic fashion the delusion that the use of beer is an incentive to intellectual thought. "Do you know," he said, holding up his glass and looking through the amber-hued liquid, "that there is not a thought in a hogshead of beer; that there is not an idea in a whole brewery?" "I mean," continued the civil service reformer, "that nothing of merit was ever written under the inspiration of lager-beer. It stupefies without invigorating, and its effect upon the brain is to stagnate thought."

Shortly after the great fire in Chicago, at a meeting of one hundred or more gentlemen, former residents of the north side, where wide tracts of the beautiful lake shore had for years been ruined for homes, or investment, by the great breweries of that quarter, William Lill, a citizen of large wealth, whose thirty years' experience as a brewer had placed him confessedly at the head of his guild in the northwest, was among the speakers. The question turning upon the rebuilding of the breweries, Mr. Lill said that he would never build or own another brewery. It was a business that demoralized both master and man. He had found it impossible to keep sober men on his premises. It was a manufactory of drunkards in constant operation; and the curse began in the brewery itself, where every man was a beer-barrel in the morning and a barrel of beer at night. He would have no more of it. He would be content to make less money in some other way.

Prominent members of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment claim that beer is a healthful drink. We have a "thus saith science" on the effect of the alcohol in beer and wine. Experimentation and expert investigation in many lands agree as to the harmful nature of these so-called light drinks. Dr. W. A. Evans, former health commissioner of Chicago, writing in his health column in the Chicago Tribune in September, tersely says: "God made water for man to drink and man was built on the basis of water as his beverage, and not even a member of the President's Cabinet can improve on God and God's works. Water can get into stomachs and stay there with satisfaction to all concerned where beer finds the 'no admittance' sign."

The United States will not take down its "no admittance" sign—there will be no comeback for beer and wine.

The Magic Hand of Law

Our twentieth century's civilization rests upon the observance and enforcement of righteous law. Theodore Roosevelt emphatically expounded this truth when he said, "No man is above the law and no man is below it; nor do we ask any man's permission when we require him to obey it. Obedience to the law is demanded as a right; not asked as a favor." Home-loving women demand this guarantee of the present and future well-being of their children. The hand of the mother, reaching out in patriotic appeal from the home of the degenerate drinker to the heart and conscience of the patriotic voter, invoked the magic hand of law and gave to our great republic the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution.

While the great outstanding fact that the Eighteenth Amendment is based on a right political principle assures us of its permanence and power, yet it behooves the dry forces of the United States to be intelligently alert and vigilantly on guard to hold the Federal enforcement act to its present status in Congress and in the state legislatures. Law observance and law enforcement; the duties and privileges of citizenship; the value of the best publicity and how to prepare and get it across; a new purpose to educate and train the youth and children of America; these are some of the glowing factors of our 1923 program, which must be carried to success in each and every one of our fundamental departments. The dry forces are not yet entitled to diplomas in the school of how to hold victorious prohibition heights. Their ardor for educational propaganda too quickly cools. They go contentedly about other tasks; they trip along other and possibly more congenial highways of social welfare service, and, for lack of thought, rather than for lack of heart, give to the unscrupulous, unfair, unpatriotic and wicked campaign of would-be nullifiers of the Constitution, a deplorable advantage.

WAR A CRIME AGAINST HUMANITY—A GENERATION MUST BE EDUCATED TO A KNOWLEDGE OF THIS TRUTH

Women in large majorities are now exemplifying the affirmation of a great poet that "Love is law and law is love." "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor" is the altruistic truth on which our National W. C. T. U. is founded. Its members are love in action, therefore, they are law in action.

* * * * *

Emancipated by the Nineteenth Amendment, woman is now a law-maker. Equal in education with man, and excelling in the sacrifice that is symbolized in the Golden Rule of Christ, she will steadfastly invoke the magic hand of law until public opinion brings the golden age of man. As mother and as public school teacher, hers is the magic hand that points out to millions of boys and girls, thousands of them untaught chemical amalgams of America and Europe, that the way of safety both for the individual and the nation is the way of sobriety, the way of moral health, the way of economic prosperity.

With public sentiment kindled to a realization of the vast importance of law observance there will be a deepened desire for law enforcement. It is my firm belief that already the majority of our people recognize the benefits that accrue from prohibition well enforced. All they need is to be told the truth. Banded ill should be offset by banded good. In popular parlance, it has been well said that "it's dogged as does it." The American mother, fully aroused in defense of her young, is something to be reckoned with. In tremendous earnest the women of America are down on those anti-prohibition organizations that are working to nullify the Eighteenth Amendment.

An avenue of approach to unawakened people must be found through press and platform, the church and social centers. The W. C. T. U. invites every woman everywhere to become a law observance publicity agent. Our organization is well equipped with constructive conversationalists, persuasive penwomen, persistent publicists, enthusiastic enforcers, big-brained law makers, trained teachers and "Made in America" mothers. With dry and dogged zeal women will continue to invoke the magic hand of law.

Women Will Win

"Who will kill the liquor dragon, Mother," asks a little daughter in Kathleen Norris' choice "Dragon Story" recently syndicated through our big city newspapers. "American women will kill it, God willing," earnestly answers the mother, "the women who have suffered shame and hurt and want and wrong for too many years; the women who have loved some poor victim; the women who have Marys and Tommies to guard from danger." To Kathleen Norris, an eloquent champion of prohibition, as well as a popular novelist, we are greatly indebted for our Star-in-the-Window poster idea—the star gleaming over the home appeal, "Serve America, Support the Constitution."

In this beautiful Quaker City, in 1777, Betsy Ross designed and made, under the supervision of George Washington, the first specimen of our American flag—our star spangled banner whose blue field now contains forty-eight instead of the original thirteen gleaming stars. Patriotic women of America, admitted to full citizenship by the Nineteenth Amendment to the Constitution, as guardians of the home and of the child will be true to Old Glory and will steadfastly uphold the high ideals of this great republic.

* * * * *

Clear-visioned women can see through the subterfuges and sophistries of the opponents of prohibition and estimate aright the value of the Eighteenth Amendment to home and society. On November 7 they showed their patriotism by arousing other women voters to a realization of the vital issue of the 1922 campaign; they made it a matter of conscience to join the "March of Allegiance" to the polls to cast their ballots for law makers who can be depended upon to keep sharply after law breakers and to support the Eighteenth Amendment and the Enforcement Code.

The name of each and every member of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, card-indexed by Congressional Districts, should be on file at our Washington Legislative headquarters. As citizens we have pledged ourselves not alone to total abstinence but to "do all in our power for the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment." The names of our present members should be sent to Washington and the assurance given all who in the future unite with us that their names will at once be forwarded to the seat of government to be on file and ready to be shown, when necessary, to members of Congress. Let us have at the capital of our nation a line-up of the women of America who, "God willing, will kill the liquor dragon."

Purity

In our Declaration of Principles adopted in 1874, we affirmed our belief in the same standard of purity for both men and women. This belief we have reaffirmed at every succeeding convention. Our constructive program for social morality work along preventive, protective, educational and legislative lines is now even greater than our remedial work. Co-operation with the American Social Hygiene Association and the National Health Council and representation at many national social morality conferences, has increased the influence of the high standard of purity of our organization. There is still a formidable task ahead, for in the opinion of medical experts (both men and women), taking the nation as a whole, there is vast need of raising the standard of sex morality.

We must work to secure better enforcement of the laws against commercialized vice. This means creating a right-minded public sentiment, through systematic education of mothers, fathers and teachers and the careful instruction, along purity lines, of boys and girls.

Co-operation with community educational programs and protective officers; women police and leaders of community playgrounds; the careful circulation of the best literature; the use of good moving pictures, and the presentation to the public of constructive social morality ideals by wise and sympathetic physicians, are some of many methods of service which present themselves to every rural, as well as to every city W. C. T. U.

A high standard of social morality in the United States will greatly hasten the advance toward our international goal—"when each man's habits of life will be safe and beneficent for every other man to follow."

Peace

A world-wide family of nations associated in all the constructive activities of peace and good-will has ever been the vision of the National and World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union. One of the greatest problems before the world today is to find the shortest cut to such an understanding between the nations as shall lead to world-peace. For over forty years we have been following this long, long trail.

The magnificent program for the reduction of naval armaments, presented by Secretary of State, Charles Evans Hughes, at the Conference for the Limitation of Armaments held in Washington, D. C., November, 1921, met with the acclaim of the whole world. It gives the keynote for humanity's chorus and is in harmony with the song of the angels, "Peace on earth."

* * * * *

The Woman's Peace Petition, promoted by our national superintendent of the department of Peace and Arbitration, Miss Alice L. Kercher, and assembled at our Washington Headquarters by Mrs. Lenna Lowe Yost, was presented to the Secretary of State at the time of the Disarmament Conference. The petition contains the individual signatures of 199,531 women of the United States, and the signatures of presidents of national organizations brought the total number of petitioners to 2,506,684. The National W. C. T. U. is in sympathetic co-operation with the National Council for the Prevention of War, and fellowships with all societies of like purpose. The W. C. T. U. participated in the observance of "No More War Day."

War is a crime against humanity, and the women of America have the responsibility of teaching this truth in the public school, the Sunday school, and in the home. A generation must be reared to hate war and to love peace. This thought should permeate the histories studied, the books read, and the pictures seen by the boys and girls of today. We must

(Continued on Page Ten)

MILESTONES IN THE MILLION MEMBERS CAMPAIGN

Frances P. Parks, National Corresponding Secretary

REPORT GIVEN AT NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION

Five years under the shadow of the World War brought into genuine fellowship and co-operation a number of the powerful women's organizations of this country. Public opinion having conceded it was women who put through prohibition—essentially a social problem touching family life—organized woman power must lift the home to a higher plane with the lever of the ballot and help to stabilize our country as she passes through these years of upheaval. Other organizations of women are turning more and more for co-operation to that pioneer in woman's work for the home, to the leading woman's organization in the battle for prohibition and a close second in the struggle for the ballot, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

United For Service

Ten million women, including the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, are working through such joint non-partisan organizations as the Mothers' Congress and Parent-Teacher Association, General Federation of Women's Clubs, Association of University Women, Women's Trade Union League, and League of Women Voters to prevent enactment of anti-prohibition legislation.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union also joins heartily in the efforts of the Mothers' Congress and Parent-Teacher Association for the betterment of conditions for the twenty-five million children and nearly a million teachers in the public schools of the country; it unites its strength with that of the General Federation of Women's Clubs to promote peace by international relations; it supports the recently launched movement of the American Association of University Women for a broader education for women; it endeavors wisely to promote that humanizing, socializing and spiritualizing of the industrial system which is the ultimate goal of the Women's Trade Union League; it links its work for citizenship with the broad-gauged program of the League of Women Voters. We remember with gratitude that all these high purposes are embodied in that wonderful Declaration of Principles, written in 1875 by Frances E. Willard, under which for nearly a half century the Woman's Christian Temperaance Union has been at work.

Service and Unity

In many other co-operative fields the aid of the National W. C. T. U. has been sought. Miss Gordon, Dr. Parker, Dr. Bourdeau-Sisco and Mrs. Yost are members of the House of Delegates in the Women's Foundation for Health. Mrs. Boole is one of the trustees. The purpose of the Foundation is defined: "To correlate the Health Activities of national women's organizations and put on a program emphasizing the positive phase of health." Dr. Sisco also represents our organization on the Women's Advisory Council to the United States Public Health Service.

A petition to President Harding to use his great influence to bring about the creation of a Department of Education with a secretary in the Cabinet was signed by the presidents of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, National Education Association, National Committee for a Department of Education, American Council on Education, American Library Association, General Federation of Women's Clubs, National Society of Daughters of the American Revolution, National Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Association, National Council of Jewish Women, Woman's Relief Corps, National Federation of Musical Clubs, American Federation of Labor, Grand Commander of the Supreme Council of the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry, and Chairman of the Committee on Education, Sunday School Council of Evangelical Denominations and the International Sunday School Association.

"Taking 'Ill' out of Illiteracy" is a problem the W. C T. U. Illiteracy Committee is to help the National Council of Illiteracy solve. How the Moonlight Schools for grown-ups are civilizing the mountain illiterates of the South is a story of absorbing interest. "But we don't wait for moonlight nights any more," says Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, with whom the idea originated. "The people themselves stopped that. Rain or shine, with lanterns in their feeble hands, they fare forth on starlit or stormy nights—it makes no difference. Ten years—just a decade—have demonstrated that the fight against illiteracy can be won." This movement has the co-operation of many organizations and "The Lady of Moonlight" looks forward hopefully to a not far-distant day when the census takers, making the rounds of this vast country, will find no single person who has reached manhood or womanhood unable to read and write.

The Americanization Commission of the American Legion gratefully acknowledged community co-operation in "American Education Week," December 4-10, 1921, and urgently requests that the National W. C. T. U. join hands with the American Legion and all other patriotic and civic organizations of a national character to observe December 3-9, 1922, as "American Education Week."

"All over America," to quote Mrs. William Brown Meloney, editor of the Delineator. "W. C. T. U. women helped to inaugurate the Better Homes for America Campaign." The Better Homes campaigners aim to educate the public in making the homes of America more convenient, more comfortable, more attractive, more wholesome. Having helped to provide the economic background for better homes, this appeal for co-operation found a ready response from white ribboners, many of whom served as chairmen or members of community committees for Better Homes Week in October. In this connection it may be noted that the Delineator, a magazine devoted to service for women, and the financial sponsor for the Better Homes campaign, has stood for prohibition for fifty years and has never carried a liquor or cigarette advertisement.

Encouraging evidences are to be seen of the desire of the better class of colored people to align themselves on the side of moral reform and obedience to law. Appeals have come to the General Officers to provide speakers on these topics for national gatherings of colored people. The National Association of Colored Women, having a membership of 100,000, asked for a speaker for its annual convention "to present the educational program of the W. C. T U. and to urge the importance to the colored people of the enforcement of prohibition laws." A similar request was received from the convener of the National Conference on Temperance, Public Morals and Law Enforcement, which was held in Nashville last month. This was the first conference of the kind ever called by colored people and was largely attended. Mrs. Margaret Peck Hill proved an acceptable speaker for both of these meetings. In response to a request for an inspirational speaker and a teacher for training classes in the Connectional Young People's Congress, A. M. E. Church, an important meeting held in Chicago in August, Mrs. Violet Hill Whyte, field worker in the national department of Work Among Colored People, was sent.

You Are Invited—

On invitation of Dr. Bestor, president of Chautauqua Institution, July 15th was observed as National W. C. T. U. Day on the general program. In the wide range of subjects discussed at the summer sessions from that far-famed Chautauqua platform, none met with a more spontaneous response than was given to that presented in the address by Dr. Valeria H. Parker on that occasion. She spoke a second time at a special W. C. T. U. meeting held in the Hall of Philosophy, courteously placed at the disposal of our National representative, Mrs. Maude B. Perkins, on Saturday afternoons for the period of the Summer Schools. Among the speakers for these popular meetings in the Hall of Philosophy were Mrs. Ella M. George, president of Pennsylvania W. C. T. U.; Mrs. Margaret B. Denning, for ten years president of the National W. C. T. U. of India, and other prominent white ribboners.

National W. C. T. U. headquarters in Kellogg Hall was opened in June for the biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, with Mrs. Carolyn P. Lindsay in charge. Twice a day groups of people, under a special guide, visited the exhibit prepared to show the relation between lines of work common to the G. F. W. C. and the N. W. C. T. U.

An interesting side-light was thrown on the convention by a state Federation president. "Day by day," said Mrs. Rounds, "as the theme of prohibition appeared like a golden thread running through all the speeches and was embodied in the convention resolutions, white ribbons blossomed out in that great amphitheater, till the biennial looked like a W. C. T. U. convention!"

The calendar of national conferences and conventions for 1921-22 has been closely akin to the calendar of engagements for official representatives of the National W. C. T. U. to attend annual meetings of other organizations. Mrs. Livingston and Mrs. Yost were delegates to the convention of the National League

(Continued on Page Seven)

NATIONAL TREASURER'S REPORT

Margaret C. Munns

STATEMENT OF CASH RECEIPTS AND DISBURSEMENTS

November 1, 1921, to October 31, 1922

Cash Balance at November 1, 1921		$ 24,093.25
Receipts—
General National Accounts	$37,838.85
Literature Revenues	40,675.38
Union Signal and Young Crusader Revenues	37,021.25
Jubilee Fund (Schedule 3)	20,293.42
Frances E. Willard Memorial Fund (Schedule 3)	11,506.54
Lillian Stevens Legislative Fund (Schedule 3)	5,158.19
Missionary and Relief Funds	4,024.79
Special Funds	275.00
Interest	32,723.90
Investments Sold, less Purchased	77,952.91
		$267,470.23
		$291,563.48
Disbursements—
General National Accounts	$38,367.80
Literature Dept. Expenditures	39,210.03
Circulation Dept. Expenditures	41,529.69
Jubilee Fund	119,936.82
Frances E. Willard Memorial Fund	8,910.36
Lillian Stevens Legislative Fund	4,871.18
Missionary and Relief Funds	4,024.79
Special Funds	56.13
Loans Made, less Repaid	8,250.00
		$265,156.80
Cash Balance at October 31, 1922		$ 26,406.68

GENERAL NATIONAL FUND

Balance of Fund at November 1, 1921		$ 82,580.45
Credits—
W. Dues (Schedule 2)	$34,969.10
Y. P. B. Dues (Schedule 2)	525.26
L. T. L. Dues (Schedule 2)	894.38
Life and Memorial Memberships (Schedule 1)	600.00
Rental and Sale of Moving Picture Film	565.00
Miscellaneous	285.11
Total Cash Receipts (interest excluded)	$37,838.85
Interest	2,604.21
Literature Dept. Surplus for Year	5,086.27
		$ 45,529.33
		$128,109.78
Charges—
World's W. C. T. U. Dues	$ 3,549.39
World's Life Memberships	200.00
Department Appropriations	9,250.00
Y. P. B. Appropriations	2,500.00
Salaries	9,900.00
Headquarters Fund	7,386.79
Printing	660.64
Postage	397.63
Telephone—Express	244.74
Property Expense	877.80
Moving Picture Film Expense	1,377.57
Miscellaneous	2,023.24
Total Cash Expenditures	$38,367.80
Circulation Dept. Deficit for Year	3,538.39
		$ 41,906.19
Balance of Fund at October 31, 1922		$ 86,203.59

LITERATURE DEPARTMENT STATEMENT

Cash Revenues—
Literature Sales	$40,640.27
Miscellaneous	35.11
		$40,675.38
Other Credits—
Literature Used by Other Depts., etc.	2,512.27
		$ 43,187.65

(Continued on Page Eight)

Corresponding Secretary's Report

(Continued from Page Six)

of Women Voters, which followed the Pan-American Conference of Women. The Conference of Social Workers welcomed Dr. Parker and Mrs. Perkins. Mrs. Vayhinger attended, as a member, the annual meeting of the National American Council. Mrs. Middleton was a delegate to the National Conference of Superintendence, and Miss Stoddard performed a similar duty at the convention of the National Education Association. Mrs. Miller represented us at the convention of the Young Women's Christian Association; Mrs. Irvine at the quadrennial convention of the International Sunday School Association. The officers of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, meeting in Philadelphia, expressed themselves as "particularly anxious that the National W. C. T. U. be represented" and Mrs. George, Mrs. Fahnestock and Mrs. Forney of our hostess committee, were made official representatives. Mrs. Burger carried a special message to the American Legion. An entirely new field of social endeavor was opened by the necessity of rehabilitating the wounded heroes of the World War. A balance of $4,000 in the Patriotic Fund was presented to the convention, through Mrs. Burger, to be used for permanently disabled men.

The General Officers have received from the National Executive Committee of The American Legion the following resolution of appreciation, beautifully engraved on handsome vellum paper, bearing the seal and the colors of the organization. The resolution reads:

Resolution

Adopted by the National Executive Committee of The American Legion in session November 2, 1921.

WHEREAS: the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union has generously offered the balance of its Patriotic Fund in the sum of $4,000 to The American Legion for the benefit of permanently disabled comrades; and

WHEREAS: this gift expresses, not money's worth alone, but sentiment and feeling which are beyond value;

BE IT HEREBY RESOLVED, That we accept this kindly tender with full appreciation of the spirit of the donors: and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That the gratitude of The American Legion be conveyed to them by this resolution duly inscribed and transmitted by the proper National Officers.

(Signed) Hanford MacNider, National Commander, Chairman.

(Attest) Lemuel Bolles, National Adjutant, Secretary.

(Seal)

A Program of Progress

The program of activities for 1921-22, adopted by the San Francisco Convention, was built on a basis of co-operation and team work. Every division has its own program of service, but these co-ordinated with the broad program of the organization. The Million Members Drive for this year has been primarily a campaign to arouse the sleeping consciences of the women voters, to instil

(Continued on Page Eight)

Cash Expenses—
Salaries	$ 9,864.30
Literature Stock	7,315.93
Printing	16,430.28
Postage	3,242.17
Telephone—Express	480.39
Advertising	57.92
Miscellaneous	1,819.04
	$39,210.03
Other Charges—
Expenses Paid with Complimentary Publications, etc.	1,523.14
		$ 40,733.17
Excess of Revenue over Expense		$ 2,454.48
Increase in Inventory of Stock and Accounts		2,631.79
Total Surplus for Year		$ 5,086.27

CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT STATEMENT

Cash Revenues—
Union Signal Subscriptions	$31,281.64
Young Crusader Subscriptions	4,293.18
Advertising	1,431.96
Miscellaneous	14.47
	$37,021.25
Other Credits—
Copies Furnished Other Depts	359.20
Exchange Advertising, etc	1,245.21
		$ 38,625.66
Cash Expenses—
Salaries	$ 9,716.89
Articles and Illustrations	1,060.39
Printing Papers	27,220.37
Miscellaneous Papers	185.33
Postage	1,667.04
Telephone—Express	127.34
Premiums and Prizes	72.01
Miscellaneous	1,480.32
	$41,529.69
Other Charges—
Expenses Paid with Complimentary Subscriptions, Advertising, etc.	634.36
		$ 42,164.05
Deficit for Year		$3,538.39

JUBILEE FUND

Balance of Fund at November 1, 1921		$643,096.66
Credits—
State Contributions—Cash	$20,293.42
State Contributions—Bonds	3,300.00
Total State Contributions (Schedule 3)	$23,593.42
Interest	30,119.69
		$ 53,713.11
		$696,809.77
Charges—
Americanization	$13,634.04
Child Welfare	18,409.69
Scientific Temperance Instruction and Investigation	4,839.22
Christian Citizenship	3,543.95
Publicity	6,101.90
Social Morality and Health	8,696.31
Women in Industry	4,266.23
World Prohibition	19,103.46
Evanston Headquarters	33,438.78
Equipment and Repairs National Headquarters	7,607.06
State Conferences	927.23
History	100.00
Miscellaneous	69.50
		$120,737.37
Balance of Fund at October 31, 1922		$576,072.40

MISSIONARY AND RELIEF FUNDS

World's Missionary Funds—
Women's	$ 177.93
Y. P. B.	433.76
L. T. L.	310.29
		$ 921.98

(Continued on Page Nine)

Corresponding Secretary's Report

(Continued from Page Seven)

in them a sense of responsibility as citizens and to persuade them to unite with other women of like purpose to enforce and hold the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Code. Every department and branch of the organization has loyally promoted the campaign. There is a growing appreciation of the fact that the W. C. T. U. movement is just coming into its own; that with the stirring program we have set before us, with the well articulated machinery we have created to accomplish our purpose, with the trained leadership we have developed in every part of our country and with the unbounded faith and enthusiasm of our great membership, nothing is impossible in carrying out the far-reaching campaign so well begun.

One of the outstanding purposes of the general officers, National and state, was to avoid so far as possible the recurrence of conditions which had made it necessary in the previous two years of the five-year campaign to crowd so much effort into the closing months of the fiscal year. Ways and means were considered for inaugurating, at the earliest date possible, the promotional program for the year. Plans were laid for a series of one-city-to-a-state conferences to be held for the purpose of giving the necessary initial impetus to the promotional work. Two teams of specialists in department and organization work were to cover the entire field, devoting two days to each conference. Twenty-eight of the proposed conferences were held, carrying to that many states information and enthusiasm of a high order. The five-year membership campaign, law observance and law enforcement, the state program where it touched the National program, were set before the leaders and in every group the inspiration and contacts justified the conference plan. The year's key-word: Personal Responsibility. The year's objectives: Every member of every local union informed, working, praying, paying, winning new women. Definite methods to be employed in that state for extending organization and reaching these objectives. These were the central themes for discussion at each of these important meetings. There were not lacking inspirational features nor vital messages concerning what the W. C. T. U. is accomplishing and the ever-enlarging opportunities with which it is confronted.

Sectional meetings, with Mrs. Maude B. Perkins to represent the National W. C. T. U., were arranged in ten western states where the expense of travel made the one-city-conference inexpedient, the general program being adapted from the conference program.

The intensive spring membership campaign followed the promotional conferences. National plans and methods were very generally adapted to state use; but some states found the dates recommended, April 24-May 14, unsuited to state conditions and substituted others. Trio Teams were organized everywhere to direct the campaign and with the help of THE UNION SIGNAL to serve as "bureaus of information" on the progress of the movement and the world-wide activities of the W. C. T. U. What are Trio Teams? The Trio Teams are bits of machinery to facilitate the maintenance of a standard in the triple division of responsibility for the Million Members Campaign, National, state and local. The first division, consisting of

(Continued on Page Nine)

Relief Funds—(Schedule 3)
Armenian	$ 1,656.28
French Orphans	1,258.28
Russian	151.25
Belgian	37.00
		$ 3,102.81
Total Received and Disbursed		$ 4,024.79

GENERAL FINANCIAL STATEMENT

October 31, 1922

Assets—
Cash in Bank		$ 26,406.68
Time Deposits		119,074.46
Government, Municipal and Corporation Bonds		521,779.62
Notes Receivable (Loans)		32,750.00
Literature Stock and Accounts		21,363.58
Furniture and Fixtures		9,500.00
Land and Buildings		55,000.00
		$785,874.34
Liabilities—
Gifts and Bequests	$ 45,401.22
Frances E. Willard Memorial Fund	11,367.28
Lillian Stevens Legislative Fund	1,508.95
Jubilee Fund	576,072.40
National Fund	86,203.59
Other Funds	820.90
Property Account	64,500.00
		$785,874.34

I have examined the records of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union for the fiscal year ending October 31, 1922, and certify that in my opinion the above statement correctly sets forth the receipts and expenditures of the organization for the period and its financial position at the closing date.

Howard C. Greer, Auditor
Certified Public Accountant.

SCHEDULE No. 1

Life Members, 1922

Mrs. Lela G. Dyar, Nebraska.
Mrs. Harriet Vance, Nebraska.
Mrs. Emma L. Starrett, Nebraska.
Mrs. Allie Jackson, Nebraska.
Mrs. H. B. Martin, Nebraska.
Mrs. Clara Gledhill, Ohio.
Mrs. Grace Ford, Ohio.
Mrs. C. A. Walker, Utah.
Mrs. Mahala H. Headrick, Washington (West).
Mrs. Beatrice E. Hill, New Mexico.
Mrs. Irene B. Hawley, Washington (West).
Mrs. Harriet B. Dunlap, Washington (West).
Mrs. Clara Ansorge Fuller, Washington (West).
Mrs. Minnie Allison Welch, Tennessee.
Miss Mary E. Olney, Rhode Island.

Memorial Member, 1922.

Mrs. Sarah Lord Cram.

SCHEDULE NO. 2

	W. and Y. P. B. Dues, 1921	W. and Y. P. B. Dues, 1922	Y. P. B. Dues, 1922	L. T. L. Dues, 1922
Alabama	$ 142.30	$ 150.46	$ 3.46	$.....
Alaska	3.70	26.90	.....	.....
Arizona	14.00	30.10	.....	.....
Arkansas	125.40	131.50	.....	.....
Arkansas (No. 2)	20.50	.....	.....	.....
California (North)	674.90	671.10	4.30	10.80
California (South)	716.65	728.60	21.80	43.20
Colorado	410.70	432.95	11.30	10.25
Connecticut	410.50	397.60	3.30	.....
Delaware	107.20	308.70	39.80	7.65
District of Columbia	90.00	179.90	5.50	.65
District of Columbia (No. 2)	26.20	52.80	.....	.....
Florida	320.00	330.00	2.30	5.25
Georgia	532.71	547.25	6.40	55.80
Idaho (North)	29.60	25.10	.....	1.00
Idaho (South)	101.80	90.20	5.00	1.20
Illinois	1,460.50	1,550.20	14.00	41.80
Indiana	1,352.90	1,482.30	43.90	51.70
Iowa	1,358.20	1,531.10	6.00	22.70
Kansas	988.75	944.20	.....	19.90
Kentucky	350.00	371.70	1.50	6.30
Louisiana	30.71	16.24	.....	.....
Maine	524.00	533.90	5.40	9.85
Maryland	486.90	469.70	29.30	50.00
Maryland (No. 2)	25.00	40.00	.....	.....
Massachusetts	1,140.55	1,151.20	5.30	16.20
Michigan	1,345.40	1,500.00	.....	12.50
Minnesota	769.80	738.00	1.30	8.10
Mississippi	150.95	19.60	.....	.....
Missouri	1,284.20	1,114.00	11.20	2.40
Montana	153.80	162.60	1.30	8.25

(Continued on Page Eleven)

Corresponding Secretary's Report

(Continued from Page Eight)

National, state and local presidents, are directors of the campaign; the second division, National, state and local corresponding secretaries, gather facts on the progress of the campaign; the third division, National, state and local treasurers, promote prompt collection of dues as a membership-requisite in the campaign. These duties do not overlap nor interfere with one another. An honest trial of the Trio Team plan has proved it harmonious and mutually complementary.

It's Upgrade But We're on the Way

It gives me peculiar pleasure to report that through the loyal co-operation of the "Middlers" in the Trio Teams, the corresponding secretaries, we have a record of over 100,000 new women who have enrolled in local unions since the Jubilee Million Members Campaign opened in March, 1920. It takes three years to put into successful operation throughout the W. C. T. U. chain of unions an entirely new plan of keeping tab on the new women enrolled, differentiating between this record and that of dues received, kept by the local treasurer. But the new plan is in effective operation in many local unions as evidenced by these encouraging figures. And what a rallying cry for 1923—The First Hundred Thousand!

The Organization Map of the United States is wonderfully illuminated by 1424 bright red dots indicating the location of 1424 local unions organized since March, 1920. This number would be much greater, no doubt, but for the absorption of New Jersey and some other states in activities which prevented the revision of state spot maps to show the new local organizations.

In the year just closing, twelve states —Georgia, Iowa, Indiana, Maine, Maryland No. 2, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, South Carolina, Tennessee, West Virginia and Wisconsin—have won the third Honor Stripe for their Jubilee Membership banners, and the delegates from these states are entitled to wear Honor Ribbons at the convention.

Five states lead in the list of thirty-five states which have made a net gain in membership. Iowa, with 417 local unions, has made a net gain of 1720 members; Michigan, with 346 local unions, has made a net gain of 1546 members; Indiana, with 356 local unions, has made a net gain of 1112 members; Illinois, with 390 local unions, has made a net gain of 897 members.

Other states in the order of net gains reported are:

Oklahoma, West Virginia, South Dakota, Rhode Island, District of Columbia No. 2, Arizona, Alaska, Colorado, Kentucky, New Mexico, Maryland No. 2, Georgia, California (South), Massachusetts, Ohio, Florida, Maine, Washington (East), Montana, Alabama, District of Columbia, Arkansas, Utah, South Carolina, North Carolina, Philippine Islands, North Dakota, New Hampshire, Tennessee.

If time and space permitted, it would be interesting to note the local unions which have doubled, trebled and quadrupled their membership; but only the high points can be touched upon, with reiterated emphasis of the basic fact that state and national success in the Million Members Campaign depend upon the unit of power, the local union, and the acceptance of personal responsibility write and sing and talk of peace until the theme has caught the minds and hearts of all nations; "until the bond of brotherhood and sisterhood becomes so close among all nations, races and peoples, that the great word, humanity, like a rolling wave of the ocean of God's love, shall wash out from the sands of time the words, caste, creed, sex," and that good word, patriotism, shall include the whole world as our country and all men as our kin.

(Continued on Page Eleven)

NATIONAL PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

(Continued from Page Five)

Armenia's Cry Must Be Answered

In 1892 fifty thousand Armenian Christians were cruelly murdered by the Turks. From our sisters in Armenia came the same heart-rending cry for help that sounds in our ears today—a cry to which the W. C. T. U. magnificently responded. The awful tragedies of Smyrna repeat the shocking details of the early nineties; women suffering indignity and death; children tossed on the bayonets of Turkish soldiery. Even the unborn babe snatched into the world to draw its first breath in a wail of agony and die. Crops carried off, homes burned, shops looted. The educational institutions of our Missionary Boards destroyed. The Near East situation is appalling in its awfulness.

What is America going to do about it? Will the united Christian womanhood of our nation grandly measure up to the tremendous crisis? Shall we generously, sacrificially give to help raise the relief fund called for by the President of the United States? Our Christian nation should not keep silent on this great issue. It has an unescapable responsibility for moral leadership. Let us earnestly ask our government speedily to devise a way by which Christian America can co-operate with the allied powers in putting a stop to atrocities and in giving protection to Armenian lives and homes. Women of America not only should respond to the financial appeal, but with a full measure of devotion should so arouse public sentiment that America shall more definitely help answer Armenia's cry.

* * * * *

Affectionately we greet the large number of young people who have come into our ranks during 1922. Cordially we welcome the many young women who have come from other lands to our Philadelphia conventions, as well as our own delegates and visitors. Dear younger sisters, we look to you and to members of the Young People's Branches everywhere, to keep alive a civic conscience, to help create a better social order. You inherit a wonderful past. You live in a bright but bewildering present. To you we confidently look for a marvelous future of "human betterment."

Those who fortify young lives to bravely win on moral battlefields and those who inspire them to patriotic service, have our ardent gratitude. We cannot too strongly emphasize the growing importance of a rallying of the boys and girls through education and inspiration that shall exceed anything thus far achieved in our history. Shall not scientific temperance teaching in our public schools have lively encouragement through the momentum of ingenious programs of co-operation between educators and the local W. C. T. U.? Shall not our Sunday School plans for temperance teaching be more universally urged? Shall not the organization of the Loyal Temperance Legion and the National Prohibition Guards be adopted by every up-to-date W. C. T. U.?

For the electric tomorrow, the tomorrow of correspondence by wire and of propaganda by radio, the tomorrow of air navigation, it behooves us to outfit with a clear brain and a steady hand the rising generation. Children must have an intelligent grasp of the scientific and economic as well as the moral and the spiritual reasons for total abstinence and prohibition. Train them now to a patriotic understanding and appreciation of the Eighteenth Amendment. This done our next generation of leadership is assured; our prohibitory law shall never be undermined in its enforcement provisions or removed from its firm position in the grandest constitution ever written to guarantee liberty and to provide for the common welfare.

Appreciation

For the commodious, thoroughly equipped offices of the new National W. C. T. U. Headquarters building at Evanston, Illinois, heartfelt gratitude evermore should be expressed to W. C. T. U. women and friends who through gifts to the Jubilee Fund have domiciled our organization in this handsome, dignified, yet homelike Jubilee Headquarters. Under the present improved facilities for service the National W. C. T. U. officers and all members of the Headquarters family ought to be able to double their efficiency.

The new building is in the rear of our former administration offices, today happily utilized as a depository of cherished W. C. T. U. souvenirs and an excellent reference library. These former offices are under the same roof as Rest Cottage, the historic home of Frances E. Willard —a sacred home daily open to visitors and which for twenty-three years it has been my personal privilege to maintain.

Our Jubilee Year is near at hand. The National W. C. T. U. can count on its consecrated members to victoriously reach our Jubilee goal—"A Million New Members and a Million Dollars"—to help bring the triumph of world prohibition, world purity, world peace.

A World Illumined

Astronomical scientists testing the Einstein theory of relativity have been risking their lives in an effort to "trail a beam of light." Surely their sacrifice has been no greater than that of the leaders of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, who for nearly fifty years, in the interest of scientific temperance, have been bringing light out of darkness by teaching millions of boys and girls the infinite danger incurred in the use of alcoholic drinks; who have helped girdle the globe with a beam of light as they circled the world with the ribbon white.

The Christian era brought the dawn of a woman's day—a day of prohibition, purity and peace; the dimness of the dawn long since has passed away. The twentieth century illumines with radiant light the pathway of woman and invests her with new power. In an age of the world's darkest degeneration and injustice, a brave seer, who proclaimed new things, defined light as purity and justice—a "light that is sown for the righteous." The Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in its Christian pageant of progress has sown the seed of truth in the stubborn soil of social selfishness and an abundant harvest of life and light has been reaped. The sure and sustaining belief that light will finally triumph over darkness solaced the soul of our late World's W. C. T. U. president, Rosalind, Countess of Carlisle. In one of her many exalted moments she exclaimed: "Day after day, I have seen how in the early morning hours the darkness is greatest just before the dawn. Then suddenly with a great leap the sun flashes forth in exultation, flinging flaming gold over all the heavens so that the whole world seems to break into joy that light has triumphed over darkness."

It is purposed to give to the discoverer of America, Christopher Columbus, the tribute of an adequate memorial. This is to be located in the cradle of America—San Domingo. Above it will be a beacon tower three hundred feet in height, on the top of which is to be installed a great, far-shining light to illumine the waters. Then a woman's liberty torch in the North and a man's beacon light in the South will welcome all nations to Pan-America.

With the formation of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union there dawned light that has brought life to the homes of our nation. The primary purpose and the gleaming goal of the National and World's W. C. T. U. is the world-wide annihilation of the liquor traffic, that age-long creator of darkness and degradation.

John G. Whittier eloquently termed this era of the twentieth century, "Woman's Day"—the day of prohibition, purity and peace, when he wrote of Frances E. Willard, "She knew the power of banded ill, but felt that love was stronger still, and organized for doing good the world's united womanhood." Her inspired declaration that Christian women the world over must organize for the peace, purity, protection and exaltation of their homes, challenges us to the mighty task of helping bring World Prohibition, World Purity, World Peace.

Nebraska	671.80	615.00	7.70	11.35
Nevada	10.00	10.00	.....	.....
New Hampshire	307.00	307.40	.....	1.40
New Jersey	1,227.10	1,160.40	13.60	27.90
New Mexico	51.70	70.00	.....	.....
New York	4,062.00	3,981.70	96.00	147.85
North Carolina	91.60	95.30	1.20	5.60
North Dakota	349.80	351.00	5.60	30.95
Ohio	3,453.36	3,464.05	44.30	37.90
Oklahoma	263.70	344.20	.90	28.65
Oregon	345.52	298.10	1.10	10.85
Pennsylvania	4,695.30	4,573.30	99.40	89.60
Philippines	12.50	15.00	.....	.....
Porto Rico	10.00	10.00	.....	.....
Rhode Island	233.90	262.70	4.90	3.40
South Carolina	105.89	110.04	2.10	1.90
South Carolina (No. 2)	12.60	11.20	.....	.....
South Dakota	160.00	216.70	.....	5.00
Tennessee	481.80	481.90	13.80	23.70
Texas	253.50	200.00	.....	8.38
Utah	19.50	23.90	.....	.....
Vermont	149.00	125.30	.....	.....
Virginia	870.40	817.50	3.00	32.95
Washington (East)	136.20	145.40	.....	2.55
Washington (West)	525.60	515.10	4.80	23.40
West Virginia	351.40	410.00	.....	10.40
Wisconsin	980.98	1,092.17	4.50	2.50
Wyoming	88.90	59.10	.....	2.65
Total	$35,068.87	$35,494.36	$525.26	$894.38

SCHEDULE No. 3

	Frances E. Willard Memorial Fund	Lillian Stevens Legislative Fund	Jubilee Fund	French Orphan, Near East, Other Relief Fund
Alabama	$ 41.50	$ 22.50	.$.....	.$.....
Alaska	2.00	5.00	.....	.....
Arizona	9.85	6.00	.....	.....
Arkansas	4.30	1.00	.....	.....
California (North)	348.00	172.00	2,322.86	1.00
California (South)	149.35	64.50	200.00	128.00
Colorado	202.00	100.00	.....	5.00
Connecticut	200.00	108.46	.....	77.00
Delaware	66.50	31.50	.....	.....
District of Columbia	28.00	49.00	.....	.....
Florida	143.48	100.00	.....	132.50
Georgia	167.08	80.00	.....	33.25
Idaho (North)	26.00	11.00	.....	7.40
Idaho (South)	32.00	15.00	.....	.....
Illinois	530.77	223.10	1,495.00	262.12
Indiana	373.32	6.00	.....	90.25
Iowa	387.25	187.65	.....	12.00
Kansas	379.04	200.00	100.00	90.20
Kentucky	97.05	47.00	.....	12.00
Louisiana	17.00	2.00	.....	.....
Maine	164.00	67.39	.....	5.50
Maryland	218.35	100.00	1,476.64	.....
Maryland (No. 2)	5.00	.....	.....	.....
Massachusettes	197.96	67.67	2,887.63	23.02
Michigan	429.59	177.67	3,807.48	.....
Minnesota	274.86	116.75	.....	167.63
Mississippi	45.25	2.00	.....	.....
Missouri	193.05	47.80	1,422.43	40.75
Montana	66.00	29.00	.....	.....
Nebraska	230.00	115.00	100.00	.....
Nevada	1.00	2.00	.....	.....
New Hampshire	93.00	41.00	.....	43.50
New Jersey	377.50	173.00	1,000.00	517.50
New York	1,500.00	760.80	4,958.67	286.80
North Carolina	47.00	22.00	.....	15.00
North Dakota	220.00	110.00	.....	.....
Ohio	827.17	77.00	2,304.19	178.90
Oklahoma	125.50	48.00	.....	.....
Oregon	113.38	42.00	.....	.....
Pennsylvania	1,342.47	775.98	720.00	563.75
Rhode Island	76.50	31.50	.....	6.00
South Carolina	58.35	100.00	.....	15.00
South Carolina (No. 2)	.....	3.00	6.75	.....
South Dakota	96.50	23.00	.....	20.00
Tennessee	131.45	70.00	.....	12.00
Texas	44.50	22.50	144.00	.....
Utah	8.00	4.00	.....	.....
Vermont	75.00	38.00	.....	39.50
Virginia	264.05	304.42	.....	53.24
Washington (East)	56.00	28.00	.....	.....
Washington (West)	300.00	150.00	.....	.....
West Virginia	125.78	71.00	.....	67.00
Wisconsin	239.85	90.00	.....	124.00
Wyoming	30.00	15.00	.....	73.00
Porto Rico	35.00	.....	.....	.....
Miscellaneous	289.99	1.00	647.77	.....
Total	$11,506.54	$5,158.19	$23,593.42	$3,102.81

Corresponding Secretary's Report

(Continued from Page Nine)

by every member of every local union in the land. As Kipling says:

"It ain't the guns and armament
Nor funds that they can pay,
But the close co-operation
That makes them win the day—
It ain't the individual,
Nor the army as a whole,
But the everlastin' team work
Of every bloomin' soul."

How It Was Done

In response to a request to state corresponding secretaries for the most successful methods in use in the membership campaign, the list of methods is headed by Personal Work. House-to-House Work comes next. Special Appeals to Church Groups of Women: Four-Minute Women; Special Guests at W. C. T. U. Social Meetings; Captains for all Churches Represented in W. C. T. U. Membership—these were some of the methods successfully used in enrolling church women in local unions. Membership contests proved to be a good plan in some communities. Field workers, state and National, brought in good returns when sufficient time was allowed for follow-up work. Organizers were kept in the field the entire year in more than one state. In New York, fifty-four out of fifty-six counties and over five hundred local unions—fifty per cent of the entire number of local unions—adopted the Trio Team plan. Virginia put on a contest between the Hustlers and Bustlers which brought about a lively competition. There was a third group of Peptimists in the race for honors. A peptimist is best defined by what she is not! A pessimist closes an eye, wrinkles her face, draws up the corner of her mouth and says, "It can't be done." An optimist has a face full of sunshine. She beams on you and says, "It can be done"—and then lets Mary do it. But a "pep-ti-mist" rolls up her sleeves, goes to it and does it! They had a few pessimists in California at the beginning of the great campaign to hold the Wright Enforcement Law. If you have been reading THE UNION SIGNAL you know the peptimists have taken things in hand.

A new idea comes from Missouri. A prize of a large silk flag to the church securing the greatest number of members for the W. C. T. U. resulted in the addition of a goodly number of new members and the award of the flag to the Baptist Church, the successful competitor. North Dakota found the honor of being listed as an Anna A. Gordon member an attractive proposition. Michigan put on a District Membership Race, September 15-October 15, and not only overcame the handicap of a loss in membership at the time of the annual convention in June, but won a place among the Big Five making a net gain in 1922.

The handsome silver cup awarded annually to the corresponding secretary who makes the best report on the campaign in her state goes to Miss Epha Marshall. Three plans out of many proved very successful in the Illinois campaign.

FIRST PLAN: The vice-presidents of local unions were appointed captains of the campaigners. The captains appointed ten sub-captains and the sub-captains each chose ten campaigners. An every-woman canvass of the churches followed.

SECOND PLAN: The city or town was divided into districts and a district

(Continued on Page Fourteen)

W. C. T. U. DELEGATES AND VISITORS FROM OTHER COUNTRIES TELL THEIR IMPRESSIONS OF PROHIBITION AMERICA

BRIGHT FACES AND SMILES WHEN PROHIBITION IS MENTIONED

"Since I came to America I have visited fifty Finnish settlements in eight different states," remarked Miss Maria Stenroth when asked her impressions of our country. "I have seen such settlements in large cities like New York, Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, and in very small ones in the country, as, for instance, rural centers in the north of Minnesota. In each place where I stopped, I asked for testimonies as to the prohibition law. I spoke with farmers and miners, with newspaper men and business people, with mothers of families. Nearly everybody told me the same thing. The homes are happier, the children have better food, better clothes, with liquor gone. All was not ideal, of course, but conditions were much better than before. This was the story everywhere. I became accustomed to seeing bright faces and happy smiles when the prohibition law was mentioned. In some small places they told me that drinking was now practically unknown. In earlier days the streets had been filled with poor, staggering people, but it was thought that in the course of a few years children would not understand what to be 'drunk' or to stagger meant."

If Prohibition Had Not been Beneficial—

"Great encouragement for the new temperance effort in Cuba has come through a response from Nebraska to an appeal for financial help. In fact, the appeal has been made through invitation from the givers," says Mrs. Fern A. Simonds, president of the Cuba W. C. T. U. "If prohibition had not proved a success in the States there would be a hesitancy about giving money to make the same condition possible in a foreign country. Since those who have been most active in helping to bring about the present state of affairs are most enthusiastic in encouraging a like effort abroad, it is surely an evidence that they consider the results worth the cost."

Young People Must Respect the Law

"I was in the United States about three months before I saw an intoxicated person," said Helen Root, recently arrived from India. "I landed in Boston and was around in New York state, but never saw a drunken individual. I discovered a tendency on the part of good people to be discouraged and feel blue about the situation. It seemed to me that we ought to talk it up and not talk it down. I think the situation is serious but not a cause for discouragement. The most vital phase is the tendency of certain young people to disregard all law, and to think that they need not respect any law that does not suit them. We must strengthen our work among the young people in order to make them enthusiastic supporters of the law on principle. I am confident that the effort to enforce prohibition will be successful; that the vast body of sentiment is behind the law; that the vast majority of the people want it and when they wake up and say what they want we will have enforcement."

Dark Blot on Happiness Removed

"Since my return to this country I have appreciated having the streets so much cleaner," says Miss Agnes Ashwill, from Burma. "Sometimes in the years gone by I have been compelled to walk over a stretch in front of a saloon where the beer had run across the sidewalk, and had to breathe in the fumes as I was passing. It means a lot to temperate people to be freed from this disgusting experience, and of course to those who are not temperate but wish to be, it is a blessing to have the temptation to drink removed. It is a great thing to have the city clean even if there are some dives (at least most people can escape the vile places) and a little later we shall be able to clean them out also, we trust. I have had pointed out to me houses that are well kept up and have good gardens that before the country went dry were in very bad condition. I notice a great change in the working classes—there is so much more prosperity and the people are happier. In the homes of some of my friends the one dark blot on the happiness of the family was that the father sometimes would 'get drunk.' Now there is seldom that experience to mar their happiness."

Prohibition in America as a Filipino Young Woman Sees It

Miss Consuelo Valdez, a student at Northwestern University, Evanston, Illinois, who has within the last two months come from the Philippines, where she was graduated from the School of Pharmacy in the University of the Philippines, when asked her first impression of prohibition America, said:

"This is my first visit to a country where there is no public sale of alcoholic drinks. In the Philippine Islands where I have spent all my life alcoholic beverages are sold in barrooms, in the markets and in the small stores. It seems pleasant to know that these drinks which I feel do a great deal of harm are not tempting the passers-by by public sale. During our fiestas and at election time in the Philippines, we see a great deal of drinking. Most of the older people in the Islands do not consider it harmful to take wines and other liquor. This makes it very difficult to do temperance work. However, there is a growing feeling against liquor among the young people, especially the student class in the university, and when they return to their homes, they try to get their fathers and mothers to give up the social habit of drinking.

"Before I left Manila I was told by a young Filipino who had been over to the United States that there was much drinking. But I have been here for some time now, spent several days in San Francisco, have been quite a little in Chicago, and have never seen an intoxicated person, although I have kept my eyes open to observe if what I had been told was true. I am glad to be in a country where there is so much sentiment for total abstinence and prohibition."

Would Like the American Brand of "Prohibition a Failure" in Australia

Miss Adie Robertson, leader of the young people's work in Australia, said she had heard before she started for America of the great amount of drunkenness in this country. But when she began her journey, going in one afternoon from Hamilton to Melbourne, she met a Salvation Army officer at a little way station, who had with her seven children, the youngest only about two years of age, left in the Army's care because of the drinking of the parents. She was taking these children, under order of court, to the Army home. "From that point to Melbourne," said Miss Robertson, "I was in a railroad carriage that seated only eight people. Six were men, two of them so dead drunk they hardly knew where they were going. All this happened in one afternoon in Australia." After an impressive silence, Miss Robertson added, "I came clear across the continent from the Pacific Coast, and have seen but one drunken man and that one was in British Columbia, which province has government control. If this is a demonstration of the 'failure of prohibition,' I would like to see that kind of a 'failure' tried in Australia."

Japan Watching Our Dry Nation

Mrs. Ochimi Kubushiro, national corresponding secretary of the W. C. T. U. of Japan, has been away from the United States for about ten years. She spoke of her pleasure at the changed conditions, the absence of the saloons on the corners and along the street, and of the frequent sight in old days of men under the influence of liquor. She had not seen a drunken man since her arrival, although she stayed some time on the Pacific Coast.

Miss Uta Hayashi of Osaka, Japan, says she was in the United States sixteen years ago, and remembers distinctly seeing many drunken men in the cities. On her present visit, she has been to twenty-seven different towns, mostly on the Pacific Coast and in the West, and has not seen one intoxicated man or woman. She notices the change in sentiment, that belief in prohibition has grown tremendously in those sixteen years. When asked how the people of her own race in the United States felt about prohibition, she replied that she had found among the Japanese women whom she had addressed and met, great sympathy for the cause, and they were making up their minds to unite with the American women in the W. C. T. U. work. She organized unions in some of the places where she spoke.

Both Miss Hayashi and Mrs. Kubushiro had much to say of the way other countries, and especially Japan, are watching the United States to see how successful prohibition will be, and if it is successful they will follow America's example.

WHO AM I?

It is quite unnecessary, we know, to give the names of the great American women, character sketches of whom were given on the Y. P. B. page last week. But here they are: Mrs. Rutherford B. Hayes; Betsy Ross; Clara Barton; Frances Willard; Martha Washington; Pocahontas.

Just What You Want to Brighten Up the Evening

Book of Socials and Games—Lots of Fun for Young and Old.
Heavy paper covers. Sixty-four pages.
Price, 50 cents.

New

Patriotic Prohibition Song for Children Everywhere, "When We All Grow Up to Be Twenty-one." Words and music. The same sheet carries also "The New Day Coming" and "Prohibition Here to Stay." Order for your L. T. L.'s, National Prohibition Guards, Sunday school and public school classes.

Price per copy, 5 cents; per 100, $2.00.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

Massachusetts' Big Meet

Jeanette H. Mann

"Uphold the Constitution of the United States" was the keynote of the forty-ninth annual convention of the Massachusetts W. C. T. U. Hyannis, a seaport town on historic Cape Cod, welcomed in a royal manner and entertained with boundless hospitality the largest number of voting delegates ever in attendance at our state W. C. T. U. convention.

Superlative adjectives alone can describe the gathering. It was the first state convention of any organization ever held on Cape Cod. Three hundred and fifty-five delegates were entitled to vote, the largest number ever recorded; reports of state superintendents showed the greatest amount of department work ever accomplished; one department, that of Soldiers and Sailors, stood first in the country; the banquet, which closed the convention, was the largest in attendance and most successful of any ever held by our state W. C. T. U.; and the interest displayed in the regular business sessions has never been surpassed.

The most important theme for discussion was naturally the great fight on the state referendum for the prohibition enforcement code. Massachusetts and California white ribboners realized that this measure to uphold the Federal Constitution was a supreme test for them this year, and that their utmost efforts must be put forth to "turn the way of the wicked upside down." Eight clergymen from surrounding towns attended the convention for a ministers' conference with the W. C. T. U. This was in charge of Mrs. Jeannette H. Mann, state publicity superintendent, who is also organization secretary for the Citizen's Alliance of Massachusetts, with which the W. C. T. U. is affiliated. The Federation of churches, Churchmen's Union, and Anti-Saloon League, are also part of the Alliance, which was formed to uphold American ideals and work for law and order in Massachusetts, and directed the fight for the ratification of our law enforcement code. Local committees have been formed in nearly every community. Opposing the Alliance was the Constitutional Liberty League, which expended enormous sums to defeat the law.

A national worker, of whom Massachusetts is justly proud, Mrs. Deborah Knox Livingston, National director of Christian Citizenship, told us enough about Africa to make us intensely eager to hear more. Mrs. M. Ella Ricker, state superintendent of Child Welfare, had charge of the children's night, when a pageant was given in which fifty boys and girls participated.

Sorrow, manifesting itself in many expressions of regret, was shown when our loved and honored state president, Mrs. Ella Aldrich Gleason, announced that she could not serve again. In compliance with Mrs. Gleason's earnest wish, our vice-president-at-large, Mrs. Alice Gertrude Ropes, was elected president. Mrs. Ropes is a charming woman of unusual ability and our state is proud to have so fine a representative in the National executive. Miss Laura A. Jones, assistant recording secretary, was elected vice-president-at-large, and Mrs. Jeannette H. Mann, state publicity superintendent, was elected to fill Miss Jones' office. Other general officers remain as before: Mrs. Ada B. Frisbee, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Lillia W. Magwood, recording secretary; and Mrs. Helen H. Worrell, treasurer.

Mrs. Gleason officiated as toast mistress at the banquet. His excellency, Governor Channing H. Cox, and Mrs. Cox, were our special guests on this occasion. In his speech the governor made an eloquent and forceful plea for a "Yes" on Referendum Number 4. He has been loyally supported by our members.

Special mention should be made of Mrs. Elizabeth A. Kelley, president of Barnstable county, whose wonderful executive ability and untiring energy made possible the success of the convention. Cape Cod has always been famous for its hospitality and we understand better now the reason. Every one came away feeling that the dear old town should spell its name "High-annis."

South Carolina Convention Stresses Good Citizenship

Special Correspondence

Very inspiring was the convention of the South Carolina W. C. T. U. The various reports teemed with interesting facts evidencing progress along all lines. The address of our beloved state president, Mrs. Josephine Sprott, was a comprehensive survey of the achievements of the year. For fifteen years Mrs. Sprott has served efficiently as our leader, guiding the ship of state with a steady hand. "In taking stock," she said, "it is found that in 1906 there were 345 members, while now there are 1118, a strong force which is moulding legislation and public opinion." She urged the delegates to renewed service for the cause.

The report of the state treasurer, Mrs. Charles P. Robinson, showed that much had been done in a financial way to promote prohibition.

The efficient editor of the state paper, Mrs. J. L. Mims, told of some of her plans for the coming year.

The guest of honor of the convention was Mrs. Maud B. Perkins, national general Y. P. B. secretary. On Sunday she delivered a most impressive sermon. Mrs. Perkins is a speaker of great force.

The mass meeting in the opera house, held Sunday afternoon, was a great event. The large building was filled to overflowing with an audience eager to hear the chief speaker, the governor-elect of the state, Thomas G. McLeod. Among those on the platform were the ministers of the city, the mayor, the senator from our district and other officials. Mr. McLeod dealt with citizenship, basing his remarks on "With a great price obtained I this freedom." He declared that the challenge of today is for better laws and pledged himself to do all in his power to aid in law enforcement. "Let there be constructive patriotism, not destructive patriotism." Dr. E. M. Lightfoot, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of South Carolina, also spoke. A very interesting part of the program was the introduction of Mrs. Milne of Scotland, who had just arrived in this country to attend the World's Convention. She brought loving greetings from her white ribbon comrades.

Among other things, the convention went on record as commending the splendid courage of our judges in giving penitentiary sentences, without alternative fines, to violators of the liquor laws.

It was the consensus of opinion that the budget method is the only just way to meet financial obligations.

The officers were re-elected as follows: President, Mrs. Joseph Sprott; vice-president, Mrs. J. L. Mims; corresponding secretary, Miss Cleo Attaway; recording secretary, Mrs. T. R. Denny; treasurer, Mrs. C. P. Robinson.

The Campaign of Education for Obedience to Law Must Be Carried on Persistently

USE WIDELY THESE HELPS TO MAKE PEOPLE THINK!

(All leaflets 2 cents unless otherwise noted)

Safety and Happiness Depend Upon Obedience to Law.
The Gospel of Law Enforcement.
He That Keepeth the Law.
Undergirding Law Enforcement.
Law Enforcement Decalog.
Representative Volstead in Defense of Enforcement Code.
Lincoln's Appeal for Law (Illustrated).
Uncle Sam Says—(Illustrated).
Never Again.
Let Us Make Our Victory Secure.
How Most Effectually to Promote Law Enforcement.

Price, per 50, 15 cents per 100, 20 cents.

Stabilize Public Sentiment.
Up and At It!
Crusading in the Court Room.
Reasons Why the Prohibition Law is not Adequately Enforced Everywhere and Suggested Remedies.
Prohibition Progress as Portrayed by Decisions of the U. S. Supreme Court.
The Eighteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution.
How Can Women Help Enforce the Law?
Today's Imperative Task.
What Can We Do to Bring Enforcement of the Prohibition Law?
A Vision of American Sovereignty.
But One Common Ground.
The Fight Is Still On.
Did They "Put It Over On Us While We Were Over There?"
The Citizen's Duty.

Per 50, 25 cents; per 100, 45 cents.

Twenty Years of Prohibition Legislation by the U. S. Congress. Per 50, 40 cents; per 100, 75 cents.
Quiz on National Constitutional Prohibition. Per dozen, 25 cents; per 100, 75 cents.
Questionnaire on Federal Prohibition Code. Per dozen, 25 cents; per 100, 75 cents.
Manual of Law Enforcement (pamphlet). Per copy, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00.
Law Enforcement. (Song sheet with music). Price, 3 cents; per dozen, 20 cents; per 100, 60 cents.

New Campaign Post Cards

INVITATION CARDS TO NEW MEMBERS

TITLES:
Our Slogan.
The Field is the World.
Help Wanted.

Each illustrated. They will suit you and help win members.

OTHER CARDS:
W. J. Bryan's "Ode to Water."
Physical Decalog.
W. C. T. U. Acrostic.

and a large variety with various titles.

Price, per dozen, 25 cents; per 100, $1.75. (Please enclose remittance with order.)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

Ready for 1923

Put the Word of God in Every Home

DO NOT FORGET THAT YOUR OWN PUBLISHING HOUSE WILL AGAIN FURNISH YOU THE BEAUTIFUL SCRIPTURE TEXT SACRED ART CALENDARS.

This Calendar will be more beautiful and attractive than ever. You can easily dispose of hundreds and thus place the daily Bible Text in multitudes of homes and at the same time earn Christmas money for yourself, your W. C. T. U., the L. T. L., the Woman's Club, or for your Literature Fund.

Send us your order early and so avoid delay or disappointment. Prices: Single copy, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.84; twenty-five, $7.50; fifty, $12.50; one hundred, $20.00; two hundred, $37.00; five hundred, $82.50.

Send us your order now and let's go to work. It is not too early to start.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE,
Evanston, Illinois.

Unexcelled for repairing china, glassware, earthenware, furniture, vases, books, etc. Famous since 1876. Major's rubber and Leather Cements are good.

Three kinds, 20c per bottle at dealers, or write us.

MAJOR MFG. CO., NEW YORK

GREAT $2 MYSTERY NOVEL FOR 15c

You Must Not Miss Reading "Suspense" —the Most Exciting and Absorbing Story Published in Years.

You can see right through the plot of most stories, but "Suspense" will baffle you; it will hold you spellbound from start to finish and keep you guessing. This unusual story is by one of the most popular authors—Isabel Ostrander; it is original, thrilling, satisfying. The Pathfinder, in accord with its policy of giving the best in everything, will publish this great story as a serial complete in 15 issues starting December 16th. This paper is chuck full of just the kind of reading you want—unequaled digest of the world's news, including affairs at Washington; best stories you can find anywhere; stunts, tricks and amusements for the children. You can get this splendid illustrated national home weekly on trial 13 weeks for only 15 cents, coin or stamps, including "Suspense." You can also order for your friends at 15 cents each; but send at once so as not to miss start of new story. This offer costs the editor a lot of money but he says it pays to invest in new friends. Address Pathfinder, 314 Langdon Sta., Washington.

Novel Features of North Carolina Convention

Ellen J. Y. Preyer, State Treasurer

For the first time in seventeen years the weather man did not smile upon our state convention. There was a drizzling rain, interspersed with hard showers almost every day during the fortieth annual meeting of the North Carolina W. C. T. U., held in Spencer. These unfavorable weather conditions, however, did not materially affect the attendance, and enthusiasm ran high from start to finish. Spencer is a railroad town. While many of the men are employed at night, we were pleased to have with us a good representation.

The convention church, a modern and beautiful one, was attractively decorated, and our posters were placed where they compelled attention. The women of the town were unstinting in their hospitality. Mrs. O. C. Godfrey, the local president, and her able corps of helpers, looked after our every need and comfort.

"Welcome" night will be long remembered. After the various "welcomers" had given their cordial greetings, everybody went to the church dining room, where Mrs. Annie E. Williams, state corresponding secretary, "pulled off" several "stunts." One was a novel way of getting acquainted, another was patterned after an old-fashioned spelling match, using a questionnaire on national and state W. C. T. U. history instead of words to spell.

Sunday was a high day. At the morning service Rev. S. L. Haworth, a Quaker preacher, presented in an eloquent way the subject of character building, making a lasting impression on the large audience present to hear him. In the afternoon, after a pleasing exercise by the L. T. L.'s of Salisbury, a neighboring city, there was a gold medal contest in which youths and maidens entering their teens participated. At this time five dollar prizes were presented by the Salisbury W. C. T. U. to the woman who gained the largest number of members for that union, and to the girl who secured the greatest number for the L. T. L.

The addresses of Mrs. Maude B. Perkins, National Y. P. B. general secretary, were the outstanding features of Sunday and Monday nights. She won her audiences and enthused everybody. A gentleman who has heard many prohibition speeches, declared he had never listened to anything finer. Her service throughout the convention was invaluable. She endeared herself to everyone, and will always be a welcome visitor in the state. At the close of her last address she was given a bouquet of huge white chrysanthemums by Mrs. Godfrey.

Musical numbers, given by local talent, were of a high order, while the congregational songs were "our own" inspiring selections.

The initiation of five white ribbon recruits and the address of Mrs. T. W. Duke, president of Salisbury union, on "Why a W. C. T. U.?" deserve special mention.

The old officers were re-elected with the exception of the recording secretary, who was retired at her own request. There was little change in the personnel of the superintendents.

Two prizes, five dollar gold pieces, were given in an essay contest, one going to Charlotte, the other to Guilford College.

Efforts will be directed toward increasing the membership, organizing the young people, and obtaining greater co-operation for the budget plan, which was adopted.

Strong resolutions were passed, one recommending to the voters men who stand by the Constitution and law enforcement; the other asking for better observance of temperance day in the public schools.

The state legislative program includes the raising of the age of consent, harmonizing of state and Federal prohibition laws, and use of the Australian ballot.

Belated Election Telegrams

New Mexico Elects Staunch Prohibitionists

Albuquerque, New Mexico,
November 11, 1922.

Senator Jones, Democrat, re-elected to Senate, staunch prohibitionist pledged to preserve Volstead law. John Morrow, Democrat, elected to Congress, life-long prohibitionist, honorary member W. C. T. U. home town of Raton, pledged to stand against repeal of Volstead law and for enforcement. Both dependable men.

ANNA WILDS STRUMQUIST,
PRES. NEW MEXICO W. C. T. U.

Dry Members of Congress For North Dakota

Fargo, North Dakota,
November 11, 1922.

Lynn J. Frazier, a dry, elected to United States Senate. Republican. Belongs to faction known as the non-partisans. Congressmen all re-elected, and all dry, as any man elected from North Dakota is pretty sure to be.

Kate S. Wilder.

FOR MRS. ELIZABETH PRESTON ANDERSON,
PRES. NORTH DAKOTA W. C. T. U.

Corresponding Secretary's Report

(Continued from Page Eleven)

captain appointed who chose from the membership as many women as she needed for a house-to-house canvass.

THIRD PLAN: A state organizer made a house-to-house canvass in a town, completing her work with a mass meeting in one of the churches. Sunday night was found the best time for such a mass meeting.

All of these tried and proved methods are recommended for use in the fourth year of the Jubilee Membership campaign. Co-operation and team-work in 1923 will produce a broadside such as we have had in no previous year. Again the Key-word is "Personal Responsibility." Win them one by one. Frances Willard left us this message:

"It is the way commerce has marched across the continents and captured them for civilization—one by one; it is the way an army is recruited—one by one; it is the way Christ's Church is built up into power, and heaven adds to its souls redeemed—just one by one."

No matter how small the local union may be, the community should know that it belongs to a great Christian body of women who are engaged in a campaign for a Million Members to promote a work which is patriotic, democratic, non-sectarian and progressive; for a million women of world vision and missionary spirit, striving with their prayers, their money and devoted service to make safe and pure and homelike the whole world.

The "Money Earning Plan"

EARN MONEY FOR YOUR UNION, CHURCH, SOCIETY OR SCHOOL

For details write to
CHAS. R. DAVIS
184 Ward St.,
NEWTON CENTER, 59, MASS.

SEND FOR CANDY

To sell for us. Churches, Societies, Sunday Schools, Lodges, Schools, etc., make liberal profits handling our very popular assortments of 5c Chocolate Bars, etc. Send for Illustrated Circular, Price-list, Order Blank and full particulars. Our goods sell quickly. Prompt Express shipments.

FRED D. LESURE COMPANY
6 Broad St., Fitchburg, Mass.

Arkansas "Looking After" Law Makers

Jennie Carr-Pittman, Vice President-at-large

The Arkansas state convention, held recently in Paragould, was one of the best in the history of the organization. The hostess union excelled in hearty hospitality. The platform was striking in its dainty covering of white, and beautiful decorations.

The platform was striking in its dainty covering of white, and beautiful decorations.

All officers were present and re-elected. The business sessions were full of vim and the evening programs deserve special mention. "The Eyes of the World," the beautiful Y. P. B. pageant, afforded glimpses of the foreign field. Mrs. Yantis, a gracious soul of eighty-two years, represented Japan, impersonating Madam Yajima. She also sang several times during the convention.

The welcomes from the platform were most cordial, the one from the bench, by Hon. George R. Burr, and from the women's club, by Mrs. Letha Dillman, being particularly noteworthy. Mr. Burr told of the air of outraged innocence assumed by law violators when brought into court, even though they are caught with whisky and stills in their possession. Mrs. Dillman glorified the work by saying that the letters "W. C. T. U." are as familiar to the people of the country as the letters "U. S. A."

Mrs. Maude B. Perkins was at her best, though she had come to us from seven other consecutive state conventions. Would she could reach with her message every community in the land.

The address of the president, Mrs. Minnie U. Rutherford-Fuller, was most excellent.

The quiz by ten girls and eleven boys proved that science, religion and labor all favor upholding the prohibition law. Little Rock's first woman legislator, Miss Este Chambers, made a pleasing speech, in which she begged the women not to be bitter in their denunciations of the law makers, but to enumerate the many good social service measures enacted by them in the last few years. (Let the writer say, by way of parenthesis, that the "women folk," principally the state president, have been "looking after" them.)

Mrs. E. Ruth Graves, S. T. I. superintendent, read the fine prize-winning essay on the cigaret written by a youth in the Stuttgart high school.

Dr. Frances Sage Bradley, of "Truck Clinic" farm, and Mrs. C. W. Garrison, of the state board of health, both emphasized the need for care of the children. The address of Paragould's famous woman physician, Dr. Olive Wilson, was much appreciated. Miss DeWeiss, of the state Woman's Farm, and Miss Emerick, parole officer of the state women's institutions, drove one hundred and eighty miles to give reports of their work.

Rev. Mr. Kemper, president of the state Anti-Saloon League, in a twenty-minute speech convinced the audience that the work to save the world from the reign of John Barleycorn is not finished—only begun in deadly earnest. Mr. Thad Rowden, Federal prohibition director for the state, submitted figures that showed a decided reduction in law violation. Fines and confiscation of property, he said, far outweighed in value the money spent for enforcement.

The banquet at the new Vandervoort Hotel was a delightful affair, enlivened by witty toasts. Words are inadequate to describe the polished address of the ex-governor, Charles H. Brough.

The proprietor of the moving picture theatre, who had been requested to put on the film sent out by the government, "When Women Work," gladly acceded and made the performance a complimentary one.

The convention adopted the budget system. We look forward to a year of fine work.

Notes From Your Publishing House

"Women Line Up for Prohibition." Continue the circulation of this leaflet and let the world know the truth concerning the attitude of representative American women toward prohibition. If you have relatives, friends or acquaintances in foreign lands, send them a package of this leaflet with a request that they circulate it over there. Price, per 50, 25 cents; per 100, 45 cents.

The "Rainbow Set" or the series of seven leaflets on "Facts" is still as good as ever and could be splendidly useful with the "Women Line Up" leaflet in other lands. America must help the world toward prohibition for her own protection as well as the world-wide benefits to be thereby gained. Special price for "Facts," per 100, 30 cents; per 1,000, $2.50.

The New Temperance Day Program for the Public Schools, is said by many to be the "best ever." It is so arranged as to keep alert the interest and attention of all, whether audience or participants. We heartily recommend this program for use in your public schools. With slight changes in length it could be used in Sunday schools and W. C. T. U. institutes or other meetings. Price, per copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 45 cents; per 100, $3. Less than one hundred at dozen rates.

A Patriotic Motion Song entitled "Loyal Temperance Soldiers," will be found acceptable and pleasing for L. T. L.'s, National Prohibition Guards, Sunday schools and public meetings. Let the children participate in the meetings with their sweet young voices. They will add zest and thrill to the programs. Price of song, per copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 35 cents; per 100, $1.00.

Perfection
NON-ALCOHOLIC FLAVORS
Taste Better
Flavor Does Not Bake Out

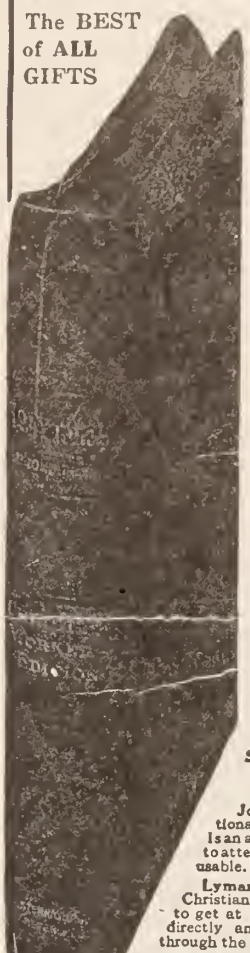
A combination of pure fruit and flavoring oils with vegetable oils, which carries and distributes the flavorings as well or better than alcohol, and instead of being harmful, has more food value than an equal amount of butter. Wonderful Vanilla and eleven other flavors. Representatives wanted. A permanent source of income for Unions, Church Societies, and individuals. 100% profit. No money required under our consignment plan.

Fletcher Production Co. Ext. Dept. 429 E. 69th St., Chicago.

W. C. T. U. Badges. Made of mother of pearl. Price 25 cents each. Address treasurer W. C. T. U., Jerusalem, Palestine. P. O. Box 443.

FREE All Charges Prepaid Subject to Examination

The BEST of ALL GIFTS



Easiest Reading Bible

The Bible has never been published in any form in which the reading of it has been made so attractive to both old and young as in the "International"

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' BIBLE

By an entirely new plan, a thread of red ink, running from Genesis to Revelation, binds in one harmonious whole each leading topic. All the precious truths which lie hidden under the mass of unconnected matter and escape the mere reader are brought to light and tied together.

The Rev. Jesse Lyman Hurlbut, D.D., the popular authority in Bible themes, has arranged on this plan Three Thousand Selected Texts.

PROMINENT PEOPLE'S OPINIONS

John Wanamaker: International Christian Workers' Bible is an advance on anything hitherto attempted in making the Bible usable.

Lyman Abbott: Valuable to Christian Workers in their endeavor to get at the teaching of the Bible directly and immediately, and not through the medium of commentaries.

BOUND IN GENUINE LEATHER, divinity circuit, with overlapping covers (like illustration), round corners, gold edges, red underneath. Size of page 5¼ x 8¼ inches, beautifully printed in extra large clear type on extra fine paper; also contains Latest Teachers' Helps to Bible Study.

SPECIAL OFFER The Christian Workers' Bible will be SENT FREE for examination, ALL CHARGES PREPAID. If it does not please you, return it at our expense. If it does please you, remit special price. Published at $7.50, but for a limited time we offer this handsomest, most usable Bible at the Special Price of only $4.90. Send no money but fill in and mail coupon.

THE JOHN C. WINSTON CO.
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Largest American Bible Publishers

SEND NO MONEY—Cut out Coupon and mail today

THE JOHN C. WINSTON CO., 940 Winston Bldg., Philadelphia
Please send without charge, The Christian Workers' Bible. I will remit $4.90 or return same in 5 days at your expense.

Name .....

Address .....

This Bible with Patent Thumb Index 45c extra. Name in gold on cover 45c extra. Bibles with names not returnable.

CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT

THE UNION SIGNAL ..... $1.50 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance (monthly).....50c a year
Single Copies, 5c each; per 100 .....$2.75
Club rate for ten or more Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition subscriptions, 40c a year. No other premium allowed.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER ..... 35c a year
Single Copies, 3c each; per 100 .....$2.00

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES

THE UNION SIGNAL .....$2.00 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (monthly) .....62c a year
THE YOUNG CRUSADER .....47c a year

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL Evanston, Illinois

"Loyalty to the Constitution" Basis of Northern California's W. C. T. U. Convention Program

Special Correspondence

The forty-second annual convention of California (North), held in Modesto, made an impression upon its speakers, its members and its visitors alike. From the vivid portrayal of the work of the Women's Committee of Five Thousand given by Mrs. Parker S. Maddux, president of the San Francisco Center, at the banquet on the opening night, to the ringing appeal of the Armenian and Filipino students from the University of the Pacific in the Americanization contest, given on the closing night, "Loyalty to the Constitution" characterized every number of the program. To every white-ribboner who listened to the opening devotional service and then made one of a kneeling throng of petitioners for God's guidance, it seemed that the holy scenes of Crusade days were being re-enacted. And when, a little later, Mrs. Ira Allen of Oakland led in the pledge of allegiance to the flag, the convention was attuned to the high and holy note of patriotism.

Dr. Frederic Vining Fisher in his address on "America—Where Is It? What Is It?" stepped out of the beaten track and made his audience feel that no question before the people today is more insistent in its appeal than that of our industrial relations.

The cultured and pleasing representative of the Sioux Indians of the Dakotas, Mrs. Gertrude Bonnin, held her audience spellbound as she pleaded for long-delayed justice for her people. Miss Blanche Morse pictured the life of the delinquent women under her charge, who are committed to the industrial farm at Sonoma, the 640-acre ranch with its commodious home, where the girls lead a busy outdoor life. First opened during the present year, the farm is destined to become one of the outstanding institutions of the state, a place in which to rehabilitate body, mind and soul. Miss Morse had in the convention church a wonderful display of the handiwork of the girls at the farm and orders were taken. This is the beginning of a plan which it is hoped may some time make the industrial farm self-supporting.

Mrs. Lucy McClintic, president of the San Jose local union, the largest in the state, gave an enlightening talk on the Cable bill, explaining the change in the legal status of woman as an independent citizen.

The Anti-Saloon League was generous in its help. Dr. A. H. Briggs, the state superintendent, was an evening speaker. Dr. Briggs has traversed the thousand-mile length of our great state until he is familiar with every section. It is to "the little church on Main Street" that he throws down the gauntlet in the winning of our great campaign. Dr. C. W. Gawthrop, the popular and pleasing superintendent of the Northern District, gave his conception ot "the Final Drive" during the campaign hour.

Mrs. Jennie M. Kemp, our wonderful campaign secretary, marshaled her women to present a most telling story of campaign publicity. Twenty women passed in review, each showing sixteen pages of newspaper publicity for the Wright Law, while one lone woman presented the equivalent of twenty pages against it. Mrs. Kemp predicted that if the power of the press is any guarantee, our majority on November 7 would be "sixteen to one."

Mrs Addie Garwood Estes, the state president, proved as able a presiding officer as she was a program builder. That "the hearts of her people do safely trust in her" was evident throughout the crowded sessions and at the ballot box as well, where her election was all but unanimous.

The Wright Law campaign has absorbed much of our energy this year. That the women have given of their best was evinced by the tired, but earnest faces of county presidents, superintendents, field workers and the blessed women of the rank and file. More field work than usual has been done. To Mrs. Sara J. Dorr, Mrs. Millicent McCorkle, and Mrs. Frances C. Gilmore much credit is due.

Modesto's two unions, her citizens, and the county organization vied with each other in making the convention a success, while the best musicians of the city were generous in giving of their talent. Modesto boasts a state senator, Hon. L. L. Dennett, and an assembly woman, Miss Esto Broughton, each of whom contributed to the program.

The business sessions of the convention were not lacking in interest. The first year's work under a budget system was found to be highly successful and the new budget as presented for the coming year was unanimously adopted. Several departments were dropped or merged with others, in order to follow more closely the lead of the National. A forward step was taken in the decision to place special emphasis for the coming year on the work of Christian Citizenship, with the belief that much of our work can be correlated under this head. Mrs. Jennie M. Kemp was chosen to have charge of this important task. The officers were re-elected and already are beginning upon a year of great promise.

Avoid Rush and Delay

Prepare Now for Christmas

As Appropriate Christmas gifts we offer you the following:

Life of Frances E. Willard, by Anna Adams Gordon, for many years closely associated with Miss Willard. A book of thrilling interest that will both please and inspire to noble living. Uncut edges, gilt top, handsomely bound. Price, $2.50.

Flames of Glory. Hervey Smith McCowan. A collection of the author's best stories of the World War. Cloth, $1.50.

A Course in Citizenship and Patriotism. Introduction by William Howard Taft. Educational, gripping, helpful. Cloth. Price, $2.00.

Four Epochs of Life: A love story for parents and young people, teaching in fascinating manner basic truths of life. Cloth, $2.00.

The Woman of Forty. Dr. E. B. Lowry. A book of vital interest to the woman approaching middle age. Price, $1.35.

A Modern Madonna. A thrilling story of a woman's legal disabilities. Price, $1.90.

John Barleycorn, Jack London. Price, $1.90.

The High Road. A love story of thrilling interest. Price, $1.35.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

Story of The Two Big Philadelphia Conventions

The story of the World's and National Conventions, with addresses delivered by leading speakers, will be continued in the next two issues of THE UNION SIGNAL. This number, November 23, which contains the address of the National president, and the reports of the National corresponding secretary and the National treasurer, with the issues of November 30 and December 7, will be sent to any address for fifteen cents.

A 15-YEAR RECORD

Mrs. Mary V. Barber, President of Malta W. C. T. U., Ballston Spa, N. Y. has represented us in the sale of JERSEY CROWN FLAVORING POWDER continuously for more than fifteen years. And here's her experience with this wonderful flavoring:

"I have been using and selling JERSEY CROWN for more than fifteen years and have purchased many dozen packages. Have a number of customers who use it regularly and exclusively. It has always given perfect satisfaction."

JERSEY CROWN—the Master Vanilla Compound—is positively non-alcoholic. It possesses a rich, delicate and lasting flavor which is the wonder and delight of all who use it.

It costs much less, goes much farther and gives better results than alcoholic brands.

Representatives Wanted —No Money in Advance

We want sales representatives at once in every section of the country to introduce JERSEY CROWN and take orders. Unions and members are having great success selling it. You send no money in advance. We will send you one or two or three dozen packages on our "Special 30-Day Consignment Plan," and you pay us when you sell it—not before. We guarantee sales, and will keep you supplied on this plan indefinitely.

Big Profits Assured

The net profits on the sale of JERSEY CROWN are big, ranging from 71 per cent to over 85 per cent—and without any cash investment on your part. Selling JERSEY CROWN is easy, pleasant and sure.

Send today for our "Special Business Proposition" for the W. C. T. U., Church Societies and their members; also for full particulars about JERSEY CROWN, and special order form. Or, better still, send now for a trial dozen and see how easy it is to sell the Powder to your neighbors and friends. Address

Jersey Crown Vanilla Co.

Department S

VALPARAISO, INDIANA

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN

NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly — Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year in Advance

Entered as second class matter at the Postoffice at Evanston, Illinois

Vol. XLVIII — EVANSTON, ILLINOIS, NOVEMBER 30, 1922 — No. 48

General Officers of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Elected at its Eleventh Convention at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Dagmar Prior,
Vice-President

Anna Adams Gordon
President

Ella A. Boole
Honorary Treasurer

Agnes E. Slack
Honorary Secretary

Blanche Read Johnston
Honorary Secretary

SECOND CONVENTION NUMBER

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

SIXTY-SEVENTH CONGRESS TO HAVE FOUR SESSIONS—FIRST WOMAN UNITED STATES SENATOR SERVES A DAY—NEW WOMAN MEMBER OF HOUSE—PRESIDENT ADDRESSES JOINT SESSION—SOLDIER BONUS BY TAXING BEER INDEFENSIBLE

LENNA LOWE YOST, National W. C. T. U. Legislative Representative, Washington, D. C.

The Sixty-seventh Congress reconvened Monday noon, having been called by President Harding particularly to give consideration to the Merchant Marine Aid Bill. The present special session of Congress is expected to merge with the regular session which opens December 4—the fourth session of the present Congress. Never before in the history of the Federal government has any Congress met in four sessions, although there have been a number which have had three sessions.

In both Senate and House the gavel dropped at 12 o'clock, thus beginning the third session. In both chambers there followed the usual formalities which attend the turning over of a new page in Congressional history. The President's Proclamation, calling the Congress in special session, was read immediately after the opening prayer.

The program in both houses was so arranged as to permit adjournment after the opening ceremonies until the following day, as a mark of respect to the late Senator Watson of Georgia and Representative Nolan of California.

First Woman United States Senator

The seating of Mrs. Rebecca Latimer Felton of Georgia, the first woman United States Senator, attracted hundreds to the Senate galleries. Mrs. Felton was accorded a seat in the Senate on Monday. Escorted by former Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia, she entered the Senate chamber half an hour before the gavel fell. She was dressed in black with a charming fichu of old lace and, with her white hair and dignified manner, she presented a unique picture in the Senate chamber. The galleries broke forth into prolonged applause, and in Southern fashion Mrs. Felton expressed her appreciation by throwing kisses in return to the galleries. A reception was held just outside the Senate chamber after adjournment, when the woman Senator was presented with as many American Beauty roses as she is years old by the Democratic women of the District.

While it is true that Mrs. Felton's term only lasted a day, she felt the ceremony crowned with success the efforts of an eighty-seven year old woman to "blaze a path for American women in the Senate."

After Mrs. Felton had taken the oath she was on her feet asking recognition as soon as the prayer and reading of the journal had been completed. "The junior Senator from Georgia," said Senator Cummins, president pro tem of the Senate, in the chair. In a voice clear and full the junior Senator delivered her first and only address in the Senate. Thus it was a woman's voice was raised for the first time in the history of the country in the Senate chamber.

Mrs. Felton stepped aside the following day, after 22 hours and 25 minutes, to be exact, in favor of Walter F. George, who was elected November 7 as her successor to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator Watson. It was to fill the vacancy caused by his death that Mrs. Felton was appointed.

New Woman Member of House

Mrs. Winifred Mason Huck of Illinois took the oath of office in the House on the opening day of Congress. Mrs. Huck was elected November 7 to take the seat made vacant by the death of her father, Representative Mason. Her term will expire March 4.

Miss Alice A. Robertson of Oklahoma, who has during the past two years been the lone woman member of the House of Representatives, was not re-elected and will, therefore, on March 4 relinquish her seat to a male member.

Not a woman was elected to the Sixty-eighth Congress and for two years, unless through a special election, there will be no woman in Congress.

The President Addresses Joint Session

At a joint session of the Senate and House in the House chamber, the Chief Executive told the legislators that government aid is essential if the American flag is to fly over seas and if the United States is to save anything out of the $3,000,000,000 which it put in ship building during the war.

The President confined his recommendations to Congress to the Merchant Marine Bill. He alluded, however, to the distress which the farmers of the country are suffering and said that in his message at the opening of the regular session two weeks hence he would deal with legislation to aid the farmers and with other subjects of pressing need.

Soldier Bonus by Taxing Beer

Two beer bonus bills have been introduced in the House by Representatives Britten of Illinois and Hill of Maryland.

The Britten bill—H. R. 12816—attempts to legalize 4 per cent beer in all states which have not, by a referendum vote, adopted a different standard. This proposal is indefensible. Congress cannot legislate the sale of 4 per cent beer in the forty-six states which have prohibited it by action of the state legislature, or by referendum vote. A law enacted by a state legislature is just as binding as one adopted by a vote of the people.

The Hill bill—H. R. 12815—attempts to legalize 2¾ per cent beer and cider to be consumed off the premises and a soldier bonus to be paid in cash from taxation of this beer and cider. This proposition is indefensible and inconsistent. If the liquor Mr. Hill proposes is not intoxicating and is desirable, why prohibit its use on the premises where sold and allow it to be used in other places? The proposal to make possible the sale of 2¾ per cent beer in Ohio was defeated by a vote of 188,000.

The attempt to give an outlawed drink a standing by connecting it with soldier bonus, we cannot believe will meet with popular acclaim.

Legislative Headquarters, Bliss Building, Washington, D. C., Nov. 26, 1922.

The New Vice-President of the World's W. C. T. U.

Dagmar Prior, the newly elected vice-president of the World's W. C. T. U., is a native of Copenhagen, Denmark, and has been prominently associated with the temperance work in her country for many years. She speaks several languages, having passed the examination to become an authorized translator of the French language. She has also edited two papers and made translations of temperance literature into the Danish language as a part of her contribution to the anti-alcohol movement. When asked how she first became interested in temperance she told the following incident: "I was only a young girl when I had two dreams that interested me in the work. I dreamed one night that I saw a man walking on a very narrow wall, and his eyes were shut. I said to myself, 'that man will fall down.' and then I awoke. A fortnight later I dreamed that I was in a motor car and I saw this same man going ahead with eyes shut, sleeping, and there was a black, black hole ahead, and he was going to fall into that hole. I recognized the man and a few days later I came to the home of the mother of that man, and I said, 'Twice in my sleep I have seen your son in such strange and dangerous places.' The mother said, 'You dear young girl, I will take you into my confidence. My boy has begun to drink.' 'Oh.' I said, 'don't be sorry for that. I will get him to sign the pledge.' She said, 'How can you, a young girl, do such a thing. What will people say?' I replied 'I don't know what people will say but I am going to get him to sign the pledge.' And on that very same day when leaving that mother, God said to me, 'Go right up to him and ask him.' I didn't argue with God but went to his home, his wife was not there, but with him was his dear little three year old boy. I told him my dreams. He looked me in the face and didn't say a thing. I said, 'Will you sign the pledge?' He seemed quite astonished. I said 'I know a man to whom we could go for signing a pledge.' I was only sixteen or seventeen, with a girl's enthusiasm, and I got him to go at three o'clock in the afternoon. and he signed the pledge and his wife signed it later. Since that day I have been exceedingly interested in the temperance cause."

But dearly as Miss Prior loves the temperance cause, she finds time to give to her beloved art, modeling, and has done some very remarkable work. A beautiful bust of a blind girl, the work of her hands, was presented by her at the convention to the president of the World's W. C. T. U., and a similar bust to the president of the hostess state, Mrs. Ella M. George. When friends say to her, "You ought to devote all your time to modeling; you have such a wonderful gift," she replies, "I love to model in wax and clay but I love even better to help in the modeling of human souls, that they may catch a vision of the love of God for humanity." She has offered all the finished work she has with her in this country to be sold for the benefit of the World's W. C. T. U.

There is much more that could be told of the attainments and achievements of our new vice-president, but Miss Prior pleaded with us to say very little about her, but to make it plain that she is taking the office not because she feels at all equal to its high responsibilities but because it has been a principle of her life to enter every "open door" that her Master places before her, and relying upon Him she will give her best efforts to carry on the work.

FIVE CONTINENTS IN CONGENIAL CONCOURSE AT PHILADELPHIA

WORLD'S W. C. T. U. HOLDS LARGEST CONVENTION IN HISTORY

Blessed are the "internationally minded," for they shall have the joy of helping to bring universal peace and goodwill. This new beatitude seems peculiarly applicable to the company of white ribboners who met last week in the city of Philadelphia for the eleventh convention of the World's W. C. T. U., the largest in its history. World needs, world interests, world purposes and world sympathies were the dominating themes of the great gathering.

The convention hall in itself was an international picture, as almost every speaker who came to the platform recognized. Flags of many nations formed the chief decoration, and suspended all around the boxes and balconies of the beautiful Academy of Music were shields in the colors of the forty-two countries affiliated with the World's W. C. T. U., bearing the date of organization, and a bow of white ribbon. Scattered through the audience and upon the platform were many who wore picturesque native costumes. The garb of the sisters from the Orient, the flowing robes and turban of the Hindoo, the veiled face of the Mohammedan woman, and the quaint dress of some of the Continental Europeans heightened the general artistic effect.

The personnel of the program was strikingly international. A wide range of countries was represented. Geographically they came from the far north of the Land of the Midnight Sun and northern Canada, from the extreme south of South America and Africa, from the far East, and from the western section of North America. There were women from the allied countries, and comrades from Germany. Many tongues were heard, but the delegates were fortunate in having a knowledge of English, and that was the language used throughout.

The messages delivered were significantly international in their theme and spirit. Each speaker manifested an intense love of her own country and an earnest patriotic spirit, but failed not to make that subservient to the larger and broader world spirit. One was impressed by the realization that these women were of a great universal sisterhood, helping each other to reach a common goal.

The meeting was international in its sympathies. It was as if the mother hearts of the women of all nations, knit together by a common peril and a common need, by a high purpose were unified to make the whole wide world safe for the children of this and future generations. It reached out its arms of love in response to an appeal for the orphaned children of the Near East and for the suffering of every land, and promised to meet that need in a practical way.

That the convention had a high sense of international responsibility was evidenced by the frequent reference to the necessity of every nation helping the world movements of World Prohibition, World Purity and World Peace. Almost every foreign speaker gave to the United States praise for its wonderful demonstration of prohibition of the liquor traffic, but coupled with it, in nearly every instance, was the urgent appeal that since the development of this movement is being so eagerly watched by other lands, America, for the sake of the world, must, through law enforcement, complete her victory for righteousness.

It was fitting that this great convention, made up of delegates from twenty-seven countries, should be preceded by a reception by the chief executive of the nation at the Capital, where so recently had been held the conference for the Reduction of Armaments. It was particularly significant that the White Ribbon Special, carrying a large company of the delegates from the West, should arrive in Washington on November 11, Armistice Day, and have the privilege immediately following their arrival of being received at the White House and shaking hands with President Harding. Later the delegates were the guests of the District of Columbia W. C. T. U. at a delightful and delectable luncheon at the headquarters, and many took the opportunity later in the day to visit the grave of the Unknown American Soldier, in Arlington Cemetery

Mrs. Ella M. George, President Pennsylvania W. C. T. U. and Hostess of World's and National W. C. T. U. Conventions

Philadelphia Apparently Impressed

Even the big city of Philadelphia, the third in size in the United States, and accustomed to entertain large conventions, seemed to feel the international significance of the gathering. In an address of welcome, the mayor declared, "I am greatly impressed by this remarkable entente. Nothing like it has occurred for a long time in the city of Philadelphia. It is a wonderful demonstration of the faith of women in a cause."

A bell boy at the Bellevue-Stratford, convention headquarters, exclaimed, as with a sigh he wiped the perspiration from his youthful brow, "I tell you there's tens of thousands of those white-bowed women here, and they keep right on coming!" A taxicab driver whose stand was in front of the hotel was overheard to declare with conviction, "Believe me, everybody in this blessed town tonight belongs to the W. C. T. U. There are millions of them."

So popular did the meetings of the convention prove, that from the first night the Academy of Music, one of the biggest auditoriums in the city, with a capacity of from 3,000 to 4,000, was quite inadequate to accommodate the crowds that clamored for admittance. And from that time until the adjournment there were overflow meetings held afternoon and evening in the Chambers-Wylie Memorial Presbyterian Church.

One is tempted to describe the welcome given by Philadelphians as "royal," but the term seems incongruous when used in connection with the city in which the young republic of the United States had its birth. Across Broad Street—that noted highway of commerce in the center of the city—was suspended a huge banner depicting what to white ribboners has come to be the familiar form of a young woman holding high above her head the world, encircled by the white ribbon, and above this picture was a welcome to the World's W. C. T. U. Convention. The press of the city had for some days preceding the opening of the convention printed advance news of its program. Representatives of the papers were indefatigable in attendance, and generous first page space, with big headlines and numerous illustrations, was devoted to the convention each morning and evening.

Formal welcome was extended to the delegates on Saturday evening, November 11, in the beautiful ball room of the Bellevue-Stratford, said to be one of the finest in the world.

Anna Adams Gordon, who, since the death of Rosalind, the Countess of Carlisle, has served as president of the World's W. C. T. U., presided, and expressed the pleasure of the delegates in being at last in the city of brotherly and sisterly love. She commented upon the fact that this was the first world's Convention to be held since the Eighteenth Amendment went into effect, and said it seemed especially fitting that the gathering should be in the city where the Declaration of Independence was signed, for national Constitutional Prohibition was a second Declaration of Independence from the tyranny of King Alcohol. She congratulated Pennsylvania on its marvelous victories at the recent election which had helped to make the Keystone State in reality "dry ground."

The first address of welcome was given by Mr. E. G. Cattell, a representative of the Chamber of Commerce of Philadelphia. Referring to the economic benefits of prohibition, the speaker declared with conviction, "The Woman's Christian Temperance Union is recognized as standing for the expression of a mighty economic principle as well as a great moral principle." The speaker voiced the thought of all when he urged that they catch the spirit of Armistice Day, and recall that on the first anniversary every patriot made a holy vow in the name and for the sake of the boys who gave their lives on the battlefields to be a better citizen of his country. Upon Mr. Cattell stating that he was going immediately to a meeting of the World War Veterans, Miss Gordon asked that he carry to those men a cordial greeting from the assembled white ribboners, and told of the observance of the holy day by two moments of silent prayer at noontide at the World's Executive Committee meeting.

The greeting for the women of Philadelphia was given by Mrs. Lucretia M. Blankenburg, wife of ex-mayor Blanken-

(Continued on Page Six)

THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES

EACH PATRIOT HAS SPECIFIC TASK OF BUILDING WALL NEAR HIM

Roy A. Haynes, Federal Prohibition Commissioner
Address in Part

I would be unfaithful to early recollections and inspirations, and to the memory of that sainted woman, "Mother" Thompson, if I did not out of a very busy official life take the time to pause long enough to take part in such a program as this.

In those early boyhood days, when it was my privilege and pleasure, frequently to see "Mother" Thompson, and frequently to take her to and from the old Hillsboro Methodist Church in my father's carriage, little did she dream that in a few short years the Crusade movement would terminate in the Eighteenth Amendment, and little did I dream that much of the burden of its enforcement would, for a time, fall upon my shoulders. This great work which finally has led to such a change in world conditions, had its real beginning in the leadership of that little band of seventy Crusaders who, on December 24, 1873, were providentially guided and motivated by lofty faith and ardent hopes, in Hillsboro, Ohio, under the leadership of that gentle spirit, "Mother" Thompson, and my paternal grandmother was one of the "seventy."

Then, too, it would be impossible for me to address such an audience as this tonight without basing my remarks on a Scriptural foundation. It is usually necessary for me in public addresses to confine myself very closely to the practical, but in this instance when addressing the delegated representatives of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the practical seems to fade into the distance, and my mind seems only able to deal with things sublimated, as idealism, faith, and the intangible. Therefore, I want to take as a double theme "THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES" and "THE BUILDING OF THE WALLS," the first text, "They that be with us are more than they that be with them," from II Kings, sixth chapter, sixth verse; the second text, "I am doing a great work so that I cannot come down. Why should the work cease while I leave it and come down to you?" Nehemiah, sixth chapter, third verse.

Let Us Put on the Armor of Patriotism

Let us not overlook the importance of the struggle now going on to make the 18th Amendment effective. As a great American recently said: "In view of the attempts, sometimes successful, to misinterpret the Constitution, the efforts to change it and the danger involved in disregarding its provisions, the time has arrived for us to put on the armor of patriotism as our forefathers knew and applied it."

It is only the man who knows the far-reaching moral influence of the former liquor traffic, legalized and protected, who knows something of the debauching and prostituting effects of the former breweries and distilling interests in politics, who knows the foreign un-American element that champions the liquor business, who can today interpret the significance of the struggle that wages about the Volstead Act.

The man who understands the temperance reform, who visualizes its far-reaching influences upon the life of our nation, who contemplates the benefits it must confer upon the rising and unborn generations, must be thrilled by the events that are daily staged. If he is not blind to the determined opposition that this reform daily meets, the importance of this hour must give him great concern. With this insight into the contest he must surely be led to feel with Kathleen Norris, who recently said: "The Eighteenth Amendment has given us one of the greatest opportunities of our lives. Wars will come and wars will go, administrations will rise and fall, but the work we may do now to build up this cleansing and strengthening and constructive law into our natural life will never be undone."

There are those who see only one side of this conflict. Like the young man in his morning vision, they see only the forces that are arrayed against them. Before them range the united forces that are opposed to law enforcement, and, seeing but this side, they become pessimists, saying that the law can't be enforced or there is no use in trying to make the Eighteenth Amendment effective; that prohibition is a failure. If an election in some part of the country chances to reflect a wet constituency, probably because the friends of the dry cause have not been aroused, there is more pessimism. This pessimism is always a dangerous thing, for pessimism eats the heart out of honest effort. Then there is another class, who, like the young man, sees only the charioteers of fire. To them the fight is won. They cry out "They that are for us are more than they that are against us," and this class of optimists does nothing because their optimism destroys the necessary effort and palsies the nerve of action.

Federal Prohibition Commissioner Roy A. Haynes

What we need to do is to see not only the hosts of Syria that are against us but also the charioteers of fire who are for us, to get a vision of the struggle as it is and to find that there is an urgent need for our effort. Let us for a moment first note some of the forces that are against us in our effort to make America safe and sober, law-abiding and loyal to our Constitution:

1. A highly developed propaganda.
2. An unfavorable attitude on the part of a small minority of public officials.
3. Apathy on the part of a good many Christian citizens, but this element, I am glad to report, is rapidly diminishing.
4. An organized attack upon enforcement and an effort to discredit the service

But let us look also for a brief moment at the charioteers of fire—those elements that are for us:

1. Great organizations, church and secular; great leaders of thought.
2. Those not originally prohibitionists but who are staunch supporters of the law.
3. The population of the great rural sections, particularly of the West, Central West, and South.
4. The fathers and mothers of the citizens of tomorrow.
5. The women of the Union, now a part of our political parties, with their tremendous force for every righteous cause.

So, in interpreting this hour, we must see clearly the forces that are for, as well as the forces that are against us. While imbued with faith, hope and confidence, we should remember that the failure on the part of our best patriotic citizenship to function and co-operate in enforcement may bring dire results. Many good citizens seem to regard the republican form of government as imperishable, and yet our own America is less than 150 years old. Venice had a republican form of government for 1100 years; Carthage for 700 years; Athens for 900 years, with varying intermissions; Florence for 1300 years; and Rome 500 years. What caused the downfall of these ancient republics? The people began to disregard their own laws. When law ceased to reign, the governments crumbled and fell.

There is another predominant trait in the American character and that is the trait of impatience. Many have suggested that this law has been tried and found wanting. This statement is most frequently made by those who desire to find the law a failure, and yet some of those considered friends of this law have been led into error by just such adverse criticisms. This law has been operative for a short time comparatively, and yet there are those who desire to judge it a complete success or a complete failure at this early hour.

At a plenary session of the Disarmament Conference, I heard that eloquent Frenchman, Viviani, in one of his impassioned and inimitable orations. He told the distinguished gathering that he feared sometimes America did not properly understand the difficulties with which Europe is confronted, and that we expected the conditions in Europe after the world war to return to a normalcy more rapidly than is possible. He used the magnificent simile of a great storm that had raged on the ocean for days in which the sea was stirred to the very depths, and the waves rolled mountain-high. He said that after the storm had passed away and the sky had regained its blue, yet for days the billows continued to roll because the depths had been so deeply stirred. So, he declared, it was with Europe; that, even though the war had passed, more time would be needed before tranquillity in governmental affairs could be resumed. And, as this distinguished Frenchman eloquently portrayed these conditions, it seemed to me that there was a similar significance in the illustration as applied to the prohibition law-enforcement work. The storms of many contests of ballots which raged in the decades past ushered in a

(Continued on Page Eleven)

HOW TO INSURE PERMANENCY OF PROHIBITION

Mrs. Mabel Willebrandt, Assistant United States Attorney General

I congratulate this goodly assemblage of delegates from many nations. You are met with a common purpose of furthering the great moral issue of temperance. Naturally all so interested look with anxious eyes to the experiences of the United States, the first great nation to adopt prohibition as its national policy.

There are two ways of bringing about a great national reform. One is by local agitation and education; the other by legislative agitation, culminating in the passage of a law. In the former the law flowers up out of the unified wishes of the community; in the latter it is superimposed upon the community by the judgment of a few. Both methods have been pursued by various organizations to promote prohibition. I say unqualifiedly that the former is the sounder method and only through its earnest and continued use can the latter method succeed at all.

Law merely by its declaration never changes the habits of the people; it never changes the personal conception of what is right and wrong. Laws to produce the best result should follow, not precede the aggregate public judgment on a question. Otherwise it is a minority forcing its will on the majority. If, however, local public sentiment has been stimulated to the point where the majority desires the passage of a law, however much trouble the disgruntled minority may afterwards produce that law when passed will prevail.

Why Prohibition in the United States Will be Permanent

That is why I have always been supremely confident that national prohibition is in the United States to stay. I recognize that to some localities where the sentiment is and has been wet it seems like despotism. But in its final analysis I believe we will find that federally-promoted prohibition is what the majority of the people of the United States want. I base that judgment on the fact that prior to the passage of the Eighteenth Amendment to our Constitution thirty-three of our states already had prohibition laws and out of all the 2,543 counties in the United States there were only 305 that had not, by the principle of local option, declared themselves dry. Keeping in mind the deep ground swell of public sentiment expressed in the local, city and county laws that preceded and ushered in the establishment of prohibition as the national policy, I have no fear for its permanency.

Attack on Prohibition is now Acute

It is conceded by anti-prohibitionists that their attack should be most acute at the Congressional elections of 1922. Those who waged warfare against the Volstead Act and the Eighteenth Amendment are made up of both honest and dishonest objectors to the policy of prohibition. Enrolled with them are many formerly in the retail liquor business, who have suffered heavy financial loss in the closing of the saloon. One argument advanced by them is that the people did not vote on the Eighteenth Amendment. Of course, they did not, nor have they ever voted on any amendment to our Constitution. Our system of government provides that the legislatures of the states shall ratify amendments and the Eighteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution was ratified by the legislatures of a greater number of states than any other amendment.

It is also urged that the sentiment of the country is against prohibition and the result of the straw vote conducted by the Literary Digest is cited as proof. A fact often forgotten, however, is that although the Literary Digest sent the questionnaire to ten million people, less than ten per cent of those addressed responded. It is believed by many that the anti-prohibitionists, goaded by dissatisfaction and then in process of organization as a means of expressing that unrest, answered in larger numbers than those satisfied with present laws on the subject.

Wherever the Federal Government has been given a power that power has coincidentally been taken from the states. Wisely that was guarded against in the Eighteenth Amendment. Concurrent power was placed in the Federal and state government to carry out the purpose of the Amendment, but the tendency to leave enforcement to the Federal Government should be rigorously combated.

Enforcement of Prohibition is largely a Police Matter

Police regulations we have always before left to local law enforcement agencies. It would be idle for the national government to duplicate the enforcement officers of all the states by bands of prohibition police. It would not only drain the Federal Treasury, but far worse, it would drain the locality of its pride and self-reliance in the maintenance of law and order by local agencies. Passage of the National Prohibition Act added to the already wide jurisdiction of the Federal judges, jurisdiction over violations of prohibition laws.

The average citizen has little conception of the immense burden thus thrown on the system of our Federal courts. Last year 34,984 cases for the violation of liquor laws were handled by Federal courts. The dockets are becoming so congested that long delay exists between arrest and trial. In the past six months there have been reported to United States attorneys 20,885 violations, thus piling up in six months almost two-thirds of the entire number for last year. Furthermore each month has shown an increase over the previous month. Federal courts will be temporarily relieved by the Federal Judiciary Bill which adds to the number of judges in some localities. That will permit a clearing of some of the dockets, but no national system of law enforcement can stand up against such an onslaught of cases as are dumped into the Federal courts by the misguided tendency in some localities to prosecute all the liquor law offenders in the Federal courts.

Causes and Results of Centralization of Responsibilities in the Federal Government

Our Government is founded on a dual system of theories of law enforcement. All questions concerning the maintenance of law and order are left to the regulations of the states except only such matters as are specifically granted by the Constitution to the Federal Government. The influence of Puritan life has made our fundamental conception of Government responsibility largely individualistic and local. Communities fifty years ago were isolated. Law and order was maintained in each by laws passed according to the conscience of each with little thought as to whether they were like or unlike the laws of adjacent communities. Wildernesses separated the settlements. Within the last fifty years the entire country has changed. Wildernesses have been conquered and towns have grown in their places.

In the short period of half a lifetime a great change has come to our nation. Largely the startling mechanical developments that have conquered distances and forces of nature, the rapid increase of population and the two wars have been the causes. The whole tendency of all these forces is towards centralization of power in the Federal Government. Localities and states that formerly would have exercised authority over offenders against their law with sturdy independence, are now joining in the mad rush to unload their governmental and legal troubles into the vortex at Washington. When the average citizen deplores lawlessness he too seldom attributes it to the breaking down of local responsibility.

Call Again into use the Methods of the Old Days of Local Option in Campaigns

The time has come to call a halt and take stock of ourselves, to strap on the old fashioned harness of county and state responsibility and to pull locally our share of the load. For this one thing I therefore plead. For the sake of adequate Federal law enforcement—that you make your organization an agency for stimulating local authorities to function on every matter that is covered by state or local law, thus leaving the Federal courts free to exercise jurisdiction where local authority cannot act. The passage of a national prohibition act has not ended your work. In fact, it has only put the previous work you have done to the test. You now have the opportunity to show the world whether the foundation you so patiently and securely laid in the public sentiment of county after county of this great nation, can stand against the attack made upon National Prohibition by the criminal and lawless element of the country who are also joined by that minority who sincerely do not agree with it in principle. To preserve the gains you have made it is necessary again to resort to the patient work done by the W. C. T. U. organizations in the counties and small sub-divisions of the country. The aim should be to win a steadily increasing percentage of public sentiment in favor of the policy of the law.

Conditions of Enforcement are Unequal over the Country

We must face the fact that when the national prohibition policy was adopted by the Federal Government, although a majority of the states were for it and although a majority of the counties had passed similar laws, there were, nevertheless, large localities which bitterly opposed the amendment. It is as absolutely impossible to enforce adequately, uniformly and satisfactorily a law that prohibits the sale, transportation and possession of intoxicating liquors in such communities as it would be to adequately enforce a law in Turkey to prohibit polygamy.

Result of Last Election Not a Rebuke to the Principles of Prohibition.

We are hearing that in the recent election great gains were made by the wet element of the country; that the balance of power in the Congress of the United States has been shifted from dry to wet.

(Continued on Page Thirteen)

Five Continents in Congenial Concourse at Philadelphia

(Continued from Page Three)

burg. She told of the wonderful triumph of Pennsylvania's good women in defeating the political gang that had so long controlled the state, and in putting into office men of principle and moral courage. Applause greeted her statement that in 90 per cent of the counties of Pennsylvania more women than men voted, and that more women than men had voted in proportion to registration. She expressed the hope that from this time forth women will take their full share in the government of the state and nation. Formerly when they came together they talked about cooking recipes and fancy work, now they talk about civic affairs that concern the whole community.

Mrs. John B. Roberts, of the New Century Club, the spokeswoman for the Women's Clubs, said, "We club women believe in two things. We believe in trimmed lamps, that is to say, we believe in fitting ourselves for an opportunity before the opportunity arrives, and we believe in practical idealism. We welcome you tonight to the city of Benjamin Franklin, the greatest practical idealist America has ever had. He dared to raise his eyes to a power above the clouds but because he was practical he made a path for it down to the earth, and so performed a miracle and brought fire from heaven. You of this great World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union have dared to attempt the impossible, and so you have performed your miracle and the thing that you worked for and prayed for has become the law of the land. And I am prepared to say to you, for the club women of this city, that we too believe in ideals; we believe in making a pathway for heavenly ideals to be made practical. The faith that is in you is in us also."

Convention a Benediction

Mrs. Ella M. George, president of the hostess state W. C. T. U., in a delightful speech in the name of the people of Pennsylvania, graciously welcomed the visitors from all over the world. "Words cannot express the welcome which we feel in our hearts," said Mrs. George. "For many months we have looked forward to the time when we could greet you. When we are by ourselves, we sometimes sing, 'Pennsylvania, the gem of the nation,' but we shall not ask you to sing it tonight, since each would wish to sing it of her own state. The W. C. T. U. is big in mind and heart, big enough to take in all the world; big in spirit and in purpose. It has before it one of the biggest of purposes, a world redeemed. We welcome you for what you have already done. You have changed the sentiment of your country against the liquor traffic. We welcome you for what you are doing, and for what you shall do in the future. A great task is still before you, the establishment of world-wide prohibition. We have been singing for years, 'Wind the ribbon round the nations,' and we thought it would take a vast amount of ribbon, but we have come so near to each other that it now appears it will after all take very little. Your coming is a benediction; we expect great things from the convention and know we shall not be disappointed."

The next speaker, Mrs. H. E. Fahnestock, president of the county W. C. T. U., and chairman of the local committees, adding her word of cordial welcome, said, "We have been so excited over this great event that we have not been able to contain ourselves, and if you find that we have overlooked anything in our preparations, remember this is our first party. The old definition in our geographies was that an ocean is a large body of water separating two pieces of land, but the W. C. T. U. has changed it to 'a large body of water uniting the countries of the world.' We most cordially welcome you to Philadelphia."

The Gloria Trumpeters

Miss Mabel Archibald, editor of the national W. C. T. U. paper of India, gave the first response to the welcome addresses. Dressed in the robes of a Hindoo princess, she made a charming picture. She salaamed to the platform and audience, reminding her hearers that salaam meant, "Glad to see you. How are you? It is a fine day." She said while the word India had only five letters, yet every fifth child in the world was born in India, and it was therefore an important part of the world. She voiced India's gratitude for the help that had been sent to her from America, and told graphically of the desire of the natives for prohibition of the liquor traffic.

Worth While to Come 13,000 Miles

Mrs. W. H. Carvosso, corresponding secretary of the Australasian W. C. T. U., responded for her delegation of five, who had traveled 13,000 miles to attend this convention, and had already found it worth while.

A particularly unique feature of the program was the response from Japan by Miss Uta Hayashi, in her native tongue, interpreted by Mrs. Kubushiro. Standing with her were four other delegates from the Sunrise Kingdom. She reminded her hearers of the former visits to World's Conventions of Madam Kaji Yajima, Japan's "grand old woman" and said, "While she was not able to come to this meeting, much to her regret, she lies on her bed praying for its success."

Miss Agnes E. Slack, one of the honorary secretaries of the World's W. C. T. U., speaking for the English delegation, gave a greeting from Lady Cecilia Roberts, president of the British Women's Temperance Association, and referred to the strong statement made by Prof. Gilbert Murray of Oxford University, son-in-law of Lady Carlisle, that the three great miracles of the world in the last century were wireless telegraphy, the conquest of the air, and prohibition of the liquor traffic in the United States, and that the last of the three was the greatest in its effect on the welfare of the world. "You in America," said Miss Slack, "have a tremendous responsibility. If you should change your dry law or lower the standard of your enforcement law you would lower the status of civilization throughout the world. You of America stood beside us in the time of stress and storm in the world war. We are here tonight to emphasize all the ties that bind us—the same language, the same literature, the same high ideals."

Representatives from the Philippines, South America, Denmark and Finland were introduced and responded briefly.

Sabbath Day Services Inspiring

Seats were reserved for delegates Sunday morning at the Church of the Holy Trinity, where Rev. Dr. Floyd Tomkins preached a special sermon to the white ribboners.

A devotional and memorial service was held in the afternoon at the Academy of Music. Long before the hour of the service the great auditorium was filled.

Miss Gordon, the presiding officer, opened the meeting with a tender tribute to leaders who had passed to their heavenly home since the last World's Convention. "We share a common sorrow but we are rich in a great common heritage from these souls who have entered the other world," she said. "The melody of their consecrated lives will sing on in our hearts and inspire us to emulate their faithfulness." Special reference was made to the service rendered the cause by Rosalind, Countess of Carlisle, her generous gifts, her hospitality at the last convention, her sympathetic interest, her wise counsel and planning for a larger work. "Our best memorial to Lady Carlisle," said Miss Gordon, "will be increased devotion, larger gifts of time and money to aid our work in all lands, and greater zeal in pressing the anti-alcohol fight until in all the world we shall outlaw the drink trade, protect the home and bring the triumph of Christ's Golden Rule in custom and in law." All joined in the reading of selections from the Scriptures, prayer and the singing of the hymn, "For All the Saints Who From Their Labors Rest."

At the service of prayer that followed brief but inspiring addresses were delivered by Agnes E. Slack of England, Mrs. John MacLeod of Australia, Mary J. Campbell of India, and Rev. Helen Hyde Carlson of the United States.

Prohibition Sunday Night's Theme

A unique feature of the Sunday night's program was the reading of "The Call of the Eighteenth Amendment" by a youthful Frances Willard of Connecticut, a namesake and relative of the founder of the World's W. C. T. U., who has won many trophies in medal contests.

After music by that matchless quartet, the Gloria Trumpeters, the vast audience settled down to the enjoyment of two statesmanlike addresses: "America's Relation to the Movement for World Sobriety," by Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, General Secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, and "Progress of Prohibition Law-Enforcement in the United States," by Major Roy A. Haynes, Federal Prohibition Commissioner. In his opening sentence Dr. Cherrington paid high tribute to the W. C. T. U., saying, "For almost fifty

(Continued on Page Seven)

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY ELEVENTH CONVENTION OF WORLD'S W. C. T. U.

Preamble

We, the members of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, assembled in our Eleventh Convention, rejoice exceedingly at the recent extraordinary victories over the beverage alcohol trade, and reverently render to Almighty God, the Prince of Peace, our heartfelt tribute of praise. In the love of God and humanity, without distinction of race, color or creed, we, representing in this new crusade the awakened womanhood of the world, dedicate ourselves anew to the holy task of making supreme in the customs of society and in the laws of every land the preeminent principles of liberty, justice, peace, and brotherhood exemplified in the Golden Rule of Christ.

TOTAL ABSTINENCE

Believing that the triumph of these mighty principles depends largely upon the inculcation of total abstinence, to this end we urge all who are like-minded to enroll themselves as abstainers.

WORLD-WIDE EXTINCTION OF THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC

World democracy, world peace, world purity, and world patriotism demand world-wide extinction of the liquor traffic.

We call upon the peoples of all creeds and of all organizations in the world's family of nations, to clasp hands and co-operate with the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union to help bring to full fruition its hope and its dauntless service of thirty-eight years on behalf of a sober world. Science declares against alcohol. Health conservation and business prosperity demand total abstinence and the outlawing of the liquor traffic. Together we will agitate, educate, organize and legislate until the exalted vision of the founder of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Frances E. Willard, is realized; until the Gospel of the Golden Rule of Christ is worked out in the customs of society and in the laws of every land.

SCIENTIFIC TEMPERANCE INSTRUCTION

We urge on every nation unflagging effort to secure for its youth systematic instruction in the schools and elsewhere as to the dangers of alcohol and other habit-forming drugs.

ANTI-OPIUM PROBLEM

We believe the opium problem calls for international action; that the production of opium should be limited to needs for scientific and medicinal uses; that the time has come for the assembling of the nations to secure a definite course of action to counteract the pressure being brought to bear by nations with great financial interests to serve.

We therefore appeal to the governments of the world for the Fourth International Conference for the purpose of considering the entire question.

PURITY

We reaffirm our belief in a single standard of morals for both sexes, and pledge ourselves to support a constructive purity program for the education of the young, and to promote such measures as will suppress prostitution with its attendant results deteriorating to the moral and physical health of the race.

PEACE

We believe that all nations should associate themselves permanently for world peace and good-will.

We believe in a warless world, and dedicate ourselves to its achievement.

THE NEAR EAST

We urge our constituent members to continue their financial and prayerful support of the children of the Near East.

We express to our respective Governments the urgent hope that some way may be found to obtain freedom and protection for the Christian women and children of the Near East and that our governments be asked to exert their influence toward the prompt establishment of the promised Armenian National Home.

LAW ENFORCEMENT

In localities and in countries that have secured legislation against the liquor traffic, the strict enforcement of such laws immediately becomes the paramount issue before the temperance forces. As members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union we pledge our supreme effort to aid in the education of the public on this question, and in the election of officials committed to the strict enforcement of such legislation.

CITIZENSHIP

The addition of millions of women voters in Great Britain, Canada, the United States, and many other countries to the electorates, makes us realize our imperative duty to prepare women for the privilege of Christian citizenship. We urge women to initiate and support laws that will protect women and children in the home and in industry, and to promote the election to office of men and women who champion the principles of purity, peace, political equality and the extinction of the liquor traffic.

PROHIBITION ON THE HIGH SEAS

We appeal to the great shipping companies and the governments of the world to take such steps as are necessary to suppress the liquor traffic on the high seas, as it endangers the safety of the people who travel on the seas and is a menace to the peace of the world.

Five Continents in Congenial Concourse at Philadelphia

(Continued from Page Six)

years you women of the United States have not only been the pioneers in this temperance work but as well have played the heavy role in every forward step that has been taken toward prohibition."

As Miss Gordon presented Federal Prohibition Commissioner Haynes, she asked all to stand and sing "Work for Enforcement Where You Are" as a pledge to him that the white ribbon army would give him tireless support in his big task. His truly epoch-making address is given in large part on another page. Ohio's comrades, a part of the United States delegation, claimed Commissioner Haynes as one of their own citizens with a vigor that brought smiles to his face.

Formal Opening of Convention Monday Morning

The morning meetings were held in the ballroom of the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel. At ten o'clock Monday morning the eleventh convention of the World's W. C. T. U. was formally opened by Miss Gordon, vice-president of the World's W. C. T. U. At the seven deliberate taps of her gavel the great company of vivacious women, eagerly exchanging greetings and information, became quiet, focussed their attention upon the presiding officer and concentrated their thought upon the program. The roll call by the secretaries was impressive, as country after country responded with a joyful "Here." Then came the illuminating review of white ribbon activities around the world, the report of the honorary secretaries, giving a bird's eye view of the W. C. T. U. enterprises in other lands.

Treasurer's reports are ordinarily considered dry and uninteresting, but while that presented by Mrs. Ella A. Bolle, honorary treasurer, was, as she remarked, necessarily "dry" it was most delightfully entertaining. She told of the necessity for carrying two bank accounts, one in London and the other in the United States. She amused her audience with an account of her difficulties in dealing with the ever varying exchange of the various countries in these after-war days. She injected much human interest into her report by tracing the history of some contributions, for example, the receipt of a brand new five dollar American bill that came to her from Egypt, and excited her curiosity until she learned that on the night before the money was sent from Cairo the vice president of the Pennsylvania W. C. T. U. had spoken in that city. She told how the United States W. C. T. U.'s gift of $5,000 from the Jubilee Fund to the World's treasury had helped the organization over a hard place financially, and because of the exchange rates the $5,000 had grown and grown, doubling, trebling and in some cases even quadrupling in value when changed into the currency of other countries. Applause greeted the reference to the legacy received from Lady Carlisle's estate of 1000 pounds, and 90 pounds to be used in Burma.

Aeroplane Showers Observers With "Facts"

The expected arrival of an aeroplane in Philadelphia bearing a greeting from Alabama comrades necessitated an early adjournment. Arrangements had been made by the hostesses of the convention to convey the delegates by motors to the aviation grounds where the aeroplane was to alight. Between forty and fifty automobiles, draped in white, and labeled with the names of different countries, preceded by a platoon of mounted police, formed a procession and drove through the streets of the city. At the aviation grounds, two planes, one containing Mrs. J. M. Hankins of Birmingham, Alabama, and the other Mrs. Caroline Moore, known as "Mother" Moore for her service to the boys of the Navy, circled overhead and showered the observers with "Facts," the series of W. C. T. U. rainbow leaflets. The return trip was made past the League Island Navy Yard, where the big ships and dreadnaughts were to be seen, and called forth much comment on the necessity of work for world peace.

One of the spectacular numbers on the afternoon's program was furnished by

(Continued on Page Twelve)

PROGRESS OF THE ANTI-ALCOHOL MOVEMENT IN OVERSEAS COUNTRIES

Addresses in part delivered at World's Convention

Our Debt to the Bible Land

Mrs. S. M. Zwemer of Egypt

Civilization did not originate in this country. Modern progress is not spontaneous. For many of our daily necessities we are indebted to foreign lands. The fragrant coffee on our breakfast table should remind us of Arabia, whence came the first plants. Our government, civil and penal codes, and laws governing the personal, civil and religious life. From whence did we receive these fundamentals? We owe the Near East a great debt. Our laws were given from Sinai, every inspiration for better government came to us from Palestine. Also the news of our salvation. North Africa supplied the man who helped to carry the Cross to Calvary. Egypt sheltered Our Lord when the wicked King Herod tried to destroy Him. Egypt also gave shelter for 400 years to the people of The Book, training the great lawgiver, Moses, for his place and part in the world's progress. In Arabia, the great missionary, Paul, spent three years in preparation for his life work.

Do we owe anything to these countries? WE DO!

Are we paying?

We have sent missionaries and money, built schools and hospitals, and the youth are being trained as leaders of their nation. But, far more rapidly, and in greater numbers, are the forces of evil being poured into these countries from our Christian countries.

The Moslems, whose moral standards are so low, are daily witnessing the spectacle of the so called Christian indulging in his beer or whisky, while the Moslem himself takes coffee or water.

But the Christian merchants are not satisfied to supply the few Christians in these Moslem countries, they are pushing their nefarious traffic amongst those whose religion forbids them to touch, taste or handle alcoholic liquor.

They believe their eternal salvation depends in a measure on prohibition. But these followers of the Arabian Prophet are being taught to drink and are being dragged to a still lower level and depth of iniquity in order to enrich the wholesale and retail merchant of drugs and intoxicating liquors. We are making a poor return to these lands for the benefits we have received from them.

Then again there are thousands of these people who have come to the United States for education and trade. Are they being given the opportunity to see the best we have to offer? Sometimes they are, but the majority only see the sordid side of Christian America. They are taught, and learn, to drink, and the only report they take back to their own country is that Americans drink and have no religion and live only to make money.

We have a working branch of the W. C. T. U. in Cairo, and a great deal is being done in all the schools to create an atmosphere against intemperance. Literature in several languages is sold and given away. A worker is needed at once to organize the material already at hand—educated young women who in the cause of patriotism laid aside their centuries old conservatism and spoke to large crowds in the streets during the recent uprising. These young women can be trained for W. C. T. U. work in the Moslem countries, in Egypt, Palestine, North Africa and Syria. At a meeting of the W. C. T. U. recently almost all the women present signed the W. C. T. U pledge, and a committee of three Egyptians and three Americans was appointed to draw up a constitution. The upper class of Egyptian women have become concerned over the gambling, drinking, vice and drug-using of the men of their families and seem ready to engage in a movement to prevent it.

The Egyptians are rousing both Christians and Moslems to stop these evils. In the new constitution of the Egyptian nation, an attempt will be made to insert a prohibition clause.

Prohibition in Finland Follows Woman Suffrage

Maria Stenroth of Finland

Many, many years ago, when I had just left the high school, there were put into my hand some leaflets about the W. C. T. U. and Frances E. Willard. Ever since, I have loved America's great reformer and all white ribboners, but never, I think, so much as in these days of the World's Convention, when for the first time I have come into direct touch with this wonderful international work.

But before I loved the white ribbon I loved my country. So I feel now it is a great privilege to speak about my beloved Finland to dear white ribboners from all over the world.

Finland has been a country of great suffering. When we were a part of Sweden, we were again and again the battlefield of wars between Sweden and Russia. Later, when we were under Russia, that country began to force upon Finland its language, its laws. We were denied a flag of our own. We had no freedom as a nation. Thus oppressed, we grew the more eager to secure the inner freedom, the freedom from vices, without which no nation can progress. Before our prohibition law was passed, the results of the work of brave temperance friends were already to be seen in a high degree. For instance, between 1906 and 1910, there was used in Sweden 8½ pints of pure alcohol per capita in a year, in France during the same period 38½ pints per capita, and in Finland only 2½ pints per capita. But these 2½ pints per capita were doing harm enough among us, so we fought for prohibition.

When the war between Russia and Japan broke out, Finland had time to breathe a little. Our W. C. T. U., which the Russian government had previously refused us permission to organize, was now founded. Reforms of great importance were carried out. Everybody —not only men, but women also—obtained the right to vote. Thus the women in our little unknown and suffering country were among the first to have the right, not only to choose lawmakers, but to be themselves chosen as lawmakers. When the first thus chosen diet gathered in 1907, the prohibition law was among the very first passed.

When the war between Russia and Japan came to an end Russia had again time to deal harshly with us. Our prohibition law was not signed by the Czar. Two years later our diet passed a new prohibition law. This was neither vetoed nor confirmed, simply ignored. Three years later the Czar again was urged to sign the law, but in vain. In 1914 our diet for the fourth time pleaded with him to grant us prohibition—but the World War broke out and put an end to all reforms. In the latter part of this war our little Finland had to be a shield for all Scandinavia against bolshevism. We had to gain our freedom through a hard and bitter war against bolshevists, but we secured it in the spring of 1918, and a year later, the first of June, 1919, our prohibition law went into effect.

As Finland, in general, has been a country of great suffering, so our law of prohibition came into operation under the most unfavorable circumstances. The war had demoralized—as war always does. The great lack of food from which we had suffered had produced an unusual craving for drink, as well as for food. After the great stress of the time through which they had passed people were trying to forget all unfavorable circumstances. Economically, life was, and still is, hard in Finland. Therefore we cannot speak of greatly increased savings deposits as you do here in America. But even economically we have gained much through prohibition. Previously there had been a great deal of poverty due to drunkenness. Now that condition no longer exists. Children are better clothed, better fed. Teachers in our public schools, members of the Salvation Army, Sisters of Charity—all who are familiar with the homes of the poor—are telling us that.

In regard to crime, there has been a remarkable decrease. Violations of the prohibition law are still very common, but crimes of violence are greatly reduced in number. For instance, in 1917 there were about 10,000 given up to the police in Helsinki, our capital, for major crimes. In 1919, after we had had our prohibition law for only six months there were about 8,000 crimes of the kind. In 1920, when the law had been in operation a whole year, there were 6,000 major crimes, and in 1921 only slightly over 5,000. In 1919 there were 4,720 persons detained by the police, in 1920, 2,100; and in 1921, 1,700. Crimes against women, children and animals—those unable to protect themselves—have in some instances decreased one-half, and in others one-fifth of the number in former years. The worst thing with which we have to contend is that a very high per cent of our upper-class people are against prohibition. Our country people do not want liquor; they favor prohibition. Because there is such need for more law-abiding citizens, we are eagerly trying to rally new workers around our temperance standard, and we have not striven in vain. Our temperance army is increasing. In 1919 we had about 21,000 members in our temperance union; now we have over 41,000. There are mighty forces working to take away our prohibition law, but we will not give up our fight, but, in the words of Abraham Lincoln, so well known in America, "With malice toward none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right as far as God gives us to see the right we will finish the work we are in to bind up the wounds of the nations."

PROGRAM OF ACTIVITIES WORLD'S W. C. T. U. 1922--1925

Presented by a committee of representatives from each country attending Philadelphia Convention. Anna A. Gordon, chairman; Deborah Knox Livingston, secretary of Committee.

Total Abstinence

First—The permanent abolition of alcoholic customs and the liquor trade in every country must be built upon the solid foundation of total abstinence. To promote this we shall endeavor to secure the teaching of scientific temperance in the schools of all lands; shall urge pledge signing among all classes of society, and encourage the compilation and study of the scientific facts that relate to the welfare of the race.

Prohibition

Second—The World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union will endeavor to secure in every country the passage of laws seeking the annihilation of the trade in beverage alcohol.

Peace

Third—The World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, through international co-operation, will work for the establishment of world peace.

Purity

Fourth—The strength of a nation lies in the moral integrity of its people. We will stress, therefore, the standard of personal purity for men and women alike, and promote a constructive educational program for the young.

Citizenship

Fifth—The enfranchisement of women in many lands has brought to their governments a great moral force in the realm of politics. We shall continue to work for the political equality of women in the countries which as yet have not granted suffrage to women, and in the countries where women have the vote, promote programs of education for citizenship in the affairs of government; urging the exercise of the suffrage for the securing of moral legislation.

Membership

Sixth—We shall promote membership campaigns in all countries affilliated to the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, using such methods as meet their individual needs, setting as a definite goal the enlistment of the teachers of all the world, and the doubling of the present membership during the next three years. We will promote organizations in the countries in which the Woman's Christian Temperance Union does not exist.

Co-operation

Seventh—We shall endeavor to unite the women of the world through co-operation with missionary societies and other welfare organizations.

Canada's Ambition

Mrs. Gordon Wright, president of the W. C. T. U. of Canada, said in part:

"Canada was the first nation of the entente to secure war time prohibition. In our darkest hour, in 1916, our government gave us complete war-time prohibition. I wonder if the government saw the handwriting on the wall, that no nation will prosper which is in league with alcoholism! I wish they had made it permanent as they did in the United States. The Commons brought in a measure that would have made it permanent, and the Senate so amended it that it lost its force. Of course you do not know anything about such things in your Senate! Any form of government that stays the wheels of progress will be punished and perhaps the women will have a hand in that punishment.

"I would like the World's Convention delegates to take back with them the story of the triumph of prohibition on the entire American continent. Our Senate said it did not want to take too much power away from the provinces, yet every one of the provinces, excepting Quebec, already had provincial prohibition, but the Senate called prohibition an arbitrary measure, and said, 'Let us leave the power with the provinces.' One by one the provinces, except Quebec, responded to the call by carrying prohibition. British Columbia changed to government control, yet government control is not an unmigitated evil, since it is proving its own undoing. They say that the revenue is needed to pave the streets. Can't we find some other way to pave our streets than by mothers' hearts? We in Canada can refute every argument made by the Liberty League. That organization says, 'Prohbition increases the drug habit.' But in our two government controlled provinces the drug evil is greater than in all of the others combined. 'Prohibition tempts people to do wrong.' Our two government-controlled provinces disprove the statement. Within the last month, in British Columbia, a policeman was shot down in cold blood by a bootlegger. Where prohibition has been maintained the white slave traffic has almost vanished. They say, 'Prohibition has ruined business.' In London, my home city, we have not a single vacant hotel. They are all doing a splendid business. One place where formerly liquor was sold has now the biggest business in any part of the empire. Another is now a bank, and business is growing till more buildings are needed. Alberta under prohibition does not now have one police case where it used to have twenty.. Give us ten years, and there will not be a wet spot in Canada! Our ideal is that of Lloyd George when, years ago, he caught a new vision for his native land, 'a land where you meet no drunkard staggering on the road towards his doom, a land where you have no slums for humanity to rot in, a land with two-thirds of its prison cells empty, a land with its workhouses vanished, a land with its children well fed, well clothed, well sheltered, well trained, with their merry laughter ringing through the streets, a land where the curse of drink shall be driven from its hearths.'"

Mrs. MacLeod, Leader of Delegation Journeying 13,000 Miles to Convention

Australia Out for Prohibition

Mrs. MacLeod, president of the Australasian W. C. T. U., said in part:

The newspapers in our country give much space to the failure of prohibition in America. If a man is killed by wood alcohol, it is given a big headline, but the good things that have happened as the result of prohibition are not mentioned.

I believe if the Anglo-Saxon people who have the same past history, the same language and who read the same Holy Book, were to join forces, there is nothing they could not do for righteousness. I believe the League of Nations would have been a marvelous success if all the English speaking people had joined it. Our great leader, Frances Willard, who is the inspiration of our work in Australia, well stated our ambition, when she said, "Only the golden rule of Christ can bring the Golden Age of Man."

Australia is bigger in area than the United States but we have a small population. We have six o'clock closing in all but two of the states, and nine o'clock closing in one of those two. Even the newspapers, who do not help us, admit that six o'clock closing is a very good thing and they would not go back to the old hour of 11:30 p. m. We have temperance teaching in all our schools. We have no hotel bars open on Sunday.

Scotland Out for Victory

Mrs. George Milne, vice president of the Scottish W. C. T. U., in a stirring address, stated that Scotland had enjoyed for sixty years, one-seventh of complete prohibition—namely, Sunday closing. She claimed that prohibition does prohibit in her country. Furthermore, over 300 parishes have been dry by the will of the landlords. In the conflict of 1920 Scotland was greatly handicapped by the disorganization caused by the many years of war, and by the fact that on the register were listed the names of those who had been dead for years. In addition, the Temperance Scotland Act provides that fifty-five per cent is necessary to carry no-license and there must be not less than thirty-five per cent of all the

(Continued on Page 16)

India Dry by 1925

Mary J. Campbell, World's Organizer

Miss Campbell wore upon her breast on one occasion, a medal presented to her by the British Government in appreciation of her work for temperance in India. Of the uniform kindness of British officials, she said, "As a temperance worker I have traveled up and down the country even when martial law had been proclaimed and never been disturbed"

"The natives of India are developing a strong prohibition sentiment," said Miss Campbell. "Local option measures have been introduced during the last year before the eight legislative councils, and the one in the Punjab Province passed by a vote of 39 in favor and only 11 against. There was discussion and the usual arguments were presented by the opponents of prohibition, among them personal liberty. This was answered with the story, 'One day as a man was standing by the side of a river he saw a man about to drown. The observer was arrested and brought into court, and when asked why he stood there and let the man drown, he replied, "I had not been introduced to him, and I did not want to interfere with his personal liberty."' The governor of the Punjab is a Scotch Presbyterian and approved the local option bill. Lord Reading, the Governor-General, a Jew but a good man, said, 'When I was in England, I worked for temperance, I certainly will work for it for India.' This bill was to have gone into effect last May, but in some way the drink interests suppressed it, and it is not yet in operation."

"Not only do the people of India want prohibition," continued Miss Campbell, "but I am glad to say the commander-in-chief of the Indian Army approves of it, for he sent word to me saying, 'I want you to come into every regiment in India and organize the temperance work.' I could not go, for my work is with the women and children."

"Tell the People of India We Love Them"

A Tale Told by Miss Campbell

Just a few days after the Armistice was signed, knowing I was going back to India to become one of the organizers for the World's W. C. T. U., some of my friends in Kansas said, "It would be splendid if you could get a message from Governor Capper to carry back to India." My brother took me over to the Governor's office and imagine my surprise when he thanked me for coming to him for such a message. Later I went to Washington, and some of my friends said it would be a fine thing for me to get a message from the president of the United States concerning what prohibition is going to do for America. So some of them got busy and talked to this Senator and that Senator and by and by the word came back from the secretary to the President that if Miss Campbell could remain in Washington eight days she could see the President two minutes. Now Mary J. Campbell is not an important person but she was too important to wait eight days in Washington when the work of the W. C. T. U. was depending upon her efforts, so I did not carry away with me a message from the President of the United States. But the next Sabbath morning I was called upon to speak from the pulpit of a big city church and before the service began, someone asked if I would like to see the juniors. They took me down into the juniors' room, where 120 sweet little American children were gathered. I was still thinking about a message to India, and at the close of a fifteen minute talk, I said, "I am going back to India very soon. I wonder if you have a message for me to carry to the people of that country." A dear eight or nine year old girl said, "I have a message, Miss Campbell. Tell the people of India that we love them." When I reached India, I had many welcomes. At one place several hundred well educated Hindoos gave me a reception and at the close of my talk I gave the little American girl's message, "Tell the people of India that we love them." When I had finished a tall Madrasee came on to the platform and said, "Our hearts are touched by the message from the little girl in America, and I asked them if they did not want to send their love back to this little American girl. And that dignified body of Hindoos sent their love to the little maiden. And so my message this afternoon is that the old world wants love above everything else. We can do far more good by sending messages of love from one nation to another than by sending armaments and armies.

Mary J. Campbell, World's W. C. T. U. Organizer in India

I know that thousands of white ribboners of India are praying for God's blessing on this country. I know if I could stand before the 70,000,000 Mohammedans and tell them what we of the W. C. T. U. are trying to do, they would send greetings. I know if I could speak to the 42,000,000 Hindoos, they would say "Thank God for those women who are going to keep on in their work until every grogshop in the whole world is closed." And the 5,000,000 Christians in India, thousands of them are on their knees today asking God's blessing on our cause. I am thinking of the little children of India. I have taught them to sing that slogan that Anna Gordon used in the prohibition campaigns, only we change it a little and say, "Tremble Maharaja Toddy. When we grow up we will kill you."

What the White Ribbon Means in Japan

Mrs. Kubushiro, Corresponding Secretary Japan W. C. T. U.

For the last thirty-five years the World's W. C. T. U. has mothered and nourished our national Woman's Christian Temperance Union in Japan. It sent missionaries, it sent money, it helped to build headquarters. Now your Jubilee Fund is preparing for future work a most promising young woman, Madam Yajima's granddaughter.

We are coming to our youth. In the last World's convention, held in London, we reported that there were 3,000 members and seventy-seven unions. Our president was nearing her eighty-eighth birthday, so our women bestirred themselves and headed by Miss Hayashi tried to make the number eighty-eight, our president's age, and we made this her birthday present. A year passed. More unions were added through the work of many other influential women. Now we have 114 unions, 17 Y's, and 38 L. T. L.'s, and the membership of the unions with the young people comes to 6,000 and the L. T. L. to 18,000. Lately we divided these 114 unions into sixteen districts each having a president.

We cannot spare our few workers for the purpose of traveling and lecturing, so we secured ten volunteers to offer at least one month for that purpose and they are traveling and lecturing, organizing new unions.

Our unions stand for World Prohibition, World Peace, and World Purity.

Thirty-five years ago a woman, Madam Kaji Yajima, stood wondering how such a curse as alcoholic drink could be taken away from home life. She had a crushing experience herself, her husband being a victim of the accursed custom of drinking, which in those days was so common. To her great amazement and wonder she learned through a leaflet that there was an organization called the Woman's Christian Temperance Union which was determined to take away alcoholic drink from home and society. She could not remain quiet, and hurrying to find the person who sent out that little leaflet, she came face to face with Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, your first world-wide W. C. T. U. missionary. The more she heard the more she was convinced, and that year, in early December, she and some other women met and organized the first woman's temperance union in Japan. Thus was the work begun. After years of unceasing labor we were able to have a prohibition law passed in the last congress prohibiting sale of liquor to minors. Do you know what that means to us? Ten million grammar school girls and boys are protected from alcoholic liquor and then another ten million from the baby to the school age, and the boys and girls after grammar school age who are not yet twenty-one. So you see twenty million and more young folks are under the protection of the law.

In Japan women do not usually drink. The percentage of women who do is so small that I can safely say the majority of adult women do not touch liquor and so there we have another ten million who are themselves abstainers. Now among men there are many who are members of men's temperance societies, Christians, school teachers, and even policemen who are coming to join the army of non-drinkers, so you see if not the majority, at least one-half of the nation is living without liquor. Public sentiment against the use of alcohol is new day, a new order of things constitutionally. So far as the legislative phase is concerned, tranquillity succeeded the storm, but the liquor traffic was so deeply intrenched and the contests that had raged were so bitter, the prejudice engendered so deep-seated, that it was not to be expected that absolute quiet and acquiescence should prevail immediately after the storm had passed over. Rather are we to be amazed that so great a progress has been made toward securing that acquiescence which should always come in a republican form of government when the majority has spoken.

(Continued on Page 15)

THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES

(Continued from Page Four)

You clearly recall that thrilling story of Nehemiah rebuilding the walls at Jerusalem. You will remember with what subtle cunning and craft Sanballat and the secret enemies of the work did everything in their power to prevent the completion of the walls. They sneered at and attempted to discredit the work, and even attempted to bring Nehemiah down into the plain where they sought to do him physical injury. It was at that point that Nehemiah told the messenger to tell Sanballat that he was doing a great work, and why should he come down to see him. In other words, why be annoyed by any minor demands.

Specific Task to Build Next our own Homes

The great forces of righteousness in America have been doing a great work ever since the Crusaders started to build this great wall, which has been so splendidly capped by the Eighteenth Amendment. Attempts by the enemy to tear down the wall may constantly be expected, but let us not be annoyed by sneers and the attempts to discredit. Remember, Nehemiah gave each workman a specific task of building the wall directly opposite his home. Each had his specific work. The builder also was made a watchman with a trumpet at his side to give warning upon the approach of the enemy, and soon the spirit of co-operation developed to such a high degree of efficiency that neighbors and friends vied with each other to do the best possible piece of work on the wall.

A good physician tries to be a better physician than any of those about him. A good watchmaker tries to make a better watch than any other. A good lawyer tries to give the best service to his clients, and a good preacher tries to build the best sermon. So it should be with the good citizen. He should always try to render the best service and discharge his duties of citizenship to the maximum in return for the benefits received as a citizen of his country.

Civilization Built upon Stability of Contract

Every good American citizen, native born or adopted, recognizes that he has entered into a contract with the Government of which he is a part, to observe the law of the land and to contribute to the best of his ability to the support of the fundamentals of the Government. Only so may the objects of the founders, the hope of the world, and the general good of the people obtain. In the final analysis regard for the sacredness of contract is the basis of all stability in all relationships. If the sacredness of contract is not observed in business, in commercial, and in industrial relationships, at once business, commerce and industry become chaotic. If the sacredness of contract of capital with labor or labor with capital is not observed with sincerity—at once there is chaos. If the sacredness of contract is not observed in the family—at once domestic tranquillity disappears. If there should be a general disregard for the sacredness of contract by our citizenship with the Government, nothing but anarchy could result. In other words, stable civilization is built upon the foundation of covenants and the keeping of them.

By the Eighteenth Amendment the people of the United States made a radical and revolutionary change in the domestic and economic policy of the nation, relative to the liquor traffic. The Amendment was proposed, considered, and ratified at a time of profound devotion by the people to public duty; at a time when their hearts were consecrated to high and noble endeavor, it was brought forward and ratified with an expedition and unanimity that carried unmistakable evidence of a deep determination and far-reaching moral purpose. It was no less than a firm resolve to place upon themselves certain definite and binding restraints. Their object was manifest; their course well-chosen, and their action swift and emphatic. It cannot be maintained that the people had not the right to order their domestic affairs, that they did not have power to lay restraints upon themselves, nor can it be questioned that Congress had plenary power to make an article of domestic production, deemed physically hurtful or morally injurious, an outlaw, and deny to it the status and dignity of property. There resulted the establishment of a new Constitutional order. The old regime had now run its course, and that which had before been a thing susceptible of lawful possession, was denounced as an outlaw.

As Mr. Justice Holmes, in a famous opinion rendered May 15, 1922, said:

"The Amendment meant a great revolution in the policy of this country and presumably and obviously meant to upset a good many things on, as well as off, the statute books. It is obvious that those whose wishes and opinions were embodied in the Amendment meant to stop the whole business."

Every Fundamental of Government Involved in Prohibition Enforcement

It is perfectly obvious, my friends, that every fundamental of American Government is involved in prohibition enforcement. Prohibition is the development of the growth of earnest public convictions from the day in 1777 when the Continental Congress passed a bone dry resolution.

Through local option, county option, and state prohibition, practically every community in the land, at different periods, faced the issue on its merits.

In 1916, out of 2,543 counties in the United States, only 305 were wet. Therefore, it will be seen by every unbiased observer that national prohibition merely put the seal of the nation upon action already taken by direct vote in the states. Congress by a two-thirds vote and forty-six states, merely ratified the mandate of the sovereign citizens. It is useless to review the battles which resulted in this great legislation, but suffice it to say that this law which marks one of the greatest strides ever taken by any country in a great moral reform in all the history of the world, has become a part of the Constitution and was made operative by legislative enactment, and so mechanically it becomes a part of the contract entered into by every citizen of the Government, which every good citizen is bound to observe.

I admit that it is very difficult for the alien to understand this law because of the fact that he has been reared under institutions hoary with years; he has been surrounded with customs that are ancient; he has lived in a country where the population is homogeneous. So a law that touches one's personal habits as closely as the prohibition law, is quite foreign to his thought. On the other hand, we are a very heterogeneous population; our institutions are new and our customs are largely in the making and we must of necessity have laws that are character-forming and directing, as to conduct, in order that we may develop the American type of character, which alone insures our stability as a free people.

One of the greatest difficulties especially facing us in the east today is the type of propaganda met with. The war has taught us how tremendous is the power of propaganda, and there is certainly grave danger in the propaganda that is being waged in many quarters against the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment. Nothing is being left undone to impress upon the public the idea that this law is not operative. Surely there is grave danger to the Republic in the attitude that the minority need not submit to the will of the majority and the question arises at once as to the security of our free institutions. I am inclined to believe that the source of this propaganda is not to be found in the unwillingness of the minority to submit to the dictates of the law, but that this propaganda has its origin in a well defined purpose to nullify the law in the interest of large personal gains on the part of a comparative few, who have felt most forcefully the effect of the law, and it is significant that at such a time when liquor is the most difficult to obtain in all our history, when drunkenness has been decreased to a very appreciable degree, when convictions for violations of the law are becoming most numerous, that at such a time the largest amount of space is given in some of our newspapers to articles most flimsy of fact which state that prohibition is a failure

It would not be strange if some of the hue and cry, "Prohibition is a failure" might have arisen from some of the very ones who have felt the force of the law either in the temporary loss of their property or their liberty, or in the loss of their social standing. It should always be remembered that as long as human nature is as it is, there cannot be one hundred per cent enforcement of this or any other law. Laws that are as old as civilization have been broken and are being broken, and will be broken to some degree as long as time lasts. In the light of this experience with other laws, one of the most remarkable successes in my judgment ever attained in the enforcement of a new and drastic law has been recorded in the present status of enforcement of the National Prohibition Act. It may also be reasonably anticipated that with the succeeding years, the enforcement of this law, nationally, will improve under honest administration, just as has been the experience in the enforcement of this law in the many states which adopted it previous to the adoption of the National amendment.

Five Continents in Congenial Concourse at Philadelphia

(Continued from Page Seven)

the Japanese delegation, led by Mrs. O. N. Kubushiro, the substance of whose talk is given on another page. She came to the front of the platform holding in her arms a mammoth roll of paper which she explained was a petition of thousands of women of Japan for social purity.

The necessity for the women of every nation to secure suffrage rights in order that they might further great moral movements was emphasized in a brilliant address by Mrs. Deborah Knox Livingston, World's Superintendent. Mrs. Elizabeth O. Middleton, in a scholarly presentation, laid upon the hearts of all the necessity of digging deep the foundations for prohibition through scientific temperance teaching in the schools and colleges.

Mayor Addresses Convention

When it was noised around that Mayor Moore, the chief executive of Philadelphia, was about to give a greeting, the convention burst into applause so hearty that the mayor was quite overwhelmed. Frankly admitting that he had not favored national prohibition and as a member of Congress at the time the question was before that body had voted against it, the mayor nevertheless declared that now that prohibition is the law of the land he, as chief executive of a big city, was endeavoring to enforce it to the best of his ability. He told of the conditions in Philadelphia which made enforcement difficult and spoke of the inadequacy of the force provided by the Federal Department. This prompted a query from the balcony, "Can't your police help them?" which led the mayor to inquire whether the good citizens who criticize will go out and get the evidence on which the law violators can be convicted, rather than send in unsigned complaints. Prompted by a desire for information, Miss Agnes E. Slack of England, one of the honorary secretaries of the World's W. C. T. U., asked the mayor a few questions, and the dialogue that ensued was most entertaining and stimulating. The mayor took this questioning good-naturedly, and, as Miss Gordon remarked in thanking him as he retired from the platform, "You have after all in your statements in regard to law violation, Mr. Mayor, furnished the best possible argument for the big program for world prohibition we are instituting."

Is there any truth in the rumor that even Germany is thinking of restricting if not prohibiting the drink trade? The question was satisfactorily answered in the closing address by Fraulein von Blucher, president of the Bund Abstinenter Frauen, given on another page.

"WHY A MILLION MEMBERS FOR THE W. C. T. U.?"

Read the above leaflet and find out WHY! If the beer and wine forces win in the present campaign prohibition will be set back fifty years.

Order the above named leaflet and see for yourself what is the purpose of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. Buy a quantity and circulate them among your neighbors and church people. Price, per 100, 45 cents.

(Please send remittance with order.)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

Invasion by "Coming Citizens"

Then came the peaceful invasion of the convention by one hundred and fifty little people,—"coming citizens" of the republic, led by Miss Mary B. Ervin, national general L. T. L. secretary. The children marched down the aisles, following the American flag, and arranged themselves across the platform, where they gave, in unison, America's creed, sang, "On then, Loyal Workers," and recited the pledge of allegiance to the flag. Miss Ervin spoke briefly on the value and importance of work with and by the children. The little folks were from three of Philadelphia's public schools, and had been drilled by Mrs. C. C. Parlin. The smaller ones in the front row wore the native costumes of the countries from which their parents had come, and of them all, perhaps none was quainter than the wee maid who stood by the speakers' desk, whence she calmly surveyed the admiring audience. With her straight bobbed hair, her sloe-black eyes and her dainty Japanese costume, she might have stepped out of an oriental picture-book. Another subject of comment was the manly boy who, though his arms must have ached before he was relieved of his burden, carefully held up the large flag, through song and address and salute.

Young People's Program

The program for Monday evening was in the hands of the young people, and Mrs. Mary Anderson Crawford, World's Y. P. B. secretary, presided, and introduced the representatives from various countries. No more encouraging indication of the development of our work is to be noted than the large number of young women delegates present from overseas countries. Among those who spoke were Consuelo Valdez from the Philippine Islands, Miss Wilson from Scotland; Mrs. Oliver from Canada; Mrs. Carvosso from Australia.

Under the direction of the state Y. P. B. Secretary, Miss La Rue Chorpenning, a most effective demonstration of the progress of prohibition was given. There filed in across the stage forty-six young girls, clad in white, representing the forty-six states which have ratified the Eighteenth Amendment. At the end of the procession walked slowly and mournfully two figures in black, representing Rhode Island and Connecticut. As they turned and faced the audience, the two sounded a note of optimism, as clearly and decidedly they announced in unison, "WE TOO SHALL WIN!" and all joined in singing, "Work for enforcement where you are." All lights except the footlights and spotlight were turned off, and there appeared a slight figure in filmy white which stepped to the front and held high a globe encircled by a band of white, as the company sang, "Wind the ribbon round the nations." The hushed attention and burst of applause showed the appreciation of the delegates and visitors for the teaching thus presented.

A little later Mrs. Maude Perkins, National general secretary of the Y. P. B., told of the particular work which had been undertaken by the Young People's Branch during the past year—the securing of new signers to the Polyglot Petition. In response to her call the young people from the different states filed across the stage, bearing rolls of names and stating their numbers, which varied from a few hundred to 11,104 names secured by the Iowa Y. P. B. The whole number, with 1500 added by Canada "to help keep the boundaries dry," was about fifty thousand.

Hardynia K. Norville, World's W. C. T. U. representative in South America, transported her hearers to that "neglected continent" as she portrayed with great vividness and power the conditions that make imperative at this particular time help from North America.

In an address that gripped the hearts and consciences of young and old, Dr. Valeria Parker told of the social evils that menace the home life and the youth.

Election Day

Reporters of the city papers were out in full force Tuesday anticipating copy for sensational stories in the election of the general officers of the World's W. C. T. U. Disappointed they may have been, but impressed they could not fail to be at the absence of self-seeking in the candidates for office, and at the "in honor preferring one another" spirit that prevailed. The American method of casting a nominating ballot, and making it the elective ballot when one candidate received a sufficient majority, was adopted. The vote resulted in the election of the following officers for the next three years: President, Miss Anna Adams Gordon, Evanston, Illinois; U. S. A.; vice-president, Miss Dagmar Prior, Copenhagen, Denmark; honorary secretaries, Miss Agnes E. Slack, Ripley, Derbyshire, England, and Mrs. Blanche Read Johnston, Toronto, Canada; honorary treasurer, Mrs. Ella A. Boole, Brooklyn, New York, U. S. A. In the course of the morning while the tellers were counting the ballots, reports of World's superintendents of departments were heard, and short addresses were delivered by Miss Maria Stenroth of Finland and Mrs. S. M. Zwemer of Egypt.

Tuesday afternoon was largely devoted to the discussion of the opium and narcotic drug menace, and a short address by Mrs. Martha Allen, World's superintendent, on Medical Temperance. In the absence of Rev. Henry VanDyke, chairman of the International Committee of the Narcotic Drug Control League, Professor Chambers of Columbia University gave a clarifying talk on the opium menace and the remedies that should be adopted to check it. The Honorable Sara Graham-Mulhall, formerly first deputy commissioner of New York state's department of Narcotic Drug Control, spoke on "Facts Concerning the Danger to America of Trafficking in Narcotic Drugs."

Delegates especially interested in our labor problem—and what white ribboner is not—listened with great interest to the address of Mary Anderson, director of the Women's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor, and were especially pleased by her forceful statement of the definite benefits to the working woman of the prohibition law.

The graphic and tragic picture drawn by Mrs. Florence Spencer Duryea, national director of the Woman's Organization Division of Near East Relief, touched the heart of every one of the mother-hearted women assembled in the convention, and, as in all former emergencies, they will be prompt and generous in their assistance for the orphaned and destitute children of the Near East.

During the afternoon another unexpected invasion of the platform occurred —this time by the brothers of the W. C. T. U., a delegation of the state and na-

(Continued on Page Sixteen)

How to Insure Permanency of Prohibition

(Continued from Page Five)

This charge is without foundation. It expresses the hope of those who worked for it rather than the fact of their accomplishment.

It is true that in New Jersey a Senator whose sympathy was always with strict enforcement of prohibition laws has been supplanted by one whose avowed policy is to repeal the National Prohibition Act. That does not mean any loss however in the aggregate, because a Senator from Ohio who was wet in sentiment has been supplanted by one who at all times is a militant worker for prohibition and moral issues.

The better interpretation of changes made by the last election is, I believe, that it has shifted representatives to accord with the public sentiment of the constituents. We cannot forget that we still have areas, if reckoned in terms of influences and population, where the balance of power is held by anti-prohibition forces. In those spots, prohibition enforcement falls far short of desired results. It is natural that it should be so.

With public sentiment sympathetic rather than condemnatory to violations, the bootleggers' trade flourishes. Until such organizations as yours, by the same methods of campaign that you used in getting cities and counties for local option, change the public sentiment, enforcement will continue to be inadequate. Until that time comes, it is not illogical that such localities should be represented by a man who shares the anti-prohibition view of the majority of his constituents.

The truest test to which prohibition was put came in Ohio and California. In Ohio, an amendment to the constitution was proposed by which light wines and beer could be legally dispensed. It was overwhelmingly defeated. In California, the great wine-growing section, a state that repeatedly has defeated prohibition laws of every kind and character, the Wright Enforcement Act, by which state enforcement officers should be charged with the duty of assisting prohibition enforcement, passed by a 30,000 majority.

The defeat of Representative Volstead is not a defeat of the prohibition principles for which he stood, since his successor is also dry.

In Massachusetts the prohibition law was defeated but that does not indicate a loss, as Massachusetts has never had a prohibition code.

Work of the Department of Justice

The Department of Justice is the legal branch of the Federal Government. It does not have charge of the collection of evidence of violation of prohibition laws. That is under the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in the Treasury Department. At the time of the National Prohibition Act it was logically placed under the Commissioner of Internal Revenue because the numerous Internal Revenue Statutes, controlling the traffic in intoxicating liquor, had been enforced by Internal Revenue Agents. They were experienced in dealing with illicit liquor law violators and therefore formed the best nucleus for putting the new policy of prohibition into operation.

The Prohibition Division under the Bureau of Internal Revenue manifestly cannot turn policemen for every community, but if the local prosecuting officers, policemen and courts do their full duty under state enforcement laws, the Federal Bureau can attack the prohibition problems more national in scope, such as smuggling, interstate conspiracies, illicit manufacture.

The Department of Justice prosecutes the case after the Bureau of Internal Revenue arrests the violator. The Department of Justice has central directing offices in Washington and branch offices in charge of the United States Attorneys in each of the eighty-eight Federal districts of the country. That makes a force of 6000 attorneys and clerks trying cases in the Federal courts for the American people. For you, the citizenry of this country, are the clients of the Department of Justice.

Motto of Administration

And your law office is headed by a man who has stood at all times firmly for the fearless and uniform enforcement of law. Shortly after Attorney General Daugherty took charge of the law enforcement branch of the Government, he sounded the motto of his administration in the words, "The Government will endure on the rock of law enforcement or it will perish in the quicksands of lawlessness. My duty is clear. As long as I am the responsible head of the Department of Justice, the law will be enforced with all the power possessed by the Government which I am at liberty to call to my command."

The Attorney General directs prosecutions handled by the United States attorneys all over this country. There are eighty-eight of them in number. Each has from one to four Federal Judges. They have, however, hundreds of other laws besides prohibition to which they must give time. On the orderly and fearless enforcement of such laws as the Sherman Anti-Trust Law, the Admiralty and Maritime Laws, the Anti-Smuggling Laws, laws protecting the Post Office and National Banks, Interstate Commerce Protection, Pure Food regulations, and other criminal laws of the Federal Government, your very safety depends. They cannot be neglected. Only can Federal judges and offices give to enforcement of prohibition its proper time in proportion to the other laws. That leaves many cases not promptly disposed of, unless police, county and state officers and courts carry their share. Therefore, it is of the utmost importance that such organizations as this realize that the safety of prohibition gains thus far made depends upon the stimulation of local responsibility to punish violations of prohibition laws.

Some states are already carrying this responsibility. Practically all violators of prohibition law are punished in the state courts of Kansas. Thirty-three other states handle some of their own violations. When every city and state carries its share of responsibility, it will leave the Federal Government with dockets sufficiently relieved of congestion to bring cases involving big interstate conspiracies quickly to trial.

The Department of Justice has believed that one of its great services to the American people, its client, is to bring cases involving perplexing legal questions quickly to the highest legal tribunal for decision. We instruct United States Attorneys to facilitate the appeal of such matters, believing that it is the quickest method to secure uniform enforcement.

The Walker and Anchor Line cases settled a much mooted point. We had a treaty with Great Britain and Canada permitting shipment of liquors across our country provided bond were given by the shipper. That treaty was made before prohibition, but the prohibition law was silent as to it. The Attorney General interpreted the law by deciding that such shipments could no longer be made across our country. The Federal judge in Michigan ruled otherwise but the Federal judge in New York upheld our view. We carried these appeals to the Supreme Court of the United States. That court, in one of the finest interpretations of the intent and purpose of the American people in adopting prohibition as a national policy, decided not only that transhipments by a long railroad haul from Canada to Mexico could not be made but that the treaty with Great Britain was impliedly repealed and that one foreign ship could not shift her liquor cargo to another foreign ship within the harbor of New York, even though the liquors were not to be used here.

Our department was again faced with a most difficult question in the recent Shipping Board opinion, whereby the Attorney General held that the National Prohibition Act extends its prohibitions to American ships on the high seas even though it makes no specific reference thereto. Imagine my pleasure when the Supreme Court, the first of this week, in the so-called Dio case, held that the conspiracy statute, one of general jurisdiction like the National Prohibition Act, applies to the high seas even though it makes no specific reference thereto.

You who worked for the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment should feel, as do we who are connected with the law enforcement department of the Federal Government, the highest sense of pride in the unflinching way in which our United States Supreme Court has hewn to the straight line of prohibition intent in every decision touching on the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment. There has never been a quibble. They have clearly held that the intent of those whose wishes were incorporated in the Eighteenth Amendment was to "stop the whole business."

The Government of the United States is engaging in a great enterprise. We have adopted as our public policy national prohibition. We have a lawless element reaping rich returns from defiance to it, and aid and comfort and patronage is extended to the lawless element by a very sizeable minority who are opposed to that policy. The minority opposed would have the unquestioned right under our form of Government to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment by orderly means. But too great a number of the states believe in prohibition to make repeal within the realm of even possibility. As long, therefore, as the Eighteenth Amendment is in our Constitution, it is illegitimate and unlawful indirectly to nullify it by breaking down the legal means for its enforcement.

No middle ground, therefore, can be taken. My duty and the duty of all those charged with the enforcement of our Constitution is clear. By every means within our command we must work for uniform orderly enforcement of this as well as other laws. This is not the only one that presents great difficulty of enforcement. The violator of it simply receives greater publicity and in some spots a little more deplorable covert applause.

Let us resolve anew to uphold the Constitution and all for which it stands. I, through every agency of law enforcement within my command, and you, through the stimulation of local enforcement on the part of police, and county and state officers and courts.

Notes From Our Publishing House

It is not too early to select Christmas gifts for your friends. Let us help you. Consult our advertising pages for suggestions. White ribbon pins in a variety of styles and prices; books in large variety: "The Life of Frances E. Willard." by Anna A. Gordon; "A Great Mother," Frances Willard's charming story of the life of her own mother; "Glimpses of Fifty Years," Miss Willard's delightful history of her own half-century

The new Y. P. B. Study Book, entitled, "Alcohol in Experience and Experiment," is just from the press and is valuable as a study book not only for the Y. P. B.'s but for young people's societies of whatever class. It need not be confined to the young either. The public speaker, the student and the members of local unions will find that this pamphlet of 52 pages will well repay their thoughtful consideration. Single copies, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.50.

We have now ready for our friends and patrons a fine photograph of the new Administration Building of the National W. C. T. U. The view presents the eastern front and includes the famous chestnut tree planted by Frances E. Willard many years ago. Size of photo, 11x14 inches. Price, $1.50.

If you are planning for an Institute, either local, county or state, or for a medal contest or public meeting, or reception or occasion of any kind where music is desired, why not use some W. C. T. U. music? Whether solo, quartette, or congregational music is desired we can furnish you something with the distinctive W. C. T. U. flavor. Among other songs are "Victory" (soprano solo), per copy, 15 cents; "Love Light" (solo), price 30 cents; also the popular song "John Barleycorn, Goodbye," 15 cents. "Jubilee Songs" are always useful and may be used anywhere. Per copy, 10 cents; per 100, $5.00.

Christmas Gifts

Why Not Gladden the Heart of a Friend or Loved One With a White Ribbon Badge?

What better than our beautiful gold pin set with seed pearls? It makes a charming gift. Price, $5.00.

Other Badges: Loop Bow Pin, white enamel on sterling silver, with letters W. C. T. U. Price, 90 cents.

Same pin, smaller size; price, 75 cents; per dozen, $8.00.

white enamel on silver, without letters. Price, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Same on gilt. 30 cents each; per dozen, $3.35.

Same (gilt) with safety clasp, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.75.

Scotch Clasp Pin, 20 cents; per dozen, $1.80.

Same, stick pin, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.25.

Blue Enamel Pin, worn by honorary or active members, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.75.

Y. P. B. Pin, blue enamel on gilt. Should be worn by all honoraries. 30 cents each; per dozen, $3.35.

L. T L. Pin, Coin silver, enameled; 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Order early. Allow ample time for delivery. Please send remittance with order.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

Convention Sermon Gives Tribute to W. C. T. U.

Before the hour for service began on Sunday morning, Philadelphia's beautiful church of the Holy Trinity was filled with members of the congregation, delegates to the great conventions of the World's and National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and visitors. As the chimes ceased, the notes of the great organ softly sounded, and the beautiful voices of unseen singers filled the air. God's presence was very manifest to the waiting multitude.

Dr. Floyd Tomkins, Holy Trinity's rector, who is known almost throughout the world, welcomed all to the church, telling his visitors that everyone should feel at home in the Father's house.

The sermon of the morning, based on the wonderful words of Paul cautioning the Romans, "that no man put a stumbling block or an occasion to fall in his brother's way," was couched in simple yet scholarly form, and while it gave full credit to the work accomplished by the W. C. T. U., it filled the members of that organization with a renewed sense of responsibility, and a sobering realization of what is yet needful.

"There are many reasons why we should work for the cause of temperance," Dr. Tomkins said, in part, "some of them very good, too, but that given here by Paul is the one against which no argument can prevail. We may say that liquor is harmful, that men must deny themselves the gratification of their personal appetites that prosperity may come to the country, that prohibition has a great economic value, and many other things, but here we have a deeper and a higher reason for our attitude, and this appeal more than any other has converted people to prohibition. One may close his eyes to all other values, but when you tell him that he has no right to be a stumbling block in his brother's way you have a different argument, one impossible to circumvent.

"This temperance work was originally the outgrowth of the effort of the strong to help the weak. Miss Frances E. Willard, with a rare insight and spirituality, and with her great 'do-everything policy'—that is, as I take it, everything which could possibly bear on the one great purpose—saw a glorious vision which spread to others. To the women, and the men joined with them in the work, more and more clearly came the vision of a nation refusing to do anything which would put a stumbling block in the way of anyone of its weakest citizens, until we finally secured the enactment of the Eighteenth Amendment.

"But some are so blind that they cannot see that any good can come to a nation that denies itself for the weak, and so they say that prohibition is a failure. You remember the story of the man who met a little girl carrying whisky. Upon his asking her what she was doing with it, she replied that it was for her father 'But,' said he, 'your father promised only last week that he would drink no more whisky.' 'But this isn't to drink,' said the child. 'He dips his bread in it.' And there are some who try in the same way to get around the testimony of the courts, jails, institutions, banks, commercial interests, that prohibition has resulted in so much good.

"My friends of the W. C. T. U., you have been very wise in the past in your training of the young people concerning the effects of alcohol on the human system; but you are still wise, in that you are continuing that instruction that the coming generations may be fortified against liquor.

"I am sure that there can never be a repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and I do not believe there will be any modification of the Volstead Act. There must not be.

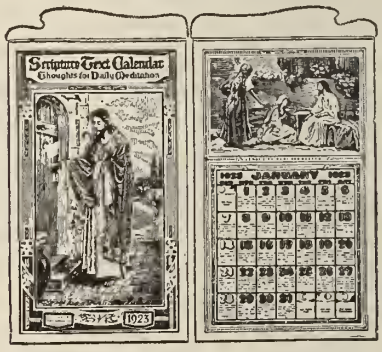
"To make the cause of prohibition triumphant ought we not to have tremendous courage and a great determination which will send us forth with renewed strength? There is much questioning about present conditions. We are apt to get a little gloomy at times, because of these conditions. We must have faith, faith to 'look forward, not back; out, not in; up, not down; and lend a hand.' When trouble causes us to sink down it is time to look up to God and to say, not 'I hope,' or even 'I trust,' but 'I know,' for in Him is all power, and we may safely leave it to Him to bring the best to pass. We are too easily led away by fear, but we must remember that we have nothing to do with the winning, only the doing.

"Friends of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, may God guide you in one of the greatest tasks He has for you to do. May He make your hands strong, even as your hearts are true in the work He has given you to do."

U. S. GOVERNMENT UNDERWEAR

2,500,000 pieces. New Government Wool Underwear purchased by us to sell to the public direct at 75c each. Actual retail value $2.50 each. All sizes, Shirts 34 to 46—Drawers 30 to 44. Send correct sizes. Pay Postman on delivery or send us money order. If underwear is not satisfactory, we will refund money promptly upon request. Dept. 24. The Pilgrim Woolen Co., 1476 Broadway, New York, N.Y.

Ready for 1923



Put the Word of God in Every Home

DO NOT FORGET THAT YOUR OWN PUBLISHING HOUSE WILL AGAIN FURNISH YOU THE BEAUTIFUL SCRIPTURE TEXT SACRED ART CALENDARS.

This Calendar will be more beautiful and attractive than ever. You can easily dispose of hundreds and thus place the daily Bible Text in multitudes of homes and at the same time earn Christmas money for yourself, your W. C. T. U., the L. T. L., the Woman's Club, or for your Literature Fund.

Send us your order early and so avoid delay or disappointment. Prices: Single copy, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.84; twenty-five, $7.50; fifty, $12.50; one hundred, $20.00; two hundred, $37.00; five hundred, $82.50.

Send us your order now and let's go to work. It is not too early to start.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE,
Evanston, Illinois.

CROUP OR WHOOPING COUGH
ROCHE'S HERBAL EMBROCATION
Relieves promptly and safely Effective in Bronchitis, Lumbago and Rheumatism.
W. EDWARDS & SON London, England
All druggists or E. FOUGERA & CO. 90-92 Beekman St. N.Y.

Musical Attractions of World's W. C. T. U. Convention

The particularly fine music, vocal and instrumental, which added so much to the attraction of the World's Convention, was made possible by the untiring efforts and care of the committee in charge of that feature of the convention program, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Vernon E. Hastings of Philadelphia. They were most fortunate in their selections. Every session was replete with good things, each rendition being of the highest order, and most heartily appreciated by the great audiences that filled the Academy of Music both afternoon and evening.

The program rendered on Sunday evening by the Gloria Trumpeters of New York City was a particularly pleasing and unique feature. The four talented artists in their beautiful Grecian costumes played selections of high character, with clear, sympathetic expression, and were recalled several times during the evening, responding to the applause which came from every corner of the great auditorium.

Tuesday night held a treat which will long be remembered by all music lovers who listened with hushed delight to the exquisite rendering of songs classic and simple, new and old, by the group of more than fifty men, members of the Philadelphia Fortnightly Club. They graciously responded to the spontaneous encores.

On Wednesday afternoon the special attraction was the inspiring music of the Philadelphia Navy Yard Orchestra, and the boys stayed throughout the afternoon, giving of their best, under the direction of their leader. One number of their program was a medley of national airs, which aroused much enthusiasm, groups of delegates rising one after another to pay honor to the music of their own country.

As always, a most popular feature and one of which her hearers never weary, was the singing of "Victory," by the National W. C. T. U. musical director, Mrs. Frances W. Graham, who rendered it with a new fire, after the receipt of the election returns. The assistant convention directors, Mrs. A. B. Cunyus, Mrs. Katherine Call Simonds, and Miss Grace Leigh Scott, also gave their best, and charmed with their solos, their delighted hearers. Mrs. Simonds' "New Song of Freedom," her own composition, was particularly appropriate. Miss Ethyl C. Lobban, another sweet singer, delighted the delegates with her fine rendering of "Hear Ye Israel" from Elijah. The addition to the program made by Professor J. H. Dalley should not be omitted. He gave "It's In the Constitution, and It's There to Stay," a song of his own composition, and was called several times during the convention to repeat his contribution to the enjoyment of the occasion.

W. C. T. U. Badges. Made of mother of pearl. Price 25 cents each. Address treasurer W. C. T. U., Jerusalem, Palestine. P. O. Box 443.

Help the Armenian Refugees

BUY HAND MADE LACE

Jerusalem Lace Work made by hand. Latest patterns of yokes from $1.40 to $3.75. Narrow lace, 15 to 35 cents a yard. Wide lace (⅝ in. width and over) to 75 cents a yard, edging or insertion. Medallions, round or square, 45 to 75 cents a dozen. Wide edging for underclothes $1.90 to $4.55, a set of 3 pieces. Lace will be sent in registered envelopes. Postage free. Apply to Misses Farah, Box 287, Jerusalem, Palestine.

What the W. C. T. U. Means in Japan

(Continued from Page Ten)

growing fast and strong. When our able worker, Azuma Moriya, planned a course of lectures for a whole week, the first attempt of the kind in our country, she could get as her lecturers first rate speakers on each subject to be discussed, and for the pupils she invited from all over the country public school teachers especially, and policemen to attend the lectures, and how many do you think she could secure? She limited the number to 200 and she had 189 promised before the lecture was opened. Our home department and educational department are willing to help these attempts.

All our people are watching the progress of prohibition in America. They say America is the country of freedom and liberty. America is the country of people's rule, how can they accomplish such a wonderful miracle as national prohibition? And they are awe-struck. Many would give a great sigh of relief if it were to fail.

You see the American prohibition is not only American prohibition, but it means world prohibition. Now is the time in our country when the iron of public sentiment is red hot. We want some one to come and help us work. And for this great thunderbolt act against the bulwark of alcoholism whose work would be most effective, we can think of no more gifted person than our honored president, Miss Anna Gordon. If she can spare one month, that will be splendid; for even two weeks, we will sing hallelujahs.

For world peace we know our hearts are beating in the same rhythm with the sisters of the world. A few days ago our national temperance magazine came and it brought me the latest news about peace. It says eight national organizations, including the W. C. T. U., have united to work in the interests of peace.

Thirdly, we are working for world purity. Much has been said about the immorality of the Japanese race, and the accursed words "Geisha" and "Yoshiman" have become a nickname for our people, but don't you know there are millions of good strong homes in our country which are the backbone of our nation.

Although the Japanese women have kept themselves pure they have failed to demand the same moral standards of man in his private life. Then the good women could not see the responsibility they owed to their poor sisters who are only the victims of the nationally recognized vice. But, thank God, public conscience is gradually awakening from its long sleep. The W. C. T. U. in our country raised its voice and demanded an equal standard of morality for men and women.

We have made little purity bags we call "Five Sen Bags" and asked everybody to sign his name and address and put into the bag five sen a year. We have worked for five years and have secured 9,000 yen.

MAJOR'S CEMENT
Unexcelled for repairing china, glassware, earthenware, furniture, vases, books, etc. Famous since 1876. Major's rubber and Leather Cements are good.
Three kinds, 20c per bottle at dealers, or write us.
MAJOR MFG. CO., NEW YORK

FREE All Charges Prepaid Subject to Examination
The BEST of ALL GIFTS
Easiest Reading Bible
The Bible has never been published in any form in which the reading of it has been made so attractive to both old and young as in the "International"
CHRISTIAN WORKERS' BIBLE
By an entirely new plan, a thread of red ink, running from Genesis to Revelation, binds in one harmonious whole each leading topic. All the precious truths which lie hidden under the mass of unconnected matter and escape the mere reader are brought to light and tied together.
The Rev. Jesse Lyman Hurlbut, D.D., the popular authority in Bible themes, has arranged on this plan Three Thousand Selected Texts.
PROMINENT PEOPLE'S OPINIONS
John Wanamaker: International Christian Workers' Bible is an advance on anything hitherto attempted in making the Bible usable.
Lyman Abbott: Valuable to Christian Workers in their endeavor to get at the teaching of the Bible directly and immediately, and not through the medium of commentaries.
BOUND IN GENUINE LEATHER, divinity circuit, with overlapping covers (like illustration), round corners, gold edges, red underneath. Size of page 5½ x 8¼ inches, beautifully printed in extra large clear type on extra fine paper; also contains Latest Teachers' Helps to Bible Study.
SPECIAL OFFER The Christian Workers' Bible will be SENT FREE for examination, ALL CHARGES PREPAID. If it does not please you, return it at our expense. If it does please you, remit special price. Published at $7.50, but for a limited time we offer this handsomest, most usable Bible at the Special Price of only $4.90. Send no money but fill in and mail coupon.
THE JOHN C. WINSTON CO. PHILADELPHIA, PA.
Largest American Bible Publishers
SEND NO MONEY—Cut out Coupon and mail today
THE JOHN C. WINSTON CO., 1855 Winston Bldg., Philadelphia
Please send without charge, The Christian Workers' Bible. I will remit $4.90 or return same in 5 days at your expense.
Name .....
Address .....
This Bible with Patent Thumb Index 45c extra. Name in gold on Bibles with 45c extra. Name in gold on Bibles with names on not returnable.

CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT

THE UNION SIGNAL ..... $1.50 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance (monthly).....50c a year
Single Copies, 5c each; per 100 .....$2.75
Club rate for ten or more Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition subscriptions, 40c a year. No other premium allowed.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER ..... 35c a year
Single Copies, 3c each; per 100 .....$2.00

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES

THE UNION SIGNAL .....$2.00 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (monthly) .....62c a year
THE YOUNG CRUSADER .....47c a year

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL Evanston, Illinois

Scotland Out For Victory

(Continued from Page Nine)

voters on the election roll. By the vote in 1920, over thirty townships went dry and thirty-five places had licenses reduced by twenty-five per cent. In thirty-nine per cent of all election areas, the people voted for no-license. Scotland was not defeated and is preparing for another vote in 1923. "We are proud to state that this election resulted in the largest proportion voting for prohibition, that ever voted when prohibition was an issue for the first time. In the parts where prohibition is in effect the business men are prospering. I think that the vote is a gift from Almighty God, and is given to those nations who know God. When we vote next year, I trust that you will carry Scotland on your hearts."

Ulster W. C. T. U. Gain 5000 Members

Says Mrs. Moffatt Clow of Ireland

"North and South Ireland are separate and distinct. The two will get their local option laws separately. During the last few years there has been a great wave of total abstinence propaganda throughout South Ireland, and the Roman Catholic Church has enrolled thousands of young men and women for total abstinence. As to North Ireland, the white ribbon ranks are strong and virile. I was a Scotch white ribboner and married and went to Ireland, but I was not happy without W. C. T. U. companionship. God guided and led us and we organized. In January, 1921, when we had our own home rule act and knew that our own Parliament was to be elected and there would be an opportunity of getting laws enacted for ourselves, we started on a tour through six counties, which resulted in enrolling many new members. In nine months we have gained 5,000 members. We are going to work for local option with all our energy.

ASTHMA

The attack is relieved at once and comfortable rest assured simply by vaporizing Cresolene near the bed at night.

Introduced in 1879 Vapo-Cresolene "Used while you sleep"

It is the drugless treatment for bronchial ailments—coughs, Colds, spasmodic croup, whooping cough and bronchitis.

Send for Descriptive Booklet 44B Sold by Druggists

VAPO-CRESOLENE CO., 62 Cortlandt St., New York

President Harding Has Not Changed His Views in Regard to Prohibition

In spite of the assertion of the anti-prohibition forces that President Harding had written letters the "general trend" of which "was a prophecy of liberalizing the prohibition enforcement act," it has been officially stated at the White House, according to press dispatches, that he has not changed his views on prohibition as the result of the elections. The President's experience in public life, it is said, has led him to believe that prohibition is in American politics for some time to come, and must be dealt with as a public question by those in office.

Five Continents in Congenial Concourse at Philadelphia

(Continued from Page Twelve)

tional leaders of the Anti-Saloon League, in executive session in Philadelphia, who came over to extend greetings and felicitations, and to congratulate Miss Gordon upon her election as World's president, and the organization upon their wise choice of a leader. They presented her not only with numerous verbal bouquets but with an exquisite bunch of chrysanthemums, in what she described in accepting it as "a converted demijohn."

International Peace the Theme Tuesday Evening

The forward program of two big divisions of the British Empire was ably presented Tuesday evening. "Canada's Part and Plan in World Prohibition" was the topic selected by Mrs. Gordon Wright, president of the Canadian W. C. T. U., and was handled in a most delightful fashion. Miss Mary J. Campbell, World's W. C. T. U. organizer, made the far-off world of teeming millions in India very real, as she told tale after tale of the awakening in that land to the menace of strong drink.

In the absence of Jane Addams, Mrs. Anna Garland Spencer, pioneer advocate of universal peace, related the history of the movement, and outlined what she considered the course to be pursued to attain the objective to which we are all working—peace and good will among the nations.

The last day of the convention was packed so full of worth-while talks, reports, and business of importance, that it leaves one breathless even to enumerate them. There were addresses by Dagmar Prior on Denmark, by Mrs. Moffatt Clow on Ireland, by Miss Wilhelmina Lohmann on Germany, by Mrs. Lydia Johnson on Sweden's recent referendum campaign, by Mrs. George Milne, vice-president of the Scottish W. C. T. U., on "Scotland Will Win," greetings from Cuba by Mrs. Florence Atkins and Mrs. E. J. Simonds, president of the Cuba W. C. T. U., and greetings from South Africa by Mrs. Deborah Knox Livingston. Nor was that all. Reports were given by World's superintendents of vital importance and deserving of far more time than was given to them. In the afternoon there was entrancing music by the Philadelphia Navy Yard Orchestra and a talk by Chaplain James D. MacNair. Resolutions and a wonderful program of activities for the next three years were adopted, and sandwiched in between these fascinating numbers were introductions of our hospitable and tireless hostesses, and of many noted people of the entertaining city, until one's brain whirled in an effort to carry away one-millionth part of the impressions so very much worth retaining for all time.

JERSEY CROWN FLAVORING POWDER

UNION AND MEMBERS MAKE GOOD MONEY

Selling JERSEY CROWN FLAVORING POWDER (Non-Alcoholic) to their neighbors and friends on our liberal consignment plan. No money down. We furnish the powder and guarantee sales. You pay us when you sell it, or return at our expense. Write at once for our "Special Business Proposition."

JERSEY CROWN VANILLA CO.,
Dept. S. Valparaiso, Indiana

Worthy of special mention was the address by Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Assistant United States Attorney General, on Wednesday evening. Rarely does one listen to a more illuminating and fascinating discourse on legal questions. We take pleasure in giving this address in THE UNION SIGNAL. It is well worth keeping for reference.

If anyone doubted that the Eleventh World's Convention was an unqualified success, such doubts must have been dissipated when it came time for the receiving of invitations for the next World's Convention, which, by the way is to be held in 1925. All the countries from the little island of Cuba to the big continent of South America wanted to entertain it, and at last the president of the state of Pennsylvania, invited the delegates to come right back to Philadelphia and hold their next meeting in the Academy of Music.

The last number on the program of the great convention was one that will long linger in the memories of those who participated. A platform thronged with representatives of over a score of nations most of them dressed in the garb of their homelands, a picturesque company, and each with an earnest message of the great need in her own country and the determination to return to labor with renewed vigor and energy for the annihilation of the drink traffic. Then hand clasped hand, in a mighty circle, extending from platform to floor and from floor to platform, [illegible]son we sang that hymn that is a benediction, "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

Note

The next Convention Number of THE UNION SIGNAL will give the story of the National W. C. T. U. Convention which immediately followed the World's, and will contain as well many of the things necessarily omitted from this number because of lack of room.

Tenacious Coughs

Most everybody knows how troublesome some coughs are, and thousands have realized the power of rich, nourishing

Scott's Emulsion

to improve the body tone and increase the powers of resistance. If you are troubled with a cough, build up strength — take Scott's Emulsion regularly!

Scott & Bowne Bloomfield, N.J. 22-40

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN

NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly — Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year in Advance

Entered as second class matter at the Postoffice at Evanston, Illinois

Vol. XLVIII — EVANSTON, ILLINOIS, DECEMBER 7, 1922 — No. 49

Program of Activities of National W. C. T. U.

1922-1923

We present the following program of activities for the Woman's Christian Temperance Union as essential to maintain the Eighteenth Amendment, to secure its enforcement, and to promote the great principles for which we stand:

I. To secure intelligent support and observance of the Eighteenth Amendment and laws for its enforcement by well-informed public opinion based upon:
   1. Systematic instruction in the scientific facts concerning alcoholic drinks in all schools;
   2. The reaching of all citizens with these facts especially the facts concerning beer and wine;
   3. Popular education as to the dangers in patent medicines containing alcohol or habit-forming drugs and the reasons for the decreasing use of alcohol as medicine;
   4. A new campaign for pledged total abstinence on the part of youth in Sunday Schools, young people's and educational institutions, and of leaders in all lines of public influence and activity.

II. To promote intelligence in the privileges and duties of citizenship with particular reference to the observance and enforcement of prohibition laws, through courses of study adapted to both native and foreign-born women.

III. To stimulate the spiritual life of the nation by:
   1. Personal Bible study, prayer, and consecration;
   2. Better observance of the Sabbath;
   3. [illegible]ing the reading of the Bible in the public schools;
   4. Carrying the Gospel message in friendly helpfulness to all who need our sympathy or assistance.

IV. To help raise high national standards of physical and moral fitness by:
   1. The safeguarding of child life physically, morally and spiritually;
   2. Continued educational work among youth as to the dangers in tobacco and other habit forming drugs;
   3. Education to personal purity on the basis of the single standard of morals.

V. To help create a sound public sentiment so [illegible]anized and so dominant that it shall be the potent force in driving the way to world peace.

VI. To invite the co-operation of organizations promoting international understanding in studying and making known the international aspects of the liquor problem, the handicap it imposes in mission fields; to co-operate in promoting temperance education in all lands; to assist national societies federated in the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union in their work of organization to the end that women throughout the world may work effectively toward the goal of prohibition of the liquor traffic in their respective nations.

VII. To focus the Jubilee Campaign for 1,000,000 members in 1924 through:
   1. Trio teams in our 15,000 local unions;
   2. National, state and departmental organizers;
   3. Co-operative bodies;
   4. The effort of every member.

To emphasize the appeal of our law enforcement program to our young people through the Young People's Branch; to bring into membership a great body of employed women as standard-bearers among the 40,000,000 workers of the country.

We invite all who believe with us that this program meets the needs of the times to unite with the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and help in its labors in hastening the coming of the Kingdom of God.

THIRD CONVENTION NUMBER

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

MERCHANT MARINE AID BILL BY VOTE OF PROHIBITIONISTS CARRIES NO ANTI-LIQUOR AMENDMENTS—NEW SENATOR FROM MICHIGAN TAKES HIS SEAT—NEW ASSOCIATE JUSTICE IS FROM MINNESOTA—ANTI-LYNCHING BILL BLOCKED BY FILIBUSTER—SCIENTIFIC COMMISSION TO PASS ON WHAT IS INTOXICATING NOT FAVORED BY ORGANIZED "DRYS"

LENNA LOWE YOST, National W. C. T. U. Legislative Representative, Washington, D. C.

Merchant Marine Aid Bill by Vote of Prohibitionists Carries No Anti-Liquor Amendments

The fight to pass the Merchant Marine Aid Bill is transferred to the Senate, the House having passed the measure last Wednesday by a vote of 280 to 184. The Senate Committee on Commerce, to which the bill was referred, has been called by its chairman, Senator Jones of Washington, to meet early in the week with the hope that the bill may come to the Senate floor by the middle of the week. The advocates of the measure declare a majority in the Senate are favorable to it, but that its passage hinges upon whether it can be brought to a vote. If the opponents of the measure filibuster against it, as has been threatened, a vote in the Senate prior to March 4, when this Congress ends, is exceedingly doubtful. No amendments relating to the subject of liquor selling on American ships were in the bill as passed by the House. This was in accordance with the judgment of the prohibitionists in and out of Congress. When the question was reached Tuesday in committee of the whole, the Bankhead prohibition amendment was put aside and a substitute offered by Mr. Edmonds accepted. It stipulated that, if a ship on any particular voyage permitted the transportation of liquor, it could not share in a subsidy for that voyage.

The Edmonds amendment went out on a demand for a separate vote by Representative Cramton of Michigan, an advocate of prohibition enforcement, who contended that it was not as strong as existing law, and might be construed by some as wiping out the present statute. Mr. Edmonds himself voted for the Cramton proposal, against which there were only a handful of scattering votes.

New Senator From Michigan Takes His Seat

The new Senator from Michigan, James Couzens, Mayor of Detroit, appointed to succeed Truman H. Newberry, who resigned recently, started his career as a "newsy" on a passenger train. In 1903 he became associated with Henry Ford in the manufacture of automobiles in Detroit, taking a position as bookkeeper. When he severed his connection with the company in 1915, he was vice president and treasurer.

Mr Couzens' first public office was that of police commissioner, to which he was appointed in 1916. He was first elected Mayor of Detroit in 1918 and his re-election last year was by 30,000 votes, the largest majority ever given a mayoralty candidate there. Mr. Couzens has won the reputation of a free giver through numerous gifts to the city's institutions. The community fund receives from him annually $100,000. He has established numerous homes and settlement houses. His largest gift was early this year when he pledged $5,000,000 to a children's hospital which is to treat crippled children from all parts of the state without cost.

New Associate Justice Is From Minnesota

Though it has been a member of the Union since 1858, this is the first time Minnesota has had representation on the Supreme Court bench. In the same period Ohio has had six men appointed to this Court, including two Chief Justices.

The action of the President in appointing a member of the opposite party is unusual, though not without precedent. William Howard Taft made Edward D. White Chief Justice. It would seem well to have the Court more evenly divided between the parties, but when it comes to making a choice a President usually appoints a member of his own party.

The new Justice, Pierce Butler, is from St. Paul, is a railroad lawyer and was at one time a representative of the Federal Department of Justice in the prosecution of the meat packers. He is a Regent of the University of Minnesota.

Anti-Lynching Bill Blocked by Filibuster

There is a Democratic filibuster against the Anti-Lynching Bill and its passage is doubtful. The President Pro Tempore of the Senate, Albert J. Cummins of Iowa, entered into the debate to say that the Democratic filibuster was a proper rebuke to the Republicans who had failed to amend the Senate's "inadequate and unjust rules. Democrats," he said, "were not guilty of any moral crime in using the rules as they stood, because they belonged to another civilization."

Scientific Commission to Pass on What Is Intoxicating Not Favored by Organized "Drys"

It is rumored that there will be introduced into the Congress a bill to provide for the appointment of a scientific commission for the purpose of making "investigation and to engage in such experiments with all classes of individuals as to them may seem necessary in order to report back to Congress in answer to the question: 'What per cent of alcohol in a beverage can fairly and reasonably be said to make that beverage intoxicating?'"

We cannot believe that a so-called scientific commission will serve a helpful purpose in determining what legislation is necessary to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment.

Can a scientific commission determine accurately what is intoxicating liquor for a group of 100 000,000 people? Alcoholic liquors affect people differently, according to age, temperament, tolerance to use. and many other conditions. How could an accurate conclusion be reached with reference to this question that would help in determining laws necessary?

All effective law enforcement codes are based upon experience as to what is necessary in order to enforce the law. Forty-four states have in their own codes adopted the standard of one-half of one per cent, alcoholic content, or a lower alcoholic content. Two only have a one per cent standard. Congress cannot legalize what the states by their own laws have prohibited. Therefore, any change in the present standard based upon the conclusions of a scientific commission could only result in chaos and in the encouragement of lawlessness.

The one-half per cent adopted in state and federal enforcement codes was first enacted into the liquor tax laws at the suggestion of the liquor dealers themselves as the best standard to prevent illegal competition by bootleggers who sold liquor without paying the liquor tax. If it was necessary for the enforcement of a liquor tax law to prevent evasions, it is equally appropriate for the enforcement of a prohibitory law. "The existing standard in state and federal laws was not adopted because liquor containing that alcoholic content will intoxicate any person, but because it will not intoxicate. The difficulty in law enforcement at this time is caused by the alcoholic appetite created under the license system. If the amount of alcohol in permitted beverages is sufficient to perpetuate that appetite, the difficulties of law enforcement are interminably prolonged, and the result would be to encourage lawlessness."

No state or federal enforcement code was ever adopted upon the conclusions of any commission as to what is actually intoxicating. The United States Supreme Court has held that neither Congress nor the states can by legislation license or permit what the Eighteenth Amendment prohibits. This Court has further held that Congress may adopt such legislation as it deems necessary and appropriate to enforce this Amendment; and that in defining beverages containing one-half of one per cent of alcohol by volume as intoxicating, Congress was acting within the authority conferred upon it by the Eighteenth Amendment, and had adopted the standard which experience in the states had proved to be necessary to secure effective enforcement.

Is not the test, therefore, in determining what is appropriate and effective legislation, not what liquor will actually intoxicate, but what standard in the definition of intoxicating liquor is best to enforce the law effectively?

Legislative Headquarters, Bliss Building, Washington, D. C., Dec. 2, 1922.

WHO WAS WHO AT THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL CONVENTIONS

Our Convention Hostesses

From the first moment of arrival in Philadelphia till the receding train bore away the last group, nothing was left undone by the state, county and city white ribboners to make the stay of the delegates to the World's and National W. C. T. U. Convention a pleasant one. Every detail was taken care of with a hospitality and a thoroughness which "warmed the cockles of the heart." The W. C. T. U. booth in the station and the Boy Scouts hovering near to act as guides to the delegates upon their arrival, gave a "homey" feeling which was heightened with each passing hour. Receptions, social teas, luncheons and dinners filled every available moment and made the visitors wish for more time to enjoy courtesies extended.

Mrs. Ella M. George, Pennsylvania's indefatigable president, was the general chairman of hostesses for the World's Convention, and Mrs. H. E. Fahnestock, president of Philadelphia County W. C. T. U., for the National convention. The vice-chairmen were: Mrs. J. T. Wallace, Mrs. Leah Cobb Marrion, Miss Amanda Landes, Mrs. Mary V. Stringer, Mrs. Ella Hoover Thacher, Mrs. Sara Louise Oberholtzer, Mrs. Mary Lovell, Mrs. Elizabeth Heebner, Mrs. Sarah P. Cornogg, Mrs. Gertrude C. Baldwin, Mrs. Clara Shrigley, Mrs. Myrtle M. Kester and Dr. Hannah McK. Lyons. The chairmen of committees were: Hospitality, Mrs. H. E. Fahnestock; Reception, Mrs. Caroline Moore; Entertainment, Mrs. E. R. Ferguson; Publicity, Mrs. C. C. Parlin; Seating, Miss Ella Broomell; Decoration and Courtesies, Mrs. Winfield S. MacHenry; Social Teas, Miss Josephine Jones; Pulpits, Miss H. Frances Jones; Music, Mrs. Vernon E. Hastings; Badges, Miss A. E. Thomas; Luncheons and Programs, Mrs. C. G. Diehl; Posters, Mrs. James B. Scott; Postoffice, Mrs. Florence Janney; Restaurants, Mrs. C. G. Diehl.

For the care and attention of these comrades and their assistants, together with the unwearying pages who hurried to and fro, the thanks and appreciation of the convention were voiced at various times throughout the sessions, and especially on the last day of each convention, when they were introduced from the platform and given the white ribbon cheer, but words do not express the real appreciation for the unfailing care and unflagging attention manifested.

Our Comrades From Overseas

Australia's delegation, five in number, semed to feel well repaid for their long journey of 13,000 miles. They were Mrs. John McLeod, president Australasian W. C. T. U.; Mrs. W. H. Carvosso, national corresponding secretary, who has given thirty-seven years of service of high order to the work; Mrs. William Park, Miss Adie Robertson, organizer for juvenile work; Miss Edith M. Bailey, national general secretary of the Loyal Temperance Legion, and Miss Bruckner, leader of a local Y.

From far-off India came Mary J. Campbell, World's W. C. T. U. organizer; Mrs. C. B. Hill, Miss Helen I. Root, Dr. Harriet H. Davies, and Mabel Archibald, editor of the national official paper of India.

Ceylon was represented by Mrs. Brown; Egypt, by Mrs. S. M. Zwemer; Burma, by Mrs. St. John; Malaya, by Mrs. J. S. Nagle.

New Zealand had as its sole representative, because of the national prohibition campaign now in progress, Miss Jean Begg. China was represented by Suchen Wang; Africa by Mrs. Livingston; Syria, by Miss Carpenter; Bulgaria, by Miss Ellen M. Stone; Cuba, by Mrs. E. J. Simonds, president of the new national organization; Finland, by Maria Steuroth, field secretary and organizer for the Finland W. C. T. U.

Germany had four delegates: Fraulein von Biucher, president of the W. C. T. U. of Germany; Miss Wilhelmina Lohman, Miss Marta Kuppersbusch and Mrs. Strecker, Consuelo Valdez, now a student at Northwestern University, preparing for temperance work in the Philippines, represented that country. Mrs. Lydia B. Johnson, who has recently returned from speaking in the wet and dry referendum campaign in Sweden, spoke most interestingly for her native country. Dr. Mary Cutler, the president of the W. C. T. U. of Korea, was the sole delegate from the "Hermit Nation." Denmark was well represented by Miss Dagmar Prior, who was elected World's vice-president.

The delegation from Japan consisted of Mrs. Ochimi Kubushiro, national W. C. T. U. corresponding secretary: Miss Uta Hayashi, who has made a big contribution to temperance service; Mrs. Ito, wife of the general secretary of the Men's Purity League, and Mrs. Aikawa, the last two under commission from the Japanese government, the first to study dressmaking, the last girls' schools. In the delegation also was Miss Asa Matsuoka, a young woman student at the Northwestern University, who has become deeply interested in the temperance work.

Scotland's delegation was headed by Mrs. George Milne, vice-president of the Scottish W. C. T. U. In the delegation were Mrs. Helen Barton, well known around the world; Miss Wilson, Y superintendent; Miss Jane Darling, prominent in temperance work in Edinboro and environs, and Miss Marion Ferguson.

Mrs. Moffatt Clow, president of the Ulster Women's Temperance Council, brought the message from Ireland.

England had expected to have among its representatives the daughter and granddaughter of Lady Carlisle—Lady Aurea Howard and Miss Christina Roberts—but a general election having been called just at the time of the convention, they were unable to attend. The delegation consisted of Miss Agnes E. Slack, one of the World's W. C. T. U. honorary secretaries; Mrs. Richard Nicholson, president Sheffield District B. W. T. A.; Mrs. Ivens, Mrs. Elliott, Mrs. Kirby, Mrs. Penn and Miss Ryder of Yorkshire.

Canada sent a large company, including all its general officers and many provincial presidents. In this delegation were Mrs. Blanche Read Johnston, one of the honorary secretaries of the World's W. C. T. U., and Mrs. Gordon Wright, president of the Canada W. C. T. U.

Newfoundland had two delegates, Mrs. James Benedict, wife of the American Consul, and Mrs. Jean Johnston, president and vice-president of the Newfoundland W. C. T. U.

Miss Hardynia K. Norville, World's organizer, represented South America. It was expected up to the last minute that four other prominent leaders would accompany her.

Our State W C. T. U. Leaders

Rarely or never has there been a National Convention when there have been such large delegations from all the states in the Union. The following state presidents or their official representatives answered to the roll-call: Alabama, represented by Mrs. J. B. Chatfield; Arizona, represented by Mrs. Leora Lobban Brewer; Arkansas, represented by Mrs. Jennie Carr Pitman; California (North), Mrs. Addie Garwood Estes; California (South), Mrs. Eva C. Wheeler; Colorado, Mrs. Adrianna Hungerford; Connecticut, Mrs. Mary B. Wilson; Delaware, Mrs. Georgia Pierce; District of Columbia, Mrs. Emma Sanford Shelton; Florida, Miss Minnie E. Neal; Georgia, Mrs. Lella A. Dillard; Idaho (North), Mrs. Mabel I. McCree; Illinois, Miss Helen L. Hood; Indiana, Mrs. Elizabeth T. Stanley; Iowa, Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith; Kansas, Mrs. Lillian M. Mitchner; Kentucky, represented by Mrs. Dora S. Terry; Maine, Mrs. Althea G. Quimby; Maryland, Mrs. Mary R. Haslup; Massachusetts, Mrs. Alice G. Ropes; Michigan, Mrs. E. L. Calkins; Minnesota, Mrs. Josephine E. Sizer; Mississippi, Mrs. Clara C. Cox; Missouri, Mrs. Nelle G. Burger; Montana, Mrs. J. E. Cocks; Nebraska, Mrs. Lela G. Dyar; New Hampshire, Mrs. Charline M. Abbott; New Jersey, Miss Esther H. Elfreth; New Mexico, Mrs. Anna W. Strumquist; New York, Mrs. Ella A. Boole; North Carolina, Mrs. T. Adelaide Goodno; North Dakota, Mrs. Elizabeth Preston Anderson; Ohio, Mrs. Florence D. Richard; Oklahoma, Mrs. Josephine M. Buhl; Oregon, represented by Mrs. Georgia Trimble; Pennsylvania, Mrs. Ella M. George; Rhode Isiand, Mrs. Ethelyn H. Roberts; South Carolina, Mrs. Joseph Sprott; South Dakota, Mrs. Flora A. Mitchell; Tennessee, Mrs. Minnie Allison Welch; Texas, Mrs. Claude De Van Watts; Utah, represented by Mrs. Alice Ault; Vermont, Mrs. Elsie Pease Barney; Virginia, Mrs. Sara H. Hoge; Washington, (East), Mrs. Ailie Methven; Washington (West), Mrs. Lillian M. Vincent; West Virginia, Mrs. Olive C. Barnes; Wisconsin, Mrs. Mary Scott Johnson.

Commendation of Manufacturer's Record for Its Standing on Prohibition

In a leaflet just issued by the president of the Manufacturer's Record Publishing Company and editor of the Record, Richard H. Edmonds, a correspondent is quoted, who claims that the magazine is losing subscribers because of its stand on prohibition, another who says that the Record is publishing "too much politics, religion and prohibition," and a Baltimore banker who withdrew his advertisement and cancelled his subscription because Mr. Edmonds had criticized Baltimore business men who asserted that because prohibition laws could not be enforced they should be repealed. In reply to such critics Mr. Edmond's reply is: "We are perfectly willing to lose such men from our subscription list, but those who imagine that this in the slightest degree changes the position of the Manufacturer's Record on this great question have little understanding of the policy which has prevailed in this office for the last forty years. Moreover, for every one who has criticized our position on prohibition, dozens have written in enthusiastic commendation of it."

NATIONAL CONVENTION TAKES ON INTERNATIONAL ASPECT

MANY WORLD'S DELEGATES AMONG ITS SPEAKERS

Just when the World's Convention really ended and the National began, only the initiated realized, so delightfully did the two occasions blend.

The day intervening between the closing of one and the opening of the other was occupied with executive committee meetings and group departmental conferences. The great World's meeting had furnished in generous measure inspiration and general information as to the international situation, and it was wholesome to come down from that mount of vision for a day and deal with practical methods by which the big objectives before us can be attained. In the proceedings of the conferences the overseas comrades seemed to take the keenest interest.

It had been arranged to hold the National Convention in the Chambers-Wylie Memorial Presbyterian Church, but the unprecedentedly large attendance necessitated the securing of a larger auditorium. The official board and pastor of the Arch Street Methodist Church graciously placed their edifice at our disposal. But even that spacious audience room proved too small for the crowds that came afternoon and evening, and overflow meetings were held throughout the week at the Chambers-Wylie Memorial Presbyterian Church.

After the wonderful World's meetings, which had generated new enthusiasm and the various departmental conferences with their inspiration to be "up and doing," every heart was attuned to the spirit of the occasion, as the delegates to the forty-ninth annual convention of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union assembled Friday afternoon. Many of the women gathered in the beautiful building had come from states where the fight had been long-continued and the victory hard-gained. Their tired faces showed the struggle they had endured, but the observer could also note a look of solemn joy, pride of achievement, and lines of determination giving the assurance that they would hold the ground gained and march on to further triumphs.

Promptly at 1:45 the gavel fell, and the subdued murmur of conversation ceased as Miss Anna A. Gordon, national president, called the meeting to order, and the great throng, led by the national musical director, Mrs. Frances Graham, with heart and soul joined in singing the Crusade Hymn, "Give to the winds thy fears," following which the majestic words of the Crusade psalm were recited in unison by the delegates. The invocation was given by Mrs. Florence D. Richard, president of the Crusade state, after which came the roll-call by the national recording secretary.

National and International Issues Treated in President's Address

The delivery of the address of the national president, always the great event of the first day, was punctuated by frequent applause. As she reviewed the events of the past year at home and abroad, it was with a thrill of pride that the delegates recalled that by virtue of Miss Gordon's election as World's president, World's W. C. T. U. Headquarters will be transferred from London, England, to Rest Cottage, Evanston, Illinois, where Frances E. Willard founded the World's W. C. T. U. and wrote the famous Polyglot Petition. At the close of Miss Gordon's address she was given the white ribbon salute and a rising vote of thanks for her statesmanlike treatment of the big national and international issues in which the W. C. T. U. is especially interested. (A large part of Miss Gordon's address appeared in the November 23 issue of THE UNION SIGNAL.)

A Hundred Thousand New Members Gained

It was a most heartening report that Mrs. Frances P. Parks, national corresponding secretary, brought to the delegations—that over 100,000 new women have enlisted in our ranks since the Jubilee Million Members Campaign opened in March, 1920. And it was an inspiring rally cry she sounded for 1923—"The Next Hundred Thousand." Her report was received with intense interest, and various state delegations indicated their delight in gains made. (Mrs. Parks' report was published in full in our November 23 number of THE UNION SIGNAL.)

Intensely interesting, even though largely statistical, was the financial survey given by Mrs. Margaret C. Munns, national treasurer. It showed gains all along the way, a wise expenditure of funds, a goodly balance in the treasury, and an encouraging outlook for the future. (Mrs. Munns' report was printed in THE UNION SIGNAL of November 23.)

The W. C. T. U. is generally conceded to have had a wonderful history, but it lets other people talk about that. What interests it more than anything else is how it is to accomplish its tasks of the future. Because of this forward-looking attitude no reports received closer attention or more cordial applause than did those of the Young People's Branch and the Loyal Temperance Legion which related the success of the year's work and the program for the coming year. (On another page will be found portions of these interesting reports.)

Celebration Not on Program

Some things happened Friday evening that were not listed on the printed program. During the previous five days the members of the United States delegation had played the role of quiet listeners at the World's Convention, and with the opening of their own meeting, their pent up enthusiasm burst forth in song and cheer. Especially was it manifested when California and Ohio were called upon to receive congratulations for their splendid triumphs at the ballot box. Hilariously did their comrades applaud and cheer the indefatigable white ribboners of these states. And thereupon the spirits of the state delegations from rock-bound Maine to sunny Florida, from East to West, began to effervesce and bubble over. State after state, through its leaders, gently but firmly demanded to be recognized by the presiding officer that it might explain how it, too, had distinguished itself in electing dry Congressmen, dry state legislators, dry governors, and dry everything else needed for the enforcement and retention of the national prohibition law. At the high point of this jubilant testimony meeting, Mrs. Calkins, president of the Michigan W. C. T. U., made herself heard amid the confusion of tongues by remarking with great dignity, "Michigan has voted dry for so many years that it has ceased to be a novelty." It can easily be imagined that not a dozen gavels wielded by the best presiding officer in the nation could have prevented Kansas, Maine, North Dakota and other states long dry from adding their last word on that subject.

Is Prohibition a Success?

"Prohibition—Is it a Success?" was the question asked and answered by Mrs. Florence E. Atkins, national organizer and lecturer, in an eloquent address, in which she condensed the marvelous results that have come as a result of thrusting out the arch-enemy, the legalized liquor traffic. "Any great national movement," she reminded her audience, "has an influence upon the social, economic, and political life of the nation. The Manufacturer's Record, which is a magazine, not published by women, or by effeminate men, but by hard-headed practical business men, not idealists, speaks for the effect of prohibition on business. Over 85 per cent of those to whom it recently sent its questionnaire were emphatically for prohibition in its present form.

"I was in a town in Georgia, at a home coming in Pike County. From fifteen to twenty thousand people were there. I mingled with the throng, ate with them, spoke in the court house that night, but I never saw a drunken man, never smelled liquor, saw nothing that savored of a brawl or a scrap. About four in the afternoon I heard men say, 'Come now, get the children together, guess we had better start for home.' All at once the scene faded from my vision, and I saw what would have happened in pre-prohibition days, when all the saloons were there. There would have been men by the hundreds drunk, women pleading with them to go home, and frightened children. About nine years ago I saw a little boy trying to get his drunken father home. Is prohibition a success? Well, I guess! It not only puts the shoes on the children's feet, it puts money in the bank, sends the men to work, puts happiness in their lives. Best of all, it has only just begun to function! The W. C. T. U., in the providence of God, has had more to do with the Eighteenth Amendment than any other organization. It was not written merely through sympathy, but through toil and blood and prayer. What it has started it will continue. The day is near at hand when this republic, from the Golden Gate of the West to the New York harbor on the East, shall be a safe country for the building of homes and the rearing of the young."

How the Wright Law Was Won

In making the next introduction, Mrs. Ella A. Boole, presiding officer, reminded the audience that the day after election the minds of the people were full of the defeat of the Wright law. It had not failed, however, as later news revealed, but had met with glorious victory. Mrs. Boole then presented Mrs. Anna Marden De Yo, corresponding secretary of the California (North) W. C. T. U.

Mrs. De Yo was dressed in the garb worn by the participants in the March of Allegiance which occurred the Saturday before election day. She expressed great regret that Mrs. Kathleen Norris, writer and patriot, was not able to be present to tell something of the work in which she had been so prominent a factor, having addressed over two hundred and fifty thousand people, driven in her own machine several thousand miles, and spoken by radio to thousands, winning people's hearts everywhere. Mrs. De Yo asserted that to her belongs more of the credit for the victory than anyone else. She said: "In July, we asked the women who came to the meetings to sign service cards. We sent out cards of invitation, hoping to organize a thousand women in the campaign for the Wright Law. Our faith led us to engage the ball room in the St. Francis Hotel for the meeting, but when the time came we were obliged to engage another in the Palace Hotel, and because of the large number present it was moved to organize a committee of five thousand women. The movement swept San Francisco like wild fire. Meetings were held frequently, and the most representative women in the city were elected to address gatherings. Churches, clubs and many other organizations were approached, and every honorable means resorted to to pass the Wright law. As one method, we took the telephone book, tore it up leaf by leaf, gave them out one by one, and each woman would telephone to all those whose names she had. An office was established in the St. Francis Hotel and people could come there and ask questions. The climax was reached when Mrs. Eddy, a prominent writer on one of the San Francisco newspapers, suggested the march of allegiance, and brought out the plans, urging that every woman should be asked to take the oath of allegiance to the Constitution. (This event has been described in a previous issue of THE UNION SIGNAL.)

"As We Marched, We Prayed"

"As we marched to the music of 'Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord,' we prayed that God would give us victory. The division of the W. C. T. U. was the largest of the organizations. The banner of San Francisco county has a story connected with it. It had been lost for years, and had been brought back in answer to prayer. It showed the blue sky, with the gold cross, and the words, 'By this sign we conquer.'"

At the close of Mrs. De Yo's talk, the California delegation gave their cheer for the Wright law: "For the Wright law did we work and pray, and now California is loyal to the U. S. A."

Mrs. Boole remarked, "This story would not be complete if it omitted the women of southern California who trained a thousand women to make speeches, and Los Angeles rolled up a majority of 57,000."

The closing number of the evening was a masterly address by Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League, on "What Next in the Fight for Prohibition?" Mr. Wheeler said in part:

"The situation which we face in this country today is encouraging to the trend of prohibition, but it is also a challenge to the friends of orderly government. We have written into the Constitution of our country what is known as the Eighteenth Amendment. It is there to stay as long as the government stands. It is only a question today whether or not that amendment shall be enforced or whether it shall be nullified.

"We have three distinct propositions to face in order to have this provision of our constitution made effective and operative: First, an enforceable law; second, honest officials; third, a militant organized public sentiment supporting these officials.

Anna Adams Gordon, President National W. C. T. U.

"What are some of the new tactics of our opponents in attempting to nullify or repeal the national prohibition law?

"A resolution is to be introduced in the new session of Congress for the appointment of a scientific temperance commission to determine what alcoholic content makes a beverage intoxicating. How are they going to work out this plan of a scientific temperance commission? The standard ought to be placed so low that no one can become intoxicated.

"The next thing we shall have to meet is a provision in the ship subsidy bill that will allow the sale of liquor. If a wet amendment is added to that bill it will jeopardize its passage.

"Another thing we will have to face is a demand for a larger use of liquor for medicinal purposes. In more than one-half the states they do not allow the use of whisky under the state laws. The wets are making their attacks on the enforcement officials because they are not giving out sufficient for medicinal purposes.

Mrs. Ella A. Boole, Vice-President-at Large National W. C. T. U.

"Another fight before us is to hold the use of alcohol down to beverage needs. You may have noticed the sale of an unusually large amount of alcohol for alcohol rubs. We are going to prevent that by having that alcohol denatured.

"There is a saying in the Federal Prohibition Commissioner's office that if you drink a glass of an alcoholic beverage and see normal, it is one-half of one per cent. If you drink a glass and see double it is bootleg liquor. If you drink a glass and cannot see at all it is wood alcohol.

"Another thing we have to fight is a bill to put the agents who enforce the law under civil service. This will help mightily to get honorable, dependable, four square enforcement officers. It will increase the efficiency of these officials from 50 to 100 per cent.

"A bill providing that an alien who sells liquor has either got to quit selling or else go back home has passed the House of Representatives by a vote of three to one and I believe when it comes up in the Senate it will pass.

"Another measure of importance is the Peyote bill, prohibiting the transportation of peyote, the use of which is rapidly spreading among different Indian tribes.

"Fraudulent permits are making much trouble. There has been no adequate penalty for forging permits. There is need to increase that penalty under the prohibition law.

"The last and great fight we have before us is to secure obedience to the law. Obedience to the law is the highest duty that rests upon an American citizen. If the brewers can defy the Eighteenth Amendment because they do not like it, then any group of citizens can defy any law they do not like. Civilization and law and order go hand in hand, and if our nation is to live we must stand firmly by these principles."

Important Business the Order of the Day

The National Publishing House and the national official papers had right of way Saturday morning. Mrs. Ella A. Boole, editor-in-chief of The Young Crusader, pleaded for a wider use of this valuable children's paper, urging that it be given as a Christmas present. THE UNION SIGNAL, represented by its managing editor, its associate editor, Miss Vida I. Thompson, and the circulation manager, Mrs. Della F. Withers, reported very encouraging conditions, a large gain in subscriptions, and a reduction of over $8,000 in the deficit caused by the high prices due to the war. THE UNION SIGNAL Challenge Light, a beautiful silver candlestick with electrical attachment, was awarded to the New York W. C. T. U. for having sent in the largest number of new subscriptions.

The Literature was represented by Mrs. Margaret Platt, editor and promoter, and Miss Jeannette Nichols, manager of the business office. The latter told of the unprecedented sales of literature during the past year, and called attention to special leaflets and pieces of literature that are proving helpful to workers.

The election of officers for the coming year was dispatched with an orderliness and alacrity that called forth expressions of admiration from visitors not members of the organization. All the national officers were re-elected by a vote so nearly unanimous that it evidenced appreciation of their faithful and efficient service

(Continued on Page Six)

LAW ENFORCEMENT PLANS

The Eighteenth Amendment having been incorporated in the Constitution, the enactment of an enforcement code was the duty of Congress, and that code is known as the Volstead Act.

It is the duty of every citizen to obey the law, and of every official having sworn to uphold the Constitution to respect its provisions.

It is the duty of executive officers to enforce the law, and of the courts to interpret the law without prejudice.

Smugglers, rum-runners, bootleggers and illicit manufacturers are law violators.

All who buy, dispense, transport or connive at such violations, whether rich or poor, are law breakers.

To create sentiment for Law Observance and Law Enforcement is the supreme task of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

To this end we recommend:

1. The observance of January 16, 1923, with enforcement rallies under the auspices of the local unions.
2. A thorough study of our Law Enforcement Manual and of Federal and state Enforcement laws.
3. The election and appointment of officials favorable to prohibition in accordance with the statement of Abraham Lincoln that "we must entrust any cause to its friends."
4. The establishment of friendly relations between law enforcement superintendents or committees and officers responsible for law enforcement.
5. Attendance at court, in liquor cases, from the time of drawing the jury until the close of the case.
6. Commendations on the part of individuals and unions of the heroic work of enforcement officers, who risk their lives in this patriotic service.
7. The modification of parole, probation and suspended sentence laws to apply to first offenders only, and Increased penalties including fines and imprisonment in other cases.
8. The use of the slogan "Reverence for Law" and to this end seeking the co-operation of the home, the school and the church, and placing the Lincoln poster and good literature in churches, schools, libraries and other public buildings.
9. The circulation of literature showing the benefits of prohibition, and especially calling the attention of the public to the benefits thereof locally.
10. Active opposition to the restoration of beer and wine because this would nullify the Eighteenth Amendment and be an entering wedge for its repeal.
11. Increased efforts for increased membership, because every member is committed to total abstinence and law enforcement.

National Convention Takes on International Aspect

(Continued from Page Five)

rendered during the somewhat trying years following the war. Each successful candidate was greeted with the white ribbon cheer, special recognition from the state that proudly claimed her, and gifts of flowers.

About this time, dismal predictions might have been heard that "We never can get through the rest of the business and numbers on the program." But those making these gloomy prophecies, did not know the time-conserving ability of the W. C. T. U. presiding officers. Everything went forward at double quick pace. Not a moment was wasted. People who came to the platform with a speech thirty minutes long found themselves hypnotized into cutting it down to thirty seconds.

Mrs. Frances P. Parks, Corresponding Secretary National W. C. T. U.

Law Enforcement Plans for the next year were presented, discussed, and adopted.

A fine set of comprehensive resolutions came before the convention, and with a few minor changes, were passed.

Most important of all was the program of activities adopted, outlining the big objectives for the coming twelve months.

Mrs. Culla J. Vayhinger spoke briefly for the board of directors and superintendents, telling of the beginning of the organization of different departments of work, and the practical value in interesting women in certain lines of work which especially attract them. Each national superintendent and director in a half-minute speech—and how much they did say in that brief period — pressed home the needs and demands of her department.

Mrs. Frances P. Parks, chairman of the board of organizers and lecturers, announced that instead of speeches from all the members of the board, two of their number—Mrs. Lora S. LaMance and Miss Roena Shaner—would speak for them. Mrs. LaMance said the organizers had helped not only to gain prohibition but to hold it, and this they were able to do because they had ability, experience and consecration. They are in a position to help others because they themselves have faced all kinds of difficulties and discouragements.

Miss Shaner spoke of the work of the organizers in arousing the indifferent and careless; in putting life into dead unions; in organizing new unions, Y. P. B.'s and L. T. L.'s; in sowing the seed of total abstinence in the minds of the children in the schools, and following it up by visits to the mothers in the homes, laying the foundations for the campaign activities that come later.

Saturday Evening A Family Affair

The W. C. T. U. Family with as many of the overseas sisters as wanted to come—and most of them were there—had a good time all by itself on the last evening of the convention. To make it seem all the more "homey" the young men and women of the Young People's Branch were sitting on the platform steps or the floor near the altar rail, or anywhere they could find a few inches of space. They were an exuberant company, and didn't let an opportunity get by without sandwiching in a song or a cheer or something out of the ordinary. How the mothers did enjoy it! Their presence made doubly eloquent the address of Mrs. Maude B. Perkins on "Why We Need the Young People." When she finished, Sidney Ayres, president of the New York Y. P. B. Federation, and a brother of Muriel Ayres, for the Y. P. B. sons and daughters paid a beautiful tribute to the W. C. T. U. mother, and showered Mrs. Perkins with compliments and flowers.

Previous to this a group of L. T. L. secretaries had coaxed Miss Mary B. Ervin onto the platform and presented her with a beautiful leather writing case.

Mrs. Elizabeth P. Anderson, Recording Secretary National W. C. T. U.

Among the many other choice numbers on the program was an enlivening talk by Miss Agnes E. Slack, that made one want to laugh one minute and cry the next, so mingled in her remarks were pathos and humor, tragedy and comedy.

Mary Campbell told some of her inimitable stories of life in India. Mrs. Culla J. Vayhinger explained the Americanization home study course that the department had conducted during the past year and presented diplomas to those who had finished with credit.

A Traitor to His Country

Referring to the proposed law to prevent the violation of the prohibitory law by aliens, Mrs. Deborah Knox Livingston called attention to another aspect of the question—the attitude of Americans who have no background of foreign birth. On her trip to South Africa she sat at the same table on the steamship with a prominent American. During the course of a dinner one night, the conversation turned to prohibition, and this man remarked, "I glory in the violation of the Eighteenth Amendment." She said nothing, but a little while afterward the chief engineer, seated at the same table, remarked, "I would like to know what Mrs. Livingston thinks about that." "I am afraid, sir," she replied, "if I should express what I think it would be language not proper for polite society." "What do you mean?" "I mean just that. If I were to give expression to what I feel about a native born citizen of the United States defying the Constitution of the United States, I would say that he is not only unpatriotic but that he is a traitor to his country." Mrs. Livingston suggested that we find a country to which we can deport native Americans of the type in question and remarked that she would like to be one of the members of the committee that did the deporting. She gave a graphic word picture of conditions in South Africa.

The musical numbers on the program were quite in harmony with the messages. Mrs. Katherine Call Simonds sang "A New Song of Freedom," her own composition, which called forth well-merited applause. Professor Dailey was asked to again sing "It's in the Constitution, and It's There to Stay," which he did with fine effect, asking Mrs. Frances W. Graham to sing it with him.

The convention was drawing to a close. The time had arrived for invitations to the next annual meeting. They came not singly but by the half dozen—from Seattle to the west, Louisville in the South, Albuquerque at the Southwest, and many other sections—but Michigan stepped to the front with a determined air that indicated it expected its invitation would be accepted. All invitations were referred to the post-official board.

Then somebody in the Pennsylvania delegation started that joyful little ditty, "We're glad you came to see us, we are, we are," which brought the prompt response from the delegates who had been so delightfully entertained, "We're glad we came to see you, we are, we are." And the gladness over the happy days together, the renewed friendships, the newly formed acquaintances, the delightful comradeship, rang out in the good-by song and in the Aaronic benediction, repeated in unison.

(Continued on Page Eight)

Mrs. Margaret C. Munns, Treasurer National W. C. T. U.

National W. C. T. U. Jubilee Budget for 1923

The Jubilee Budget for the coming year provides, among other things, for $3,000 to be given to the World's W. C. T. U.; $500 for a national organizer in Cuba; $2,000 for native workers in India; and for the continuation of aid for native workers in China and South America.

Provision is made for the continuation of the contribution to the Child Welfare Research Station at the Iowa State University; for an official route maker at National W. C. T. U. headquarters to arrange engagements for all salaried field workers. Mrs. Jennie M. Kemp has been appointed to that position.

Changes in World's W. C. T. U. Roster

In addition to the election of two new officers of the World's W. C. T. U., the following changes were made: Lady Cecilia Roberts of England was elected superintendent of the department of Protection of Native Races; Mrs. Kate Carver of England, general secretary of the Young Woman's Branch; Mrs. Strang, of Australia, superintendent of Flower Mission department; Mrs. Askew Miller, of South Africa, superintendent of Peace and International Arbitration; Mrs. Houtton, of Alberta, Canada is the new superintendent of the department of the Use of Unfermented Wine. The Anti-Opium and Other Narcotics department was combined with that of Medical Temperance, Mrs. Martha M. Allen, U. S. A., superintendent. The name of the department of Franchise was changed to Citizenship, Mrs. Deborah Knox Livingston, U. S. A., superintendent. The World's Missionary Fund department was dropped, the same interests being covered by that of the department of Systematic Giving and Bequests, Mrs. Whitman, of Canada, superintendent. Press, Temperance Literature and Publicity were combined in one department, Julia Freeman Deane, superintendent.

Convention Sidelights

Many prominent citizens of Philadelphia were introduced and received ovations. Among them were Miss Anne Jarvis, the originator of Mothers' Day, founded in honor of her own beloved mother; Mrs. George Horace Lorimer, wife of the well-known publisher of the Curtis periodicals, who said: "My husband says the Eighteenth Amendment has come to stay."

No speaker at the World's meeting made a deeper impression than did Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Assistant United States Attorney-General. At the close of her illuminating address on the legal situation of law enforcement Dr. Horsfall of the United Kingdom Temperance Alliance of England, moved a vote of thanks for her clear presentation of the subject, so valuable to the visitors from other countries. Mrs. Willebrandt is a favorite daughter of California South, and was given an ovation by the delegation from that part of the state, presented with a California poppy, and a whole bouquet of compliments, by Mrs. Eva Wheeler, president of California South. Mrs. Willebrandt's mother, grandmother and great-grandmother were white ribboners.

Dr. Bird T. Baldwin, director of the Child Welfare Station at the Iowa State University, when introduced to the Convention, spoke of his early training by a mother, who was at that moment sitting in the balcony, who signed the charter of the local union in Williamstown, Pennsylvania. "The greatest single stroke that has ever been made during the last 1900 years for child welfare was when the Eighteenth Amendment to our Constitution was adopted," said Dr. Baldwin.

"No matter what some people say about soldiers resenting prohibition," declared Mrs. Kate W. Barrett, newly elected president of the Woman's Auxiliary of the American Legion, when introduced, "I have not found one of them who did not favor it." She said one of her first efforts during the coming year would be to bring the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and the American Legion closer together. She asked that all white ribboners co-operate in making Christmas a specially happy time for disabled soldiers and sailors.

Mrs. Sara H. Hoge, Assistant Recording Secretary National W. C. T. U.

COMMANDER EVANGELINE BOOTH OF THE SALVATION ARMY ADDRESSES VAST AUDIENCE AT ACADEMY OF MUSIC ON "SHALL AMERICA GO BACK?"

Long before the hour of the meeting Sunday afternoon, the Academy of Music was filled with men and women eager to hear the message on "Shall America Go Back?" by Evangeline Booth, Commander of the Salvation Army of the United States. As she came to the platform accompanied by six members of her staff, she was greeted by the big audience with applause, followed by the singing of "Onward Christian Soldiers."

She won the hearts of the white ribboners with her opening words, referring with deep feeling to her affection for Frances Willard, and her intimate association with her. "Her memory is indescribably precious to me, because she was good enough to put me personally into her loving heart," said the Commander, "and now it seems to me you have all done the same thing. Frances Willard gave to me the wealth of her affection, and the riches of her wisdom. She gave me much good advice, all of which I have obeyed, with a single exception. She said to me on one occasion, 'My precious child, you must get married some day.' I threw my arms around her neck and said, 'My darling godmother, so must you.'"

Addressing the leaders upon the platform and the concourse of white ribboners in the audience, she said, "Before me and behind me is represented the flower and fragrance of the World's and National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and as I look upon you I am reminded of all those whom you have inspired to higher planes of thought through the last half century. You have been unwavering in your fight to unseat the most monstrous and malignant enemy of our land; your cheerful optimism and untiring labor have been an expression of your indomitable faith. Future history with its more perfect sense of values will ascribe to you praise for what you have done.

"With all my heart and the hearts of my people I say may God's blessing be upon this organization. We are here to mingle our voices in the shout of victory over what will ever be the world's greatest moral triumph, even if it went no further, but it is not going to stop and there is no power that can stop its going a great many steps further. But even did it not go a step further, it would still remain the world's greatest moral victory, but we are still upon the field, not with our swords in their scabbards but ready to drive the remainder of the enemy outside our gates and keep them out."

In relating telling evidence of the change which has been wrought by prohibition, Miss Booth said:

"I speak of these things a little as one having authority. Do you know why? I began to render my service to God as a girl in London. Dressed in rags I went into the lowest slums of the great city and visited in the homes cursed by drink. I saw little children abused. I helped hide them behind my skirts from drunken parents. When I think of the splendid sacrificial toil in fighting this most brutal monster of monsters and keeping him out of our land that is represented in this organization, I am thrilled."

For the advocates of the return of beer and wine to cry "Prohibition does not prohibit" as a reason for the repeal of prohibition, is to virtually ask for the whole Decalogue to be repealed because of the infractions of that law which is fundamental to all jurisprudence, reasoned the Commander. "We of the Salvation Army order our lives by the Ten Commandments and it would be about as sensible to expunge that code from the Word of God as to say the prohibition law is a failure and therefore should be repealed."

"And then there is the plea of personal liberty," she continued. "Liberty, true liberty is our most priceless heritage, but no man's liberty gives him the right to strike down any other man, not even if that other is his own offspring. It was in the exercise of the right of society to protect itself that it came to the appraisal of the drink traffic, which resulted in national prohibition, but the appraisal was correct scientifically, correct socially and correct economically. There was no other consistent course possible but for the nation to wash its hands forever of the evil partnership."

"When I begin to analyze the crowd who oppose prohibition, I am not impressed," declared the Commander. "Loyal citizens place their reputations in jeopardy by opposing prohibition, when they work shoulder to shoulder with brewery owners for the repeal of the 18th Amendment. There are three different complexions of antis—There is the blonde of one per cent; there is the brunette of four per cent; and there is the wine and beer modifier who is almost as dark as the Ace of Spades. All of these friends repudiate the saloon but I maintain that their position is untenable—light wines and beer cannot exist without saloons."

"Shall we permit these opponents of prohibition to jeopardize all that we have won for home and for country?" asked the Commander. "America has accomplished this thing and the eyes of the whole world are upon her. With the votes of free men and free women she has erected a new Statue of Liberty with which to lighten the whole world. Is there any hand selfish enough to put out the light or to bring down that noblest of monuments? Shall America Go Back?"

"I belong to an organization that has never had a hesitating moment in regard to the liquor evil," she affirmed with pride. "The Salvation Army represents the greatest temperance movement on the face of the earth. Of all social welfare workers none are in as close relations to the victims of the drink trade as are those of our organization. One of our officers who travels from sea to sea, holding meetings, says that in former days he usually had from eight to ten drunken men at his meetings. Since prohibition came he has seen only two men in such condition in all of his meetings throughout the entire country. Something has happened! That something is prohibition. Shall America Go Back?

Snap Shot of Group of Delegates in White House Grounds A

"Are those who are opposing prohibition prepared to take upon their shoulders the enormous responsibility of again exposing their fellow men to the terrible temptation and peril of the legalized liquor trade? Shall America Go Back?

"One of our superintendents in a slums settlement tells me that most of the fund for relief can now be given to widows. It used to go for cases caused by drunkenness. We would get reports, such as, 'The baby has fallen from the fire escape,' 'The baby has been smothered in bed.' No such report has reached us during the last twelve months. Shall America Go Back?

"Whereas formerly hundreds of victims of the saloon used to be sent to our Salvation Army homes, a very different character of cases are coming under our care now. Shall America Go Back?

"Every branch of the Salvation Army unites in declaring the value of prohibition economically. Many in our industrial homes who could not formerly hold a nickel two or three hours now have bank accounts. Shall America Go Back?

"Shall America Go Back? Let us look at the handwriting upon the wall. The letters are illy formed, the words are poorly spelled. The message is simple but vastly comprehensive. It is faintly written but never to be obliterated, for the pen that wrote it was wielded by the trembling hands of little children. It is the handwriting of the children across the walls of the great nation. You can hush every other voice of national and individual complaint; you may silence every other tongue, even of mothers of destroyed sons and daughters, and of wives of profligate husbands; but let the children speak—the little children, the wronged children, the crippled children, the abused children, the blind children who never will see the blue of the sky or the yellow of the buttercup, the imbecile children, the deserted children, the beaten children, the nameless children, the dead children. O my God, this army of little children. Let their weak voices, faint with oppression, cold and hunger, be heard. Let their little faces, pinched by want of gladness, be heeded. Let their challenge, though made by small forms—too mighty for estimate—be reckoned with. Let their writing upon the wall of the nation, although by tiny fingers, as stupendous as eternity, be correctly interpreted, and read that the awful robbery of the lawful heritage of their little bodies, minds and souls is laid at the door of alcohol. Shall America Go Back?

"I hear the answer as the voice of many waters from tens of thousands of homes, from drunkards with manhood regained, from mothers who are now happy, from the sick in the hospital, from the convict in his cell, from the children in the schools, still on and on until the sound rises to heaven and the redeemed ones with shining faces before the throne all join their silvery tones in a mighty chorus, 'AMERICA SHALL NOT GO BACK!'"

"It's in the Constitution"

Popular Song at the Conventions—Sung by Mr. Dailey

By the life of Frances Willard, which no mortal can portray,
By the lives of faithful women who have fallen in the fray,
We have woven Prohibition, warp and woof in legal way
In the Nation's Constitution, and it's there, there to stay.
By a royal Act of Congress backed by States in strong array,
By the Court's Supreme Decision, signed and sealed in legal way,
By Jehovah's Ultimatum, which the people MUST obey,
It is in the Constitution, and it's there, there to stay.

Chorus:

It is there to stay!. It is there to stay!
Till the stars shall sink in silence and the sun and moon decay,
Till the souls of men assemble in the final Judgment Day,
It is in the Constitution, and it's there, there to stay!

Copyright, 1922, by J. G. Dailey, Philadelphia, Pa.

Promoted Comrades

During the Philadelphia conventions word was received of the passing on to heavenly activities of two honored workers: Miss Amelia Pemell, for many years, Flower Mission superintendent for the World's W. C. T. U., a resident of New South Wales, Australia, and Emma Graves Dietrick, for many years a national organizer and lecturer, widely known and highly esteemed.

Since the convention word has been received of the home-going of two beloved comrades, both former national superintendents of the department of Evangelistic Work: Rev. Elizabeth W. Greenwood and Rev. Mary E. Kuhl; also of Mrs. Ellen L. Tenney, for thirty-five years treasurer of the New York State W. C. T. U., and of Mrs. Mary Hadley Hall, national superintendent of Institutes from 1900 to 1910.

These beloved comrades will be greatly missed, and the sympathy of the white ribbon sisterhood is lovingly extended to their families.

A great sorrow has come to Mrs. Blanche Read Johnston, one of the honorary secretaries of the World's W. C. T. U. A few days after her return from the Philadelphia conventions, her husband passed to the better land.

Big Constituencies Represented at World's and National Conventions at Philadelphia

Each of the delegates to the World's Convention represented one thousand dues-paying members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in her own land. Each one of the 855 delegates to the National Convention represented a constituency of five hundred members. The fortunate individuals who attended these great meetings are hurrying home eager to impart to their fellow members the information and inspiration they received in such large measure for the work for World Peace, World Purity, and World Prohibition.

ived by President Harding on the Historic Date, November 11.

SILENT FORCES OF THE UNIVERSE

Paragraphs from Address by Agnes E. Slack, Honorary Secretary, World's W. C. T. U.

The greatest forces in the world are silent. When I was in Italy at one time we came to a wonderful church which had been dedicated to St. Francis of Assisi. To the monk who was showing us around I said: "St. Francis was a wonderful man. He prayed a great deal, did he not?" The old man said not a word in reply, so I repeated my question. He answered: "St. Francis of Assisi never ceased praying; his life was a prayer." And so his life was a power and left an influence which seemed to permeate the old church so many years after he had gone from the earth.

One of the greatest forces is the silent force of electricity, but the greatest force with which we have to do is the silent force of love. Robert Browning immortalized that fact in his poem, "Pippa Passes." The little Italian peasant girl who sang every morning, "God is in His heaven, all's right with the world," did not know that because she sang it a man remembered God and refrained from murder, and a woman thought of Him, and kept from a great sin. So this force of love goes on. The power of love is just beginning to be realized. During the war a soldier was so badly wounded that he was told it was impossible for him to recover, but because he so greatly desired to get well and go home, he slowly improved. One day, sitting in the hospital reading a newspaper, his eye caught an item concerning his wife, who had been arrested for drunkenness. Unnerved by the shock he said: "I shall die," and in three days had passed away. We, the women of the W. C. T. U., are out to stop this sort of trouble in the world!

You remember when the "Titanic" was launched, it was said no power could hurt that great ship. On that last fatal trip politicians, bankers, financiers were on board; the band was playing jazz music, but when the iceberg struck the ship the band began to play, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and there ensued a scene which is historic, as great men stood back to let the women and children, even those who were unknown, humble, immigrant, be saved. One man called after those in the last boat, "See my wife in New York, and tell her I played the game." We in the W. C. T. U. are striving on land to obey that great law of the sea. We are trying to make safe the life of every woman and child, no matter how poor, ignorant and humble. The leaven of love is the inspiration of the white ribbon movement.

"Germany Dry by 1930"

(Address in Part)

Fraulein Gustel Von Blucher

When our national W. C. T. U. was founded in 1900, humane work was thriving, and we could do little more than point out the relationship between alcoholism and every kind of social misery, and try to introduce our work into these efforts, far too often carried on without consideration of alcohol as one of the principal roots of evil, to eradicate which should have been one of the first steps taken. In most cases this endeavor was much more difficult than if we could have done the work from the beginning, as you in the United States have done.

Our committee was anxious to influence church people in various ways. One of the means employed was the publication and circulation of a leaflet which was distributed by the thousands, endorsing different candidates. The president also gave lectures, and wrote a pamphlet which was sent out to hundreds of clergymen's wives. The education of the youth on the subject of temperance was greatly extended by the teachers whom we sent from place to place, and many children were presented with enlightening printed matter. Some new leaflets about alcoholism and woman's interest in the question, and the famous essay "From Public House to Public Home," were issued.

In June, 1921, we arranged a meeting with our women M. P.'s, in consequence of which a small committee was formed to take care of our interests in the parliaments of the republic and separate states.

Many petitions to prevent our foodstuffs from being made into alcoholic beverages and to secure local option were unsuccessful. We hope the day may not be far distant when we shall reach this goal.

Generally speaking, our work has suffered tremendously under the weight of our economic burdens. We lost more than a thousand members, that is, twelve branches. Means were lacking to rescue them through timely visits to found new branches, give lectures, or arrange even the simplest of meetings. We could do no more than we did. Only one great meeting for women was arranged—the convention in Breslau in October, 1921, when for the first time since the war the united movement all over Germany proved itself to be in absolute accord.

We consider the establishment of non-alcoholic refreshment rooms and public houses an important part of our propaganda. Our "Konigin Luise Haus" in Leipzig is valued as a pattern for the whole of Germany.

Miss Wilhelmina Lohmann, also a delegate to this convention, was the moving spirit of the semi-official test vote taken in her town of Bielefeld, which returned the unusual number of 12,626 votes for prohibition and only 416 against. This may not be typical of sentiment all over Germany, but nevertheless it gives a hopeful outlook.

We German white ribboners are going to teach our children the hopeful song we just heard your American boys and girls sing: "The World Is Going Dry!"

Beg Pardon!

We omitted to state in the story of the World's Convention published last week that Lady Cecilia Roberts of England was elected vice-president, but upon Miss Slack informing the convention that she had received a letter from Lady Cecilia stating it would be impossible for her to accept any office, another ballot was taken, and Dagmar Prior of Denmark was elected.

Miss Mary J. Campbell told of a dramatic moment on her return voyage to India, when, as the boat stopped at Singapore, one of the missionaries who got off came running back with glowing face, saying, "Guess what has happened. America has gone dry." That night the twenty-five missionaries on board held a thanksgiving prayer meeting on deck. "Now I can speak with authority," Miss Campbell said to herself, "for a great nation is back of me in the prohibition movement."

Glimpses of Other Countries

Through the Eyes of Overseas Delegates

"Newfoundland has had prohibition since 1917," said Jean E. Johnston, first vice-president of the Newfoundland W. C. T. U. "There is not an open saloon in the country. So far as is possible under existing conditions, the law is being enforced. Patience and perseverance, together with the co-operation of our people in observing the law, must yield results. Much good will be done among the boys of Newfoundland by the Rotary Club, which now has Jensen Camp as a home for them. The women are doing all they can to help save both boys and girls to noble, useful lives."

Dr. Cutler, president of the Korea W. C. T. U., said that the Hermit Kingdom first opened its doors to the world about forty years ago. "At the present time about two per cent of the population are earnest Christians, and for the other ninety-eight per cent we desire your prayers. The Christians of that country give more for the cause of Christ than in this country. We are now working for peace, prohibition and purity."

The Canada W. C. T. U. has become responsible for the support of one native worker in India for three years, and Mrs. Asa Gordon, of Canada, has offered to maintain one native worker in Argentina.

"The men and women of Sweden, and especially the white ribboners of that land, have sent word to this convention that prohibition for Sweden has not been lost—it has merely been postponed," declared Mrs. Lydia B. Johnson. "They believe that a country where the entire population voted in favor of prohibition except in its three big cities, has a right to demand prohibition by a special act of parliament."

"There are three Spanish and one English-speaking union at the present time in Cuba," said Mrs. E. J. Simonds, the president of the W. C. T. U. "Scientific temperance instruction is in all the schools and the star of hope for prohibition has risen in the island of Cuba."

"The children in the schools of Germany are being taught about the drink evil. I have myself lectured in thousands of schools," said Miss Wilhelmina Lohmann. "I am using this occasion to present to you the thanks of the German children who have had so much help from America, particularly from the Quakers. The difficulty in securing prohibition lies in the fact that the government depends upon the liquor traffic. Thousands of leaflets are being sent to the newspapers to influence them to spread facts about prohibition. Thousands of young people are declaring for world peace and looking for a new era. Prohibition, peace and liberty are the ideals toward which the German young people are reaching."

SEND FOR CANDY

To sell for us. Churches, Societies, Sunday Schools, Lodges, Schools, etc., make liberal profits handling our very popular assortments of 5c Chocolate Bars, etc. Send for Illustrated Circular, Price-list, Order Blank and full particulars. Our goods sell quickly. Prompt Express shipments.

FRED D. LESURE COMPANY

6 Broad St., Fitchburg, Mass.

Mrs. Maude B. Perkins, National General Secretary Young People's Branch

Where Shall We Look For Recruits

(Report in Part)

Maude B. Perkins

It has been said, "If there were but one Christian in the world and he should be used of God to win one soul to Christ this year and they should each win only one next year and so on and on, it would take only thirty-five years to evangelize the world." If this be true one is appalled at the measure of one's responsibility and opportunity.

As an organization we are in a campaign for "a million members" to hold our prohibitory law and extend the principles of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union to "all peoples." Why? That lives may be richer and better and that "His Kingdom may come."

Where shall we look for our recruits if not among the millions of young men and women who are in the communities from which you come? And the reason? That the homes builded tomorrow may be the kind that America needs. If it is the purpose of the W. C. T. U. "to make the whole world home-like" why not win to our cause those who are to be the makers of these homes? A nation's greatness depends upon the character of its men and women. The home largely determines the character of our citizens.

I believe in the program of the Young People's Branch because it offers an opportunity for instilling into the lives of young people the ideals we profess, and the field is rich for the harvest. What are some of the objections we hear to our proposal to extend Y. P. B. work? One says young people are so busy in school and church work. That may be true but do you know that every phase of our program augments the teachings of our public school system and adds to it what is not provided in the school, and that is Bible reading applied to a Social Service program. It is not a duplication of effort on the part of the young people who are in the church. Our purpose, pledge and program of activity are entirely different, but one does strengthen the other and each is made broader. But let us find those who are not already affiliated with church organizations. The New York Christian Advocate of November 7 says that 27,000,000 American youth under twenty-five years of age are not affiliated with any church, school or other institution for religious training. This is a number greater than the total population of many foreign mission countries. These millions are to be found in your villages. They are our legitimate harvest, and we can win them for Christ and the service of humanity, if we will.

Perhaps the one thing I have heard most frequently during the past year is, "I want you to talk to our young people. Conditions in school and the community are far from what they should be." Have you ever thought just how far the influence of these "others" may be affecting yours? Can you render to your age a bigger service than to reach your share of these millions? I maintain that the youth of today do not need so much criticism as they do constructive advice. A long felt need is leaders, women of vision who are willing to make an investment in humanity. Nothing offers such rich dividends. Your boys and girls are your town's greatest asset, and as you enlist them for service in the Y. P. B., every department of W. C. T. U. activity is advanced.

Our work is growing in interest and wherever our program supplements that of Y. W. or Y. M. C. A. the results are most gratifying. Georgia, Ohio, Maine and North Dakota lead. Thousands of students in colleges in Georgia have signed the "Good American" pledge card, and in a Georgia W. C. T. U. convention one finds that many of the leaders are those who were members of temperance committees in college. Temperance committees are welcomed always but there must be a loyal W. C. T. U. woman to look after this work. I find many Y. P. B. members all over the country who are pushing our work in the schoolroom, in business and in their professions.

Study Course

Our study book, "Nicotine," is being revised. Our "Studies in Government" has met with wonderful success. Our new book by Miss Cora F. Stoddard, "Alcohol in Experience and Experiment," has a great future. It presents the latest scientific facts on the alcohol problem and gives arguments to meet the wine and beer propaganda. Our large graduating class of Y. P. B. secretaries in this convention shows the interest our state workers are taking. A diploma from the National W. C. T. U. is something to be proud of.

Fifteen more states than ever before have reported activity this year. In July I offered an award for the best essay on "Why I Am Proud to Be an American." Workers in eight states entered the contest. The award went to Sidney Ayres, president of the New York State Federation.

This year an award will be offered for the best article of 500 words on "What Prohibition has Accomplished in my Community."

State Organization

The idea of a young people's state organization is growing. New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Massachusetts, Iowa, Missouri, California, and Florida have all tried this plan. This year Delaware, Maryland, Rhode Island, and Indiana have each federated, making twelve states having their own state officers.

Mary B. Ervin, National General Secretary Loyal Temperance Legion

Round the World Our L. T. L. Shall Go

(Report in Part)

Mary B. Ervin

During the past year our splendid Loyal Temperance Legion army has played well its part as National Prohibition Guards and as Young Campaigners for Law Enforcement. Our legioners have helped to create sentiment for law enforcement through the rendition of patriotic programs, songs, recitations and responsive exercises, and they have sent a wave of enthusiasm from ocean to ocean with their cheering cry:

"The Eighteenth Amendment in the U. S. A.
The Eighteenth Amendment is here to STAY.
We'll treat it right, and hold it tight, with all our might.
Hurrah! The Eighteenth Amendment in the U. S. A."

Over 350,000 pages of temperance literature have been distributed by our L. T. L. boys and girls and they have given out through the Social Welfare department over 18,000 bouquets, contributed over $600 for Relief work and made over 500 scrap-books and sunshine bags. Our legions generously contributed this year to the Anna A. Gordon Missionary Fund $310.29. Reports show that about 500 legions have been organized this year. Fourteen states merit honorable mention for having reached the national goal in number of new legions organized. Dues amounting to $894.38 paid into the national treasury show the L. T. L. paid membership to be 17,887, a net gain of 3,115 members. Twenty-three states made an appreciable gain along this line.

A Forward Glimpse

May our Loyal Temperance Legion watchwords, "Love, Loyalty, Light" shine brighter and farther the coming year as

(Continued on Page Twelve)

No Royal Highway to Prohibition

Portion of Address of Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, General Secretary, World League Against Alcoholism

Mr. Cherrington said in part:

"For almost fifty years the women of the nation have been not only pioneers but have as well played the heavy role in every forward step that has been taken toward prohibition. I am reminded in this connection that when back in the state of Ohio in 1808 the first local option law was passed by a majority of one vote in the legislature, that one vote was secured by the influence of the newly elected governor of the state, who was a son of one of the women who knelt before the saloons of Hillsboro in the early days of the Crusade. I refer to the late Hon. Joseph B. Foraker. I am also reminded that when the United States government took its first part in prohibition by the enactment of a law prohibiting liquor in army posts in 1901, that it was under the administration of, and that law was signed by the hand of the President of the United States who was also the husband of one of the women who took part in the Crusade at Canton, Ohio—Ida McKinley. I am also reminded that when the enforcement of this great prohibition law passed throughout the length and breadth of the United States needed a man to direct it, the present administration at Washington naturally turned to a man who had been born and who had lived all his life in the atmosphere of that old Crusade town of Hillsboro, Ohio, and that the history of the prohibition movement in America is but another illustration of the great fact that reforms are not revolutions but that they are evolutions, slow measured, gradual developments.

Traces History of Temperance Movement

"There is no royal highway to prohibition, national or world. There is no short cut to the solution of the liquor problem. If that great problem is ever solved it will be solved in the same way that other problems are being solved, and that means, first, the creation of sentiment; second, the organization of created sentiment into public opinion; third, the crystallization of public opinion into law; fourth, the application of the irresistible power of constituted popular government for the maintenance and perpetuation of such law."

Referring to the long Canadian and Mexican lines, and the Atlantic and Pacific oceans which afford such opportunity for smuggling, Mr. Cherrington said:

"We must take one of two alternatives. We may use the enforcement mop along these great border lines for the next one-hundred years or by proper co-operation with the moral reform forces of these two countries we may help to turn off the spigot on the other side of those borders."

"We hear a great deal in this day, of Americanism and America first, and American rights," continued Mr. Cherrington, "but what is Americanism? If I study history correctly, Americanism means that any man or woman who would aspire to that virtue must be willing to advocate, to fight for, to live for and if necessary to die for those fundamental principles that have made American civilization and have made American constitutional law.

"Never before has there been presented to a nation the opportunity that is being presented to the United States. Today in a very peculiar sense America is upon the mountain top. One by one the great nations of history have been in the same position. One by one they have been taken to the mountain top of vision and have been shown the great things of the world, and in their day of power most of them have yielded to the great temptation to consider their own selfish interests. If America, as she stands upon her mountain top of vision, does not follow in the footsteps of Babylon and Rome and Germany it will be because she has learned to apply that great fundamental truth—that the touchstone of national greatness and national permanency is the spirit of service to humanity and to the world."

Round the World Our L. T. L. Shall Go

(Continued from Page Eleven)

we earnestly endeavor to win the boys and girls for our great citizenship-training school—the Loyal Temperance Legion.

Fears and Can'ts must surrender to Determinations and Wills if we give to the youth of today the moral training needed and counteract the influence of demoralizing agencies so prevalent in our country.

The Loyal Temperance Legion offers a moral safeguarding and training, second to none in the land, and the mother organization that is true to its high calling, will find it possible to enlist the boys and girls as members of the Loyal Temperance Legion and recruit them as National Prohibition Guards—thus promoting a movement of tremendous influence for good upon the child life today, which will react in the life of the nation tomorrow.

This is the high privilege that is offering itself to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in every community. Will she meet it aright? Dare she neglect this Holy Task—this blessed service in behalf of the children today who will be the torchbearers of tomorrow?

Resolutions Adopted by National W. C. T. U. Convention

We, the members of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in forty-ninth annual convention assembled, give thanks to God for His leadership in all victories attained during the last year and reconsecrate our efforts to the completion of our great task.

Citizenship

We urge as the sacred duty of every citizen, education in the use of the ballot, participation in all elections, and support of dry candidates, regardless of party affiliation.

Law Enforcement

We affirm that the life of the Nation depends upon the enforcement of laws enacted for the public good. The attack which is made by the foes of prohibition upon the National Prohibition Enforcement Act is a challenge to law-abiding citizens to stand firmly for the Constitution and the enforcement of all law.

We most heartily commend the Congress of the United States for sustaining the law to make the Eighteenth Amendment operative.

We pledge our support to those faithful public officials who are doing their duty in the enforcement of National Prohibition.

We declare that the National Prohibition Commissioner deserves the co-operation and support of all friends of law and order in the work which his department is accomplishing for orderly government. We commend the Department of Justice of the United States for fearless and honest efforts, through the Attorney General, in upholding and enforcing the law of the Nation; particularly in so construing the National Prohibition Act as to prevent the carriage of liquors on American ships and on foreign ships within our jurisdiction.

We declare our unalterable opposition to the efforts of the outlawed liquor interests to repeal the National Prohibition Act and to restore the manufacture and sale of light wines and beer, which would mean nullification of the Eighteenth Amendment and the return of the saloon system.

Near East Relief

We extend our deepest sympathy to the sufferers in the Near East. We pray for the alleviation and removal of the desperate conditions which now exist, and pledge our support to that end.

Opium Control

We believe that the opium problem needs international action; that production of opium should be limited to scientific and medicinal uses; that the time has come for the United States to resume the initiative to counteract the pressure being brought by nations with great financial interests to serve. We appeal to the President of the United States to call the Fourth International Conference to consider the entire question.

Peace

We urge the continued co-operation of the United States in world affairs, responsible membership in effective world organization for peace, outlawry of war by international law, and world reduction of armaments to police forces. We are opposed to military training in schools.

Social Morality

We reaffirm our belief in the necessity for and the possibility of a single standard of morals, and pledge our support to such measures as will eradicate the social evil with its attendant results, deteriorating to the physical and moral health of the race.

Abstinence Pledge

We recommend a new Crusade for the signing of the total abstinence pledge.

World Prohibition

We pledge anew co-operation with other nations, and unceasing effort toward the goal of World Prohibition. We rejoice that the recent World's Convention has brought us into closer touch with the progress of the fight against alcohol in the nations federated in our World's W. C. T. U.

Thanks

We extend our thanks to the churches of Philadelphia for their proffered hospitality; to our white ribbon comrades, who have labored so diligently in our behalf; to the press for its generous reports, and to all who have in any way contributed to the success of this convention.

The Next Battle For Home Protection

Substance of Address
by Dr. Valeria H. Parker

The history of the movement for social morality closely parallels that for prohibition as might have been expected since the evil of commercialized vice and the sale of alcoholic liquor are intimately allied. The first movement to abolish these twin evils was based on moral principles alone. When science made its contribution, showing the racial deterioration resulting from these enemies of progress, the fight was won.

Tribute must be paid to such leaders as Frances E. Willard, Josephine Butler, Dr. Prince Morrow, Dr. Elizabeth Blackstone, Rev. Anna Garlin Spencer, Col. William F. Snow, and others, those who blazed the way toward intelligent solution of the social morality problem. It was Frances Willard who interpreted the single standard of morals in the phrase, "a white life for two."

The so-called American Plan was adopted by the United States Government during the World War, our country being the first in the history of nations to adopt a program of moral protection for the men of the fighting forces, which made no compromise with vice. Through the efficiency of this program a high rate of continence and a low rate of racial disease were made possible. A similar program is necessary in time of peace. The great enemies of family life and parenthood are prostitution, racial disease, and illegitimacy. Through education, moral and physical; law enforcement; wholesome recreation, and medical measures they may be banished. This program in its entirety is supported by our Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

For Christmas

Why not a good book?
Some of these will suit you.

The Golden Lamp. Phoebe Gray. Holds the reader's attention from the first to the last word. Price $1.42.

Where It Touches the Ground. A love story. Price, $1.00.

How to Live. A popular book on individual and family health. By Irving Fisher and Lyman Fisk. Price, $1.50.

Books for Socials and Games. Price, 50 cents.

Ethics for Children. A Guide for Teachers and Parents. Ella Lyman Cabot. Price, $2.00.

A Great Mother. Frances E. Willard's life story of Madam Willard. Price, $1.50.

Woman in the Pulpit. Frances E. Willard. A book of intense interest, in Miss Willard's own trenchant style. Price 50 cents.

Glimpses of Fifty Years. Frances E. Willard's own thrilling story of her half-century of life. Price $2.25.

What Frances E. Willard Said. Price, 75 cents.

Jean Mitchell's School. Nature story. Angeline Ray. Price, $1.00.

The Woman Voter's Manual. Price, $1.00.

What Lillian M. N. Stevens Said. Price, 50 cents.

Gleason's Parliamentary Digest. Mrs. I. W. Gleason. Cloth, 178 pp. Price, $2.00.

Gift of Peace and Loving Greetings. White and gilt. Price, $1.00.

Send remittance with order.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE
Evanston, Illinois

Finance Committee Suggests New Ways of Promoting W. C. T. U. Work

The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment has appropriated the W. C. T. U. slogan, "One Million Pledged Members and One Million Dollars." This changes the slogan into a challenge and must be met with members and dollars. Members bring influence and money for the great campaign which must be waged to retain prohibition and make it effective. Dues, nine cents per member, are used to promote the general work. The Lillian Stevens Fund is for the support of the headquarters and legislative work at Washington, as well as the help which should be given in state legislative campaigns. The Frances E. Willard Fund is for home missionary efforts. Ways of raising and supplementing these regular funds are recommended as follows:

1. Dues and all national funds should be forwarded quarterly, through the regular channels.

2. The budget system is the most adequate and efficient method of financing the work of the states and of assuring the full payment of all national obligations, including the Willard and Stevens funds. This system is in operation in nineteen states and has proven most satisfactory.

3. Bequests to the National W. C. T. U. insure the continuance of the work in which the benefactor has been interested during life. Even small sums left by many persons would give an adequate, permanent fund, the interest from this to be used for the advancement of the work. A conditional gift, the interest on which is given the donor during life, insures the carrying out of the will of the giver.

4. The national funds should be further augmented by fees for life and memorial memberships and life patrons.

5. Increased financial support should be given THE UNION SIGNAL and it is urged that the Trio Team of every union subscribe for the official paper. When necessary these subscriptions may be paid from the local treasury.

6. The Jubilee Fund has given great impetus to the work of the W C. T. U. and every state should complete its quota before the great Golden Jubilee in 1924.

The Australian Boomerang

On behalf of the white ribboners of Victoria, and in loving remembrance of Frances E. Willard, Mrs. MacLeod, president of the Australasian W. C. T. U., presented to Miss Anna A. Gordon, as World's president, an Australasian boomerang, to hang in Rest Cottage, which "you keep so beautiful for all of us." The boomerang, formerly used as a missile weapon, is made of wood and is in the shape of a bow. A verse of poetry handed Miss Gordon later, shows its sublimated significance:

"If a bit of sunshine hits ye,
After passin' of a cloud—
If a fit of laughter gits ye,
And ye're feeling mighty proud—
Don't forget to up and fling it
At a friend who's feelin' blue,
For the minute that ye sling it
It's a boomerang to you."

Important

Do not fail to secure for your own use, and for distribution, the notable address delivered by the president of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Anna A. Gordon, at the great convention recently held in Philadelphia. This invaluable document should be a handbook for our own members and placed for ready reference upon the desk of pastors, teachers, clubleaders and others interested in the three-fold goal of World Prohibition, World Purity and World Peace. Price, per copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents; per 100, $4.00. (Please enclose remittance with order).

Study Up!

BE PREPARED TO ANSWER "WHY NOT BEER AND WINE?"

HERE ARE REASONS:

Beer as a Cause of Alcoholism.
Wine as a Cause of Alcholism.
Beer Is Drunk for Its Alcohol.
When Is a Man Intoxicated?
He Was Not Drunk, But—
Primary Lesson on Beer.
Beer and Home Brew.
The Soldiers' Opinion of Alcohol.
For Your Son—Which?
Disease and Degeneracy the Heritage of Drinkers' Offspring.
Words That Count.
Danger to Seamen.
How to Make a Winning Ball Team.
Self Information on the Truths of Science.
Why Sign the Pledge?
Babies or Brewers?

Price, per 50, 15 cents; per 100, 20 cents.

Is the Moderate Drinker a Safe Citizen?
Dangers in the Use of Fermented Drinks.
Beer Quantities of Alcohol Injurious.
The Persistent Beer Fallacy.
A Story of Root Beer.
Beer a Bluffer.
Teachings of the Divine Saviour Concerning Wine.
Wine—What Is It?
What Benjamin Franklin Said About Beer.
Is Beer Intoxicating?
Prenatal Effects of Alcohol.
Wine.
Alcohol and the School Child.
Blackboard Exercise—No Beer, No Wine.
A New Basis for Estimating Effect of Alcohol.
Man or Beer?
Children's Exercise No. 1.
Blackboard Exercise—The Total Abstainer on Safe Ground.
Temperance Talk—Beware of the Wine Cup.
Temperance Talk—Watch! The Thief Is Alcohol.
Facts About Beer.

Price, per 50, 25 cents; per 100, 45 cents.

Of the Poison Brand—Labeled by the Mighty Hand of Science. Cartoon Poster (10x12 inches). Per dozen, 15 cents; per 50, 25 cents.

Alcohol in Experiment and Experience. Y. P. B. Study Book. Valuable also for S. T. I. work. By Cora Frances Stoddard. Pamphlet. Per copy, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.50.

Outlines for Health and Temperance Teaching in the Public Schools. By Cora Frances Stoddard. Pamphlet. Per copy, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.25. See that all teachers are supplied with above helps.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

World Superintendents' Reports of Marked Interest

Among the most interesting features of the World's convention were the reports of the various World's superintendents of departments, which were interspersed throughout the program and showed how the work was progressing in all parts of the world. When one listened to these reports, giving the many-sided view, as they did, one felt surprise at the realization of what had been accomplished, and then the thought came that it was no wonder so much had come to pass, since Miss Willard's "do-everything policy" had been so carefully adhered to, and prohibition was being promoted in all these ways which will have much to do in hastening the final victory that is sure to come.

Brief addresses on the various phases of the work of their departments were given by Mrs. Elizabeth Owens Middleton, superintendent of Scientific Temperance Instruction in Schools and in Colleges; Mrs. Deborah Knox Livingston, superintendent of Franchise; and Mrs. Martha M. Allen, superintendent of Medical Temperance. Mrs. Ella Hoover Thacher, superintendent of Work among Soldiers and Sailors, and Miss Elizabeth P. Gordon, superintendent of Schools of Methods, gave most effective demonstrations of their respective departments. Reports of department work were given by Mrs. Lenna Lowe Yost, superintendent of Legislation; Mrs. Caroline McDowell, superintendent of Co-operation with Missionary Societies; Mrs. Harriet S. Pritchard, superintendent of Work for the Promotion of Purity in Literature and Art; Mrs. Adelia E. Carman, superintendent of Medal Contest work; Mrs. Asa Gordon, superintendent of School Savings and Thrift; Mrs. O. C. Whitman, superintendent of Systematic Giving, Gifts and Bequests; Mrs. Mary F. Lovell, superintendent of Mercy; Mrs. W. H. Carvosso, superintendent of W. C. T. U. Exhibits; Mrs. Mary D. Tomlinson, superintendent of Parlor Meetings.

Overheard at the Convention

"Two of our fellow passengers on the ship from Australia to America were North of Ireland young men (comparatively young) coming from Australia to America to make the latter country their home," said Mrs. McLeod. "They liked Australia but one of them was addicted to the use of liquor, had periodical drinking spells, and the brother was bringing him over that he might be protected from the open public houses, and have a chance to get away from the habit."

"I think the most conspicuous benefit from prohibition in America is seen in the ever-increasing better homes," said Mrs. S. M. Zwemer, representative of Egypt. "The large number of well equipped modern houses owned is a testimony to the value of the Eighteenth Amendment. The same class of people in Europe, where men and women have liberty to drink, have homes that are rented and poorly furnished, even though many are clean. The money which in this country is saved and put into better homes, clothes, food and education, is in Europe given to the brewer and public house keeper, with which to build mansions for themselves and families.

Convention Sidelights

The Frances E. Willard Star Spangled Banner was presented to the Iowa W. C. T. U. for the largest net gain in membership.

Mrs. Thomas Edison, daughter of Lewis Miller of Chautauqua fame, extended an invitation to the National W. C. T. U. to hold its Jubilee year convention at Chautauqua Lake, N. Y.

Greetings to the World's Convention were received from many prominent overseas comrades and friends. Among these were Lady Cecilia Roberts, Lady Aurea Howard, the Baroness de Laveleye, Dame Margaret Lloyd George, Miss Christina Roberts and Madam Camperio of Italy.

"I have in my hand a telegram from the White House," announced Miss Gordon at one of the meetings of the World's Convention. "The note that accompanied it is signed by Miss Georgia Hopley. It says, 'My name need not be mentioned,' but because of that note as well as because she richly deserves the honor, I am glad to state the telegram was sent to Miss Georgia Hopley, one of the members of the Federal Prohibition Commissioner's staff, and reads: 'Greetings and good wishes to the World's and National Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Warren G. Harding.'"

"My, they certainly do know a lot," was one of the many comments heard at the press table concerning the speakers on the program. Another was, "Say, every one of those W. C. T. U. folks knows how to talk. They are all as cool as can be, aren't they?" And "Did you ever see anyone preside as easily as Miss Gordon? It doesn't seem to disturb her a bit when the program is upset. And she surely knows how to smooth away difficulties."

It was an impressive moment on the last night of the World's Convention when Generalissimo Slack gave the order, "Will the British Empire please step to the front." Immediately, it seemed, all the people on the big platform moved forward. There were representatives from Australia, New Zealand, India, Egypt, South Africa, Burma, Ceylon and a great company from England, Scotland and Ireland and Canada. They sang lustily, "God Save the King."

Hereafter the World's W. C. T. U. Bulletin, prepared by Miss Agnes E. Slack, one of the World's W. C. T. U. honorary secretaries, is to be sent free to all who subscribe annually one dollar or more for the support of the World organization.

Cards were distributed to the delegates at the World's convention inscribed with this invitation:

"Come take with us a cup of tea,
Our welcome in it you will see."

Tea was served every afternoon at five o'clock in the foyer of the Academy.

In a complimentary editorial on the Woman's Christian Temperance Union Convention, the Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger said: "The influence of this organization upon the moral life of the country has been wholesome. It has consistently held up to public view a high standard, and in any history of social reforms of the last fifty years it will occupy a large place."

The appeal of the World's W. C. T. U. treasurer, Mrs. Ella A. Boole, for life and memorial memberships and for annual subscriptions to carry on and extend the work, received a generous response. One felt that the prayer of Mrs. Zwemer, of Egypt, offered at one of the sessions, that "the shadow of the cross might fall across our check books," was being answered.

The well stocked Literature table presided over by Mrs. Margaret B. Platt, editor of Publications, assisted by Miss Jeannette Nichols, in the interim between meetings, was always surrounded, and a record-breaking business was done. THE UNION SIGNAL and Young Crusader table, in close proximity, was equally popular, and Mrs. Della F. Withers and her assistants were kept busy taking subscriptions to the official papers.

A special message of appreciation was ordered sent to Mr. William Graham, who during his summer vacation, had painted the shields that decorated the Academy of Music—his work a service of love in memory of his white ribbon mother. Miss Gordon and Miss Slack both confessed to having broken the Ten Commandments when they looked at these unique and artistic decorations, for they coveted them for future World's conventions. On the last night, they were presented to the World's W. C. T. U., by the Pennsylvania W. C. T. U.

The music by the League Island Navy Yard band was one of the delightful numbers on the program. During the demonstration by Mrs. Ella Hoover Thacher, World's superintendent of Work among Soldiers and Sailors, the boys of the band were encircled by a broad band of white ribbon. As the band played, "Onward Christian Soldiers" three lads of the Navy marched down the aisle, carrying the Stars and Stripes, the flag of the Navy, and the church flag, the last of the three lifted high above the others. Mrs. Thacher presented this "flag of the Living God" to Miss Gordon, as custodian for the World's W. C. T. U. Chaplain MacNair paid a beautiful tribute to the work of the W. C. T. U. for the boys of the Navy.

New Helps Available Now

Loyal Temperance Soldiers. Song and Exercise for L. T. L.'s, Sunday schools, public schools, and children anywhere. Per copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.

Program for Temperance Day in Public Schools. New pageant. Will please all. Per copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 45 cents; per 100, $3.00.

Souvenir Card for Teachers' Receptions. Per 100, 50 cents.

(Please send remittance with all orders.)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

W. C. T. U. BADGES

Made of mother of pearl in Bethlehem. Price, 25 cents each. Orders must be accompanied by price sent by N. Y. or London draft, cashiers' cheque or foreign postal order. Coin or stamps not accepte Orders for less than two badges are refused. Address treasurer of W. C. T. U., Jerusalem, Palestine. P. O. Box 443.

JERSEY CROWN
FLAVORING POWDER
Non-Alcoholic

The Master Vanilla Compound, Prepared and used like any extract, Rich and Lasting Flavor. Costs less, goes further, gives better results than any other. Unions, Church organizations and Individual members are selling Jersey Crown with marked success. We want representatives everywhere and offer unequaled inducements. Send no money. We furnish you the Powder. You pay when you sell it. Write at once for our 30-Day Proposition. Jersey Crown Vanilla Co., Dept. S., Valparaiso, Ind.

Notes From Your Publishing House

Some of our patrons will be pleased to know that the No. 4 photograph of Frances E. Willard, listed in the 1921 catalogue but omitted from 1922, is now in stock in cabinet size only and can be had at 50 cents per copy.

To aid in the educational campaign for world peace we can furnish you a set of 20 Peace Cards for use in schools, colleges, libraries, churches and public halls and at fairs and in local exhibits. These cards are 9x12 inches in size, in colors, on sepia cardboard, each card illustrated, and bearing an amazing array of facts, statistics, etc., concerning war. This display should be widely used. The set might be effectively used in store windows, club rooms, etc. Price per set, $1.00. "The time to stop the next war is NOW."

When planning to give a luncheon, dinner or banquet remember we can furnish you a W. C. T. U. Place Card tastefully designed on bristol card in the form of a white ribbon bow with the letters "W. C. T. U." This is unique and attractive and will be sure to please all. Price per 100, $1.25; per dozen, 20 cents; fifty for 75 cents.

Remember, too, our W. C. T. U. napkins, heavy crepe paper in three designs: white and gold, white and violet, and white and pink; W. C. T. U. monogram in gold. Per 25, 20 cents; per 100, 75 cents.

For your letters the W. C. T. U. monogram seals decorated with wreath of arbutus in colors. Per package of 50, 15 cents.

For a gift to your president or to your local union the insignia of office—the gavel—made of wood from the tree planted by Frances E. Willard many years ago in the yard at Rest Cottage. A historic and useful memento. Price $1.50.

Get an Early Start

Supply Yourself Now With Christmas Post Cards

Let us help you. We have an excellent assortment of beautiful cards. Per dozen, 25 cents; per 100, $1.75.

Also a pleasing variety of birthday, congratulation, condolence and friendly message cards. Also a new card containing the famous "Ode to Water" by William Jennings Bryan.

Order early and avoid disappointment. Per dozen, 25 cents; per 100, $1.75.

Gift for "Shut-Ins" and Libraries

The charmingly told story of the Life of Jennie Casseday, the Founder of the Flower Mission Work. By Fannie Casseday Duncan. Beautifully bound in Art Board Covers. Illustrated. Price, $1.00.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois

Changes in National W. C. T. U. Roster

The following changes were made in the National W. C. T. U. roster: The department of Institutes was restored, Mrs. Anna Marden De Yo, superintendent. The name of the Social Welfare department was changed to Work Among Soldiers and Sailors, Miss Rebecca Rhoads, superintendent. The Scientific Temperance Instruction Department was combined with the Scientific Temperance Bureau of Investigation, Cora Frances Stoddard, director. Mrs. Elizabeth O. Middleton was appointed lecturer for the department. Mrs. Mary Harris Armor was elected superintendent of the Evangelistic Department. Mrs. Maude Carman Cathcart succeeds her mother as superintendent of the Medal Contest Department. Mrs. Lettie Hill May was elected superintendent of the Bible in Public Schools.

Two names were taken from the list of national organizers and lecturers: Mrs. Mary Anderson Crawford and Mrs. Margaret P. Neel. The news of the death of Mrs. Emma Graves Dietrick was received during the convention.

Medical Use of Alcoholic Beverages

"Three great difficulties in the way of prohibition enforcement are avarice, appetite, and the claims that alcoholic liquors are a necessary aid in the treatment of disease," said Mrs. Martha M. Allen in her address before the World's Convention.

"Newspapers report that a considerable part of the liquor seized by prohibition enforcement officers is sent to hospitals. An inquiry has been sent out by this department to superintendents of a good many hospitals asking about how much whisky, brandy and wine has been used in their institutions during the past two years. Forty-four hospitals of Minnesota report using no liquor, also the city hospitals of Cincinnati, St. Louis, St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Indianapolis. Very little is used in the large hospitals of New York City and Philadelphia, also in Columbus, Ohio, and in Virginia. Cook County Hospital, Chicago, the large public hospital of that city, has used no alcoholic liquor since the advent of national prohibition. 1447 cases of pneumonia have been treated during this time and no complaint came from any attending physician because whisky was not furnished for these patients.

"There are twenty-two states in the United States that do not permit the sale of alcoholic liquors even for medicine and no word has ever come from health officials of these states that any injury has resulted to the sick. Our aim is to get similar laws for all the states."

At a conference later Mrs. Allen went into the report on the non-use of alcohol in hospitals more fully. She said that hospitals reporting the use of whisky declared it was prescribed mostly for cases of pneumonia. She gave death-rates from Bellevue Hospital, New York City, which showed that where tests had been made on pneumonia patients ten per cent more died where whisky was given than where it was not given. The same was true where tests had been made in English hospitals. The best authority on diabetes in the United States disapproves of the use of alcohol in that disease.

Much interest was manifested, and questions and experiences came eagerly from the floor. A large quantity of department literature was distributed.

Perfection
NON-ALCOHOLIC FLAVORS
Taste Better
Flavor Does Not Bake Out

A combination of pure fruit and flavoring oils with vegetable oils, which carries and distributes the flavorings as well or better than alcohol, and instead of being harmful, has more food value than an equal amount of butter. Wonderful Vanilla and eleven other flavors. Representatives wanted. A permanent source of income for Unions, Church Societies, and individuals. 100% profit. No money required under our consignment plan.

Fletcher Production Co. Ext. Dept. 429 E. 69th St., Chicago.

ROCHE'S HERBAL EMBROCATION
RELIEVES SAFELY AND PROMPTLY
CROUP OR WHOOPING COUGH
Also wonderfully effective in Bronchitis, Lumbago and Rheumatism
All druggists or
W. EDWARDS & SON, London, England
E. FOUGERA & CO., 90-92 Beekman St. N. Y.

U. S. GOVERNMENT UNDERWEAR

2,500,000 pieces. New Government Wool Underwear purchased by us to sell to the public direct at 75c each. Actual retail value $2.50 each. All sizes, Shirts 34 to 46—Drawers 30 to 44. Send correct sizes. Pay Postman on delivery or send us money order. If underwear is not satisfactory, we will refund money promptly upon request. Dept. 24. The Pilgrim Woolen Co., 1476 Broadway, New York, N.Y.

The "Money Earning Plan"

EARN MONEY FOR YOUR UNION, CHURCH, SOCIETY OR SCHOOL

For details write to
CHAS. R. DAVIS
184 Ward St.,
NEWTON CENTER, 59, MASS.

Unexcelled for repairing china, glassware, earthenware, furniture, vases, books, etc. Famous since 1876. Major's rubber and Leather Cements are good.

Three kinds, 20c per bottle at dealers, or write us.

MAJOR MFG. CO., NEW YORK

Would You Like This for Your Christmas Dinner

?

It is gladly received by tens of thousands of orphans in the Near East. A substantial increase in our offerings would enable the Near East Relief to take them into the orphanages and give them adequate care and training in a Christian atmosphere.

110,000 are now in the care of the Near East Relief, under charge of skilled, experienced, devoted relief workers and SAFE from the encroachments of soldiers or bandits.

Fred B. Smith says the work is "100 per cent efficient."

Invite an unseen guest to your Christmas table. $5 a month will save a child—$60 a year.

Mail your check to

Margaret C. Munns,

Treasurer of National W. C. T. U.

Evanston, Illinois

Looking After Their Children

(Address in Part)

Elizabeth O. Middleton, World's Superintendent Scientific Temperance Instruction

"I want to give you in a nutshell the history of national constitutional prohibition from an educational standpoint," said Mrs. Middleton. "In the Woman's Crusade for temperance, which occurred in 1873, we are told that when two women entered a saloon to plead with the proprietor to close his shop and stop selling liquor to their husbands, sons and brothers, he turned and pointed to his license hanging on the wall and said, 'There is my license to sell liquor. I am doing a legal business and you women have no right to come down here and interfere.' He added, 'This ain't no place for you women nohow. I'll tell you what you do. You go home and look after your children.' The women thought a moment, and then replied, 'You are right. The government has licensed your business. We have begun wrong. We will go home and we will look after our children.'

"And right there, I claim, the keynote for National Constitutional Prohibition was struck. Those women went home and began to look after their children in a different way. 'If we cannot close the saloons,' they said, 'we will educate and train our boys to stay out of the saloons.'"

Mrs. Middleton told of the work of the women of the United States in securing laws providing for scientific temperance teaching in all public schools; of our Bureau of Scientific Temperance Investigation, which has been instrumental in placing up-to-date temperance facts in the text books used in schools; and of the generation of voters thus educated who gave us National Constitutional Prohibition. "The old saying, 'What you would weave into the life of the nation, put into the public schools,' has been magnificently demonstrated. What this teaching has done for the United States of America it can and will do for all nations. For its successful working there must be:

"First, legislation requiring temperance teaching, to make it uniform and systematic.

"Second, text books, up-to-date and scientific.

"Third, teachers trained through courses in normal and teacher-training colleges.

"Fourth, active co-operation of the W. C. T. U. with the school."

A Present to Our Readers

Della F. Withers, Circulation Manager

THE UNION SIGNAL gives all a CHRISTMAS PRESENT in two special offers. Good until January 1, 1923.

Offer No. 1.

3 subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL (regular weekly edition).....$4.00

(Saving 50c)

Offer No. 2.

1 subscription to THE UNION SIGNAL (regular weekly edition),

1 subscription to The Young Crusader for $1.75

with

White enameled bow stick pin—Free

Now is the time to get your trio team, new members, ministers, schools, libraries, department superintendents, Y. P. B. and friends on THE UNION SIGNAL list.

Send in now. Give us a Christmas present!

Ready for 1923

Put the Word of God in Every Home

DO NOT FORGET THAT YOUR OWN PUBLISHING HOUSE WILL AGAIN FURNISH YOU THE BEAUTIFUL SCRIPTURE TEXT SACRED ART CALENDARS.

This Calendar will be more beautiful and attractive than ever. You can easily dispose of hundreds and thus place the daily Bible Text in multitudes of homes and at the same time earn Christmas money for yourself, your W. C. T. U., the L. T. L., the Woman's Club, or for your Literature Fund.

Send us your order early and so avoid delay or disappointment. Prices: Single copy, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.84; twenty-five, $7.50; fifty, $12.50; one hundred, $20.00; two hundred, $37.00; five hundred, $82.50.

Send us your order now and let's go to work. It is not too early to start.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE,

Evanston, Illinois.

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN

NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly | Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year in Advance

Entered as second class matter at the Postoffice at Evanston, Illinois

Vol. XLVIII | EVANSTON, ILLINOIS, DECEMBER 14, 1922 | No. 50

Prohibition Law Supreme

Warren G. Harding, President of the United States

There is a demand for every living being in the United States to respect and abide by the laws of the republic. Let men who are rending the moral fiber of the republic through easy contempt for the prohibition law, because they think it restricts their personal liberty, remember that they set the example and breed contempt for law which would ultimately destroy the republic.

The day is unlikely to come when the Eighteenth Amendment will be repealed. If the statutory provisions for its enforcement are contrary to deliberate public opinion, WHICH I DO NOT BELIEVE, rigorous and literal enforcement will concentrate public attention on any requisite modification. Such a course conforms with the law, saves the humiliation of our people before the world, and challenges the destructive forces engaged in widespread violation, official corruption and individual demoralization.

From the President's Message, read December 8, 1922, before a joint session of the United States Senate and House of Representatives.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

SERVICES FOR FORMER REPRESENTATIVE MANN—THIRD AND FOURTH SESSIONS EXPIRE AND BEGIN ON SAME DAY—ANOTHER BEER BILL INTRODUCED—STORMY BUT UNSUCCESSFUL FIGHT AGAINST ADEQUATE APPROPRIATIONS—PRESIDENT URGES VIGOROUS ENFORCEMENT OF PROHIBITION

LENNA LOWE YOST, National W. C. T. U. Legislative Representative, Washington, D. C.

It has been an eventful week in Washington Congressional and other circles. Georges Clemenceau, the "Tiger" of France, has been the outstanding picturesque and interesting figure. Soon after his arrival he paid his respects to the President of the United States. The ex-premier, looking "hale and jaunty" wearing his "tub" hat (for the second time since his arrival in America), was accompanied to the executive office by the French Ambassador, Jules J. Jusserand, who presented him to the President. The following day he called on former President Wilson, with whom he sat in the Council of the big five at Versailles. Later the War Premier paid a second visit to the White House, this time as the honor guest at a state luncheon, tendered by President Harding. After the luncheon, the distinguished visitor left the party and went with Mr. Harding to the family sitting room where Mrs. Harding received him. They chatted for a few minutes, Clemenceau expressing the hope that Mrs. Harding would soon be restored to health, and she voicing her admiration of his long record of achievement in public affairs.

Services for Former Representative Mann

Simple funeral services were held late last week in the hall of the House for James R. Mann, who served in the House, a legislative warrior, for more than twenty-five years.

The President, the Vice-President, the Cabinet, the Supreme Court, the diplomatic corps, men representing the heads of the Army and Navy, the Senate and House, and a host of friends, high and humble, joined in paying a tribute such as is paid to few men nowadays in public life.

There was no eulogy by his colleagues, merely a sermon in which his service was briefly recalled by the rector of his church. President Harding sat directly across the aisle from former President Taft, now Chief Justice of the United States. Sitting far back in the chamber, Uncle Joe Cannon, long an intimate of Mr. Mann, let the tears run down his cheeks unchecked. After the benediction, colleagues marched by the open coffin in silent farewell.

Third and Fourth Sessions Expire and Begin on Same Day

The fourth session of the Sixty-seventh Congress convened at noon Monday and will expire March 4. It is the first Congress in history to hold four sessions. In the House on the day of the expiration of the third session and at the same time the convening day of the fourth session, prayer was offered twice within ten minutes by Chaplain Montgomery. At eleven-fifty was the opening prayer for the last meeting of the extra session and at twelve, noon, the prayer for the fourth and last session.

Some Bills Set Aside and Some Progressing

Success crowned the filibuster to kill the anti-lynching bill; the sub-committee in charge of the Lehlbach-Sterling Reclassification Bill is moving to report this important measure. The Civil Service Committee has made plans for early consideration to report the bill to place prohibition enforcement agents under the civil service. The House passed a bill 79 to 1 which was previously passed by the Senate to provide for retirement with pay of Justice Pitney of the United States Supreme Court. Under the legislation, Justice Pitney must resign within two months. He then automatically goes on the retired list at his present salary. Without this legislation, the Associate Justice, who is sixty-six years old and who has been ill for several months, would have to wait four years before being eligible to retirement.

Certain members of the Agriculture Committee have favorably reported to the Senate a constitutional amendment that would abolish the electoral college, provide for direct election of President and Vice-President, and change the date of inauguration from March 4 to the third Monday in January, terms of Senators and Representatives to date from the first Monday in January following the biennial congressional election and Congress to meet each year on that date.

Another Beer Bill Introduced

On the opening day of the regular session last Monday, another beer bill went into the legislative hopper. It was presented by Charles F. X. O'Brien of New Jersey, and it would go farther than its predecessors by liberalizing the law to permit seven per cent beer and fifteen per cent spirituous liquors. It would amend the Federal Act, defining "intoxicating liquors" so that it would mean a real beer or porter containing seven per cent or more of alcohol. According to the same definition wine, whisky, brandy, rum and gin shall not be considered intoxicating until it shall possess fifteen per cent or more of alcohol.

To make the legislation more "attractive" to the Treasury, a tax of twenty-five cents per gallon on domestic beer is provided for, fifty cents per gallon on imported beer and thirty cents a gallon on vinous and distilled liquors. It will have no serious consideration in this Congress.

Stormy But Unsuccessful Fight Against Adequate Appropriations

There was a "flare up" in the House during debate on the $115,000,000 Treasury Supply Bill with its item of $9,000,000 for prohibition enforcement. Representatives Magee of New York and Hill of Maryland attacked the law and the men who enforce it, advocated modification and made a fruitless effort to connect the prohibition unit with the Ku Klux Klan.

Declaring the liquor traffic had thrived on misery until the people, handling it as if it were a serpent, had choked it, Representative Gilbert, of Kentucky, shouted to the House that he was getting tired of the constant attacks on men who are trying to see that the law is obeyed.

"So determined and vindictive is the small minority that it stands out in open defiance of the Constitution," said Mr. Gilbert, adding that it was backed by influential resources and that members of the House gave aid and comfort. Taking up the charge that crime against the United States had increased since enactment of the Volstead law, Mr. Gilbert asserted that crimes which flourished in the barroom days and which were handled in the state courts had decreased to the point where many jails in rural communities were empty.

President Harding Urges Vigorous Enforcement of Prohibition

The President of the United States in his annual message to the fourth session of the Congress declared his intention as Chief Executive to secure a more effective enforcement of the prohibition laws.

The executive announced his purpose to invite the governors of the states and territories to an early conference with the federal executive authority with a view to adopting definite policies of national and state co-operation in administering the prohibition laws. He said the day is unlikely to come when the prohibition amendment will be repealed and that the nation should adopt its course accordingly.

President Harding told Congress that if the statutory provisions for prohibition enforcement are contrary to deliberate public opinion, which he does not believe, the rigorous and liberal enforcement will concentrate public attention on any requisite modification.

"Such a course," he added, "conforms with the law and saves the humiliation of the government and the humiliation of our people before the world and challenges the destructive forces engaged in wide-spread violation, official corruption and individual demoralization."

Legislative Headquarters, Bliss Building, Washington, D. C., Dec. 9, 1922.

Italian Premier May Order Saloons Closed on Sundays

A cable dispatch from Italy has been received by the Progresso Italo-Americano, stating that Italy's premier, Benito Mussolini, declared at the Cabinet meeting held recently that if it was necessary, to restore orderly conduct in Italy, he would require the Sunday closing of 200,000 saloons and cafes, since it was there that the disputes begin which so often result in brawls or fights. He added that he had ordered the local prefects to prevent these brawls by peaceful means, but that if they were not successful the government would resort to the more strenuous measures of closing the wine and liquor shops.

Friends Uphold Dry Law

The Baltimore Yearly Meeting of Friends, comprising Quakers from Virginia and Pennsylvania as well as Maryland, in its recent annual gathering took up the matter of law enforcement and proved themselves to be a unit in regard to the banning of alcoholic liquors and upholding the Volstead Act. They were urged by speakers to be true to their duty, inconspicuous but real, in helping officials wherever possible to secure convictions and thus enforce the laws.

News from New Zealand

New Zealand voted on national prohibition December 7. While the report of the election returns received through the press indicates that prohibition did not receive a majority, no official word has been received, and until it is, we do not concede that the election has gone against the drys.

Citizens' Committees Help in Law Enforcement

Citizens of the city of Hazlehurst, Mississippi, have formed committees for the purpose of assisting in the curbing of illicit stilling, and have pledged themselves to "report all violations." It was also resolved, that in view of the fact "that courts are powerless without the proof of such violations, we further pledge ourselves to give our time and attention to the collection and furnishing of such proof to secure convictions; that committees shall have authority to secure subscriptions and raise such funds as are necessary to carry out this program; that we hereby request the sheriff to deputize reliable men in each neighborhood and furnish them with necessary forms for such warrants as to enable them to hunt for and secure evidence; and that violators are hereby given notice that the people are resolved that bootleggers and moonshiners must quit business or leave the country."

Jail Sentences For Dry Law Violators, Policy of Some New York Judges

"The attitude of the Federal courts in the state of New York in respect to prohibition cases is very commendable, says Federal Prohibition Director R. A. Day of New York. "The judges, irrespective of personal opinions, are 'for the law' at all times, letting no opportunity pass to show their favorable attitude toward enforcement. Both within and without the court room they have expressed the opinion that since this law is now a part of the constitution it stands upon the same plane as any other Federal law, and must be given the same respect and be likewise obeyed. They are imposing heavier jail sentences and fines. In fact, some judges in the Eastern District have announced a policy 'no more fines' but hereafter every conviction will carry a jail sentence, or both."

With Bottle Gone, No Trouble in Mississippi Election Day

The Clarion-Ledger of Jackson, Mississippi, quotes an exchange: "A busy crowd was here Tuesday to participate in the election, and while the crowd was large, everyone appeared to be in good humor, all voting their convictions, and allowing others to do the same," and adds: "So far as the Clarion-Ledger knows, not a serious difficulty occurred in the state of Mississippi on election day, in pleasing contrast to the broils and ofttime murders of previous years, when the ballot and the bottle went hand in hand."

Philadelphia Business Houses Replace Philadelphia Saloons

Business institutions are springing up on sites formerly occupied by saloons, the Presbyterian Church Messenger points out.

"A practical illustration of this is in the northeast, at its busiest corner, Kensington and Allegheny avenues," the article says. "At this corner two formerly prosperous saloons have yielded their places for the most part to two new additional banking institutions, making a total of three such community benefactors in this, the very heart of the residential district of the progressive industrial worker of this section of Philadelphia.

"This is a practical change both economically and morally. The bright, elusive light of the cesspool of vice at last is dimmed and darkened, and the nefarious business of trafficking in souls should yield to the exalted substitute of useful healthy business and useful life."

No Thrills For Police

City Jail Most Lonesome Place in Town —Empty for Three Months

This is the heading of an article that appeared in the Kennewick (Washington) Courier-Reporter the other week. The article says:

"Wanted—Somebody to arrest. Don't be surprised if a 'to let' sign is displayed at police headquarters and on the city jail. Chief Jack Dale says the whole police force, including Judge Staser, are just about ready to shut up shop and go fishing. There is absolutely nothing doing and the mills of justice are at a dead stand-still for lack of raw material. There's nothing to work on. There hasn't been an arrest for three months and there is not even a symptom of lawlessness anywhere in the city. As a rule, Chief Jack says the force has enough suspicions and rumors of deviltry to keep them from going stale on the job. But now there isn't even a suspicion. All the bootleggers and moonshiners have apparently gone on their vacations or are waiting for the new crop to mature, for the town is in total darkness so far as moonshine is concerned."

Judge Allen is First Woman to Sit in Supreme Court

To Ohio belongs the honor of being the first state to place a woman on the judicial bench of its supreme court. Judge Florence E. Allen, who in 1920 was elected to the Common Pleas Court of Cuyahoga County, Ohio, introduced into her work some innovations in the interest of efficiency, believing that business methods should be applied to the courts. Instead of being nominated at the primaries, which would have involved an expensive campaign and a struggle against political organizations, Judge Allen obtained her nomination by petition, and at the November election easily won out over all competitors. Her creed is summed up as follows: Law enforcement; justice for all; business methods applied to the courts; efficient work by public servants; respect for law, order and the courts; moral standards to actively function in government.

Prohibition in Germany But a Question of Time

A special cable dispatch to the Public Ledger states that the liquor elements of Germany are alarmed at the possibility of prohibition in that country, owing to the government's promises to the Reparations Commission for a reduction in unnecessary consumption and the application of all food resources to feeding the population, and to the growing strength of the prohibition movement. A meeting of the brewing and distilling interests at the federal economic council was informed that prohibition was on the march, and that it was only a question of time before a general prohibition edict would be issued.

Vacant Jails in Minnesota

"Minnesota sheriffs, with empty jails on their hands and practically no local talent to fill them, are wearing smiles on their faces," says the Minneapolis News. "Through Judge Page Morris, they are extending invitations to Minneapolis bootleggers to fill their vacant cells. The government pays for the upkeep of prisoners." The "invitation" from the judge consists in the sixty-day jail terms which he is imposing upon all bootleggers for the first offense, which "have terrorized bootleggers, closed scores of law-violating soft drink bars, raised the bartenders' wages and written 'finis' to the chapter in which the underworld featured Minneapolis as a gold mine."

Finds Tales of Debauchery False

A Chicago daily tells the story of an old man who, disguised in rough clothes, has been wandering about the streets of Chicago and New York. On the eve of sailing for Europe, he made himself known as Bishop Anton Bast of Copenhagen, Denmark, and stated that he had been gathering first-hand information regarding prohibition. "The only drunks I saw during my wanderings," said the bishop, "were four in a New York subway. On the Bowery, where I wandered on several occasions day and night, I saw no intoxicated men, but everywhere I saw men sober. There is surely some drinking, but it is quiet, and the tales of wild debauchery told us in Denmark are without foundation, so far as the great general public is concerned."

THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES

MUCH HAS BEEN ACCOMPLISHED FOR PROHIBITION—MUCH REMAINS TO BE DONE

Roy A. Haynes, Federal Prohibition Commissioner

(Second Part of Address Delivered Before World's W. C. T. U. Convention)

Realizing the responsibility coming to this administration as we do, I know it will be of interest to you to know something of our accomplishment in the last fifteen months, for the chief cry of the Anti-Prohibition Law propagandist is that prohibition is a failure.

A complete reorganization of the activities of the prohibition unit in the last fifteen months, has been effected. Fifty-one directors' offices were established—one in each state, and one in Hawaii, Porto Rico, and Alaska. These complete changes in the reorganization of the work have resulted in the elimination of duplication of work and greater efficiency. Experienced men of undoubted integrity have been called into service. The Washington office of over 600 employees, and all the field forces have become enthused with the greatness of the task. Thirty-two hundred and one temporary and permanent appointments have been made during this fifteen-month period.

A new feature of the organization is the general agents' force operating independent of the directors' forces.

Permits granted have been reduced about 25 per cent.

Liquor Withdrawals Less Than a Sixth of Last Year's Amount

Added safeguards and new regulations making more difficult the diversion of liquor into illicit channels have been established, and red liquor withdrawals have been reduced from 12,500,000 gallons in 1920, to an estimate of 2,000,000 gallons for this calendar year, whereas, annually prior to prohibition in the United States, there was a consumption of about 130,000,000 gallons of red liquor.

Every effort has been made to properly safeguard the legitimate users of non-beverage liquor. In other words, it has been one of the greatest concerns of the administration to see that all bona fides receive all of their privileges under the law, as well as it has been its aim to apprehend violators of the law.

Great economies have been effected in reducing rents and readjustments of salaries. Further economies will be effected in the near future when the 800,000 barrels of whisky scattered over the country in 300 warehouses will be concentrated in perhaps 30 to 35 warehouses.

Alcohol withdrawals have been reduced from something over 26,000,000 gallons in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, to only slightly in excess of 16,000,000 gallons in 1922.

The smuggling problem has been vigorously attacked, not only on our borders, but a fleet of sub-chasers has operated so successfully against rum running pirate ships off our coasts, that the illegal smuggled source of supply has been reduced at least 66 2-3 per cent.

The opinion rendered by our courageous Attorney General to the effect that, under the Constitution, no American vessel any place on the face of the earth can legally have on board beverage liquor, and that no foreign vessel within the jurisdictional waters of the United States, can have on board beverage liquor, met a mighty response of approval. The Government forces are quietly resting upon this decision until finally disposed of by the Supreme Court at an early date, and there seems to be little doubt as to the final approval of this great American pronouncement.

The narcotic forces, which also operate under the prohibition unit, have also been reorganized. There has resulted such an increase of efficiency that with no larger appropriation or appreciable increase in field force, there has been an increase of some 65 per cent in the number of violations reported in the period of one year, and an increase of 100 per cent in the convictions secured.

Every good American citizen, native born or adopted, recognizes that he has entered into a contract with the Government of which he is a part, to observe the law of the land and to contribute to the best of his ability to the support of the fundamentals of the Government. Only so may the objects of the founders, the hope of the world, and the general good of the people obtain. In the final analysis regard for the sacredness of contract is the basis of all stability in all relationships. If the sacredness of contract is not observed in business, in commercial, and in industrial relationships, at once business, commerce and industry become chaotic. If there should be a general disregard for the sacredness of contract by our citizenship with the Government, nothing but anarchy could result. In other words, stable civilization is built upon the foundation of covenants and the keeping of them.

—Roy A. Haynes,
Federal Prohibition Commissioner.

Such is the story in brief of the stupendous work so far accomplished by this administration in this one branch of its activities. The present prohibition law enforcement machinery, now thoroughly trained and schooled, stands before the country today fully able to assume full responsibility for this undertaking. Our impelling aspiration is to keep mistakes at a minimum, and when found, quickly and fearlessly correct; is to maintain the maximum of efficiency and render the fullest measure of service. The whole country in the main is accepting our activities, our endeavors, our progress in that splendid spirit of confidence. This is reflected by a more friendly press everywhere, and notably in the big metropolitan centers.

Nation's Leaders for Law Enforcement

There is no question as to where the leaders of this administration stand on law enforcement. Attorney General Daugherty recently said: "The Government will endure on the rock of law enforcement, or it will perish in the quicksands of lawlessness."

No less drastic is the conviction of Assistant Attorney General Goff: "The law must and shall be enforced as it is conceived and written, and always without fear or favor. So far as it lies within the power of the Department of Justice to execute and enforce the law of the land, there will be no backward step, no retreat, in preserving the Constitution and carrying out the mandate of the people."

Our great Secretary of State, who has rendered service to the whole world in his recent leadership at the Conference for the Limitation of Armaments, has also voiced with characteristic clearness and patriotism this thought when he said: "Everybody is ready to sustain the law he likes. That is not in the proper sense respect for law and order. The test of respect for law is where the law is upheld even though it hurts."

President Puts Great Emphasis on Law Enforcement

There is no question as to where we will locate the President of the United States on this great issue, for with the same constructive statesmanship with which he viewed the distracted conditions of Europe, he has keenly penetrated to the very heart of the great problems at home and has spoken the word that leaves no doubt as to the large place which he has given law enforcement. He recently said: 'Whatever breeds disrespect for the law of the land, in any particular department of our community relations, is a force tending to the general breakdown of the social organization. If the people who are known leaders, as directing influences, as thoroughly respected and respectable members of society, shall in their respective communities become known for their defiance of some part of the code of law, then they need not be astonished if presently they find that their example is followed by others, with the result that presently the law in general comes to be looked upon as a set of irksome and unreasonable restraints upon the liberty of the individual. Every law involves more or less of this element of restraint. Nearly every individual will find some part of the code that to him seems an unreasonable inhibition upon his personal freedom of action. Our only safety will be in inculcating an attitude of respect for the law as, on the whole, the best expression that has been given to the social aspiration and moral purpose of the community."

These words are eloquent; they are pregnant with thought, they have couched in them great and far-reaching truths; but to me, entrusted as I am with the enforcement of this law, the attitude of this great President toward my problems has been eloquent beyond even these most brilliant periods. In the very hours when he has been carrying a burden perhaps heavier than that of any other man in the world, he has found time to encourage me in the task that lay before me. While he was wrestling with questions of world-wide importance, he has found the waking hours to acquaint himself with the problems that confronted me and at no time has he been too busy to interest himself or to render every possible assistance within his power when there appeared to him an opportunity to render service to law enforcement.

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION JANUARY 16, 1923

Third Anniversary of National Constitutional Prohibition

"The Eighteenth Amendment denies to a minority a fancied sense of personal liberty, but the amendment is the will of America and must be sustained by the Government and public opinion, else contempt for the law will undermine our very foundations." Warren G. Harding, President of the United States.

"The keystone of law can only be firm and secure when it is held in place by the arch of that keystone, which is public sentiment." Frances E. Willard.

PROGRAM

Five minute speeches

Singing, "Sound the Jubilee"

Allegiance to the Constitution of the United States Demands Unqualified Obedience to All Laws

"I PLEDGE ALLEGIANCE TO MY FLAG"

The Home The School

Singing, "When We All Grow Up to Be Twenty-One," by the Children

"AND TO THE REPUBLIC FOR WHICH IT STANDS"

The Church The Professional or Business Man

"ONE NATION, INDIVISIBLE"

The Business or Professional Woman The Press

Singing, "Work for Enforcement"

"WITH LIBERTY AND JUSTICE FOR ALL"

Solo, "It Is There to Stay"

"AND HAVING DONE ALL TO STAND"

"Underwriting the 1923 Legislative Program"

Singing, "America"

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE CELEBRATION

A luncheon, dinner or other social gathering will be very fitting for a "birthday party." If none of these is advisable the program may be used for an evening meeting, either on January sixteenth or the preceding Sunday.

Arrange for such a celebration in every possible locality. Good advance newspaper publicity should inspire neighborhoods where there is no W. C. T. U. to gather for the birthday luncheon or dinner.

Invite other organizations to "come to the party." Place their chief officers at your guest table. Send personal invitations to every man and woman. The Eighteenth Amendment belongs to every citizen of the United States.

Select your speakers in time. It takes careful preparation to make a good five-minute speech. Ask each to tell how the group he or she represents can best co-operate in the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Much depends upon the presiding officer in keeping the program moving, and gently, but firmly, holding each speaker to time.

Information for the topic, "Underwriting the 1923 Legislative Program," will be found in the next issue of THE UNION SIGNAL.

The song, "When We All Grow Up to Be Twenty-One," should be given by a group of boys and girls. Make the group as large as possible and train these young people to sing with enthusiasm.

All music is on sale at the National W. C. T. U. Publishing House, Evanston, Ill. Prices: "It Is There to Stay," single copy 15 cents, two copies for 25 cents; "When We All Grow Up to Be Twenty-One," 5 cents each, 50 cents a dozen. The other music is found in Jubilee Songs, 10 cents per copy, 75 cents per dozen, $5.00 per 100.

PRESENT PROHIBITION PROBLEMS DISCUSSED AT CONVENTION OF WORLD LEAGUE AGAINST ALCOHOLISM MEETING AT TORONTO, CANADA, NOVEMBER 24-29

"The world liquor problem sounds a call to the men and women of the nations. The spirit of that call demands co-operative, aggressive and wise action in the interest of a sober world." This was the challenge flung out by Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, in his keynote address at the opening of the convention at Toronto.

The response came in the ringing messages of representatives from all parts of the world, aflame with zeal for securing for their own nations laws which will exterminate the liquor trade. The attendants from overseas lands were numerous, representing men and women's temperance organizations in many countries. In this respect the gathering differed from the convention of the World's W. C. T. U., each delegate to which represented a constituency of 1,000 dues-paying members. Nearly all the leaders in our work in other countries who attended the Philadelphia conventions went from there to Toronto and were among the speakers.

There were many distinguished men speakers: Rev. R. B. S. Hammond, president Australian Alliance Prohibition Council; Larson Ledet, of Denmark; Pastor Georges Gallienne, secretary of the La Croix Bleue of France; Mr. J. Niyogi, of India; Dr. C. W. Saleeby and Hon. Alfred H. Horsfall, of London, England; Prof. Robert Hercod, of Lausanne, Switzerland; Rev. Gifford Gordon, of Australia; Prof. Dr. August Ley, of Brussels, Belgium.

The meetings were held in Massey Hall and in the King Edward Hotel, and with every session the enthusiasm grew.

The discussions were along broad international lines, and much was said from platform and floor on the rights of small nations to determine their own liquor policy without compulsion from without; the elimination of commercial treaties with protective provisions for the liquor traffic, and the establishment of prohibition regulation on the high seas.

W. C. T. U. Prominent on Program and Committees

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union was prominent on the program and in committees. Addresses were delivered by Miss Anna Adams Gordon, Miss Cora Frances Stoddard, Mrs. Deborah Knox Livingston, Miss Agnes E. Slack, Mrs. Gordon Wright, Miss Mary Campbell, Mrs. George Milne, Miss H. K. Norville, Miss Maria Stenroth, Mrs. Moffatt Clow and others.

Miss Gordon was elected the fourth president of the World League Against Alcoholism. The other three presidents are Robert Hercod, Ph. D., Lausanne, Switzerland; Right Honorable Leif Jones, M. P., Castle Howard, York, England; Howard H. Russell, D.D., LL.D., Westerville, Ohio, U. S. A.

Rev. Gifford Gordon of Australia presented the results of his survey of prohibition in the United States, and declared: "My experience has proved that the biggest need in the prohibition campaign is to put into the hands of the people the results already achieved by the abolition of liquor."

The economic appeal of prohibition to the peoples of war-debt burdened nations was emphasized in the following statement by Dr. Cherrington: "The world's drink bill today approximates twenty billions of dollars annually. Most of that is expended by the people of the very countries of Europe which are now struggling under the burden of national indebtedness. It does not require the services of an economist or an accountant to provide a plan for a sinking fund through which the amount of the annual drink bill of the world would easily wipe out all the principal and all the interest of all the debts of all the governments of the world within twenty-five years."

That the world movement against alcoholism is a great foreign missionary movement was the statement of Prof. Henry Beach Carre of Nashville, Tennessee. "Alcoholism knows no race, no color, no fatherland. Its wreckage stretches from the ice fields of the Eskimo to the jungle of the Hottentot," said Prof. Carre. "This absence of provincialism gives to the movement a missionary appeal. The greatest piece of missionary work the dry forces of America can do is to make a success of prohibition in America. We must demonstrate to the other nations that America without saloons is infinitely better than with them."

Liquor Labor's Logical Enemy

The labor interests had as their spokesman the Hon. John G. Cooper, United States Congressman, who stated it as his conviction that liquor is the greatest enemy the labor class has had, and that the workingmen are awake to that fact. He said: "I want to challenge and deny the statement that the majority of organized labor is opposed to prohibition and is ready to adopt the beer keg as its emblem. As a rule, you will find that the opponents of prohibition in the ranks of the workers are men who were formerly affiliated with the trade of manufacturing, distributing and selling alcoholic liquor."

A message was received by the convention from Gifford Pinchot, governor-elect of Pennsylvania, which read as follows: "Please convey to the delegates my best wishes and hearty congratulations on the progress already achieved. Tell them not to be deceived by the effort of the liquor interests to interpret the recent elections in America as a triumph for the wets. It is nothing of the kind. In my judgment, America is not only dry, but is steadily getting dryer."

"The greatest service that America can render to Europe is to make the operation of its prohibition law a success," said George B. Wilson of London, England, secretary of the United Kingdom Alliance. "We must put a stop to all the grotesque news statements that find their way over to the European newspapers. We must make the benefits of prohibition so apparent that even enemies of the cause will have to admit its usefulness. Temperance reformers in England are satisfied that if such reforms existed there as now are put into force in parts of Canada and the whole of the United States it would work a revival in the social life of England."

"The need of international co-operation for law enforcement constantly increases," declared Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League. "The common interest of all suggests a unity of action to preserve the integrity of each. One of the chief difficulties which the United States has encountered in the enforcement of its prohibition policy is the smuggling of liquors into the country. Much benefit could be derived through the arrangement of a system for interchange of information among nations concerning the movement of vessels suspected of improper designs against the laws of another country."

The convention closed with an address by the Rev. Robert B. S. Hammond of Sydney, president of the Australian Prohibition Council, on World Prohibition. "No self-respecting people," he said, "can be content to see other lands become the dumping ground on which their discarded social customs may flourish and bring a blight. We need a world outlook, a world conscience, and there remains to be done a world work. The World League Against Alcoholism is a new league of nations, it is a union of all who live in the service of all who suffer."

The Convention Great in Every Way

In response to a request to Miss Gordon from The American Issue for a brief summing up of her impressions of the convention, she gave the following:

"The convention of the World League Against Alcoholism at Toronto was great every way—great in planners, pushers, givers, hospitality, speakers, music, pictures, chimes, cameras, weather, good humor and fraternal spirit. The World League had a successful launching and is bound to make its port. The convention will mightily speed forward the intelligent consecration of men and women delegates from fifty-seven countries to the inspiring program of freeing the world from the traffic in beverage alcohol. From this remarkable world gathering there will be three outstanding results: First, the stirring appeals to Canada and the United States from fifty-seven countries to hold fast our law will lead to enlarged activities in holding the prohibition law to its highest observance and enforcement. Hundreds of men and women temperance leaders in Canada and the United States caught a new international vision and will carry a high enthusiasm to the home folks that will result in the creation of public opinion for the better observance and enforcement of law and in a more alert and dedicated citizenship. Second, our visitors from many lands will carry back to their homes first-hand facts to prove the hopeful success thus far attained under the prohibition law in Canada and the United States, and are prepared intelligently to counter the unfair and untrue propaganda of the liquor press. Third, many hundreds learned that co-operation of all dry forces in the fight against alcoholism is essential to successful attainment of our common objective—a sober world."

BANKERS, BUSINESS MEN AND SHIPPERS AGREE THAT TREND IS TOWARD LESS DRINKING AMONG REPUTABLE CITIZENS

In an article entitled, "Wine Cellars and Flasks No Longer Quite the Thing," B. C. Forbes, writing in the Philadelphia Public Ledger, relates the following incidents:

"We were discussing liquor. There were two or three bankers, two or three business men, including one or two important shipping men. Said one of the bankers: 'I filled up my cellar just before prohibition came in. At first I was quite proud of my stock. I took pride in serving drinks when my friends came to see me. Two or three times, too, I put a flask in my pocket when going out with friends for a social evening. But, do you know, I have gradually come to feel entirely different about the whole business. I would never think now of carrying a flask. And I don't take any pride any more in having a well-filled cellar. The truth is that I know I would be happier were there not a bottle of anything left in my house, except perhaps a little brandy or whisky for use in case of sickness. I just can't feel that there's anything to be proud about in handing out liquor when I reflect that good citizenship calls for strict enforcement of the law.'

"Another man spoke in almost the same strain, only he went a little farther. He said that, while it was good business for him to do more or less entertaining at home as well as in restaurants and at his golf clubs, he has virtually stopped serving drinks to any of his guests. For quite a while he felt it was the 'sporty' thing to do, and there was always more or less joking about prohibition. But now he couldn't but question the propriety of breaking the prohibition law in any way whatsoever.

"One of the shipping men stated that he had given most emphatic orders not to break the prohibition law in the slightest degree, and had issued a warning that any employe, no matter how important or unimportant, who disobeyed these orders would be instantly dismissed. He admitted that some of them couldn't believe that he was really serious in wanting such orders rigidly carried out. He told us something which none of us knew before, namely, that on the best-run steamship lines the rule always had been that the bartender lost his job if he allowed any passenger to become drunk. Also, that on such ships it was up to the bartender to close the bar whenever he felt that further drinking might lead to unpleasant consequences."

"Our discussion reached a conclusion somewhat along these lines," continued Mr. Forbes. "Trafficking with bootleggers is gradually coming to be regarded as not quite the thing. As liquor stocks carried at home are exhausted, a great many citizens will never break the law to replenish them. The supplying of cocktails or other drinks at banquets, etc., is already becoming the exception rather than the rule. The carrying of flasks, at first looked upon as 'sporty,' is not nearly so widely indulged in by decent people. Public sentiment toward professional bootleggers is changing and severe sentences are now widely approved. In short, the whole trend is distinctly toward less and less drinking among reputable citizens."

"Incidentally, have you ever stopped to consider how far the closing of the saloons has helped to boom home building, automobile buying, savings bank deposits and the like in this country?" asks Mr. Forbes.

The Women Did It

Former Anti Newspaper of California Concedes the Women Won the Victory and Says the Bootleggers' Finish Is Near at Hand

"In all the discussion of the victory for the Wright Act there is a general agreement that the women who banded themselves together as the Committee of Five Thousand and waged a campaign in the northern and central parts of California are entitled to the credit for what has happened. Theirs was a very decided demonstration of the power and influence of women in California politics." Thus writes the San Francisco representative of the Post Enquirer of Oakland, California.

"I saw the women's March of Allegiance the Saturday morning before election, and I was impressed with the serious looks of the marchers," he continues. "All of them, from Kathleen Norris and Annette Adams to the most obscure young woman in the rear ranks wore a 'win or die' expression. I would not say that this is an expression that greatly enhances the amiability of the feminine countenance, but certainly it is calculated to give the masculine person a good deal to think about. There were not many bands of music in that procession. There were no floats. There were no marchers in fancy costumes. The American flag was very much in evidence, and there were a number of signs very simply painted and conveying in very simple language the message of obedience to the law. You cannot beat that kind of propaganda.

"That March of Allegiance was a very courageous gesture of the Volstead ladies to a hostile city. They knew San Francisco was sopping wet. I don't suppose they had any hope of winning their fight in San Francisco. They had waged their campaign from the Oregon line to Tehachapi. They had finished their fight. They were confident of victory. They marched in their strength to show San Francisco what they had been doing elsewhere, to give San Francisco something to jolt us out of our complacence. They wanted us to think about prohibition enforcement.

Mrs. Addie Garwood Estes, President of California (North) W. C. T. U., in garb worn by participants in the March of Allegiance.

"We did not think about it very seriously. When we thought that the Wright Act had been beaten, we laughed about it. But now the laugh is on the other side of the face. The Volstead ladies have turned the tables on us. They have arranged, at considerable expenditure of energy and in the face of our active opposition, that prohibition shall be rigidly enforced by the police of San Francisco.

"Not all our bootleggers are educated gentlemen, but there is not even an illiterate foreigner in the business who cannot read the handwriting on the wall.

"Bootlegging as at present constituted in San Francisco, is rapidly reaching a state of decay, and the chloride of lime will be poured over it about the 15th of December, just in time to take some of the very expensive alcoholic cheer out of the holidays and to leave more money for the Christmas tree.

"The attitude of some of our sidewalk philosophers, the alcoholic die-hards who do a great deal of talking and think they think, is still as stubborn as it was at the time prohibition first went into effect. They did not believe at that time that prohibition was going to make any difference. They don't believe the Wright Act will. Not to put too fine a point upon it, they are cherishing a monumental delusion, as they will discover if they have the patience to quit talking for a minute and listen to the remarks of the first policeman they meet.

"The police know all the bootleggers of San Francisco. They will have no difficulty in putting them out of business—and, mark my word, they will put them out of business."

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union
Evanston, Illinois

Editor-in-Chief - - - Miss Anna A. Gordon
Managing Editor - - Miss Julia F. Deane
Associate Editor - - Miss Vida I. Thompson

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors of The Editorial Department, The Union Signal, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittance of $1.50 or under.

Notice of Expiration is sent to the subscriber two or three weeks before renewal is due, so that by immediate attention to this reminder not an issue need be missed. RENEW PROMPTLY.

Remittances should be made by draft on New York or Chicago, or by Post-office Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

Change of Address. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE, $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
Foreign Postage, 52 Cents Additional
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (Monthly) 50c a Year
Foreign Postage, 12 Cents Additional

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., post-office as second class matter. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized August 20, 1918.

Evanston, Illinois, December 14, 1922

What Shall the Conventions Mean to Our Work for the Coming Year?

Through the month of December echo meetings will be held in every city that was so fortunate as to have a representative at the Philadelphia conventions. It is not too much to expect very definite results from the reports brought back by delegates. Again and again one heard at Philadelphia, "I can hardly wait to get home to tell all I have heard, and inspire others with the new visions I have received."

The attractive power of the two big conventions, as demonstrated in the throngs that filled the Academy of Music and churches, was a major argument for the Million Members campaign. "Would you believe that so many people would be interested to come to this kind of a meeting?" exclaimed one of the young newspaper reporters at the press table, as she gazed in amazement at the vast sea of faces on the floor and platform and in the balconies of the Academy. Yes, we would have believed it, we told her, for we know that the W. C. T. U. has a program of work so comprehensive and vitally worth while that when presented aright it will attract all sorts and conditions of people. It makes its appeal to every class, the business or professional woman, the missionary enthusiast, the club woman, the young mother, the foreign woman. We may win the lifelong gratitude of the women by telling them of the far-reaching activities of the W. C. T. U., of which we heard so much at the convention, and getting them to join.

There was sufficient enthusiasm for law observance generated at the conventions to put every bootlegger out of business during the coming year. It was intelligent enthusiasm based on the information given by experts like Commissioner Haynes and Assistant United States Attorney-General Willebrandt. What we learned from them we should impart to all within our circle of acquaintances, and thereby dispel any cloud of pessimism as to the enforceability of prohibition. One of the speakers said, "The Eighteenth Amendment is nailed down and clinched by the Nineteenth Amendment." We believe it, but we must not forget that there are enemies of our Constitution at work to loosen those nails and that the work of "clinching" needs to be continuous. Not until every woman voter has been convinced in her conscience as well as her intellect of her obligation to give her support to the enforcement of the Constitution will our work be finished. Our program for the coming years must be to concentrate our effort upon the observance and enforcement of the law in our own community as we did in the old days upon the outlawing of the saloon. In the victories in California and Ohio we have a magnificent demonstration of what women can do. WHAT WE CAN DO, WE MUST DO; WHAT WE MUST DO, WE WILL DO.

The messages of the convention were a challenge to the missionary spirit of the Christian women of the nation. If it was said once, it was said a score of times that the world prohibition movement is one of the greatest missionary enterprises of the age. With the appeals of the women of other nations, heard at the convention, ringing in our ears, we can give to the women of our churches a vision of what it would mean to the mothers of the world to have their homelands free from the legalized drink traffic. By joining the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, they become a part of the world sisterhood that is striving to make that vision a reality.

JANUARY 16—OPPORTUNITY DAY

Doubtless our local unions are busily preparing for the meetings on January 16, which, more thoroughly advertised and made more interesting and inspiring than ever, should be held in every community. The results of the recent elections, while favorable to our cause, do not indicate that our work is done, while the post-election declarations of "wet" leaders indicate that they have no intention of giving up the fight to restore wine and beer, nullify the Eighteenth Amendment and ultimately take it out of the Constitution. We do not anticipate that any great measure of success will attend their endeavors, but we are convinced that there is a long siege ahead before the principle of total abstinence from alcoholic drinks is firmly imbedded in the hearts and lives of our people. Remembering that we have in our midst a very large number of foreign-born citizens whose former habits and training have been diametrically opposed to total abstinence and prohibition, let us wisely consider how we may best reach not only these citizens, but their children, who are potential voters, and win them for our cause.

In order to bring about this result there are various avenues of activity open to us. The laws providing for scientific temperance instruction in the public schools in all states and territories under the jurisdiction of the United States Government afford a tremendous opportunity for instilling total abstinence sentiment in the minds of the youth of our country of whatever nationality or wherever located. This leverage should in nowise be neglected, but used constantly in the wisest manner, to the best possible advantage, in order that we may secure for our country a race of people completely divorced from the sway of alcohol and with its evil heredity eliminated from mind and body. How great and wonderful may be the destiny of such a people! We can only imagine the accomplishments and powers that may well be the heritage of such a nation.

The Loyal Temperance Legion and the Young People's Branch offer additional opportunities in what may be termed the social field, for bringing together our children and young people, and in different environment than that of the school room, supplying a medium for exchange of thought, strengthening of purpose, wider study and maturity of plans for carrying on in their own way the broader educational campaign to which they may and should be won by earlier school room studies. Social activities inaugurated and controlled by young people of high moral standing, through all of which are stressed the necessity and duty of total abstinence from alcoholic liquor and the extinction of the same for beverage uses, will exert a vast influence upon the social life of the nation. The age-old thought that alcoholic beverages are in any wise necessary adjuncts to high social functions or a "good time" must be obliterated from the minds of our people. The young people of this generation must set the standards for the next generation and a white life for all, with alcohol and other narcotics tabooed, must be among the essential requirements.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union, with its program of Scientific Temperance Instruction in all the schools and colleges of our country and the organization and nurturing of Loyal Temperance Legions and Young People's Branches in all localities for the definite purpose of holding our present vantage ground of prohibition of alcoholic liquors and going forward to still more moral victories, challenges the respect, the admiration and the support of all good men and women. There are other lines of activity concerning which we may speak later, but at this moment we urge every member to realize and appreciate the sacredness of her high calling and in every community stress the importance of making the highest use of the opportunities herein briefly outlined. May not the meetings of January 16 be made the occasion of a great ingathering of new members, in order that we may more quickly and definitely reach great numbers of homes with our teachings? The present is a most propitious time for tactfully urging that every man and woman who stands for that righteousness that exalteth a nation, unite with the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, thus increasing our membership, our resources and our influence, and helping to hasten the glad day when total abstinence from alcohol and prohibition of the liquor traffic shall be enthroned in the hearts and homes of all our people. Such a result is worthy our deepest thought and highest endeavors.

New State Presidents

Mrs. Alice G. Ropes, 541 Massachusetts Ave., Boston, Mass.

Mrs. Clara C. Cox, Corinth, Miss.

Mrs. Minnie R. Steinbach, 403 Mill St., Reno, Nev.

Mrs. Lillian M. Vincent, 4197 Arcade Bldg., Seattle, Wash.

IN MEMORIAM

During the convention season this year several of our honored leaders passed from earthly to heavenly activities. While we were making our future plans, these comrades, who had so marvelously helped along many of the lines of endeavor embraced in our program, received the heavenly summons, and today, with Frances E. Willard, Lillian M. N. Stevens and the great host of blessed memory, are rejoicing over the glorious onward march of our cause.

Rev. Elizabeth W. Greenwood

REV. ELIZABETH WARD GREENWOOD was for years World's and National superintendent of the Evangelistic department, a member of the W. C. T. U. since the days of the Crusade. Born in Brooklyn, New York, she entered college at the age of fourteen; graduated as valedictorian of her class; took a post-graduate course, and for a time taught the senior classes in her alma mater. As president for twenty-five years of a local union; superintendent of Scientific Temperance Instruction when New York secured its law requiring this teaching; state organizer and lecturer; National superintendent of the Juvenile department, and for nineteen years World's and National superintendent of the Evangelistic work, Miss Greenwood had visited nearly every state in the Union, also Canada and European countries. For twenty summers she supplied a pulpit in Massachusetts, and for seven winters the famous Mayflower Mission of Henry Ward Beecher's Church. In jails, prisons, factories, forts, ships and almhouses, as well as in churches of all denominations, she constantly gave the truth. Miss Greenwood was keenly interested in woman suffrage and was one of its earliest champions. "She was but twenty-four years old," wrote Frances E. Willard, "when the tocsin of the woman's crusade sounded. Her remarkable quickness and versatility, her culture and her consecration admirably adapted her to the variety of methods in the W. C. T. U. From earliest childhood she had been consumed by a passion to embody her highest ideal of Christian, cultured womanhood." Though forced for the past eight or nine years to curtail her active work, Miss Greenwood kept thoroughly abreast of the times. "Her works do follow her."

REV. MARY ELIZABETH KUHL, for many years National superintendent of the Evangelistic department, was an ordained minister in the Wesleyan Methodist Church. Always deeply interested in the temperance work, she served in various capacities in the Illinois W. C. T. U., as local, county and district president for more than ten years, as state evangelistic superintendent eight years, as national superintendent of the department of Work Among Miners five years, as state president of the Illinois W. C. T. U. five years, and for several years as National superintendent of the Evangelistic department. She began her service as a Christian worker at the age of thirteen, when she united with the Methodist Episcopal church. She was educated at the Lebanon Seminary and the Woman's College at Jacksonville she took a post-graduate course in McKendree College; attended for a time the State Normal University at Carbondale, and later finished a two years' course of Bible study at the University of Chicago. Mrs. Kuhl taught for four years in the grammar school at Beardstown, and later married Mr. W. P. Kuhl, a merchant of that city. For some years before her death she resided in Champaign, Illinois. Mrs. Kuhl was the author of many valuable booklets and Bible readings. She has given her messages in nearly every state of the Union, and was one of the delegates to the World's Convention at Glasgow in 1910. She was greatly beloved by her associates, and will be remembered as one who exemplified in her life, always and ever, the spirit of the Christ.

Rev. Mary E. Kuhl

MRS. EMMA GRAVES DIETRICK, a National organizer and lecturer for many years, and widely known, passed to her heavenly home during the week of the World's and National conventions. Mrs. Dietrick was a lineal descendant of the family to which Jonathan Edwards belonged. From a schoolgirl she was actively interested in temperance, belonging to the Good Templars. When the W. C. T. U. was organized in Lockport, New York, in 1879, she became its local secretary, and from that time to the day of her home-going, her membership never lapsed and her interest never flagged. She served as president of a local union, president and corresponding secretary of Niagara county W. C. T. U. and as a state organizer. A stalwart soul, firm in the faith, has gone to her reward. Her residence has been in later years in Hapeville, Georgia, but she always called New York her home state.

Mrs. ELLEN L. TENNEY long served as treasurer of the New York state W. C. T. U. Of her Mrs. Ella A. Boole, state president and vice-president-at-large of the National W. C. T. U., has to say: "Mrs. Tenney was one of the most wonderful women I have ever known. She has a unique record: At five she was a musician; at thirteen a linguist; and later a botanist of great ability, and an expert mathematician. For forty-seven years she was statistician of the state board of charities, for a quarter of a century president of the Hudson River Valley Missionary society of the Congregational church, treasurer of the Albany (First) union from its organization, and for thirty-five years treasurer of the New York state W. C. T. U. In addition to this, she was organist in her church and in the Sunday school, only relinquishing that work a few years ago. At the state convention at Gloversville, although she suffered much physically, she not only presented a complete treasurer's report (and later read proof of it for the state minutes), but played the piano for every opening service during the meetings, accompanying Mrs. Frances W. Graham as she sang 'Victory' with the Gloria Trumpeters. She also rendered 'The Pensive Old Piano' for Mrs. Graham in a way that was a marvel to every one present. A brilliant woman, who used her talents for the advancement of the kingdom of God, has entered into rest."

For God and Home and Every Land

Time of Prayer—Noontide

"It is always noontide somewhere,
And across the awakening continents,
From shore to shore, somewhere,
Our prayers are rising ever more."

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. HEADQUARTERS

GENERAL OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL.
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, FARGO, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA.
TREASURER
MRS. MARGARET C. MUNNS, EVANSTON, ILL.

1730 Chicago Avenue, Evanston, Ill.

REST COTTAGE

RED LETTER DAYS

December 23—Crusade and Pioneers' Day.

DEPARTMENTAL CONFERENCES AT PHILADELPHIA

Brief Summaries of Proceedings at These Important Group Meetings

Peace Conference Pushes Peace Crusade

The dominant notes of the conference of the department of Peace and Arbitration were the need for peace in the family of nations if we would survive, America's responsibility, the power of women to achieve world peace, and definite organization for a mighty peace crusade in the school, the church, community and through the press. Many of the foreign delegates to the World's convention were in attendance, and by their participation in the discussion evinced their deep concern in this phase of W. C. T. U. activity. Mr. J. H. Dailey of Philadelphia sang his own song, "It Must Not Be Again." Mr. Frederick J. Libby, executive secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War, was the principal speaker and detailed practical suggestions for the work of the department. Mrs. Ella M. George, president of the Pennsylvania W. C. T. U., and Mrs. Nelle G. Burger, president of the Missouri W. C. T. U., brought stirring messages from their states. Miss Alice L. Kercher, national superintendent of the department of Peace and Arbitration, presided. The conference was preceded by a breakfast at the City Club, at which Mr. Frederick J. Libby was the guest of honor.

Why and How Neighbor the Foreigner Told at Americanization Conference

For some of the delegates the day for department conferences started at eight a. m., in the upper room of a picturesque little cafe opposite the Academy of Music, where Mrs. Culla J. Vayhinger, national Americanization director, greeted state superintendents and workers. Seated about the small tables, they enjoyed breakfast, while Mrs. Vayhinger told of the plans for the coming year. A number of questions followed, which gave rise to practical plans and suggestions by Miss Amy Spalding. In the afternoon, in the Chambers-Wylie Memorial Church, Mrs. Vayhinger again outlined the plans for the ensuing year, stressed the need for and advantages of the correspondence course, and showed very clearly the distinct contributions which the W. C. T. U. has to make through scientific temperance instruction which the women may carry into the foreign community, school and home. Miss Charlotte Fraser emphasized the need of teaching the immigrant mother, related some of her own experiences, and outlined the following plans of procedure: Appoint an Americanization superintendent in each union; help one foreigner to take out citizenship papers; be a neighbor to one foreign family; teach English to one foreign mother. Miss Spalding spoke on the immigrant woman as a member of the community, urging the teaching of English in the foreign home, and the maintenance of mothers' clubs among the foreign women, to be sponsored by the mother organization. Mrs. Deborah Knox Livingston discussed the foreign woman as a potential voter, explaining the new naturalization law for women, and showing how the W. C. T. U. may aid the foreign women in fulfilling its requirements. Altogether, the conference was most helpful and inspiring to all who attended.

Conference of Health Department Stresses Positive Health as Means to Racial Progress

The work of the department of Health is educational, preventive of disease and constructive of health. Cultivation of health naturally prevents disease and so makes cure less needful. Cure and prevention of disease tend to preserve the race as it is, but the positive health idea enables it to progress, and no effort is too great which aids in such an accomplishment.

The foregoing are some of the suggestions brought out in the conference on Health, over which Dr. P. S. Bourdeau-Sisco, National superintendent, presided.

The speakers were Dr. Martha Tracy, dean of the Woman's Medical College of Pennsylvania, on "Positive Health" and Miss Gertrude D. King, director of Physical Education of the Woman's Foundation for Health, on "Foot Health," demonstrating healthful shoes.

Echoes from Iowa, Illinois, Massachusetts, and Wisconsin were voiced by the state Health representatives.

Foreword: The department outlook; the department organization; spot maps; health meetings; department literature; our UNION SIGNAL.

Eighty-five were present at the Health luncheon. The first speaker was Dr. Florence L. Meredith, head of the department of Preventive Medicine, Woman's Medical College of Pennsylvania. Dr. Sina Stratton of Philadelphia spoke on posture. Dr. Hannah McK. Lyons showed how we can teach children positive health, using dolls to show how to sleep and what to eat. Mrs. Florence D. Richard, Ohio's president, told of how impossible it would have been for her to "carry on" in her ten big campaigns for prohibition in Ohio, had she not been in health. Mrs. Ella A. Boole, New York's president, stressed the importance of dressing for health (including correct shoes), eating for health, avoiding food fads. The "Ode to Health" and "The Health Builders" were sung by the company. Thus we prayed, sang, ate, and talked for health.

Suggestions for Ministering to Service Men Brought Out in Soldiers' and Sailors' Conference

One of the outstanding exhibits of the World's and National conventions was the "Tarry-a-While," arranged by Miss Rebecca N. Rhoads, National superintendent of the department of Soldiers and Sailors, and Mrs. Sylvia Bemis, Pennsylvania's state superintendent, in which many beautiful afghans, comfort bags, scrap-books, literature, etc., were on display.

The conference hours of this department, Miss Rhoads presiding, proved most helpful. Thursday afternoon, the main speaker was Chaplain J. E. Yates, of Washington, D. C., associate to Colonel Axton, Chief of Chaplains, U. S. Army, who was enthusiastic in his praise of the wonderful work already done by the W. C. T. U. and gave many valuable suggestions for "carrying on" in the future. Especially did he speak of the need of home-like places for the men in the service, the adoption of lonely posts and co-operation with the chaplains in providing religious services and influences.

(Continued on Page Twelve)

We record here the names of friends and comrades who have recently passed to the higher life.

MRS. MARY E. THOMAS, Sherman, California, eighty-one years young, a member of the Central Union of Los Angeles. Mrs. Thomas did heroic Crusade service in Illinois in the seventies, and has ever since been active in promoting the temperance cause.

MRS. E. J. TOLFORD, treasurer of the Blaine (Washington) W. C. T. U. and for thirty years a member of the organization. Of a very unassuming nature, Mrs. Tolford did her work quietly, faithfully and well, and her loss seems irreparable to her comrades.

MRS. D. O. SMITH of Farmington, Minnesota, a devoted and consecrated worker in the W. C. T. U., who will be greatly missed by her friends.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

Frances E. Willard, namesake and relative of the founder of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, who gave the "Call of the Eighteenth Amendment" (written by Anna Adams Gordon) at the World's Convention.

This selection can be used as a Y. P. B. feature at the January 16 meetings.

The Call of the Eighteenth Amendment

"On January sixteen, nineteen hundred and nineteen, a new Declaration of Independence was adopted by the United States of America—a declaration of independence from the legalized liquor traffic. Through the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, our beloved republic has prohibited the beverage liquor traffic. The Eighteenth Amendment is a lofty prohibition peak. Its shining summit is radiant with the light of life and liberty brought to our New England shores by our Pilgrim fathers and mothers, who, three centuries ago, sought freedom, the fairest flower of all the ages, and in the cabin of the Mayflower drew up that historic charter of human liberty, 'The Immortal Compact.'

"The Eighteenth Amendment reads: 'Section 1. After one year from the ratification of this article, the manufacture, sale or transportation of intoxicating liquors within, the importation thereof into, or the exportation thereof from the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof, for beverage purposes, is hereby prohibited. 'Section 2. The Congress and the several states shall have concurrent power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.'

"Members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, as voting citizens under the Nineteenth Amendment, are splendidly rallying to the stirring call of the Eighteenth Amendment. In its far-sounding bugle note it has the same mighty thrill that inspired the early Crusaders, when forty-eight years ago a crusade state awakened our entire nation. Today our crusade nation has awakened the entire world.

"Frances E. Willard, the beloved founder of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, lived to help make the world wider for women and more homelike for humanity. Prohibition, purity and peace will yet triumph throughout all the world. Then shall be realized the glorious vision of Frances E. Willard—the protection of the home, the annihilation of the liquor traffic and the triumph of Christ's Golden Rule in custom and in law.

"In giving to you this call of the Eighteenth Amendment I am proud to represent the patriotic young people of America. We young people want to help you in this new crusade. We are the future voters and we shall observe and enforce righteous laws. We thank you all for giving to us a land in which the law protects and safeguards the homes of tomorrow. We rejoice that our star spangled banner floats over a dry republic made so by the will of the people. We are so grateful for our inheritance that we promise you to work hard in this new crusade to make safe and happy the homes of all the world."

Prohibition America Through the Eyes of Muriel Ayres Recently Returned From South America

"Because of my illness since my return from South America," writes Miss Muriel Ayres, "I have had no opportunity to learn from personal observation the results of the prohibition law throughout the country. However, during my voyage from Buenos Aires to New York on the S. S. 'Pan America,' I noticed very little drinking of alcoholic liquors among the fifty Americans, members of a touring party, who embarked at Rio de Janiero. A fellow passenger from Buenos Aires, who had made the trip frequently, said that she had never seen a more temperate group of travelers.

"The very prosperous condition of my home town might be cited as probably typical of eastern communities. There is no abject poverty here. It is practically impossible to find a washerwoman, and we have to resort to the public laundries. From August, 1921, to August, 1922, $600,000 was expended in new buildings and improvements, forty-seven of these being new homes—this in a town of only 5,000 inhabitants. There is one automobile for every six people in the county, the largest percentage in the state, I believe. It should be stated, however, that Yates was the first dry county in New York state, having been under temperance regulations since 1909.

"You ask, 'How may conditions in Argentina and Uruguay be compared to those in the United States?' The first thing in regard to prohibition that a visitor to the United States would notice after living in a South American city is the absence of liquor advertisements on the streets and in periodicals. I saw only a few cases of drunkenness in the cities of Buenos Aires and Montevideo, but letters from pastors working in the interior informed me that murders and other crimes resulting there from intemperance were frightful.

"The custom of using wines in the homes is so prevalent that only a small percentage of the people may be classed as abstainers. It was heart-breaking to notice the odor of cheap wines on the breath of some of the tiny tots attending our kindergarten. A prominent temperance woman of Montevideo told me of a birthday party given for a ten-year-old child at which time so many wines were served that several of the little guests became ill.

"The general attitude of the native people is that alcoholic beverages in moderate quantities are harmless, and added to their ignorance is the selfish stubbornness of the English and Americans there, who will have their liquors anyway, and who set a bad example—thus making a difficult problem for temperance workers in South America."

Pegging Away

There are dreamers who steadily gaze into space,
With a far away look in their eye,
They heed not the needs of a suffering race,
Nor the cries of the crowds that go by.
The clouds are all silvered and flowers all gay,
No problems, no wrongs for earth's mob;
But the work of the world goes a different way,
It's just pegging away at the job.

There are others look down at injustice and wrong
Till their hearts fill with hate for their kind,
They sour every smile and discord every song,
And they crush every hope that they find.
But the man who does most for himself and the rest
And the Father who hears what we ask,
Is the man who while seeing things works at his best,
By just pegging away at the task.

Not the dreamer who fools himself all things go well,
Nor the cynic who feels all is wrong,
Can the secret of service and usefulness tell,
And of helping the kingdom along;
But the man who while knowing the woe of earth's sin,
Sees the Christ light break in through the dark,
Lifts the victory cry o'er the noise and the din,
And keeps pegging away at his work.

—S. W. Franklin.

Notes From Your Publishing House

Beyond doubt every local union and every member will strive to make the W. C. T. U. celebration of January 16, universally observed in the United States and carry out the program in such a manner as to cause the day long to be remembered for its civic value to the community in its relation to the cardinal principles of patriotism and reverence for law. To aid in this it will be well to make extensive use of all such material as may be appropriate for the occasion.

The Annual Address of our National President, Anna A. Gordon, delivered at the recent convention at Philadelphia should be placed in the hands of all who are to participate in the programs used on January 16. It would be a graceful and appropriate deed also to present a copy to your pastor, Sunday school superintendent, your child's teacher, the principal of your public school and others of influence in your community. The information contained in this address is invaluable. Not only that, but from start to finish its pages thrill with the wondrous strength of a great heart's devotion to a holy cause. We suggest you order largely for distribution. See rates on page 14.

For your luncheons or banquets why not order Place Cards from your own Publishing House? This is a neatly designed bow on bristol card with letters W. C. T. U. Space can be utilized for writing names of guests. Our W. C. T. U. Napkins are of heavy crepe paper in three designs—white and gold, white and violet and white and pink, with W. C. T. U. monogram in gold. You will be pleased with these novelties and they will add to the attractiveness of your tables. See prices on page 15.

Among other supplies we call attention to our posters, a variety of which, with prices, are noted in another column. These may be used for decorative purposes in halls, churches or other places where meetings are held or banquets served. They may also be displayed in public libraries, city halls, and similar places, thus helping to call the attention of the general public to the significance of the day. A typewritten card could be attached stating the place and hour of the meeting.

The Music is an important part of the proceedings on such occasions, and elsewhere in this paper we list a varied selection of suitable songs. Do not forget to enlist the children's voices in your program. We offer two new songs for the children entitled, "When We All Grow Up to Be Twenty-One," and "Loyal Temperance Soldiers." See that these are part of the day's doings. For general use do not minimize the value of our Jubilee Songs, compiled by Anna Adams Gordon, President of the National and of the World's W. C. T. U. This songbook of thirty-two pages contains among its many usable selections, "The White Ribbon Star Spangled Banner," which as a solo never fails to thrill every heart with enthusiasm for our cause. "The Ribbon White," another solo, will add greatly to the effectiveness of any program. Price of Jubilee Songs: Per copy, 10 cents; per dozen, 75 cents; per 100, $5.00.

Departmental Conferences at Philadelphia

(Continued from Page Ten)

Mrs. Ella Hoover Thacher, World's superintendent, was introduced and spoke briefly. She was followed by Miss Roena E. Shaner, of Missouri, and Mrs Safford of Massachusetts, after which state superintendents present were introduced. So successful was this conference that a second meeting was called for the next day, at which "Mother Moore" (Mrs. Caroline A. Moore), who is beloved by all the sailors of the Philadelphia Navy Yard, gave many interesting incidents of her nineteen years of wonderful work for our men in service.

Through the instrumentality of "Mother Moore," the Navy Yard was cordially opened to the delegates by the Rear Admiral Sunday morning, and about 150 of the women attended service in the chapel, at least twenty states being represented. Chaplain McNair gave a very inspiring address. Sunday evening another group of delegates attended the service in the auditorium of the Navy Yard, when Mrs. Lillian Mitchner, president of the Kansas W. C. T. U., spoke to about 1700 of the men.

Conference of Fairs and Exhibits Stresses Exhibits as Member-Getters

A goodly number of women attended the conference of the department of Fairs and Exhibits. The time allotted was divided among four speakers. Mrs. W. H. Carvosso of Australia, World's superintendent of exhibits, won all hearers by her wholesome, happy words of encouragement and appreciation. The national superintendent, Mrs. Carolyn P. Lindsay, gave a practical talk on "The Making of an Exhibit." Mrs. R. S. Dunkin spoke on the exhibit as a member-getter and a convincing argument for law enforcement, and Miss Epha Marshall, on "The Fair a Social Educational Institution."

Many questions were asked, and much encouraging information volunteered by the audience. Department literature was distributed and new interest created.

Preventive Work a Dominant Note in Prison Reform Conference

The conference was especially interesting because of the attendance and address of Miss Margaret Moss of Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, a field worker for the state department of public welfare. She stressed the need and importance of preventive work, saying that all youngsters are mischievous, and many destructively so, but while some are caught in their badness by their parents, and punished by them, others land in the Juvenile Court.

Mrs. Martha P. Falconer, of the American Social Hygiene Association, and associate superintendent of the department of Social Morality for the National W. C. T. U., made a plea for work for women on the State Prison Boards, showing the need and explaining how to proceed. Mrs. Falconer, as usual, gave a very inspiring address.

The work in Georgia was presented by Mrs. Lella Dillard, state president, who told of how each W. C. T. U. woman is asked to "mother" a reformatory boy. Lack of time prevented other state presidents from speaking.

A visit to Sleighton Farm, a well-known and ideal reformatory for girls, about sixty miles out of Philadelphia, was made in the afternoon, as a sequel to the conference. Four hundred and fifty girls, ranging in age from eight to twenty-one years, sang, and the national superintendent, Mrs. Minnie B. Horning, addressed them and presented them with our Marching and Jubilee song books. They knew about the World's and National conventions, and were an interesting and interested audience.

The Religious Keynote in Conferences

Mrs. Helen H. Carlson of Maine, national superintendent of the Evangelistic department, devoted her allotted time to special emphasis on the significance of prayer—the absolute necessity of much praying—citing many instances of conversion as a result.

Mrs. Emma L. Starrett of Nebraska, national superintendent of the department of Sabbath Observance, introduced as her speakers Miss Roena Shaner and William B. Forney, the latter of Philadelphia, both making a plea for the proper observance of Sunday. It was urged that the children (representing the country's future parenthood) be taught the importance of keeping the Sabbath sacred—a day for soul rest as well as bodily rest.

Mrs. Jean B. Wylie of Pennsylvania, national superintendent of the department of the Bible in the Public Schools, presented as her speakers Dr. F. M. Wilson of Philadelphia and Mrs. Florence D. Richard of Ohio. Both laid stress upon the importance of placing the Bible in our public schools, Dr. Wilson claiming that eighty-three per cent of the schools already have this teaching.

You Will Need Posters

FOR DISPLAY JANUARY 16

We suggest these:

For Their Sake Enforce the Law.
Forge a Chain.

—

Lincoln on Reverence for Law.
Lincoln's Prophecy.
(Each with portrait of Abraham Lincoln)

—

Guard Their Future.
The Eighteenth Amendment (Stand by the Flag and the Constitution).
Booze Stands Between—
The American's Creed.
Listen! Milk or Beer.

Price each per copy, 10 cents; per dozen, one kind or assorted, $1.00. Decorate meeting places with posters and put them on display wherever possible. They will help.

New Songs for the Children

Patriotic Prohibition Song for Children Everywhere, "When We All Grow Up to Be Twenty-One." Words and music. The same sheet carries also "The New Day Coming" and "Prohibition Here to Stay."

Price per copy, 5 cents; per 100, $2.00.

Also a marching song entitled "Loyal Temperance Soldiers." Price per copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents; per 100, $1.00. These songs will be found very effective for use in public meetings, L. T. L. and Prohibition Guard gatherings, and for Sunday school and public school work.

(Please send remittance with orders).

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

Overseas Convention Delegates Entertained

The Women's City Club of New York was the scene of a luncheon tendered the overseas delegates to the World's W. C. T. U. Convention by the American Social Hygiene Association on Friday, November 10. A cordial co-operation has existed for many years between this Association and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, for most important sex-social problems have become complicated and made more difficult of solution because of the effects of alcoholism, and there is much evidence to prove that prostitution and the resulting spread of venereal diseases have been greatly stimulated in the past by the traffic in alcoholic liquors. Attending the luncheon were delegates from England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, Australia, New Zealand, Canada, Denmark, and Germany. The formal welcome was given by Dr. William F. Snow, the Association's general director. Among the speakers at the luncheon were Dr. Worth M. Tippy, Federal Council of Churches in America; Dr. Katherine B. Davis of the Bureau of Social Hygiene; Mr. Frederick H. Whitin, of the Committee of Fourteen; Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, Mrs. Gertrude R. Luce, Rev. Anna Garlin Spencer, Dr. H. E. Kleinschmidt, Mr. Bascom Johnson and Miss Jean Begg. Dr. Valeria Parker, director of the Department of Social Morality for the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and the associate director of that department, Mrs. Martha P. Falconer, met the delegates and introduced them to the group assembled in their honor.

Dr. Tippy spoke of the relentless fight which had been waged for prohibition and of the tremendous influence which the Woman's Christian Temperance Union had in winning it. He and the other speakers were strong in their convictions that though strict enforcement of the prohibition law might be a difficult task, nevertheless the Eighteenth Amendment would be enforced and never erased from the Constitution.

Mr. Bascom Johnson, director of the department of Legal Measures for the American Social Hygiene Association, told the delegates of the constant campaign which had been carried on in the United States to repress prostitution and wipe out the red light districts. In particular, he described the fight against the infamous "Barbary Coast" in San Francisco and the support which had been given by members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. "I was always certain," he said, "that no matter how badly the battle was going, I could count on the active and earnest support, both moral and financial, of that devoted body of women who were ever willing to work unceasingly for any cause they believed right."

Every W. C. T. U. Member Should Adopt a Foreign Home

"I am not nearly as much alarmed about the foreigner breaking the law," said Miss Charlotte Fraser, field secretary for the Americanization department, at one of the conferences at the Philadelphia convention, "as I am about the Americans themselves. I am more concerned about the great rum trust that is bringing in contraband liquors in ships, airplanes and automobiles."

Ignorance of the law is responsible for many violations by foreigners, she said, adding:

"Every W. C. T. U. member should adopt a foreign home and, starting with the children and the mother, should inculcate the principles of Americanism through the teaching of the English language."

Kansas State W. C. T. U. Convention Educational and Interesting

Emma W. Grover

Perfect weather, a beautiful city and complete arrangements by the entertaining unions combined to make the forty-fourth annual convention of the Kansas Woman's Christian Temperance Union very enjoyable. The attendance was good throughout the convention, the number of accredited delegates being 238, and much enthusiasm and keen interest in the work of the organization were manifest.

The evening before the opening of the convention proper a delightful banquet was served to about three hundred members and friends, Mrs. Mitchner, the state president, presiding as toastmistress in her usual pleasing manner. Words of welcome were spoken on behalf of the city of Salina, the churches, Salina Wesleyan University, the schools, the press, missionary federation, women's clubs and the W. C. T. U. Other speakers contributed to the success of the evening.

Throughout the convention Mrs. Margaret Dill, state Evangelistic superintendent, directed the devotional services, which proved of real worth to the delegates.

One of the outstanding features of the convention was the county presidents' program, which they presented under the general head of "Ideals." Mrs. Rogers of Cowley county spoke on the "Ideal President"; Mrs. Hobson of Kingman, the "Ideal Vice-president"; Mrs. Pangborn of Jewell, the "Ideal Secretary"; Mrs. Wilson of Rice, the "Ideal Treasurer"; Mrs. Archer of Sumner, the "Ideal County Institute"; Mrs. Dunn of Douglass, "Ideal Financing." "Ideal Department Work" was presented by a number of superintendents under the direction of Mrs. Baker of Shawnee. It was a fine group of capable women and the state is justly proud of its county leaders.

A delightful surprise was given the convention when the Rev. Pliny Keys and his family were conducted to the platform and introduced. Mr. Keys is a missionary to Africa, through whom the Kansas W. C. T. U. supports a temperance missionary in East Africa. The address of Mr. Keys was full of interest and revealed conditions in his field that are appalling. He told of the many calls for the services of our temperance missionary and of the fine work being done. The cost of maintaining this missionary is but ninety dollars a year and Kansas is hoping it may be possible to maintain another man for like service.

Another distinguished visitor at the convention was Rev. Eugenia St. John-Mann, whose home was Salina for many years. A pioneer in the temperance reform, until recent years she has been one of the foremost platform workers and evangelists in the W. C. T. U. Mrs. Edna Conkling, also a former resident of Salina, came from her home in Denver to attend the convention which, for many years, she attended as state secretary of the L. T. L. She was a valued worker in Kansas and is no less valued in her new home.

At the diamond medal contest Mrs. Nannie Wright took first place with her selection, written by Kathleen Norris, following which the superintendents gave most interesting demonstrations of their department work. The Americanization department was made very real as Mrs. Sena Hartzell Wallace, state superintendent, impersonated a foreign-born woman eager to learn the English language and "to be an American." Medical Temperance was demonstrated by Mrs. Alice Shamleffer, the enthusiastic superintendent. Mrs. Nettie B. Robinson, superintendent of Scientific Temperance Instruction in schools and colleges, appeared on the platform in a dress made of some of the 9000 essays which have been written in the Kansas schools during the past year against liquor and tobacco. Mrs. Prather of the Anti-narcotic department, was decorated with copies of the Kansas anti-tobacco law and anti-tobacco pledges pinned with the A. C. A. pins. Other departments were well presented and it was a most interesting and educational demonstration.

The Memorial Service revealed an unusually long list of names of those who have passed on during the year. The W. C. T. U. Carry A. Nation Home in Kansas City was represented by Mrs. Hattie I. Sparks, chairman of the local board of managers of the Home and the interest of every one was enlisted as Mrs. Sparks told of the condition and needs of the Home. The missionary work at Pittsburg, a mining district in the southeast corner of the state, where the population is largely foreign, always commands attention at state convention, and the women listened with eager interest to the reports given by the women employed there by the state W. C. T. U. The people are eager for the help offered them and much is being accomplished for their betterment. The address of Mrs. Mitchner, state president, was excellent and contained valuable suggestions and facts.

The officers elected for the year are: President, Mrs. Lillian M. Mitchner; vice-president, Mrs. Ida M. Walker; corresponding secretary, Miss Mary E. Dobbs; recording secretary, Mrs. Leah Thomas; treasurer, Mrs. Lizzie K. Robinson.

A handsome Gladstone traveling case was presented to Mrs. Mitchner by Miss Wooster on behalf of the bankers of Salina.

For the Great Meetings on January 16, Secure the Popular Eighteenth Amendment Song "It Is There To Stay."

The great throngs at the National Convention were thrilled and inspired by the author's rendition of this song. Use it in your meetings. Per copy, 15 cents; two copies, 25 cents.

Add these also to your repertoire:

Victory. Soprano solo. Per copy, 15 cents; two copies to one address, 25 cents.

He's Only Changed the Place of His Address.

Over the Whole Wide World.

The Land Where Old Glory Waves.

Hats Off to the Flag.

The U. S. A. for Me.

Each, per copy, 25 cents; two copies to one address, 40 cents.

Loyal Temperance Soldiers (a new song for the children), per copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.

(Please send remittance with all orders.)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

Important

Do not fail to secure for your own use, and for distribution, the notable address delivered by the president of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Anna A. Gordon, at the great convention recently held in Philadelphia. This invaluable document should be a handbook for our own members and placed for ready reference upon the desk of pastors, teachers, clubleaders and others interested in the three-fold goal of World Prohibition, World Purity and World Peace. Price, per copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents; per 100, $4.00. (Please enclose remittance with order).

Work for Total Abstinence Must Be Continued

We offer you a fine assortment of Total Abstinence literature for public school work, for study in women's clubs, local W. C. T. U. and similar meetings, and for general distribution.

Beer as a Cause of Alcoholism.
Wine as a Cause of Alcholism.
Beer Is Drunk for Its Alcohol.
When Is a Man Intoxicated?
He Was Not Drunk, But—
Primary Lesson on Beer.
Beer and Home Brew.
The Soldiers' Opinion of Alcohol.
For Your Son—Which?
Disease and Degeneracy the Heritage of Drinkers' Offspring.
Words That Count.
Danger to Seamen.
How to Make a Winning Ball Team.
Self Information on the Truths of Science.
Why Sign the Pledge?
Babies or Brewers?

Price, per 50, 15 cents; per 100, 20 cents.

Is the Moderate Drinker a Safe Citizen?
Dangers in the Use of Fermented Drinks.
Beer Quantities of Alcohol Injurious.
The Persistent Beer Fallacy.
A Story of Root Beer.
Beer a Bluffer.
Teachings of the Divine Saviour Concerning Wine.
Wine—What Is It?
What Benjamin Franklin Said About Beer.
Is Beer Intoxicating?
Prenatal Effects of Alcohol.
Wine.
Alcohol and the School Child.
Blackboard Exercise—No Beer, No Wine.
A New Basis for Estimating Effect of Alcohol.
Man or Beer?
Children's Exercise No. 1.
Blackboard Exercise—The Total Abstainer on Safe Ground.
Temperance Talk—Beware of the Wine Cup.
Temperance Talk—Watch! The Thief Is Alcohol.
Facts About Beer.

Price, per 50, 25 cents; per 100, 45 cents.

Alcohol In Experiment and Experience. Y. P. B. Study Book. Valuable also for S. T. I. work. By Cora Frances Stoddard. Pamphlet. Per copy, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.50.

Outlines for Health and Temperance Teaching in the Public Schools. By Cora Frances Stoddard. Pamphlet. Per copy, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.25. See that all teachers are supplied with above helps.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

"No Quarter for the Foe," Keynote of Iowa State Convention

Ella M. Hill, State Vice-President

Never in the history of the Iowa W. C. T. U. did the women show greater consecration, enthusiasm and determination than at the forty-ninth annual convention held recently in the First M. E. church at Oskaloosa. The executive meetings were characterized by interest and a desire to do; the department conferences were full of life and vim. More than six hundred delegates were present, and the capacity of the church was taxed at every evening session. Royally were we welcomed by representatives of the churches, schools, colleges, clubs, and last, but not least, in an original poem by Mrs. Priscilla J. Prine, one of the delegates to the convention held twenty-nine years ago in the same place and church. A few comparisons may be of interest:

The minutes of 1893 tell us that we had at that time 1,723 members. Today we have 15,376. Then we had 51 voting delegates, this year 479. Our thank-offering twenty-nine years ago was $12.50, this year $1,469. Total receipts for the year 1893 were $1,803.20, this year $39,967.72. Who says our cause is not marching on?

As usual the president's address was one of the mountain peaks of the great program. Filled with forceful and convincing truths, it was heard with deep and appreciative interest. The address was published in full in the city papers.

Mrs. L. D. Carhart, corresponding secretary, gave a comprehensive report of the work of the past year. By the way, she gave the report twenty-nine years ago. How our Lord has used our faithful, consecrated, efficient comrade.

The state treasurer, Mrs. Lucile W. Shadle, reported a substantial gain in membership, and later conducted a wonderful thank-offering service.

Greetings from our National President, Miss Anna Adams Gordon, were received and read with cheers. A greeting from the convention was wired in return.

A touching memorial service was conducted for the hundred and twenty-six members called to higher service during the year.

The guest of the convention, Dr. Phineas W. Whiting, of the Iowa Child Welfare Research Station, gave an instructive and interesting lecture on "The Science of Heredity," illustrated by charts.

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Perkins, national director of the department of Child Welfare, another guest whom we delight to honor, gave inspirational talks along her line of work, holding the close attention of her audiences.

Mrs. Margaret B. Platt, national promoter of literature, brought strong messages of encouragement and cheer.

"The World Call," put on by Miss Louise Hollister, presented to a large audience a wonderful object lesson.

The music was an outstanding feature, musicians of the city giving unstintedly of their time and talent.

An automobile ride about the city, visits to Central Holiness University and Penn College, and a "chicken fry" breakfast given by the Mahaska county unions, were all thoroughly enjoyed. The Street Railway Company courteously furnished free transportation to all delegates during the week.

Every union was requested to hold an institute before Christmas. The state officers were re-elected.

South Dakota's Convention Emphasizes Importance of Law Enforcement

Maude A. Jones, State Recording Secretary

Delegates to the thirty-fourth annual convention of the South Dakota W. C. T. U., held in Mitchell, were warmly welcomed by the city, churches, clubs and schools. Many prominent people took part in the program. The musical talent so generously provided added much to the success of the meeting.

Law enforcement was the leading theme of the convention. Our popular state president, Mrs. Flora A. Mitchell, emphasized in all her addresses the great importance of electing candidates who stand four-square on this important matter and are loyal to the Eighteenth Amendment and Volstead Act.

Mrs. Ella A. Boole, who needs no introduction, was the convention speaker. We expected great things of her, and were not disappointed. Adoption of the budget system was considered a step in the right direction, leading to greater business efficiency. The unions will be apportioned according to their membership.

South Dakota has made a gain of twenty-five per cent in membership during the past year.

The officers were re-elected: President, Mrs. Flora A. Mitchell; vice-president, Mrs. Lucy A. Bornemann; corresponding secretary, Miss Emma Mead; recording secretary, Mrs. Maud A. Jones; treasurer, Mrs. Mary H. Erskine.

Ready for 1923

Put the Word of God in Every Home

DO NOT FORGET THAT YOUR OWN PUBLISHING HOUSE WILL AGAIN FURNISH YOU THE BEAUTIFUL SCRIPTURE TEXT SACRED ART CALENDARS.

This Calendar will be more beautiful and attractive than ever. You can easily dispose of hundreds and thus place the daily Bible Text in multitudes of homes and at the same time earn Christmas money for yourself, your W. C. T. U., the L. T. L., the Woman's Club, or for your Literature Fund.

Send us your order early and so avoid delay or disappointment. Prices: Single copy, 35 cents; per dozen, $3 84; twenty-five, $7.50; fifty, $12.50; one hundred, $20.00; two hundred, $37.00; five hundred, $82.50.

Send us your order now and let's go to work. It is not too early to start.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

MAKE CHRISTMAS MERRY FOR ALL YOUR FRIENDS

Stick a Subscription to

THE YOUNG CRUSADER

in the stocking of all your young folks this Christmas. A present every month.

35 cents a year

In Clubs of Six—
30 cents a year

THE UNION SIGNAL

SPECIAL OFFERS
Good until January 1, 1923

OFFER No. 1:

3 subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL (weekly) $4.00

OFFER No. 2:

THE UNION SIGNAL and the YOUNG CRUSADER for one year.....$1.75
with
White enameled bow stick pin free.

Now is the time to get your trio team, new members, ministers, schools, libraries, department superintendents, Y. P. B. and friends on THE UNION SIGNAL list for one year.

Send SIGNAL and Crusader subscrip tions to National W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill.

One Thousand Victory Members Goal of Texas White Ribboners

(Special Correspondence)

Preceding the opening of the forty-first annual convention of the Texas W. C. T. U., held in the First Christian church at Fort Worth, a reception was given at the Texas Hotel, one of the most elegant hostelries in the South. This gave the delegates an opportunity to get acquainted with each other before they entered upon the grind of business. The president, Mrs. Claude De Van Watts, who presided on this occasion, was graciously introduced by Mrs. J. B. Ammerman, the state vice-president, and was most heartily welcomed. Greetings were extended by the different organizations of the city, including the churches, represented by Rev. L. D. Anderson and Mrs. W. E. Langston; the city, by Mayor E. R. Cockrell; Chamber of Commerce, by County Judge Hugh L. Small; City Federation of Clubs, by Mrs. R. E. Buchanan; Rotarians, by Rev. J. K. Thompson; schools, by Mrs. O. F. Carlson; and the local W. C. T. U., by Mrs. Claudia Hightower. Music for this occasion was furnished by Mr. Sam S. Losh, a prominent community song leader, with special solos by Mrs. Charles F. Alton, accompanied by Mrs. W. S. Lethco, both daughters of Mrs. Hightower.

The convention was formally opened the next morning, following a very beautiful consecration service.

Great emphasis was laid on the need for more educational work, co-operation in law enforcement, and plans to help keep the Eighteenth Amendment intact.

The report of the president, who had been in office only five months, as the time of the annual convention had been changed from spring to fall, showed that much had already been accomplished and many plans outlined for the promotion of the work.

One of the outstanding features was an address on Americanism by Mr. Leonard Withington, editor of the Fort Worth Record. Mrs. M. M. Kirkham, who spoke on "Working Against Odds," left her hearers much food for thought. The former state president, Mrs. Cora B. Megrail, was in attendance and gave several splendid talks on the work, stressing particularly the Victory Members campaign. It was recommended that the goal, 1,000 Victory members, be set for this year.

As a special courtesy to the state president, who had at one time been on the state board of the Congress of Mothers, the Chamber of Commerce, Church Woman's Federation and the Council of Mothers, each day during the session complimented the delegates with a luncheon of superior order.

The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Claude De Van Watts; vice-president, Mrs. J. B. Ammerman; corresponding secretary, Mrs. T. I. Minter; recording secretary, Mrs. Fred Lawson; treasurer, Mrs. Olivia Davis. Mrs. Claudia Hightower will serve as editor of the Texas White Ribbon, Mrs. Zoe Sublett as Y. P. B. secretary, Miss Alice King as L. T. L. secretary.

In many ways this was one of the most inspirational conventions ever held in Texas, and the outlook is very encouraging.

W. C. T. U. Novelties

White Ribbon Place Card for W. C. T. U. Banquets, Luncheons, Picnics and Dinners. Neatly designed bow on bristol card with letters "W. C. T. U." Must be seen to be appreciated. Price per dozen, 20 cents; per 50, 75 cents; per 100, $1.25.

W. C. T. U. Crepe Paper Napkins. Three designs—white and gold—white with violet border, and white with pink rosebuds. W. C. T. U. monogram in gold. Excellent quality. Price, per 25, 20 cents; per 100, 75 cents.

W. C. T. U. Seals. Monogram with wreath of trailing arbutus in colors.

Price, per package containing 50 seals, 15 cents.

Daily Food: Scripture text and quotation for every day in the year. Dainty and always appropriate. Price, 40 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois

JERSEY CROWN
FLAVORING POWDER
Non-Alcoholic

The Master Vanilla Compound, Prepared and used like any extract, Rich and Lasting Flavor. Costs less, goes further, gives better results than any other. Unions, Church organizations and Individual members are selling Jersey Crown with marked success. We want representatives everywhere and offer unequaled inducements. Send no money. We furnish you the Powder. You pay when you sell it. Write at once for our 30-Day Proposition. Jersey Crown Vanilla Co., Dept. S., Valparaiso, Ind.

MAJOR'S CEMENT

Unexcelled for repairing china, glassware, earthenware, furniture, vases, books, etc. Famous since 1876. Major's rubber and Leather Cements are good.

Three kinds, 20c per bottle at dealers, or write us.

MAJOR MFG. CO., NEW YORK

Quick Relief to
BRONCHIAL SUFFERERS

Coughs, nasal and bronchial colds are relieved promptly by the vapor of Cresolene—the standard drugless treatment with forty years of successful use its guarantee. The most widely used remedy for whooping cough and spasmodic croup.

Introduced in 1879 Vapo-Cresolene "Used while you sleep"

Send for Descriptive Booklet 44C Sold by Druggists
VAPO-CRESOLENE CO., 62 Cortlandt St., New York

Maternity Apparel
With No Maternity Look

LANE BRYANT Maternity Clothes enable you to dress stylishly during all stages of maternity—and after baby comes, as well. Very latest modes, cleverly designed to conceal condition. Patented adjustments provide expansion. 76-page Style Book, picturing latest styles in Maternity Coats, Suits, Dresses, Skirts, Corsets. Sent Free. Write for it today.

Style Book FREE

Lane Bryant Address Dept. U1 38th St. at Fifth Ave. New York

Would You Like This for Your Christmas Dinner

?

It is gladly received by tens of thousands of orphans in the Near East. A substantial increase in our offerings would enable the Near East Relief to take them into the orphanages and give them adequate care and training in a Christian atmosphere.

110,000 are now in the care of the Near East Relief, under charge of skilled, experienced, devoted relief workers and SAFE from the encroachments of soldiers or bandits.

Fred B. Smith says the work is "100 per cent efficient."

Invite an unseen guest to your Christmas table. $5 a month will save a child—$60 a year.

Mail your check to

Margaret C. Munns,

Treasurer of National W. C. T. U.

Evanston, Illinois

CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT

THE UNION SIGNAL ..... $1.50 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance (monthly).....50c a year
Single Copies, 5c each; per 100 .....$2.75
Club rate for ten or more Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition subscriptions, 40c a year. No other premium allowed.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER ..... 35c a year
Single Copies, 3c each; per 100 .....$2.00

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES

THE UNION SIGNAL .....$2.00 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (monthly) .....62c a year
THE YOUNG CRUSADER .....47c a year

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL Evanston, Illinois

Good News

Della F. Withers, Circulation Manager

The circulation of THE UNION SIGNAL increased 4,500 since November 1, 1921. Let us add another zero and make it a 45,000 increase by next November. It can be done.

Every state with the exception of six made a gain in THE UNION SIGNAL circulation. Minnesota more than doubled, advancing from 401 subscribers November 1, 1921, to 826 in 1922.

YOUR STATE CAN DOUBLE—TRY IT.

Prize Winners

THE UNION SIGNAL Challenge Light was won this year by New York state. This prize was awarded for the largest number of new subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL sent in since November 1, 1921.

Checks were won by eighteen state promoters whose state made a gain in circulation of THE UNION SIGNAL of 25 per cent or more.

	Per cent gain
Minnesota	105
South Dakota	93
Kansas	89
West Virginia	79
Utah	56
Oklahoma	53
Nebraska	51
Georgia	50
Delaware	47
Iowa	47
Wisconsin	46
Kentucky	42
Indiana	38
Virginia	34
Rhode Island	32
Alabama	32
Maine	26
Vermont	26

"Almost Winners"

	Per cent gain
Florida	24
Colorado	24
Oregon	24
Arkansas	23
New Hampshire	23
Illinois	[illegible]
South Carolina	21

A press dispatch from Washington states that the post office department is on the trail of foreign companies that have been flooding the United States with circulars offering a product for the home manufacture of Madeira, port, Rhine, and other wines in exchange for American dollars. A recent analysis of the ingredients of these alleged products of rare vintage sent out by the European firms showed that they were "fakes," say the department heads.

"THE WORDS THAT WE DID NOT SAY"

A beautiful song. I furnish with it seven other specials, five solos, duets, etc., worth, at 25 cents each, $2.00, but I furnish the eight for only 25 cents, or 3 sets and a copy of the great patriotic 25 cent sheet song, "The U. S. A. For Me," and very helpful plan for preserving your eyes, all for only 60 cents.

Rev. L. L. Pickett,
Wilmore, Kentucky.

W. C. T. U. Badges. Made of mother of pearl. Price 25 cents each. Address treasurer W. C. T. U., Jerusalem, Palestine. P. O. Box 443.

The Ultimate Man or woman—your boy or girl—requires an abundance of nourishment rich in vitamines to assure normal growth and strength.

Scott's Emulsion

of pure vitamine-bearing cod-liver oil should be a part of the diet of most children. It abounds in vitamine-elements that aid growth and assist in the formation of strong bones and healthy dentition

Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J. 22-46

The Union Signal

OFFICIAL ORGAN

NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly — Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year in Advance

Entered as second class matter at the Postoffice at Evanston, Illinois

Vol. XLVIII — EVANSTON, ILLINOIS, DECEMBER 21, 1922 — No. 51

It came upon the midnight clear,
That glorious song of old,
From angels bending near the earth,
To touch their harps of gold;
"Peace on the earth, goodwill to men,
From heaven's all-gracious king:"
The earth in solemn stillness lay,
To hear the angels sing.

For lo! the days are hastening on,
By prophet-bards foretold,
When with the ever-circling years
Comes round the age of gold!
When peace shall over all the earth
Its final splendors fling,
And the whole world send back the song
Which now the angels sing!

—Edwin H. Sears

This beautiful picture of the Madonna and Child, the work of a French artist, is used on The Hope of the Cradle certificates of the Ruban Blanc (W. C. T. U.) of France. The translation of the inscription beneath the picture is as follows:

"I desire that my child shall be enrolled up to the age of seven years as a member of The Hope of the Cradle. I promise not to give or permit to be given to my child any beverage which contains alcohol."

Names of children and parents follow.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

PROMISED "REVOLT AGAINST PROHIBITION" NOT IN EVIDENCE—UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT RULES LIQUOR OFFENSES TWICE PUNISHABLE—ORGANIZATIONS AT ENTHUSIASTIC CONFERENCE APPROVE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION—APPROPRIATION BILLS MOVE ENCOURAGINGLY

LENNA LOWE YOST, National W. C. T. U. Legislative Representative, Washington, D. C.

That "revolt against prohibition," of which the people have heard so much duriug the past year, was not in evidence during the consideration of the appropriation for enforcement of prohibitiou in the House of Representatives a week ago.

Aided by Representative Louis C. Cramton of Michigan, who has come forward with splendid leadership, and steeled by the personal support of President Harding, the dry forces quickly voted down every one of the series of amendments offered by Representative John Philip Hill of Maryland to tie up the $9,000,000 appropriation for law enforcement during the next fiscal year. On the first vote, the wet attack was turned into a fiasco when Mr. Hill, demanding a division of the vote, cast his eye about the Chamber to find himself standing alone with George Holden Tinkham, Representative from Massachusetts.

Marks Collapse of Wets

Amid the laughter of the House, wets and drys alike, "the twin champions of John Barleycorn," as they were dubbed by colleagues, smilingly shook hands across the table that separated them. It was the beginning of the wet retreat, marking the collapse of the modification campaign during the remainder of the session. Eight amendments altogether were defeated. On the first amendment to restrict the Commissioner from expending $150,000 for the continuance of the publicity bureau, the vote was 98 nays and 2 yeas, Mr. Hill and Mr. Tinkham alone supporting the amendment.

Other amendments included prohibiting the use of any of the money appropriated in the Treasury Bill for the following purposes: Purchase of evidence against violators, travel or other expenses of those making speaking trips; payment of salaries or expenses of agents who wilfully failed to enforce the law; payment of salaries to legal advisers, counsel or lay clerks; for political propaganda to defeat members of Congress.

Some of the amendments received only Mr. Hill's support in the absence of Mr. Tinkham, who left the Chamber at various times. One amendment offered, to compel appointments in the Prohibition Bureau to be under civil service, had but 7 votes. While there is sentiment in the House for this policy, members resented the attack made by the Maryland Representative on essential appropriations, coming immediately after the President's address, and refused to become a party to a deliberate effort to tie up funds necessary for law enforcement.

Mr. Cramton vigorously carried the fight straight into the camp of the enemy. "In the consideration of all these amendments, the House should remember," Mr. Cramton said, "particularly in the light of the splendid appeal for Americanization and law observance which our President has just offered in this Chamber, that the gentleman from Maryland speaks on this floor on this question as the authorized, duly credentialed minister plenipotentiary and envoy most extraordinary of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment.

"When the gentleman offers here an amendment to the item carrying into effect one of the provisions of our Coustitution, in that act he represents an organization that is known by all of its propaganda as being opposed to the Eighteenth Amendment, an organization which has no idea of ever securing its repeal, but desires to nullify that part of the Constitution by ham-stringing and defeating its enforcement."

The entire day was a Red Letter Day in the House of Representatives, for it was the same day the President of the United States announced his belief that prohibition had come to stay and his intention to launch a campaign for law enforcement.

The most important feature of this campaign is the conference of governors, which the President has already called to meet in Washiugton next week.

Between now and the convening of the next Congress, when the "battered ranks" of the wets will be reinforced in the House by a very small number, the whole vigorous campaign for law enforcement will be on and will keep the opposition on the defensive.

United States Supreme Court Rules Liquor Offenses Twice Punishable

It was a sweeping victory for enforcement of the prohibition laws when the United States Supreme Court, through Chief Justice Taft, handed down a decision that prohibition violators may be prosecuted and punished by both state and Federal authorities for the same offense.

The Court declared that the "double jeopardy" clause in the Constitution applied solely to two or more prosecutions by the Federal government for the same offense. In other words, if a state court fails to mete out punishment sufficiently drastic in the opinion of the Federal enforcement officers, they may at once institute prosecution against the offender and the Federal courts have full authority to punish him again for the same offense under the National Prohibition Act.

Will Dry Up Wet Places

Prohibition leaders hail the decision with delight. They believe it will aid greatly in drying up some of the most conspicuous oases within the territorial limits of the United States, since, if enforcement becomes light and offenders are let off with trivial fines in some states, the Federal enforcement authorities can seize these same offenders, prosecute them in the Federal courts and have them heavily punished for the same violation.

The decision of the Court came on an appeal by Arthur Magrini and four co-defendants who were charged in the United States District Court of the state of Washington with making, transporting and possessing liquors and operating a still. Their contention was that the same charge was made against them in a superior court of Whatcom county, Washington, a state tribunal, and that they had been fined $250 each on three counts. They argued in the Supreme Court that two punishments for the same act—one under National prohibition laws and another under state prohibition laws—meant double jeopardy.

"If Congress," the Court said, "sees fit to bar prosecution by the Federal courts for any act when punishment for violation of state prohibition has been imposed, it can, of course, do so by proper legislative provision, but it has not done so."

Organizations at Enthusiastic Conference Approve Department of Education

At a recent conference held at the Washington headquarters of the National Education Association, it was evident that interest in the Sterling-Towner Education Bill was very much alive. The N. E. A., which takes the initiative in this campaign for the proposed legislation, has allies in more than a score of national organizations, the W. C. T. U. being one which has given its approval to the bill.

The two great principles contained in the measure are for the recognition of education by creation of a Department of Education, with a Secretary in the President's Cabinet, and Federal aid for the promotion of education, with a guarantee that the control and management of public education within the states shall be reserved exclusively to the states.

For the first time the Congressional Reorganization Committee met in Confereuce with the President this week to consider the whole reorganization of government departments. It is expected that the plan will be presented to Congress in the near future. The proposed plan, it is learned, provides for a Department of Education and Welfare in a form, it is believed, which will prove acceptable to education leaders, since it embodies one of the major proposals of the Sterling-Towner Bill.

Miss Charl Ormond Williams, former president of the N. E. A., capable and charming, is directing the congressional campaign for the N. E. A.

Appropriation Bills Move Encouragingly

This week the advance of appropriation bills has been most encouraging. The Treasury Appropriation Bill, which carries $9,000,000 for the Prohibition Unit, has passed both houses.

The State and Justice Appropriation Bill has passed both House and Senate, as has that of Commerce and Labor, which carries appropriations for the Children's and Women's Bureaus, and the Naval Appropriation Bill has been reported to the House from committee.

The appropriations in the House bill for the Women's Bureau is $105,000, an increase of $5,000 over that of last year. The Children's Bureau appropriation is $310,000, in addition to $1,240,000 for the administration of the Maternity and Infancy Law.

Memorial to Negro Mammies of South Urged by Senator

The memory of "The Faithful Colored Mammies of the South" would be perpetuated in enduring bronze or granite under a resolution offered by Senator Williams of Mississippi.

The measure would direct the chief of engineers of the Army to select a site and permit Jefferson Davis chapter, No. 165, United Daughters of the Confederacy, to erect such a monument in Washington as a "gift to the people of the United States."

Legislative Headquarters, Bliss Building, Washington, D. C., Dec. 16, 1922.

Two Friends of Prohibition in House of Commons

Two decisive victories for the cause of prohibition were gained at the recent general election in England.

Lady Astor, who was returned for the Sutton division of Plymouth, Devonshire, defeated Dr. Wansey Bayly, who stood as a champion of all the liquor interests. Mr. Edwin Scrymgeour of Dundee, standing first and foremost as a prohibitionist, was elected in place of the Right Hon. Winston Churchill, former Minister for Air, and is the first to sit in the English House of Commons as representing the cause of prohibition. As long ago as 1908, Mr. Scrymgeour was defeated at a by-election at Dundee, gaining only 665 votes; so that his recent majority over Mr. Churchill—the biggest in the electoral history of that city—shows a great increase of strength in the cause of prohibition, and has rewarded Mr. Scrymgeour for his long and patient efforts. He has declared it as his fixed intention to bring a prohibition bill before the House as soon as he gains a footing at Westminster.

A World War Against Prohibition to Be Waged With United States

According to press dispatches, a world fight against alcoholism, with the United States as the center of the fight, was planned at the closing session of the third annual prohibition congress which met in Brussels the last week in October.

Senator Delannoy, Belgium, who presided at the gathering, defined the object of the congress as the energetic struggle against the tendencies of modern legislation to sacrifice individual and commercial liberty. Count Demun of France was named as the head of the "international committee of defence," a force "to bring the dry people back into the wet fold." Its members believe that recent events in the United States, such as the difficulties in regard to the shipping, have created a favorable atmosphere for the anti-prohibition assault.

The meeting closed with a banquet, which was marked by the abundance of wines served to the delegates, who were from eleven countries, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, England, Finland, France, Italy, Norway, Spain, Sweden and Switzerland.

Baseball Boosted by Prohibition

Last season was the biggest in the history of baseball, according to the latest and best figures. The reason for this, according to Thomas J. Hickey, president of the American association, is contained in one word, and that is—prohibition.

"Prohibition has been the greatest blessing ever enjoyed," says Mr. Hickey, as quoted in a Chicago daily. "I don't mean in the conduct of the players, for ballplayers always have been—with few exceptions—clean living men. The passing of the saloons increased our patronage wonderfully. Regardless of the moral aspect of the Eighteenth Amendment, it was a great business booster for us." He goes on to explain that in the old days men used to drop in for "just one" on the way to the ball park. Other prospective fans would drop in for the same reason. Time would pass, as time would in a saloon. A bit later the eastern scores would begin coming in on the ticker and the assembled fans would say something like this:

"Oh, well, we'll miss the practice and the first inning. Let's stay here and get the scores off the ticker."

There were 7,000 saloons in Chicago prior to prohibition. If half of them had tickers and two baseball fans were delayed in these places each day, just 7,000 possible customers did not purchase admissions at the gate. This figure may be a trifle large, but it serves to explain the situation.

An Expert Speaks

It is the opinion, voiced in no unmistakable terms by Captain Ryland Drennan, veteran in command of the Pacific Mail steamship "President Lincoln," in a San Francisco periodical, that the American passenger business will not suffer through the ruling in regard to prohibition on ships. It may well be furthered. Captain Drennan is quoted in part thus: "These wonderful ships of ours need no alibis because liquor has been eliminated....If there exists a person who is hesitating in choosing between a dry or wet ship before purchasing transportation, let him discuss the matter, as I have done frequently, with those who cross the Pacific at least once each year....These men and travelers, the old dependables, now prefer our American ships....America has the right kind of ships, the right kind of men to handle them, and all that is needed is to visualize the exact conditions to the public, and we will build and maintain the greatest merchant marine in history."

Legion Denies Backing Bonus-Beer Measures

The American Legion will favor no national bonus proposition which includes the legalizing of the sale of beer, according to a statement in the Iowa Legionaire. "Talk of the legion supporting any bonus-beer measures is just plain bunk," is the terse statement.

A Students' "Bone Dry" Club

According to the press, students of the University of South Dakota have organized a "Bone Dry" Club, having for its objective promotion of the enforcement of the Volstead Law. It is said, moreover, that practically every young man on the campus is a member of the club and has pledged himself to aid prohibition officers throughout the state, that an auxiliary society is being formed among the co-eds, and that the movement bids fair to spread to other educational institutions.

Prohibition Uplifts the Fair

"Women political 'dry' leaders in both parties, have found a new argument for prohibition at the Trenton fair, New Jersey," says an eastern paper. "Ten years ago, the women recall, the rialto, in front of the big grand stand, swarmed with men in all stages of intoxication, making a general nuisance of themselves and frequently annoying orderly visitors. The women compare these conditions with those found this year, even on Big Thursday, when they say there was not a 'drunk' in sight and the best of order prevailed in one of the biggest crowds that ever visited the fair."

The International Association of Fairs and Expositions Passes Resolution Against Vice at Fairs

"The champions of better business practices, mainly the clean independent showmen, the riding device operators and the square shooting concessionaires, won a clean-cut victory at Toronto over the reactionaries, the stand-patters and defenders of things as they are," when the International Association of Fairs and Expositions adopted, with only one dissenting vote, a resolution against vice at fairs, according to the Billboard, which gives in full the speech made by Charles Ringling on the subject.

Mr. Ringling spoke of the influence the good show would have, in that it would "inspire confidence and leave friends behind" as it went from place to place, and of the vicious influence exerted by a bad show. "If you will go on record now and definitely agree that you will not tolerate such shows on your grounds, you will do more in a single sweep to clean up out-of-door shows than can be done in any other way I know of," he said. At the close of his address he asked the association to pledge itself not to tolerate gambling with or without apparatus; unfair spindle wheels; hoochie-koochie dancers; concessions in which hired women danced with men patrons; and shows for "men only." The resolution in its final form follows:

"Be It Resolved, By the International Association of Fairs and Expositions, that we go on record as favoring clean fairs, which maintain the highest possible standards for all attractions and concessions, and that nothing be tolerated on our grounds of a degrading or dishonest nature, to the end that our fairs and expositions render the maximum service in the years to come."

Drunkards Do Not Turn to Dope Because of Prohibition

"If I were trying to produce an argument against prohibition, I would never say, 'If they don't get alcohol, they'll get dope,' because an addict to dope and an addict to alcohol are entirely different mentally and physically," says Dr. Joseph C. Doane, director of the medical department of the Philadelphia General Hospital, as quoted by the Philadelphia North American. Dr. Doane stated before a meeting of social workers that between four and five hundred drug addicts had been questioned as to whether they had used liquor before becoming addicted to dope, and that there was not a single case of taking drugs when alcohol could not be obtained.

Although the doctor insisted that the period in which prohibition has been the law is far too short to provide a basis for any scientific statement as to the effects on insanity and other diseases, "even if there had been no liquor sold at all in this period," he said he thought it a most "striking fact that the number of alcoholic cases admitted to the hospital had dropped from 3,830 in 1916 to 499 thus far in 1922," and that in the same period the number of deaths at the hospital due to the excessive use of alcohol had dropped from fifty-six to eight. What he termed "a beautiful case of delirium tremens" at Bellevue Hospital was not recognized by one of the medical students. "It will soon be impossible," he said, "for us to find specimens of alcoholic delirium in the training of medical students, and once certain hospitals were almost filled with them."

THE STONES OF PEKING

Christine I. Tinling

The Forbidden City is no longer surrounded by a veil of mystery. Since imperial pomp is a thing of the past, the man of the people and the stranger from another land may tread its sacred precincts. It has been said that a great city is a great solitude, and this must have been true in a peculiar sense for those who formerly lived within the Tse Chin Cheng, for in the very midst of teeming millions they were shut away by themselves.

There are, in fact, four cities of Peking. The Chinese City, with its strong walls and buttresses and its high towers, standing guard over the sixteen gateways, adjoins the Tartar City on the south. The latter occupies in part the very spot on which Kublai Khan built his beautiful capital, when, in the thirteenth century, he swept down from Mongolia. Marco Polo's description of its magnificence gains more credence today than it did from his own contemporaries.

The Imperial City is in the center of the Tartar City, yet separated from it by a wall twenty feet in height, penetrated by imposing triple gateways, the middle one in each case being formerly opened only for the Emperor.

Last of all, innermost of all, we find the Forbidden City, the kernel of Peking. Beyond its broad moat and behind its massive pink walls, thirty feet high and thirty feet wide, lie the marble palaces, the yellow-tiled pavilions and the quaint gardens of the old imperial court.

A Monotheistic Faith

But while such scenes kindle the imagination, and the gleaming white bridges and balustrades form a background for ghostly figures, belonging to an age-long past, there are other stones of Peking which are of even deeper significance. Away to the south lies the spacious enclosure known as the Temple of Heaven, with its vast altar open to the sky. This is China's great monument to a pure monotheistic faith. Here are no images or idols of any kind, only a chaste and beautiful pile of pure white marble, on the summit of which every year the head of the nation knelt in communion with Heaven. It was after two nights of fasting and vigil in the Palace of Abstinence that the Emperor came forth to bow before the Lord of All. Humbly he prayed for protection and abundant harvests, and offered sacrifice for the sins of the people. Whence came this conviction that without shedding of blood there is no remission, if it was not a part of a divine revelation given to the human race in its infancy, before ever men were scattered abroad, speaking different tongues?

In the stones of this great white altar there would seem to be also a hint of the truth of the Trinity. At any rate, whatever the meaning, the number three is impressed on everything about it. The altar consists of three terraces, connected by three flights of stairs, the steps in each being three times three.

Astronomy enters largely into the architecture of the Altar of Heaven, for there are three hundred and sixty marble balustrades upon it, corresponding with the three hundred and sixty days in the lunar year and the number of degrees in the celestial circle. These are only the most simple and obvious relations. For those who have time to spare and a desire to understand the thought of a great people, the stones of Peking offer a most fascinating study.

Yet are there buildings of another kind more interesting still, which hold the mind's attention with a stronger grip. For, after all, the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal. We cannot be taken up to any great extent with the picturesque past, when the New China is seen to be rising everywhere about us, and hope and fear alternate as to its final form.

Foundations of Temperance Work

The W. C. T. U., though small and little recognized as yet, has nevertheless had a not unworthy part in the making of the New China. Peking is the home of Mrs. Chauncey Goodrich, the first president of the national organization, and as a wise master-builder she has laid the foundation of temperance work in this country. It was when our well-beloved Katharine Lent Stevenson made her round-the-world trip in 1909 that Mrs. Goodrich felt called to devote her energies in large measure to the W. C. T. U. Being eminently practical and gifted with no small amount of executive ability, she fully obeyed the injunction, "First plan your work and then work your plan." She gave the following summer to the preparation of material, studying the temperance question for several hours a day. She wrote leaflets in Chinese and edited a primer of temperance and hygiene. Posters explaining the harm of cigarets were circulated in large quantities. Mrs. Goodrich personally organized many local unions and corresponded with all of them. She prepared programs for their use and kept them supplied with literature. She trained the women in the Peking Bible School to go out and give temperance addresses at temple fairs and other gatherings. Evangelists also received instruction from her, and they were provided with temperance posters to use in their tent meetings as they traveled from place to place.

Standard Higher Because of W. C. T. U.

The present editor of the national organ of the "China for Christ" movement did his first public work under Mrs. Goodrich's superintendence. For two and a half years he was engaged in writing and translating for the W. C. T. U., and he made long tours in the interest of temperance reform. Another eminent worker trained by Mrs. Goodrich was Miss Chen, a graduate of the Women's College. One hears far and wide of her great acceptability as a speaker and of her beautiful Christian character. She is now in the Yunnan Mission, engaged in evangelistic work.

Because she multiplied herself by thus training Chinese leaders, Mrs. Goodrich was able to extend the W. C. T. U. from her own province of Chih-li into Honan, Shantung, Shansi and Kiangsu, and even up into the dependency of Manchuria. In Peking itself she had six local unions and two Loyal Temperance Legions. Her work among students was of first importance. It is safe to say that the standard among the Chinese preachers in the north is higher than it would otherwise have been, because of the persistent, practical work of the W. C, T. U. and its capable president. Our World's organization must ever hold her in grateful remembrance. The foundation stones she laid may be hidden, as is the case in all great buildings, but though unseen they are still serving their noble purpose.

Perhaps no two people notice exactly the same things when they visit a city like Peking, for the simple reason that the variety offered is very great, and none of us can take in more than a fraction of what we see. The connoisseur in porcelains or bronzes or cloisonné ware might spend weeks in rapturous enjoyment of the treasures of art and go away at last leaving much beauty still unexplored. Others might spend equal time and energy on rugs and embroideries, lacquer and jade. Yet all of them would miss the chief wealth and glory of China's capital.

To find the best it is useless to consult a guide-book, and no sign-post or other announcement will point out which way it lies. It is not found among the museums of art or in the splendors of architecture. The ancient Spartans refused to build a battlement round their city, for they said a rampart of men was better than one of stone. And of a surety, China's true boast is not in her ancient walls or her costly marbles, but in those citizens, whether few or many, who quietly and strongly fill their place and serve their country.

The Living Stones

If one goes in search of these it is to Christian institutions one must chiefly turn. While noble characters are sometimes found apart from any definite knowledge of the truth, only the Divine Builder can take rough, unpromising material and fashion it into forms of strength and beauty. Of such transfigured lives it will readily be acknowledged, "They are God's building."

Let us glance at a few of these "living stones" of Peking. Many years ago a hungry boy ventured into a mission day school in Tientsin. Whether he was desirous of an education or not, it would be hard to say, but he certainly wanted something to eat, and the kind-faced missionary was ready to give him that and clothes besides. Though the little fellow's family were in dire poverty, they were very well connected. They belonged originally to one of the best Manchu "banners," as the tribes were called which came down from Manchuria at the time of the Conquest. The lad responded to Christian teaching, developed into a fine man, and is now the father of one of the most remarkable families in Peking. He has had four sons and one daughter. All of them have shown unusual ability, and all have had the advantage of studying abroad.

One boy died when he was just about to complete his medical course. He was an outstanding Christian, so he has but exchanged his sphere of service for a higher one. The second son holds the rank of Surgeon-General in the army. He has been sent to England, Belgium and Japan as China's representative at important conferences. The next of these brothers is private secretary to the president of the Far Eastern Railroad, a position that carries much influence and responsibility. Formerly he was at the head of all the Y. M. C. A. work for Chinese students in Amer-

(Continued on Page Twelve)

UNDERWRITING THE 1923 LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

THE LILLIAN STEVENS LEGISLATIVE FUND,

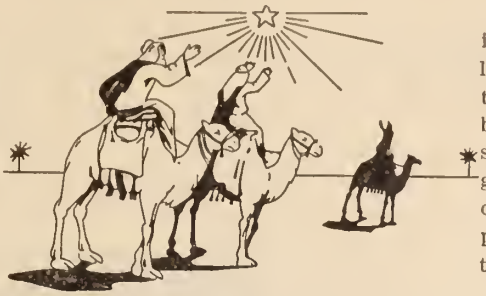
Margaret C. Munns, National Treasurer

A legislative program? Certainly the National W. C. T. U. has a legislative program. How else could the organization have assisted in securing National Constitutional Prohibition?

Is there need for a further legislative program? To have and to hold prohibition there must be constant vigilance and ofttimes aggressive action. An insidious foe is watching relentlessly for an opportunity to weaken the defenses and once more ride into power with "Personal Liberty for the People" emblazoned on its banners. Personal liberty in this case means freedom of men and women to poison themselves with alcohol in the form of wine and beer. The gate being once opened, the whole foul saloon system would soon follow and the liquor traffic again flourish in the land. It shall not be, but the reason it shall not is that there will be no slackening of interest nor cessation of activity in maintaining prohibition as the fixed policy of the land with public sentiment behind it that will tolerate no weakening of the law and will demand the strictest law observance.

What is the special need in 1923? To support our legislative headquarters in Washington, D. C., that the watchman may remain on the watch tower to send out both cheering messages of victory, and warnings of danger in the prohibition field; to assist in the social welfare program to which the organization is committed, and to counsel with members of Congress, officials of the W. C. T. U. and representatives of co-operating organizations.

One of the main features of the 1923 program—our National president's recommendation—is the assembling at the legislative headquarters of a card list of the membership of the W. C. T. U. classified by Congressional Districts, thus demonstrating to members of Congress that a large force of voters is backing them as they provide for the proper enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution.



The Christmas star swung bright and low
To guide the wise men long ago;
And shepherds on Judea's hill
Learned God's desire for man's good-will,
Beneath its glow.

The Christmas star through clouded years,
Through manhood's wars and woman's tears,
Sent glintings faintly understood;
Until, with dawning brotherhood,
The star again appears.

The Christmas star this wintry night
Invades my home with tender light;
It sprinkles gold where baby lies,
And star dust dances in your eyes,
My heart's delight.

The Christmas star, it shines afar
Where our eternal treasures are.
Men hear the good Christ's gentle call,
As twilight lets her curtain fall
And pins it with a star.

—Harold C. Warren in The Continent.

Who are the underwriters? Each union or individual who contributes to the Lillian Stevens Legislative Fund helps to finance legislative work and hence becomes an underwriter, insuring the success of the entire legislative program. Suppose each one applies this couplet: "What kind of a legislative program would there be if each one contributed just like me?"

Each union can have a minimum financial interest of one dollar without slighting any other phase of the work and many can do more, for individual members will be glad to have a share in such a program. There is no fund other than the Lillian Stevens Legislative Fund from which the support for the legislative work can be taken.

Contributions should be made in January, and the amount promptly forwarded through the regular channels.

Why a Lillian Stevens Legislative Fund? The leaders of the National W. C. T. U. have been divinely raised for the special work each was to do. To Lillian M. N. Stevens came the inspiration that the time had come for a forward aggressive step in legislation. In 1911 she called on the friends of the cause to write prohibition into the fundamental law of the land within a decade. From that day until January 16, 1920, when victory came, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union never faltered, or failed to march toward the goal. Mrs. Stevens had answered the heavenly summons before the fulfillment of her hopes, but her memory will ever be honored in the carrying on of the legislative work under the Lillian Stevens Legislative Fund.

CHRISTMAS AND THE BOOTLEGGER

THIS is the story of a reformed Atlanta bootlegger, told in his own words. It is of more than passing appeal at this time, because of the approach of the Christmas season—that interim in the whirlpool of contrasts that should bring to a common level of good will and cheer the master and the servant, the rich and the poor, the old and the young; but which, in reality, serves unwittingly to accentuate caste, and to bring out, like the moonlight in the forest, the shadows of life that grip with a weird fascination, or repel with fright.

This particular bootlegger—no, he is not a bootlegger now, but a prosperous business man who is devoting his surplus time and money to undoing, as far as practicable, the sorrow that his former avocation created—lives in West End; is the father of three beautiful children; the superintendent of a Sunday school and the teacher of a Bible class; and, with a heart that is overflowing with Christian faith and works, is strewing the sunshine of happiness where formerly he left behind him only the "moonshine" of despair.

And here is the story as he told it to the writer:

* * * *

"For twenty-two months preceding Christmas day, 1921, I was regularly engaged in the illegal whisky traffic, making two trips in my automobile each week to a still in a nearby county.

"I sold the stuff first at wholesale only, delivering my supply to a downtown dealer, who distributed it to consumers through hotel bellboys and cafe waiters, and so on.

"While taking big risks, I was making only average wages, counting the costs of operating the car, and the hardships that I personally encountered, riding at night, and in all kinds of weather.

"It occurred to me to do the retailing myself, and get the long profit. Therefore I bought bottles and corks, and in a secluded room that I provided for the purpose, I bottled the liquor and then distributed it to a line of customers whom I had personally worked up.

"This was not difficult to do, as I was supposed to be a man engaged in legitimate business; and I would only suggest to men whom I regarded as safe, that I personally had a private bootlegger who furnished reliable liquor, and that I would get an extra quart once a week, or twice a week, for that particular individual.

"Of course, the various 'individual friends' didn't know, even if any of them suspected, that I was the bootlegger in question.

"Time passed and everything seemed to be going smoothly. One of the later 'customers,' whom I had first approached, was a young man who was a manufacturers' representative, with offices in a downtown building.

"He made eight or ten thousand dollars a year; was clean-cut, handsome, attentive to business, and a devoted father and husband.

"He lived on the north side, near Piedmont Park, and I thought he had two of the prettiest and best deported little children I had ever seen, outside of my own.

"It must not be overlooked that my own family knew nothing of my business. They thought I was a commercial salesman.

(Continued on Page Fifteen)

TEMPERANCE WORK AMONG THE YOUNG PEOPLE OF SIAM; HOW IT BEGAN AND HOW IT GREW

Fannie Root Danser

As I look back upon the beginning of my part in the temperance work for and among the young people of Siam the growth and interest seem phenomenal. Indeed, the hand of the Lord has been in it, for it has gone forward by leaps and bounds since once the seed was rooted in the hearts of some of the young people.

For many years there has been held here in Siam, under the auspices of the Siamese Christians, an annual three-day gathering, called "The Siamese Conference of Christian Workers." Not being a missionary with regular assigned duties, I gradually drifted into the conference work. Two years ago it was my privilege to be chairman of the program committee. Before this, I had made an endeavor to have the cause of temperance presented at each meeting, but there was no one who felt she wanted to do it; consequently, the matter was passed over lightly. A song-book had been published by the Presbyterian Temperance Committee which contained three or four temperance songs translated into Siamese—"Dare To Be a Daniel," "Yield Not to Temptation," etc. These were sung at each conference and were a help.

When I was asked to be chairman of the program committee, I agreed, on one condition, namely, that one hour be given to temperance at each mid-year conference and one whole evening of two hours at the annual three-days' conference. My request was granted, I to secure and prepare the speakers. One after another declined to speak on the subject of temperance, but I very soon learned the reason. First, they knew nothing of the subject; and, second, nearly all these Siamese Christians were addicted to the use of cigarets and were afraid if they advocated temperance it would mean giving these up.

One year ago I prepared four of my Bible class pupils from the Christian College to fill one hour with poster talks, and we had a rousing meeting. The other hour my brother-in-law, Dr. McFarland, gave a most interesting lantern slide temperance talk. Directly after the conference I conducted a temperance study class at the college, which was attended every week by some eighteen of the teachers and senior pupils.

Since the subject has been agitated many of the students have given up the use of cigarets and are influencing their classmates to follow their example. This seems a great step in advance for Siamese young men, for they are taught from babyhood up to smoke.

In August, 1921, the time seemed ripe for the starting of a W. C. T. U. among the missionaries. Several had expressed a desire to join if I would organize a union and be its president. I invited all interested to come to my sister's home and there the W. C. T. U. of Bangkok came into existence with some sixteen members. Meetings have been held regularly with renewed interest ever since. It was voted that we work along Scientific Temperance Instruction lines, and a committee of three to push this work was appointed.

Working committees were appointed by the executive committee of the conference, among these a temperance committee, of which I was made chairman. Krue Charoen, the conference chairman, asked to be with me on this committee, for he had come to know the importance of temperance. To say that I was delighted is putting it mildly, for Krue Charoen is the head teacher at the Christian College.

World's Temperance Sunday Observed in Bangkok

World's Temperance Sunday—January 29—was a day in Bangkok long to be remembered. Temperance sermons were preached in the five churches by the native pastors, special exercises held in all of the Sunday schools, and a temperance leaflet or questionnaire giving temperance facts regarding the amount of liquor imported into Siam and that made locally was distributed. There are in Siam, with a population of some 9,000,000 people, twenty-three distilleries.

Siamese Young People Preparing to Push Prohibition

Temperance Day in the Schools

Another great advance in the temperance reform in Bangkok was the observance on June 9 of Temperance Day in the schools.

How best to introduce into our schools scientific temperance instruction was a subject taken up by the temperance committee of the conference and the S. T. I. committee of the W. C. T. U., working together. As a first step, it was decided to get translated into Siamese, for the use of the teachers, helpful temperance tracts, stories and incidents. I had prepared the way by having on hand material secured from the National W. C. T. U. Miss Christine Tinling's books seemed to fill a great need.

In order to have the teachers themselves prepared, all the teachers of the schools connected with the mission, seven in all, were asked to write essays on some phase of the liquor question, these to be handed in Temperance Day, June 9. Material was provided and the essays are surely fine. There was a wide range of subjects, each teacher selecting her own from a list of forty possible ones. The essays are being printed each month in the College News, and five hundred copies struck off in leaflet form.

On Temperance Day each school followed a program that had been arranged by the temperance committee—temperance songs, the telling of the life story of Frances E. Willard and Neal Dow, a talk on why we were observing Temperance Day, the temperance playlet (in Siamese), "The Sick Baby," given in two of the schools, while in the Christian College there was a demonstration showing the purchasing power of one bottle of whisky. As the close of the program the principal of the college remarked: "The first Temperance Day in the schools of Siam—but I hope it will not be the last." Indeed, we hope now to have it as an annual feature.

Evangelistic Temperance Conference

It seems to me a climax is being reached when the Siamese young people are so thoroughly aroused to the importance of temperance teaching that they are willing to devote every available school holiday to the giving of temperance talks in nearby towns. The first meeting of the kind was a two-day session held in Petchaburi July 8 and July 9. It has been my privilege to have a share in the training of these young people who are now going ahead on their own initiative to scatter temperance truths throughout the length and breadth of the little empire of Siam. The first "temperance team" consisted of four teachers from the Bangkok Christian College and two of the senior students. These six young people consecrated to Christ and His work conducted most successfully the two-day temperance conference at Petchaburi. They varied their program according to their audience. Saturday afternoon there were one hundred and fifty school children present, so a program suitable for boys and girls was presented. Saturday evening was a time when Government officials could be present, so the theme treated was, "Alcohol a Poison," with poster talks, experiments and a demonstration. Sunday morning the program consisted of Bible stories and special temperance talks, closing with a very impressive consecration service.

The time has come when the young people are begging for the privilege of taking part on temperance programs—quite a contrast to two years ago. We will have to have more meetings, in order to give all an opportunity to take part. Twenty-one young men have signed a letter asking me to give another course on temperance at the college. They surely mean business, and Siam is going to be greatly benefited by their enthusiastic, consecrated service. One or two Young People's Branches will be organized, the first to have as members young men and young women teachers. They will take up as their study book, "Alcohol and the Human Race," by Richmond P. Hobson.

We ask the prayers of the home people for the cause and the native workers in Siam. It is a great work, and only through the continued help of our heavenly Father can we hope to make of Siam a prohibition nation.

Bangkok, Siam.

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION JANUARY 16, 1923

Third Anniversary of National Constitutional Prohibition

"The Eighteenth Amendment denies to a minority a fancied sense of personal liberty, but the amendment is the will of America and must be sustained by the Government and public opinion, else contempt for the law will undermine our very foundations." Warren G. Harding, President of the United States.

"The keystone of law can only be firm and secure when it is held in place by the arch of that keystone, which is public sentiment." Frances E. Willard.

PROGRAM

Five minute speeches

Singing, "Sound the Jubilee"

Allegiance to the Constitution of the United States Demands Unqualified Obedience to All Laws

"I PLEDGE ALLEGIANCE TO MY FLAG"

The Home The School

Singing, "When We All Grow Up to Be Twenty-One," by the Children

"AND TO THE REPUBLIC FOR WHICH IT STANDS"

The Church The Professional or Business Man

"ONE NATION, INDIVISIBLE"

The Business or Professional Woman The Press

Singing, "Work for Enforcement"

"WITH LIBERTY AND JUSTICE FOR ALL"

The Voter The Public Official

Solo, "It Is There to Stay"

"AND HAVING DONE ALL, TO STAND"

"Underwriting the 1923 Legislative Program"

Singing, "America"

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE CELEBRATION

A luncheon, dinner or other social gathering will be very fitting for a "birthday party." If none of these is advisable the program may be used for an evening meeting, either on January sixteenth or the preceding Sunday.

Arrange for such a celebration in every possible locality. Good advance newspaper publicity should inspire neighborhoods where there is no W. C. T. U. to gather for the birthday luncheon or dinner.

Invite other organizations to "come to the party." Place their chief officers at your guest table. Send personal invitations to every man and woman. The Eighteenth Amendment belongs to every citizen of the United States.

Select your speakers in time. It takes careful preparation to make a good five-minute speech. Ask each to tell how the group he or she represents can best co-operate in the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Much depends upon the presiding officer in keeping the program moving, and gently, but firmly, holding each speaker to time.

Information for the topic, "Underwriting the 1923 Legislative Program," will be found on page five of this issue of THE UNION SIGNAL.

The song, "When We All Grow Up to Be Twenty-One," should be given by a group of boys and girls. Make the group as large as possible and train these young people to sing with enthusiasm.

All music is on sale at the National W. C. T. U. Publishing House, Evanston, Ill. Prices: "It Is There to Stay," single copy 15 cents, two copies for 25 cents; "When We All Grow Up to Be Twenty-One," 5 cents each, 50 cents a dozen. The other music is found in Jubilee Songs, 10 cents per copy, 75 cents per dozen, $5.00 per 100.

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union
Evanston, Illinois

Editor-in-Chief - - - Miss Anna A. Gordon
Managing Editor - - Miss Julia F. Deane
Associate Editor - - Miss Vida I. Thompson

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors of The Editorial Department, The Union Signal, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittance of $1.50 or under.

Notice of Expiration is sent to the subscriber two or three weeks before renewal is due, so that by immediate attention to this reminder not an issue need be missed. RENEW PROMPTLY.

Remittances should be made by draft on New York or Chicago, or by Post-office Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

Change of Address. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE, $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
Foreign Postage, 52 Cents Additional
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (Monthly) 50c a Year
Foreign Postage, 12 Cents Additional

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., post-office as second class matter. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized August 20, 1918.

Evanston, Illinois, December 21, 1922

New Zealand Grateful for Mary Harris Armor

"Mary Harris Armor has won every heart. Our people are fairly crazy with love for her," writes Mrs. Rachel Don, president of the New Zealand W. C. T. U. "Everywhere she has had crowded meetings; she is creating public opinion and arousing our workers to tremendous enthusiasm. We can never tell our joy at having her with us. She is all and more than all we ever hoped she would be in our great battle. We are inexpressibly grateful to the United States W. C. T. U. for making it possible for her to come to us."

Merry Christmas—Say it With Jubilee Gifts

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union wishes all the world a happy Christmas. Would that it possessed a radio outfit huge enough to send the message to the mothers and children of every land. But there is a better way. The Jubilee Fund is a veritable Santa Claus and has made it possible for the W. C. T. U. to say "Merry Christmas" in gifts far more eloquently than it could in idle words. The Jubilee Fund has put into the Christmas stocking of the World's W. C. T. U. a check for $3,000 that will help the work in forty-two nations. It has provided for the purchase of ground on which a continental headquarters for South America is to be erected—a temperance lighthouse for that great country—and for the support of native workers to go up and down through the republics of the Neglected Continent and enlighten the people. It has made possible native field workers in India, China and Japan, who will carry the message to their own people, in their own languages. It is giving a little needed aid to some European countries which are rebuilding after the war. And in this country it is rendering possible the maintenance of "an all-the-year-round-happiness" through a child welfare research station and the various department activities that are making America more homelike and safeguarding the children and youth in countless ways.

At the Christmas season may there come to the faithful ones who have toiled and sacrificed to raise the dollars which make up the Jubilee Fund the blessed consciousness of the part they have had in lifting the world nearer to that time when "good-will among men, and peace on earth" shall no longer be merely a prophecy, but a glorious reality.

A "New Element" of Christmas

In pre-prohibition days one of the best-patronized saloons in the "anthracite region" was the bar-room of a large hotel. After the enactment of the Eighteenth Amendment, this bar-room was converted into two rooms, one of which was used as a men's hat store, and the other for flowers. The change constitutes a new element of Christmas, says the Rev. John F. Cowan, in speaking of the contrast between the olden days, when the patrons parted with their cash, carrying home to their families heartaches, ravings, cruelty, indecency, poverty, shame and guilt, and the present time, when the patrons bear to their homes the white, crimson and purple flowers, emblems of hope, love, fidelity, gentleness, purity and peace. "To cultivate a beautiful flower in what a few months ago was a vipers' den, to make roses grow where grew formerly the deadly nightshade, to wipe out the ugliness of the landscape and make it bloom like the garden of Eden—that is what the Chief Gardener of the Universe has at last induced His workmen here in America to do."

This "new element of Christmas" is well illustrated, too, by a cartoon which recently appeared in a city daily. A small lad is looking at a Christmas tree in a store window, and saying, with great pride, to some children who stand near him: "Mam says I'm going to have a Christmas tree this year, 'cause dad can't get to no saloons any more."

Prohibition has come as the result of the efforts of an earnest band of patriots to bring about the highest good to the greatest number of people. The echoes of the angels' song are still sounding throughout the world, and will continue to do so, until all individuals and nations shall be willing to submerge their selfish gains for the best good of all. Then in very truth shall we have world prohibition, world purity and world peace.

The A. A. P. A. Again

Most interesting was the meeting of the A. A. P. A. in St. Louis the last of November. The organization was said to be greatly strengthened by its first national gathering, representatives from most of the states of the Union being present. Its founder and chief arbiter, Captain Stayton, claims, according to the press, that this society controls votes representing thirty-five million people, and that the voting members are over four hundred and fifty thousand in number. The story of the plans of the association is one with which the W. C. T. U. should be familiar, for they will be successful or will fail according as the friends of prohibition are indifferent or carry on the fight.

Captain Stayton is reported to have said that a bulletin with the conclusions reached by the gathering would be circulated throughout the membership in the various states, and to have added: "We shall advise these members, at any rate. We want help from the rank and file. If we can't get help from the membership, we are lost."

The secret of the success of the campaign of the organization, as the captain has seen, lies in the response made by the individual members in the different communities to the call he sends out. The wets believe, so they say, that they will be able to influence the next Congress to weaken the Volstead Law, or to have the determination as to what constitutes intoxicating content of alcoholic beverages given over to the states, and finally, to have the Eighteenth Amendment repealed.

SHALL THE A. A. P. A. WIN? ANSWER, RANK AND FILE OF THE W. C. T. U.!

"She's Right!"

It happened in a big moving picture house in a western city. The play that was being shown matters not. But somewhere during the performance there was slipped in a reference to the Volstead Law, and it was hissed. A hundred people in that crowded house may have resented it, but one woman's stern voice rang out in righteous indignation, "Men and women, do you realize that you are showing disrespect to the Constitution of the United States?" As the speaker walked out of the theater, followed by several other people, she heard on every side, "She's right! She's right!" The woman who with the courage of her convictions dared to raise her voice in protest against an insult to the law of the land was the sister of our national corresponding secretary, Miss Virginia Pride. May her tribe increase and multiply, until a hundred thousand of her kind are crying out in the wilderness of disloyal thought and action. On that occasion, as always, there were many to say, "She's right!" but to arouse and make vocal the sentiment for law and order needed the leadership of a brave spirit. Silent forces for righteousness have their place and time, but the hour has come when true-hearted Americans need to lift their voices in emphatic protest against such demonstrations as the one described, and to denounce as traitors, individuals and organizations that by their approval and encouragement of law violation are deliberately tearing down the fabric of the republic.

New National Superintendent Peace Department

Mrs. Effie Danforth MacAfee of New York has accepted the superintendency of the National W. C. T. U. department of Peace and International Arbitration. Mrs. MacAfee has long been actively interested in the international peace movement and brings to the office a wide knowledge of the subject. She is a member of the Society of Friends, has belonged for some time to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the Woman's Club, the Consumers League and other leading women's organizations. She is a graduate of the University of Michigan and is now doing extensive work at Columbia University. She has traveled extensively abroad and is a fine speaker. The National W. C. T. U. considers itself fortunate in securing Mrs. MacAfee for this position. Her address is 317 East Twenty-third St., New York City.

Iowa Newspaper Congratulates W. C. T. U. on Winning Banner

The winning of the Frances Willard membership banner by the Iowa W. C. T. U. calls forth hearty congratulations from the Waterloo Courier, in an editorial entitled, "Iowa Wins, as Usual."

"One interesting and worthwhile fact appears to have escaped public attention so far as the esteemed first page is concerned," says the editor. "The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Iowa, in competition with forty-seven states, won the coveted Frances Willard banner for having made the greatest gain in membership during the preceding twelve months. In the opinion of many people, this prize banner may be of trifling importance, yet to the Courier, which entertains great respect for the W. C. T. U., and its long and splendid record of achievement, it means a great deal. It exemplifies anew the observation that 'in all that is good Iowa produces the best.' The W. C. T. U. stands for the best in everything. The impulse and the motive actuating the women of Iowa in their efforts through this organization are 100 per cent for the good of the community and the nation. Its workers know no race, sect, denomination or class. They work only for one goal—the purification of city, country and home. It is a labor of love; inspired only by motives above and beyond personal gain, fame or physical reward of any kind. It is gratifying that in the campaign to increase membership, force and power, the women of Iowa have outstripped all their sisters in the other forty-seven states. More punch to their arms in Iowa and the nation."

A British Jurist Gives His Views on Prohibition in America

The meeting of the American Bar Association last August was attended by distinguished jurists outside of America, among them Lord Shaw of Dunfermline, of international reputation, who addressed that gathering. He travelled across the continent, and met in his journeys many of our citizens, representative of the culture and intelligence of their communities. In an article contributed to the Manchester Guardian, since his return to England, he tells its readers what he discovered about dry sentiment in the United States. His testimony is interesting because of the weight it will have in Great Britain. We quote in part:

"I could hardly be a Britisher, accustomed to hear the talk of politicians, and of clubs, and of philanthropists, and of Philistines, without wondering how prohibition of the liquor traffic was working in the United States. I confess to having gone prepared for witnessing, in what are called the best classes of society—a phrase which I hope they warrant—that prohibition would be discussed with a lift of the eyebrow as if it were a craze, or a hook of the lip to signify a sneer. I watched for all this from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from east to west, through the middle states, right into California, and all along the Pacific shore. My word is that, looking earnestly for it, I never found it.

"On the contrary I would say from my experience, and from many inquiries, my testimony is as follows: The liquor saloon is now recognized to have been a curse in America. It weakened its fibre, lowered its tone, and clouded the life of men, especially laboring men, with peril. Over and over again I have been told that the country, the village, the small towns, needed prohibition even more than the large towns, and I came to conclude that this was realized to be these smaller communities between cause and effect was more clearly discerned.

"To various persons whose judgment and knowledge I thought that I might rely upon I put the probing question: 'Suppose a general election on that issue, or suppose a plebiscite of the American people on that issue, what do you think would be the result?' The answer was in all cases cautious and firm, but the same. It was this: 'If the issue were presented to the people between the continuance of prohibition and the modification of it, we think that prohibition would be maintained, but that a minority in favor of modification, say in the direction of limited supplies under government control, might be considerable. But if the issue were the broader one—continuance of prohibition or its abolition—90 per cent would be for continuance and 10 per cent for its abolition.' On all hands I was reminded, by way of addendum, of the women's vote. A powerful support, as they conceived, would be given by that vote to prohibition in its most absolute terms."

New Members of W. C. T. U. Executive

At the recent state convention of the New Mexico W. C. T. U., Mrs. Lilie Harrison was elected president. Her address is Box 393, Santa Fe. Mrs. Anna M. Strumquist, whom she succeeds, desires to give her time to work in the interests of the Frances Willard Home for Girls.

Another change in the National W. C. T. U. roster was the name of the department of Work among Colored Women, to the department of Work among Negroes. The new superintendent is Mrs. Marvin Williams, whose address is 431 Green street, Augusta, Georgia.

For God and Home and Every Land

Time of Prayer—Noontide

"It is always noontide somewhere,
And across the awakening continents,
From shore to shore, somewhere,
Our prayers are rising ever more."

For unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given; and the government shall be upon His shoulder; and His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace.

Christmas Eve

Julia H. Thayer

Airy spirits, through the night
Dress our land in bridal white.
Robes of faded brown or gray
Ill become her such a day.
Cover up her naked arms
With a wealth of snowy charms;
Kiss away her gloomy frown;
Place a glistening frosty crown,
Set with jewels manifold,
On her brow so pale and cold.
Rock all boisterous storms to rest
On the south wind's gentle breast;
Make all clamoring voices cease,
For the world should be at peace
On that sacred Day of days
Meant for only joy and praise.
Then when dawns the morn of grace,
Oh, irradiate her face
With such smiles of heavenly cheer
As shall last the livelong year.
Bid her greet the Holy One
Pure with snow and bright with sun.

A Christmas Prayer

If from all Thy good gifts, O Lord, I may ask but one, let that one be the spirit of kindness!

May I never wound the heart of any faltering child of Thine! Make me to do the little unremembered acts that quietly help without intending it. Grant me to bear about the unconscious radiance of a life that knows no grudge, but loves all men because they are children of my Father, Who loved them enough to send His Son to save them. Amen.

—Samuel McComb, D.D.

Our attention is called to the fact that we omitted to mention in the report of the Philadelphia conventions that Miss Susie J. Dailey, the daughter of J. G. Dailey, the song writer, was the accompanist throughout the meetings, and rendered valuable service in that capacity.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. HEADQUARTERS

GENERAL OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL.
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, FARGO, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA.
TREASURER
MRS. MARGARET C. MUNNS, EVANSTON, ILL

1730 Chicago Avenue, Evanston, Ill.

REST COTTAGE

SUNDAY SCHOOL DEPARTMENT

Stella Blanchard Irvine, National Superintendent

We are surprised that the first quarterly temperance lesson of 1923 is dated January 21. It means that to make the day effective, Sunday school workers will need to give immediate attention to preparations for the temperance teaching in the schools, and this, notwithstanding the preparatory work must be done during the holiday season. I beseech of all white ribboners not to lose this opportunity to press home to the youth and adults of the Sunday schools the great principles for which our organization stands.

Doubtless some lesson publications will fail to give the lesson of January 21 as a temperance lesson, and lesson writers may fail to treat it as such, for, with the people in general, they think since we now have prohibition the temperance work is done. This fact makes our work still more imperative.

The International Lesson committee has given us four good lessons this year and the department will continue its effort to bring about a better presentation of these lessons in all lesson publications.

Our first task will be to give publicity to the date of the next Temperance Sunday, announcing the temperance lesson and the temperance topic which it suggests. This can be done through the pulpit, the Sunday schools and the public press.

The title of the lesson is "The Prodigal Son." The lesson text is Luke 15. The Golden text is found in Luke 15:10. The temperance topic suggested by the lesson is, "The Modern Prodigal—habits and worldly allurements which take him from home, waste his substance and lead to the brink of ruin." This is a timely lesson and its temperance applications are apparent and most significant. Every Sunday school teacher and officer should be provided with our department lesson leaflet, which presents themes for primary, junior, intermediate, senior and adult departments and gives a lesson storiette enforcing a great truth.

The Sunday school hour may well begin with the new responsive reading on "Purity." The old song so full of truth, "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?" may be sung, or, "The Bird With a Broken Pinion" will speak the truth of the temperance lesson. Teachers may be called upon to present brief word pictures of the "Modern Prodigal." The pastor may compare the life of purity and total abstinence with the life of vice and sinful habits.

From the primary department the children may give the effective little exercise, "Keep Thyself Pure." A junior pupil may relate the temperance storiette, "The Man With the Twinkling Eye."

Pledge signing is always a part of the program of each temperance Sunday. The department will continue to co-operate with the World's Department in the World's Pledge Signing Campaign. It is a good time now to begin the construction of a Pledge Flag to be unveiled on July 1, the date of the third temperance lesson. Duplicate cards should be signed for the flag. A Christian Flag may be made of the Sunday School Covenant cards. Our department method leaflets will give detailed instruction.

The new department leaflet, "The Sunday School Department in Perspective," sets forth the outline of the work for the year, including the new field of endeavor, temperance teaching in the week-day and vacation Bible schools.

The Department Bulletin, which has met with great favor, will be continued and sent out by the National superintendent as a special free help to local Sunday school workers. Free sample literature will be sent to all who enroll on the department mailing list, and also letters of instruction and the Bulletin. The enrollment fee (50 cents) is simply to help pay postage. Remember to order the Bulletin, and the World's Pledge Signing supplies of the national superintendent. Send all orders for literature to the National W. C. T. U. Publishing House, Evanston, Illinois.

Now to the work! Let January 21 be a great day in the Sunday schools.

115 Walnut St., Riverside, California.

Department of Bible in Public Schools Conference Outlines Work for 1923

The department conference at Philadelphia, arranged for by Mrs. Jean Buchanan Wylie, was most inspiring. Mrs. Ella M. George, president of the Pennsylvania W. C. T. U., led in a fervent prayer in behalf of the work and the workers. Dr. F. M. Wilson, one of Philadelphia's leading pastors, gave a masterly address on, "Shall We Have the Bible in Our Public Schools?" The audience showed high appreciation of this address by requesting that it be published in leaflet form for circulation. Mrs. Richard, president of the Ohio W. C. T. U., and Mrs. Ida Wise Smith, president of Iowa W. C. T. U., each told of the work in her state. A deep interest was manifested by the many questions asked. The national superintendent spoke very encouragingly of the work that has been accomplished and the importance of pressing forward to greater things, and gave an outline of work for 1923 which has been officially endorsed.

Another National Convention—the A. A. P. A.

Among the national and international gatherings which have been held this fall, to discuss prohibition, there was one which as yet has not been mentioned in these pages, having been crowded out by the superabundance of other material. Nevertheless, this meeting, while not deserving of the same kind of attention as the World's and National W. C. T. U. conventions and the World Congress Against Alcoholism, will certainly have much interest for our readers. It was the first national convention of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, held in the city of St. Louis, November 20-22. A few facts concerning this most interesting meeting will no doubt be worth considering. It was specifically designed to unite the various state groups of the same name that are fighting prohibition, thus making a more efficient machine.

Unlike the wet organizations of pre-prohibition days, headed by a brewer, formed for the purpose of putting into political office candidates favorable to the liquor interests, and dissolved as soon as the election was over, the A. A. P. A. claims to come before the nation as a promoter of public interest, and with members who have no liquor backing. However, in regard to this last claim, it is said on good authority that in many of the states not only are the heads co-operating with the brewers, but they are also receiving financial aid from the brewing interests. And as to their desire for public good, the fact that the propaganda of this and other wet organizations has without a shadow of doubt helped to increase the violations of the Volstead Act would hardly prove it to be a promoter of law and order. One of the state directors is reported to have said: "We may write in our literature that we stand for obeying the Volstead Act until it is repealed or modified, and a few of us may believe in supporting it until then. But you know that it is being violated. We are dealing with human nature. It is foolish to suppose that our members generally would obey it."

One of the most important decisions reached at the convention was that a bill should be introduced in Congress transferring to the states the interpretation of what constitutes an intoxicating beverage. According to Captain W. H. Stayton, directing head and presiding officer of the association: "We shall later try to repeal the Volstead Act so as to leave all these questions to the states, letting the states pass their own enforcement laws, because national prohibition has proved a failure and a scandal." The move is to be made as soon as the Congress convenes in March.

(Continued on Page Twelve)

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

RADIO MESSAGES FROM AROUND THE WORLD

Perhaps no member of your Branch was able to attend the World's W. C. T. U. Convention. Then why not have a World's meeting of the "stay-at-homes?" Decorate the room with maps of the world and flags of different nations. A week or more in advance of the meeting, let every member clip from the newspapers and religious and temperance journals items showing the progress of the anti-alcohol movement around the world, and let these be given as radio messages, in the approved style.

Of course connection of the outfit and the receiving of the messages must be "faked." One of several methods might be employed: (1) Select some one with a fine, carrying voice, who, concealed behind a curtain, will read the clippings. (2) Have different members "listen in," using the head set. Let them announce at the beginning the country from which the message comes, then pretend to take notes in shorthand, which they will later translate for the assembled company. Do not worry over the ridiculously short period of time in which the message must be taken. Note the movie heroes and heroines who, in the twinkling of an eye, write long letters, and be comforted! (3) Messages might be given through a megaphone. These are mere suggestions, and may be elaborated, enlarged upon, and worked out in detail.

The following bits of news may be used:

New Zealand

If the report is true, that comes through the press that New Zealand did not win national prohibition at the December 7 election, it only means that the triumph is deferred, for the good people will keep right on working and singing, as they have been:

"Blankets, boots and blessings, coming by-and by;
Cheerio, my comrades, New Zealand's going dry.
Working men, get busy, lift your country high;
Lots of work and wages when New Zealand's dry.
Business men, you're groaning—debts are piling high;
Soon you'll turn the corner—New Zealand's going dry."

Italy

In the Italian Chamber Signor Nitti stated that he would not hesitate to stop the home consumption of wine to export it for the purchase of food, and reminded the Chamber that America was dry. This statement was received with great cheering, the Socialists crying "Down with wine."

Czecho-Slovakia

The sale of alcoholic liquors to children under sixteen and of spirits to those under eighteen has been prohibited in Czecho-Slovakia. President Masaryk is a teetotaler and in hearty sympathy with the prohibition cause.

Chile

From Iquique, Chile, comes the good word from Mrs. Ida T. Arms, W. C. T. U. representative, "We have added several names to our membership and the interest has increased. The editor of our leading paper gives us space for a temperance article once a week, and items from THE UNION SIGNAL are reprinted or adapted. There is soon to be a students contest, with original articles from the young people. The prize is 100 pesos. Seven boys have submitted to me for criticism compositions. Once a month we have an L. T. L. meeting."

India

"One Sunday morning in Madras, at the request of the headmaster of a Mohammedan school, three of us workers went to the school-house to hold a temperance meeting. The place was packed. We had most earnest attention, and when questions were asked as to whether or not it was lawful to try to persuade others to abstain from drink, it was a wonderful opportunity to teach loyalty and at the same time show how, without breaking any law, it was possible to persuade people to keep away from the toddy shops. Several men in the audience asked questions which were not easy to answer. They seemed satisfied. One of the interesting features of the meeting was that a young Indian Christian made his maiden speech and did exceedingly well. There is much latent talent to be used and we must try to direct it. That meeting was attended by all classes of people. There were some government officials, teachers, and students, Tamils and Telugus, Mohammedans and Hindus, as well as Indian Christians who had met to consider this great question. Many signed the pledge, some took pledge books and promised to help in the work. That is one way of working which pays large dividends."

Japan

"Since its enforcement on April 1 this year, the juvenile drinking prohibition act, passed in the last session of the Imperial Diet, has reaped fruitful results," says The Japan Times. "According to the returns of the police bureau of the home department, the cases of violation are very few. Although numerous violations were reported during the early stage of enforcement the number has gradually decreased as knowledge of the law spread. It is reported that since the act became effective, 99,146 members of the young men's associations throughout this country and its colonies have joined the anti-alcohol league in support of the juvenile drinking prohibition movement. Many letters, expressing the gratitude of young men who became teetotalers since April, have been received by Hon. Sho Nemoto, M. P., the stanch advocate of the anti-alcohol campaign, who introduced the juvenile drinking prohibition bill in the Diet as early as 1899, and finally succeded in having it passed at the last session."

The closing message may be the following bit of history by Mary Campbell, World's organizer:

The Child and the Bottle

I asked one of the leading temperance reformers to tell me what it was that led him out into the great work he is doing for temperance. This is what he said: When only a child his young heart had been fired with hatred because of the sobs and cries of a woman that reached his ears from the other side of the wall that separated his house from his neighbor's. One day he said to his mother, "Amman dear, I'm going over to the neighbor and ask her why she weeps." "Very well, Light of My Eyes, go," replied the fond mother.

When the little fellow entered the dark room, he stole softly to the side of a young woman who was huddled up in a corner and touching her gently said, "Sister, why do you weep?"

In reply she pointed to a tiny cupboard in the wall and said, "The Thing inside that is the cause of my weeping. It makes my husband crazy. Then he beats me and oh, I'm so lonely. I wish I could die."

Climbing on a stool and peering into the cupboard, he found nothing but a black bottle from which came an evil smell.

Afterwards when his mother explained it so well that he understood something of the tragedy in the neighbor's home he said to her, "Amman, dear, when I'm a man I'll go out and preach against this Thing that makes our neighbor sister weep all day long."

The childish resolve grew so intense that while still a lad in his teens he took such a strong stand for temperance that he was once debarred from school. Lala Nand Lal, for that is the name of this reformer, is known and loved in many parts of India today because of the step he took that day in defense of the womanhood of India suffering from the demon drink.

Notes From Your Publishing House

To be able to answer intelligently the misstatements made by enemies of prohibition concerning the manner and the means by which national prohibition was secured, every friend of the law should be posted as to the facts in the case. Absolutely reliable information should be in the hands of all. January 16 offers an excellent opportunity for emphasizing the truth. We suggest as peculiarly helpful for this purpose the following leaflets: "Questionnaire on the Federal Prohibition Code," per copy, 3 cents; per dozen, 25 cents; per 100, $1.00. "Quiz on National Constitutional Prohibition"; "Twenty Years of Prohibition Legislation by the United States Congress," Price, each, 2 cents; per dozen, 15 cents; per 50, 40 cents; per 100, 75 cents. Also, "Prohibition Progress as Portrayed by United States Supreme Court Decisions," per copy, 2 cents; per dozen, 15 cents; per 50, 25 cents; per 100, 45 cents.

Every citizen of the United States should possess a copy of the organic law of his country. We have for your use The Constitution of the United States up to date, nicely gotten up in leaflet form at 5 cents per copy, or 50 cents per dozen.

Among other leaflets which we offer as quite pertinent to the present situation are "A Vision of American Sovereignty," by Federal Prohibition Commissioner Haynes, and "Reasons Why the Prohibition Law Is Not Adequately Enforced and Suggested Remedies." These are each 2 cents; 50 copies, 25 cents; 45 cents per 100.

Do not forget that a vast amount of valuable information is contained in the Address recently delivered at Philadelphia by Anna A. Gordon, president of the World's and National W. C. T. U. The array of facts marshalled in the thirty-one pages of this address will enable you, if rightly used, to cope victoriously with any defender of the liquorites. Price, per dozen, 50 cents; single copy, 5 cents, but you will want more than one copy. Order for your pastor, your physician, your school teacher, your Sabbath school superintendent and teachers, and other officials of your church. Don't forget your baker and milkman. Perfect enforcement of prohibition will make more business for each of them, as well as for the farmer and the dairyman and hosts of others.

A Suitable Gift for a White Ribbon Friend

W. C. T. U. Souvenir Spoon. Oxidized silver, showing Rest Cottage, medallion of Miss Willard, bow-knot and floral emblem. Price, $1.75.
(Please send remittance with all orders.)

New Songs for the Children

Patriotic Prohibition Song for Children Everywhere, "When We All Grow Up to Be Twenty-One." Words and music. The same sheet carries also "The New Day Coming" and "Prohibition Here to Stay."

Price per copy, 5 cents; per 100, $2.00.

Also a marching song entitled "Loyal Temperance Soldiers." Price per copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents; per 100, $1.00. These songs will be found very effective for use in public meetings, L. T. L. and Prohibition Guard gatherings, and for Sunday school and public school work.
(Please send remittance with orders).

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois

Another National Convention—the A. A. P. A.

(Continued from Page Ten)

Edwards of New Jersey is expected to lead the wet cause in the Senate, and Hill of Maryland in the House.

According to a reporter for the Christian Science Monitor, brewers are getting behind the A. A. P. A., urging former customers in many lines of business to give it financial support. Men who saw their special line of business hit by prohibition have not needed urging. No matter how many disinterested members are on its rolls, a good share of the driving power of its machinery is supplied by men who have a direct financial interest in the return of beer, and naturally the brewers are giving it their vigorous moral support, since it is doing for them what they cannot do of themselves. Each member pays dues of one dollar a year, and contributions of various amounts have been made.

While the press has been relied on for much of the publicity given, thus far, it has been decided that an official organ is needed, and one will soon be started, to be circulated among the members.

Captain Stayton is said to be not only the founder of the A. A. P. A., but the final authority in all matters which come before that body for decision. The organization is incorporated in the names of himself and son, and G. C. Hinckley, national secretary-treasurer. The captain is to draw up the law which is to be introduced in the next Congress, transferring to the states the right to determine what alcoholic content in beverages shall be permissible. The resolution was passed at the convention that each state organization was to pay a percentage of its income to maintain a central headquarters, but it was left to the captain to say what that percentage should be. In fact, according to his own statement, the convention was simply a recommendatory meeting, all decisions taken having to be referred to the national headquarters. He added, however, that he had already approved of many of the decisions which had been made.

It is the opinion of the worthy captain that while he will press for a vote on the repeal of the Volstead Act, and will have new legislation for modification introduced in the next Congress, the most important task will be that of lining up the parties, during the next presidential campaign, and therefore his organization is immediately to start constructive work along these lines. The wet campaign, while it is by no means to be neglected in other states, is to be concentrated in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Missouri, so as to bring pressure to bear, first on the Democratic, and then on the Republican party, which will compel them to insert wet planks in their national platforms. If these both evade the question, "there may be no other alternative but to form a third party." But, "if the Democratic party goes wet nationally in 1924, it can carry those thirteen pivotal states, in which we shall concentrate our organization, and with the solid South it will win. We feel that obviously the Democrats will do this, for it will give them the election. If so, there will be nothing left for the Republicans to do except to follow suit with a wet plank. With each promising to act against prohibition, this will eliminate the question from both parties."

THIS GIRL IS A WONDER

Do you want more money than you ever possessed? If so, learn to make nut and fruit bonbons—the business will net you $90.00 to $300.00 per month. You can work from your own home; all who sample your bonbons become regular customers. Mary Elizabeth started her candy kitchen with $5.00, and has made a fortune. Cannot you do likewise? I will tell you all about the business. Now is the psychological time to make big money. Write today. Isabelle Inez, 511-B Morewood Building, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

The Stones of Peking

(Continued from Page Four)

ica. In this connection he visited and spoke in the principal colleges of the United States. During the Great War he was in charge of the Y. M. C. A. work for the Chinese labor battalions. The fourth son is the young man above referred to as having helped Mrs. Goodrich in the preparation of temperance literature. The translation of "The Life of Frances E. Willard" is largely from his brush. After graduating from college and theological seminary in China, he went to Hartford to complete his preparation for the ministry. He is now pastor of the American Board church in Peking. He was one of the two official interpreters for the Shanghai Conference.

The only daughter studied at Oberlin and later went to England, where she specialized in kindergarten work. She now has her own private kindergarten in Peking. The missionary who "despised not" that little one in his rags would surely marvel if he knew what God had wrought through him. Perhaps, after all, he does know more than we of the far-reaching results of his kindly ministry in the case of that one family. Is there any investment in the world that can compare with taking stock in young lives?

A Methodist missionary in Peking won the heart of a little beggar by the pleasant smile she gave him when she rode past in her rickshaw. He would run along by its side to win that look from the lady and would trustfully lay his dirty little hands in hers. Once she made him happy by inviting him to a free dinner for boys and men. But she learned later that "he" was a little girl. The father was a drunkard and opium-smoker and had deserted his family, so for years the poor mother had been a beggar on the streets. Her little daughter assisted her in the miserable business from babyhood until she was ten years old. Then the mother was persuaded to let her come into the mission school, stay there as a boarder and cut completely clear of the old life. The child has developed into a fine-looking young woman and is now in charge of a mission day school. The mother, too, has changed. She is a member of the church and is regularly in her place at prayer-meeting. When there is any special evangelistic effort on foot, she is out on the street inviting people into the meetings. "A little bit of love"—how it may transform a life!

This same missionary some years ago opened a school for women. One day there appeared in her office a mother with her two children. She had come because she wanted to learn, but the whole trio looked so miserably ill that they were despatched first of all to the doctor. The report was not encouraging. "The woman has a heart lesion," said the medical missionary, "and should not work. Moreover, she is one of the dirtiest persons I have ever seen, and her children are like unto her." Poor thing, perhaps she had worked too hard in her youth. Her parents died when she was quite young and she had to toil in the fields for her scanty living. No wonder she was rough and uncouth in her manners. But under the rude exterior there was something worth while. The love that hopeth all things and believeth all things made room for her in the institution. Later she told the missionary that no woman she had ever known had been to school, but always she herself had cherished an ambition to go. All through those years spent in the fields she had a feeling that "there must be something to know," and she longed to reach it.

But in accordance with the practically universal custom, she married young, and after her children were born she regretfully decided that the chance of knowing anything would never come her way. But wonders will never cease! Her husband became a Christian, and since the News which he had learned was too good to keep to himself, he resolved to be a preacher. He went to a mission school to study, and being anxious that his wife, too, should learn something, he sent her with the children to this free school for women. There she took the three-years' course and returned to her home to be a real helpmeet for the newly-trained evangelist.

After she had been back there a year the missionary paid her a surprise visit. She found her teaching a small girls' school in her own house. In spite of her still poor health, everything was spick and span, and her own children were models of neatness. There never had been any school for girls in her town before, and she was a true missionary, bringing the light and bringing it freely, for she did not receive from her pupils or from the mission one cent of recompense.

The wonderful and splendid buildings wrought by the hand of man are destined sooner or later to crumble into dust. "The cloud-capped towers, the gorgeous palaces, the solemn temples, the great globe itself" must vanish out of existence, leaving "not a wrack behind." But these human lives, "buildings of God," beautiful because He turned His hand upon them, will remain when earth is but a memory.

(To be Continued)

South Australia Rejoices Over Increased Membership

There was great rejoicing at the thirty-fourth annual convention of the South Australia W. C. T. U. when the corresponding secretary, Miss Lockwood, reported that the membership had increased to 3,040, exclusive of the 127 associate members, and additional ground for encouragement was found in the fact that many of the new members have been recruited from among the younger women.

Mrs. E. W. Nicholls, J. P., the president, in her address at the annual public meeting, enumerated the legislative gains of the last thirty-three years, towards the obtaining of which the W. C. T. U. has rendered yeoman service: Sunday closing, successful local option polls for closing some liquor bars and preventing new licenses from being granted, prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquors to minors, abolition of barmaids, no more "bona-fide" travellers, 6 o'clock closing of liquor bars, temperance teaching in state schools. The W. C. T. U. has used its influence also to secure more just legislation for women, such as the law of summary jurisdiction, which enables a woman to get free from a drunken or cruel husband without expensive legal processes; an equal divorce law; testator's family maintenance bill, and other enactments. These things have been done in co-operation with other women's societies. The main object of the W. C. T. U. from the beginning has been to secure prohibition by creating an atmosphere unfriendly to the liquor traffic.

A Christmas Circle Which All May Draw

He drew a circle which shut me out—
Heretic, rebel, a thing to flout;
But Love and I had the wit to win—
We drew a circle that took him in!

—Edwin Markham.

South Africa Working for Local Option

Once again the white ribboners of the Cape Province (South Africa) W. C. T. U. look back to a very happy time—their thirty-third annual convention, held in Cradock—and press eagerly forward to a year wherein it is hoped by enthusiasm and consecrated endeavor to make considerable progress toward the securing of prohibition. It was a great joy to see the president, Mrs. Sutherland, who had barely recovered from a serious illness, in her place the last three days, but this pleasure was tempered by keen regret that she was not standing for re-election. There were about fifty delegates present.

Rev. A. J. Cook, the secretary of the South African Temperance Alliance, not only took the services on Sunday, but also addressed the convention on the local option bill. A resolution was adopted urging the Government to pass a bill for local option during the next session of Parliament. Other resolutions passed included one to the Minister of Education, dealing with the teaching in the schools of the hygiene of food and drink, and another protesting against the suggestion that the Government should institute a state lottery.

In connection with the School of Methods, there was a demonstration showing how a new union should be formed, and setting forth the activities of the different departments. A new banner bearing the motto, "We study that our work may be effective," was presented to the convention by the superintendent of the School of Methods, and is to be competed for by the unions each year.

Frequent reference was made to the visit to South Africa of Mrs. Deborah Knox Livingston, and the resultant awakening and deepening of interest in citizenship and prohibition. "Y" night was, as usual, a great success.

Through Another's Eyes

A correspondent in Grit (Australia), W. D. B. Creagh, tells of a recent trip to America, where for twelve weeks he traveled from place to place seeking the facts about prohibition. The fact that he had been in America before prohibition, when he himself was a heavy drinker, gave him knowledge of where to look, and how to give correct judgment. He found that "absolutely, the closing of the saloon, the outlawing of the liquor traffic, has worked the greatest and most wonderful benefits to that part of the human race that find themselves on this great continent in the year of grace, 1922."

Mr. Creagh tells at length of his visit to the Bowery, where he told a policeman he wanted to see the dives, the saloons and the sights, and was informed, "There's nothing to see there now." He did find new fronted shops, even new buildings, though here and there was an old saloon front, where soft drinks were sold, and perhaps an occasional bottle of bootleg, but otherwise things were so transformed they were hardly recognizable.

The story of the day concludes with these words: "That day was one of wonderment. I saw thousands of children, no bare feet; I spoke to men, women, and young people; I went into old saloons, some struggling to hold on in the hope of beer and wine coming back; no one but did not say they were satisfied the old style saloon was gone; not many wanted beer and wine. I laid my head on my pillow, feeling that the men and women of my country who were fighting for prohibition really did not know the good they were trying to do, while those who wanted the bar to remain really did not know the harm they were doing to the nation."

Important

Do not fail to secure for your own use, and for distribution, the notable address delivered by the president of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Anna A. Gordon, at the great convention recently held in Philadelphia. This invaluable document should be a handbook for our own members and placed for ready reference upon the desk of pastors, teachers, clubleaders and others interested in the three-fold goal of World Prohibition, World Purity and World Peace. Price, per copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents; per 100, $4.00. (Please enclose remittance with order).

Christmas or New Year Gifts

WHY NOT GLADDEN THE HEART OF A FRIEND OR LOVED ONE WITH A WHITE RIBBON BADGE?

What better than our beautiful Gold Pin set with seed pearls? It makes a charming gift. Price, $5.00.

Flat bow, white enamel on silver, without letters. Price, 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

Same on gilt. 30 cents each; per dozen, $3.35.

Same (gilt) with safety clasp. 35 cents; per dozen, $3.75.

Scotch Clasp Pin. 20 cents; per dozen, $1.80.

Same style in a stick pin; very suitable for use on coats and wraps. 15 cents; per dozen, $1.25.

Blue Enamel Pin, worn by honorary or active members. 25 cents; per dozen, $2.75.

Y. P. B. Pin, blue enamel on gilt. Should be worn by all members. 30 cents each; per dozen, $3.35.

L. T. L. Pin, coin silver, enameled. 40 cents; per dozen, $4.00.

(Please send remittance with order.)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois

ROCHE'S
HERBAL
EMBROCATION
FOR CROUP OR FOR
WHOOPING COUGH
Relieves promptly and safely the Terror and Distress of thesedreaded afflictions of Childhood.
120 years of successful use
Applied externally only. Wonderfully effective in Bronchitis, Lumbago and Rheumatism.
All druggists or
W. EDWARDS & SON London, England E. FOUGERA &CO. 90-92 Beekman St. N. Y.

Perhaps You Will Have a Public Meeting the Evening of January 16?

If so, use these new and very striking Playlets or Pageants:

Uncle Sam's Prohibition Quiz. (Testimony of ten noted American men. For 11 boys or young men.)

Aunt Columbia's Prohibition Quiz. (Testimony of ten noted American women. For 11 girls or young women.)

These were used at some of the state conventions with fine effect. Price, each per copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents.

(Please send remittance with order.)

W. C. T. U. Novelties

White Ribbon Place Card for W. C. T. U. Banquets, Luncheons, Picnics and Dinners. Neatly designed bow on bristol card with letters "W. C. T. U." Must be seen to be appreciated. Price per dozen, 20 cents; per 50, 75 cents; per 100, $1.25.

W. C. T. U. Crepe Paper Napkins. Three designs—white and gold—white with violet border, and white with pink rosebuds. W. C. T. U. monogram in gold. Excellent quality. Price, per 25, 20 cents; per 100, 75 cents.

W. C. T. U. Seals. Monogram with wreath of trailing arbutus in colors.

Price, per package containing 50 seals, 15 cents.

Daily Food: Scripture text and quotation for every day in the year. Dainty and always appropriate. Price, 40 cents.

Educational Blotters

SECURE THEIR USE IN SCHOOLS.

Envelope size. Three colors, red, blue, yellow. Price, per 100, 40 cents.

TITLES:

Are You Loyal?
Take Notice!
Remember!
Andrew Carnegie to Young Men.
The Cigaret Boy.
"Hurry Up Yost" Says—
A Cold Water Blotter.
Pure Air.
Dimes and Health.
What Is It?
A Cigaret Arithmetic.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois

Mrs. Ella A. Boole a Speaker at Vermont State Convention

Sarah M. Elrick, State Corresponding Secretary

Burlington, the "Queen City," on the shores of Lake Champlain, was the scene of the forty-eighth annual convention of the Vermont W. C. T. U. There was a large attendance, and an unusually interesting and helpful program. The day sessions were held in the Temple, a beautiful little chapel owned by the local W. C. T. U., while the evening meetings occurred in the Baptist and Methodist churches, respectively.

Mrs. Alice G. Ropes, of Boston, the newly elected president of Massachusetts W. C. T. U., was an evening speaker. She gave a very forceful address upon law enforcement, making an earnest appeal to the women to get out to the polls.

A very practical address was given by Miss Carrie Ormsbee, of Brandon, Vermont, former president of the State League of Women Voters. She has been working all the year hand in hand with the state W. C. T. U. officials, in getting before the voters the attitude of the candidates for Congress and the legislature, and she made a strong appeal to the women to be sure to vote for the right men.

The convention was honored by the presence of our National vice-president-at-large, Mrs. Ella A. Boole, who spoke with wonderful force and eloquence to a large audience upon the subject, "A World Vision," dwelling emphatically upon the fact that the entire world is looking toward America's experience with prohibition and its enforcement. She declared that the economic side of the question appealed to Great Britain, which could not compete with a sober America. Germany, too, she said, is becoming disturbed over the use of her grain by the great breweries of that country.

An interesting feature of the program of the last day was the introduction of the editor of one of the city papers, who has taken a strong stand for prohibition and the enforcement of the Volstead Act, and whose strong editorials have attracted much attention. The women of the convention gave him a rousing salute, and his words of greeting were most inspiring and encouraging. The superintendent of the Vermont Anti-Saloon League also gave a short talk on his experience in the state in attempting to get the law enforced.

The "budget system" of finance, adopted last year by the convention, has proved to be a great success, and was unanimously adopted for another year.

The officers were re-elected.

Alabama's W. C. T. U. Convention Wins Friends for Cause

The convention at Albany was one of the most successful ever held in Alabama. Spiritual in tone, a desire to know conditions and the work was a dominant note.

The hostess union had done all that could be accomplished in advance to make the convention a success, and greeted the delegates with happy expressions of welcome.

The morning devotional, led by the superintendent of evangelistic work, Mrs. J. B. Chatfield, was an inspiration and sent all to the day's work with joy. The Federation of Missionary Societies and the Federation of Women's Clubs, were not satisfied with the welcome given on the first night, but tendered the convention a beautiful luncheon, at which toasts were offered and felicitations given.

On the following day the Kiwanis Club of Albany-Decatur gave a luncheon. Mrs. A. A. Calvin, wife of the president of the club, was a charming hostess and welcomed the guests in the name of the Kiwanis club. A quartette of the club members gave some fine selections. A splendid talk along the line of enforcement was given by Rev. Davenport, which closed the program. This social side of the convention brought all more closely together.

Mrs. Maude B. Perkins, national secretary of the Young People's Branch, was present during the convention, giving valuable help. Her enthusiasm and her fine personality added interest and pleasure on every hand. The pageant, "Eyes of the World," was given with telling effect.

Two medal contests were held on Wednesday evening. Neither contest was long, so the larger part of the evening was given to Miss Belle Kearney, one of our W. C. T. U. lecturers and organizers of past years, who delivered an address, one of the finest heard in many years.

El Paso (Texas) Citizens Endorse Work of Prohibition Enforcement Officers

Prohibition agents in Texas are keenly alive to the need for watchfulness on the border, and many of them are even working overtime in order to fully perform their duties. Fine co-operation is being received from all local enforcement agencies, and the press is lending valuable aid in every possible way. At a recent revival meeting, over two thousand people passed a resolution thanking the men of the El Paso division of law enforcement for the work they are doing, and pledging their assistance.

There Is Still Time for a New Year Gift to Your Friend

Use Our Beautiful Scripture Text Calendar. It will be a constant reminder of your kind thought for your friend.

This Calendar is more beautiful and attractive than ever. Everyone should read every day some portion of God's word. The Scripture Calendar offers everyone this opportunity. Per single copy, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.84.

(Please send remittance with order.)

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois

SEND FOR CANDY

To sell for us. Churches, Societies, Sunday Schools, Lodges, Schools, etc., make liberal profits handling our very popular assortments of 5c Chocolate Bars, etc. Send for Illustrated Circular, Price-list, Order Blank and full particulars. Our goods sell quickly. Prompt Express shipments.

FRED D. LESURE COMPANY
6 Broad St., Fitchburg, Mass.

Perfection
NON-ALCOHOLIC FLAVORS
Taste Better
Flavor Does Not Bake Out

A combination of pure fruit and flavoring oils with vegetable oils, which carries and distributes the flavorings as well or better than alcohol, and instead of being harmful, has more food value than an equal amount of butter. Wonderful Vanilla and eleven other flavors Representatives wanted. A permanent source of income for Unions, Church Societies, and Individuals. 100% profit. No money required under our consignment plan.

Fletcher Production Co. Ext Dept. 429 E. 69th St., Chicago.

Georgia Convention Reveals Gains Along All Lines

Mrs. August Burghard, Recording Secretary Georgia W. C. T. U.

The thirty-ninth convention of the Georgia W. C. T. U., held in Douglasville, was a complete success from every standpoint.

The hospitality extended to us was unsurpassed. Streets, store windows, residences, automobiles and public buildings glowed with white ribbon decorations. Welcomes were voiced publicly by city officials, ministers, teachers, representatives of men's and women's clubs and privately by all of Douglasville's citizens. Elaborate luncheons were served by the ladies of the churches, except when the men of the Civic Club were hosts and themselves served a delicious barbecue. Numerous beautiful and useful souvenirs were given the delegates by merchants. The key presented by Mayor Whitley opened homes and hearts for it was tied with a white bow.

The convention keynote was "Responsibility" and it was sounded and developed every hour, based on the thought, "All persons possessing any portion of power ought to be strongly impressed with an idea that they act in trust, and that they are to account for their conduct in that trust to the one great Master, Author, and Founder of society."

The addresses of Mrs. Lella A. Dillard, state president, Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins, National W. C. T. U. organizer and lecturer, Mrs. Maude B. Perkins, national general secretary of the Young People's Branch, and Mrs. T. E. Patterson, state superintendent of Christian Citizenship and former president of the Georgia W. C. T. U.; the superintendents' demonstration in the form of a school with Mrs. Marvin Williams, vice-president, as "principal," and state department superintendents as "teachers"; the daily Bible lessons of Miss Carabel Wilkes, W. C. T. U. evangelist; the consecration and memorial services; the exercises, playlets and marches by all the school children in the city; by the Loyal Temperance Legion, the Young People's Branch and the college girls; the convention edition of the Douglasville paper; the songs by the colored school children; the gift of World's and National convention expenses to Mrs. Dillard by members of the convention; the songs of Mrs. A. L. Cunyus, director of music, were some of the notable features which cannot be given in detail owing to lack of space.

The general officers, with the exception of Mrs. Julius Magath, who resigned, were re-elected. Mrs. Sarah Poullain Campbell was elected corresponding secretary.

Gratifying gains were reported along all lines.

Christmas and the Bootlegger

(Continued from Page Five)

"I did pretend to carry a sample case, etc., as a blind to the illegal way in which I was then coining money.

"Anyway, this particular 'customer' began to take a quart a week, away back in the spring of 1920. Shortly he increased it by three quarts, and then to six.

"I noticed that he had flushed, grown careless in his dress, slovenly in his office; and frequently when calling with my 'goods' concealed upon my person I would find a painted siren in his office; and on more than one occasion they both would be intoxicated, and repulsive to every trait of character that rebels against sin and immorality.

"I thought of the great change that the wildcat liquor of the hills had wrought in that promising young man in a year, and I shuddered.

"But I closed my eyes to the truth; gritted my teeth and plunged headlong into my cursed work, for the misty reward of five hundred dollars average profit a week was too blinding to see decency. I crushed every impulse for good.

"'When I get my pile,' said I, 'I will quit—not before.'

"I plunged deeper into the work, for the Christmas season was approaching, and I could make a fortune alone, in supplying the 'yuletide merriment.'

"On the morning of December 22, 1921, I delivered at this young customer's office a five-gallon can of the 'white lightnin'.' I noticed again the painted woman who had now become a fixture in this broker's life of whisky-driven sin and degradation.

"They laughed—the laugh of the callous soul, the sordid heart, the warped mentality—

"'Deliver me six quarts Christmas morning at my home, old sport,' he ordered, as he reeled across the room to his desk, fell into the lap of this woman of the world who had lured him, abetted by myself and my accursed goods, into the primrose path of death.

"I quickly left, sick at heart; but still it was Christmas week, thought I, and I could not give up the yellow chase.

"On Christmas morning—just last Christmas—I called at his home with the six quarts, just as I was ordered.

"I carried them in a grip, and ran into the house trying to feel happy, for I had just left the fireside of my own little family, where Santa Claus, with money tarnished with the most crushing sin, had plentifully supplied an innocent wife and children—trusting, unsuspecting, loving—oh, the horror of it all, as I see it now.

"When I had rung the bell repeatedly, and was beginning to think the family was away, a frail little woman, her eyes red in a frame of black, came to the door, followed by the two-year-old disconsolate baby boy, crying and unnourished.

"I asked for her husband. She broke down and shook with emotion; but then proudly stood erect, and with a desire to shield a truant whom she loved, she lied—

"'He's at his office.'

"I went to his office. I met a mutual friend who told me the sad, pitiful story.

"The night before, when his very soul should have been shrouded in the bidding of God, 'peace on earth and good will to men,' the Santa Claus night, when the bearers of gifts carry joy and gladness to the hearts of the young, he had fled, taking the woman with him, and leaving deserted on Christmas eve night—a true and trusting family, bowed in the deepest sorrow on this, the day of universal happiness—

"God! that moment!

* * * *

"I rushed back to that home. Nothing but death could have stopped me. There had been no Santa Claus; and the children were crying in despair and disappointment, and asking for 'daddy.'

"The good wife was too tactful for me to offer any material amends; but there on the threshold of that wrecked and sorrowing home, I made a solemn vow to God that I would consecrate the money that I had made to the last dime to the reuniting of that home, and to the driving out of the 'devil within' that I had planted there, from the heart and soul and body of that once promising young man.

"I made good that vow. I found him two months later, a derelict on the sea of vice. I reunited the family, and with my own funds had him treated and cured of a disease that had developed from the germs that I planted. I personally took him to a Pennsylvania manufacturing city, and re-established him in his old job—

"And from that hour to this, I have tried, as best I could, to erase the misery that I cut into the tablet of Atlanta's life. I can never wholly succeed, but God! I would give my life if I could."—The Atlanta Constitution.

For the Great Meetings on January 16, Secure the Popular Eighteenth Amendment Song "It Is There To Stay."

The great throngs at the National Convention were thrilled and inspired by the author's rendition of this song. Use it in your meetings. Per copy, 15 cents; two copies, 25 cents.

Add these also to your repertoire:

Victory. Soprano solo. Per copy, 15 cents; two copies to one address, 25 cents.

He's Only Changed the Place of His Address.

Over the Whole Wide World.

The Land Where Old Glory Waves.

Hats Off to the Flag.

The U. S. A. for Me.

Each, per copy, 25 cents; two copies to one address, 40 cents.

You Will Need Posters

FOR DISPLAY JANUARY 16

We suggest these:

For Their Sake Enforce the Law.
Forge a Chain.

—

Lincoln on Reverence for Law.
Lincoln's Prophecy.
(Each with portrait of Abraham Lincoln)

—

Guard Their Future.
The Eighteenth Amendment (Stand by the Flag and the Constitution).
Booze Stands Between—
The American's Creed.
Listen! Milk or Beer.

Price each per copy, 10 cents; per dozen, one kind or assorted, $1.00. Decorate meeting places with posters and put them on display wherever possible. They will help.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

MAKE CHRISTMAS MERRY FOR ALL YOUR FRIENDS

Stick a Subscription to

THE YOUNG CRUSADER

in the stocking of all your young folks this Christmas. A present every month.

35 cents a year

In Clubs of Six—
30 cents a year

THE UNION SIGNAL

SPECIAL OFFERS
Good until January 1, 1923

OFFER No. 1:

3 subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL (weekly) $4.00

OFFER No. 2:

THE UNION SIGNAL and the YOUNG CRUSADER for one year.....$1.75
with
White enameled bow stick pin free.

Now is the time to get your trio team, new members, ministers, schools, libraries, department superintendents, Y. P. B. and friends on THE UNION SIGNAL list for one year.

Send SIGNAL and Crusader subscriptions to National W. C. T. U., Evanston, Ill.

CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT

THE UNION SIGNAL ..... $1.50 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance (monthly).....50c a year
Single Copies, 5c each; per 100 .....$2.75
Club rate for ten or more Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition subscriptions, 40c a year. No other premium allowed.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER ..... 35c a year
Single Copies, 3c each; per 100 .....$2.00

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES

THE UNION SIGNAL .....$2.00 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (monthly) .....62c a year
THE YOUNG CRUSADER .....47c a year

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL Evanston, Illinois

Awards for Work for Official Papers

HONOR ROLL

The HONOR ROLL gives the names of those who have sent in twenty or more subscriptions to the regular edition of THE UNION SIGNAL, between November 1, 1921, and the closing of the books in 1922. This list includes not only the names of those who personally secured subscriptions, but also those of the state and county superintendents who have sent in subscriptions secured by others in their territory. Three monthly editions at the 50 cent rate counted as one subscription to the regular edition. Credit was not given unless asked for.

Miss Margaret Sloat, New York, New York.
Mrs. Isabelle Lamoreux, Ashland, Wisconsin.
Mrs C. F. Paine, Eldora, Iowa.
Mrs. Etta M. Luce, West Tisbury, Massachusetts.
Miss Minnie E Neal, Jacksonville, Florida.
Mrs. Nora Nowells, Millersburg, Indiana.
Mrs. Sara H. Hoge, Lincoln, Virginia.
Miss Margaret Sargent, Portland, Maine.
Mrs. A. J. Hungerford, Denver, Colorado.
Mrs. Geo. F Clark, Fargo, North Dakota.
Miss Alice M. David, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.
Mrs. Ella E. Eaton, Meredith, New Hampshire.
Miss L. E. Busick, Baltimore, Maryland.
Mrs. Cora Kershner, Kingman, Kansas.
Mrs. Mary Herrick, Ipswich, South Dakota.
Mrs. Etta Boswell, Springfield, Missouri.
Mrs. Hattie Wilson, Portland, Oregon.
W. C T. U. of Rhode Island, Providence, Rhode Island.
Mrs. Laura Roberts, Fortuna, California.
Miss Elizabeth Goodwin, Greenwich, New Jersey.
Miss Addie A. Austin, Chicago, Illinois.
Miss Epha Marshall, Chicago, Illinois.
Mrs. E. Totten, Baltimore, Maryland.
Mrs. M. M. Claflin, University Place, Nebraska.
Mrs. Luella Monk, Whitefish, Montana.
Miss Josie Sullivan, University Place, Nebraska.
Mrs. C. H. Whitesell, Wheeling, West Virginia.
Mrs. Jennie C. Pittman, Prescott, Arkansas.
Mrs. E. C. James, Minneapolis, Minnesota.
Mrs Ida Hewes, San Diego, California.
Miss Adda Burch, Los Angeles, California.
Mrs. D. E. Spratt, Clinton, Connecticut.
Miss A. Virginia Grosh, Lititz, Pennsylvania.
Miss Mary Aikens, Paris, Tennessee.
Mrs. Lora LaMance, Lake Wales, Florida.
Mrs. Nora E. Brown, Atglen, Pennsylvania.
Mrs A. J. Reed, St. Paul, Minnesota.
Mrs. E. J. Lint, Tulsa, Oklahoma.
Miss Helen Eastman, Wells, Vermont.
Mrs. Lettie Hill May, St. Louis, Missouri.
Mrs. M. C. Ewing, Long Beach, California.
Mrs. M J. Philpot, Cedar Falls, Iowa.
Mrs. Emma Schaeffer, Topeka, Kansas.
Miss S. Savina Ackerson, Newton, New Jersey.
Mrs. Florence E. Maskrey, Maquoketa, Iowa.
Mrs. H. W. Foster, Topeka, Kansas.
Mrs. Fannie VanGelder, Ithaca, New York.
Mrs Cora Bame, Nampa, Idaho.
Miss Louise L. Weightman, Washington, D. C.
Mrs. H. N. Andrews, Ft. Dodge, Iowa.
Mrs. M. C. Gaines, Galesburg, Illinois.
Mrs. J. T. Richards, Casper, Wyoming.
Oneonta W. C. T. U., Oneonta, New York.
Fern Handley, San Francisco, California.
Mrs. Bessie Aldred, Sandersville, Georgia.
Willoughby W C. T. U., Willoughby, Ohio.
Mrs. J. Boyer, Winona Lake, Indiana.

YOUNG CRUSADER

The winner of the $15.00 award given for the largest number of subscriptions—over 400—sent between November 1, 1921, and the closing of the books in 1922, is Miss Margaret Sloat, New York, who has to her credit 790 subscriptions.

The winner of the $5.00 award given for the one having the second largest number—over 200—sent between November 1, 1921, and the closing of the books in 1922, is Miss Carrie E. Green, Baltimore, Md., who secured 417 subscriptions.

W. C. T. U. Badges. Made of mother of pearl. Price 25 cents each. Address treasurer W. C. T. U., Jerusalem, Palestine. P. O. Box 443.

Unexcelled for repairing china, glassware, earthenware, furniture, vases, books, etc. Famous since 1876. Major's rubber and Leather Cements are good.

Three kinds, 20c per bottle at dealers, or write us.

MAJOR MFG. CO., NEW YORK

Good Citizenship League

Federal Prohibition Director John T. Davis of Pennsylvania has advised Commissioner Haynes that the beer situation in the state is receiving closest attention and agents are compelling permit holders to comply strictly with the provisions of basic permits, or be cited for revocation. "The city of Phoenixville," said Mr. Davis, "has organized a Good Citizenship League, which will have as its purposes the urging of every citizen and local official to support and defend the Constitution of the United States. Such leagues have proved very effective in solving the enforcement problem in other cities, and Phoenixville is to be commended for the stand which it has taken."

The "Money Earning Plan"

EARN MONEY FOR YOUR UNION, CHURCH, SOCIETY OR SCHOOL

For details write to
CHAS. R. DAVIS
184 Ward St.,
NEWTON CENTER, 59, MASS.

JERSEY CROWN

FLAVORING POWDER
Non-Alcoholic

The Master Vanilla Compound, Prepared and used like any extract, Rich and Lasting Flavor. Costs less, goes further, gives better results than any other. Unions, Church organizations and individual members are selling Jersey Crown with marked success. We want representatives everywhere and offer unequaled inducements. Send no money. We furnish you the Powder. You pay when you sell it. Write at once for our 30-Day Proposition. Jersey Crown Vanilla Co., Dept. S., Valparaiso, Ind.

The Union Signal

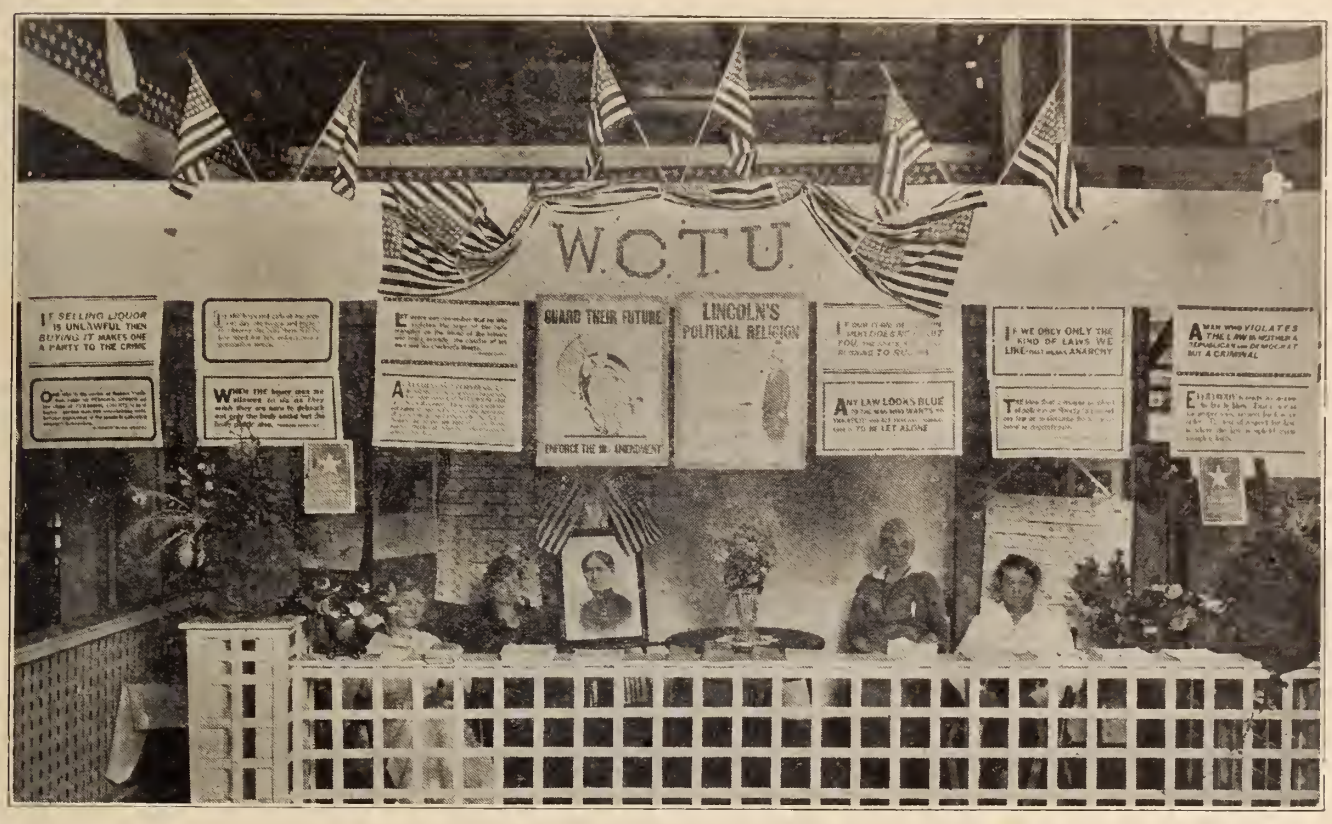
OFFICIAL ORGAN

NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly — Subscription Price, $1.50 a Year in Advance

Entered as second class matter at the Postoffice at Evanston, Illinois

Vol. XLVIII — EVANSTON, ILLINOIS, DECEMBER 28, 1922 — No. 52



W. C. T. U. Booth at the New York State Fair, Syracuse, N. Y.

God grant us wisdom in these coming days,
And eyes unsealed, that we clear visions see
Of that new world that He would have us build,
To life's ennoblement and His high ministry..

—John Oxenham.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

GOVERNORS OF FOURTEEN STATES CONFER AT WHITE HOUSE ON MORE EFFECTIVE PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT; ALL GOVERNORS SAVE ONE IN ACCORD—PROHIBITION IS SALVATION SAYS KANSAS EXECUTIVE—DELAWARE GOVERNOR URGES ENFORCEMENT WEEK.

LENNA LOWE YOST, National W. C. T. U. Legislative Representative, Washington, D. C.

On Monday, following the fourteenth annual governors' conference, held at White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia, the President of the United States conferred with the chief executives of fourteen states on how to secure more effective prohibition enforcement.

This informal conference was called at this time because these governors were so near the Nation's Capital. Many of the present governors will be out of office in January, when it is expected another more formal conference will be called.

At the White House luncheon, during which the views of the guests were sought on prohibition, there were present, in addition to the President, Vice President Coolidge, Attorney General Daugherty, Secretary Mellon, Prohibition Commissioner Haynes, and Governors Cox of Massachusetts, Ritchie of Maryland, Trinkle of Virginia, Hartness of Vermont, McCray of Indiana, Kilby of Alabama, Hyde of Missouri, Preus of Minnesota, Olcott of Oregon, Allen of Kansas, Morgan of West Virginia, McKelvie of Nebraska, Davis of Idaho and Campbell of Arizona.

"In many cases," Commissioner Haynes declared after the meeting, "the reports of the governors were of an encouraging nature. Numerous cases of lack of co-operation were pointed out; many instances of the inadequacy of Federal forces were suggested.

"There was a preponderance of opinion that an earnest official appeal for reverence of the law and a cordial support of law enforcement by the press would combine to cure the worst conditions reported."

From some who attended the luncheon it was learned there was no suggestion raised during the three-hour conference which indicated belief that the situation might be helped by modifying the present stringent enforcement status. On the contrary, it was said, the prevalent opinion seemed to have been that imposition of more severe fines and prison terms on conviction or violation would assist the enforcement officials in their work.

Other suggestions, all of which were declared to have been "entirely informal," included a more careful selection of prohibition personnel, larger appropriations for the Federal Bureau, and education of the general public to the necessity of reverence for law.

Governor Parker of Louisiana, who made the lone attack on prohibition at White Sulphur Springs, was not among the governors at the White House.

All Governors Save One in Accord

Interviews with the governors on their arrival proved that all were in sympathy with rigid enforcement, save Governor Ritchie of Maryland, whose state is the only one without a state enforcement law.

As the governor of a state which has been dry for forty-two years, Governor Allen of Kansas spoke with no little knowledge of the effect dry restrictions have upon the people. He declared that the failure of the Federal government to enforce the dry statutes more efficiently need occasion no apprehension. "It took Kansas twenty-five years to educate the people up to the benefits of prohibition," he said.

Better Enforcement

"Today Kansas enjoys a better degree of temperance enforcement than her neighbors," said Governor Allen, "because we are in the second generation of men who have never seen the saloon. Federal prohibition will become a national success when the business man realizes that the total abstainer makes the best workman, and refuses to hire any person who takes a drink.

"Prohibition has proved its worth already. We hear a lot of talk about more persons drinking than ever and the drug traffic increasing as intoxicants become more scarce. The bootleggers deny the first assertion, because they are striving with might and main to wipe the Volstead law off the statute books in order to make it possible to distill and sell more intoxicants. The second assertion is absolutely untrue; statistics prove that drink and drugs are inseparable; where you find one, you find the other."

Prohibition Is Salvation

"Tighten up the prohibition laws, don't loosen them. The people will soon realize that prohibition is almost their salvation. In the middle west I believe we have a better degree of enforcement, because it is more truly American than the Atlantic seaboard. Here you have a greater number of Europeans and the continental influence. Why, out west we still gaze in astonishment on a woman who smokes a cigaret."

Governor Trinkle of Virginia proved to be an equally ardent champion of prohibition. He particularly emphasized the need of heavier fines and longer jail sentences for offenders of the dry laws. He declared he had refused to pardon any man, regardless of his prestige or position, who had been convicted of dispensing intoxicants for gain.

'Take politics out of the prohibition enforcement agencies," Governor Trinkle declared, "and we will have better enforcement. What we need is enforcement agents and officials who are in favor of the law themselves. I have found that prohibition is benefiting the state of Virginia already, and these benefits will grow with time."

Governor Morgan of West Virginia practically reiterated Governor Trinkle's view. He, too, said the enforcement division of the prohibition department should be separated from politics. Should a referendum be taken in West Virginia tomorrow, the governor asserted, it would show that state to be overwhelmingly "bone dry."

"More money and more honorable men," was the program suggested by Governor Cox of Massachusetts. "Since the Volstead Law is on the books," Governor Cox said, "it should be enforced, however disagreeable or however costly the enforcement." He agreed with President Harding that more strict enforcement was the only solution to the present situation, indicating that, if the people wanted the lid lifted, changing the law would be another matter to come later.

Governor Kilby of Alabama declared that Federal resources should be increased, with more men and money to enforce the liquor laws. "We have very little difficulty in Alabama, however," the governor said, "and the state government is doing its part."

Stronger cooperation between state and Federal authorities would provide one of the most effective means of solving the problem, in the opinion of Governor Hyde of Missouri. The secret of the whole matter, he thought, lay in the words of the amendment itself, which say "concurrent jurisdiction." One of the difficulties had arisen because there had been too much "current" and not enough "concurrent" jurisdiction.

Urge Enforcement Week

A nation-wide law enforcement week, if it could have the success which attended a state-wide enforcement week in Delaware, would be a great factor in stimulating respect for the law, in the opinion of Governor Denny of Delaware. Through the schools, mass meetings, men's and women's clubs and various organizations, the state drive during a special week had been very helpful in Delaware. The Federal government also should appropriate more money and put more men into enforcement of the liquor laws, he advised.

Governor McCray of Indiana reported that Indiana presented a state of less acute problems as regards prohibition than most of the states of the Union. Suggestions for improving the situation everywhere were offered by the governor as follows:

Appointment of Federal agents personally more in sympathy with prohibition; appropriation of more money; appointment of more Federal agents; closer co-operation between state and Federal agencies.

Governor Preus of Minnesota declared he was in favor of strict law enforcement. He praised the Federal prohibition officers in his state, and asserted the present director there was "as good a man as we can get."

Legislative Headquarters, Bliss Building, Washington, D. C., Dec. 23, 1922.

Prohibition Upheld at Governors' Conference

Nowspapers havo been telling the world that at the governors' conferenco which has just closod its session at White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia, John M. Parker, governor of Louisiana, scheduled to speak on the subject of "Citizenship," mado an attack on prohibition which was most bittor. He claimed that he desired to see respect for the law restored in the United States, and concluded with a demand that there be an immediato discussion of the subject.

Silence met the proposition, and the meeting adjourned without any reply to his statements, but late in the evening, just as the conference was about to break up, Governor Morrison of North Carolina rose and in a brief but eloquent speech cut the ground from under the feet of Governor Parker.

"How could Governor Parker demand the absolute suppression of Klan lawlessness, and in the same breath propose that the conference of governors should pass a resolution calling on the President to surrender to the far worse lawlessness of bootlegging?" he asked. He spoke of the great good that is being accomplished by the dry law, saying that the police force in the whole country is doing less than is prohibition to prevent crime, and that its greatest value lies in saving the young at the very outset of life. "North Carolina wants no light wines and beers," he asserted. Violators in North Carolina are being put on chain gangs—not being pardoned, as Governor Parker declared he was doing.

The governor of Louisiana, in an attempt to reply to Governor Morrison, declared that his only purpose in his afternoon talk had been to promote the authority of the law, but North Carolina's executive retorted that he had never suspected Governor Parker at any time of being what one might call a "violent prohibitionist." Laughter greeted the reply.

English Economist on Prohibition

A most weighty reason for prohibition and one which appeals strongly to people in every walk of life, is that it has effected a great saving financially. Deposits of savings banks alone are said to aggregate some six billion dollars, which is an important fund to railroad and other great enterprises. The opinion of the English economist and financier, Sir George Paish, considering prohibition from the economic standpoint alone, which was recently given in an address before the Manufacturers' Export Association in New York, is worth recording:

"Prohibition is an economic question. There are two reasons for this. First, we must all admit that the working classes will command from now on a greater share of the world's goods than they have been getting before. Secondly, the difficulty of securing capital from the classes that formerly supplied capital will be exceedingly difficult, because of taxes and fear of the future. Therefore, unless the working people make savings and provide capital, world business will be at a standstill. They can only make savings by denying themselves luxuries, which include drink. In England today they spend from £400,000,000 to £500,000,000 on drink. If half that amount were saved in England and elsewhere among the nations the problems of the world would be solved. As an economist I consider prohibition is necessary and inevitable."

Bavarian Women Conducting Energetic Prohibition Campaign

Noting with alarm the growing danger of intemperance in their country, the women of Bavaria are conducting an energetic campaign to curtail the sale of liquor. At a large meeting of women a resolution was passed which called for the adoption of local option, prevention of the use of food-stuffs for the production of fermented liquors, scientific temperance instruction in the schools and management of children's homes and boarding schools on a strictly non-alcoholic basis by a staff pledged to total abstinence.

Ruling of Japanese Court Affords Geisha Girl Means of Escape

A recent ruling of the court in Japan has dealt a deadly blow to the system by which the geisha girl was practically thrust into slavery. According to reports, a girl who had been sold into the system, fell in love with a young man and wanted to marry him. Her master objected and brought suit to compel her parents to force her back into the old life, but he lost his case, the court holding that such contracts could not be binding. Thousands of these girls will now be enabled to escape from a life which they loathe.

Efficiency Under Prohibition

"The biggest job in the world," says the Los Angeles Evening Herald, is that of the Big Creek San Joaquin River project, in the Sierras, which will cost $375,000,000 when it is completed—$15,000,000 more than the cost of the Panama Canal. This "simple" task consists of "poking rivers through mountains, dropping the water into power houses and ultimately developing 1,250,000 hydro-electric horse power." With the first snow fall, a thousand men who are at work on the job are completely shut off from the rest of the world except as they get word through dog teams or through the wireless. There have been six thousand men at work, mostly Americans, highly paid laborers, and the statement which particularly interests those who are studying the economic worth of prohibition is this: "Prohibition has made labor on the big job about twenty per cent more efficient."

As Judge Gary Sees Prohibition

A statement from Judge Elbert H. Gary, head of the United States Steel Corporation, of more than usual interest is made in a letter recently quoted by the press, in which he says: "If I had a son I would advise him to be a total abstainer. For this reason, and many others, I favor absolute prohibition. In my opinion, permission to deal in either beer or light wines would be a long step in the wrong direction. Except in rare cases, and under the direction of a competent physician, I do not think alcoholic liquors are of benefit; and I am sure it has been demonstrated that, as a general rule, they are injurious mentally, morally, physically."

Early Struggles of Kansas Duplicated in National Fight

The address of Governor Henry J. Allen of Kansas at the recent conference of state executives, was most emphatic in its assertion that national prohibition had come to stay and would be enforced. He compared conditions of the present time with the early struggles of his own state to maintain its prohibitory laws, and said:

"Complete enforcement will not come over night, and absolute enforcement may never come, any more than an absolute end to stealing. The present transitional stage is bound to give way to a period of rare law violation. People will deceive themselves who think this reformation will be brought about without a struggle. Kansas went officially dry forty years ago, but it is only in the last twenty years that complete success has attended the law. Now, the second generation of young men has grown up who have never known the saloon, and if the dry law were put to vote tomorrow, Kansas would cast a ninety per cent ballot to retain it.

"Prohibition has ceased to be merely an ethical question. It is now a plain, matter-of-fact business proposition which enlists every constructive business man in the dry ranks, and insures, if nothing else does, ultimate victory. It has been proved that the town is more prosperous, the store better patronized, the worker happier where liquor has been banished. The sentimental, ethical and moral appeals started the prohibition struggle, and are as strong influences today as ever, but to them now is added the practical weight of the economic thought of the nation, irresistible in itself, and needing only time to be wholly successful. Complete enforcement needs a solid body of public opinion behind it. The failure to suppress the trade in large cities is due to the foreign elements, but even here closing down of the saloons has been of inestimable benefit."

Warning Against Light Wine Law

"Light wines and beer" is a fine phrase but persons who think and who know the benefits of prohibition will not permit themselves to be fooled by it, is the testimony given by Dr. Albert Sterne of Indianapolis, in an address before the Kiwanis Club of that city, and quoted by the Kokomo Dispatch. "Before the advent of prohibition the hospitals of Indianapolis treated hundreds of cases of delirium tremens each year," said Dr. Sterne. "I have not seen a case in five years. In the Central Hospital for the Insane the cases of alcoholism have diminished from 10.1 per cent to about 1 per cent. The 1 per cent is due to failure to enforce prohibition, and not to prohibition itself." The doctor added that since light wines and beer did not satisfy the appetite of the drinker, it would not be long before many of the evils of the saloon would return if these drinks were legalized.

President Lauded for Stand on Prohibition

The legislative department of the Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Association has, according to the press, expressed to President Harding appreciation for his call for rigid enforcement of the prohibition law.

PROBLEMS OF THE WOMAN IN INDUSTRY

Mary Anderson, Director of the Women's Bureau, U. S. Department of Labor.

(Address in Part at World's W. C. T. U. Convention, Philadelphia.)

I am very glad to discuss with you the problems of the working women of the nation and it is gratifying to know that, although the primary work of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is the safeguarding of the nation from alcoholic stimulants (which lay their heaviest burden upon the workers and particularly the women), it is concerned with the solution of these problems. In spite of what is being said against the prohibition law, there is a decided improvement in the living conditions of workers since it went into effect. I think no one can measure the infinite benefit resulting from this law to the women in the home. We are prone to forget when we speak about the encroachment on freedom and the rights of the individual, that this kind of personal liberty which brings with it sorrow, hunger and unhappiness to the family, is not the kind of freedom that we are particularly anxious to perpetuate.

The Women's Bureau is that section of the Department of Labor which is primarily concerned with the welfare of wage-earning women. In many cases the interests of men and women in industry are so closely linked that general industrial problems are apt to affect them equally. But there are many other problems which relate especially to the employment of women in industry and which require expert and informed attention. For this reason the Women's Bureau was created during the war and has been continued in recognition of the increased importance of women in industry.

It should be of the utmost importance to all women to know whether their clothes are made, their hats trimmed, their foods prepared, their candy made and packed, their laundry done, and their telephones answered by women and girls who are being paid enough to insure a satisfactory aand healthful standard of life. From the standpoint of public health it is important that the conditions under which women work should be as sanitary and comfortable as possible. That women should not be obliged to stand all day when a simple adjustment of machinery or the mere providing of a chair would enable them to sit and thus reduce their fatigue, seems an obvious requirement. Yet the investigators of the Women's Bureau find almost countless numbers of women who are exposed unnecessarily to this kind of weariness.

The Women's Bureau has found so many women working excessively long hours that it has made the eight-hour day one of its most emphatic standards. The fact that in its various investigations many establishments are found where the eight-hour day is an accepted fact, leads the bureau to feel that this standard is a practicable one which can justly be advocated for all working women.

A living wage, equal pay for equal work for men and women, an eight-hour day, and sanitary and comfortable working conditions, summarize the most conspicuous standards which are advocated by the Women's Bureau—and these standards are based on actual information which is gathered by the bureau's agents in state-wide investigations.

The greater necessity for the control of the standards of women's employment is due largely to the fact that women are mothers and potential mothers, and that their health is important to the coming race. Therefore, it is necessary to give an opportunity for the up-building of safeguards to conserve alike the industrial efficiency and the health of women, and to make it impossible for individual employers to impose such working practices upon them as may have a tendency to lower standards, which in the main will have a disastrous effect, and will not be to the best interests of the industries, the workers, or society as a whole. The protection of the health of women workers is vital as an economic, as well as a social measure.

The industrial question is one of the biggest problems of the country, and its solution depends upon the understanding, information, and sense of justice of the population as a whole. The women of the nation as the largest purchasing body in the matter of food and clothing, have a direct interest in the conditions under which these commodities are made. We only know half of the story when we know what ingredients are being used in preparing the different kinds of food. But it is equally important to know under what conditions these ingredients are made. This information can only be had from real knowledge founded on real facts, and it is these facts that the Women's Bureau is trying to give to the citizens of the country.

Your organization in its work for human welfare has organized a Women in Industry department which is working through state units and is, therefore, doing not only educational work among its membership, but real, constructive work in the matter of supporting legislation which will be of vital benefit to working women.

LEGISLATION, LAW ENFORCEMENT AND SUBSTITUTES FOR BEER DISCUSSED AT NATIONAL W. C. T. U. CONVENTION

Laura Miller, National Director

At the first session of the National W. C. T. U. Convention, Mrs. Florence Kelley, executive secretary of the National Consumers' League, was introduced and made a brief but effective plea for the collection and dissemination of facts that will serve as anti-beer propaganda. The official board later adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, through the two departments of Scientific Temperance Investigation, and Women in Industry, request the U. S. Public Health Service to recommend substitutes for beer and other alcoholic drinks adapted to the use of employes in industries involving exposure to dust, to extremes of temperature, and to sustained physicial exertion.

"And that the National W. C. T. U. see that this list of recommended beverages is widely distributed through employer, employe and public groups."

The matter had been discussed at a small and informal breakfast with Mrs. Kelley the day preceding. Mrs. Kelley described the efforts of employers in steel plants, and in other industries where great heat prevails, to provide substitutes for the accustomed beer. Mrs. Miller mentioned the recent book in which the Secretary of Labor, James Davis, states that beer is the only drink steel workers can take without danger of cramps and severe illness. Mrs. Kelley reported a place she visited where ice cold artesian water pumped into the plant for the convenience of the men did cause severe cramps. She cited another plant where the Scotch superintendent had, on his own initiative, influenced the employer to provide oatmeal gruel.

At the Women in Industry conference, held the day before the National Convention opened, the director, Mrs. Laura Miller, gave a brief talk stressing the triple aim of the department for legislation, law enforcement and membership. The beautiful industrial creed of the Crusade convention was read in unison through the sonorous words, "Peace on earth and good-will to men." Then the pledge of action, "and finally we pledge ourselves to labor and to pray that all these principles, founded upon the gospel of Christ, may be worked out into the customs of society and the laws of the land," was incorporated in the prayer. This makes an effective opening service and is recommended for other Women in Industry programs.

Mrs. Miller introduced Mrs. Florence Kelley and explained that it is the policy of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union to leave the question of active support of Women in Industry legislation, or of mere endorsement, to the official board of each state; that the official policy developed through the years since the creed was adopted in 1875 has been active support whenever the prohibition question is sufficiently well settled in the state so that our organization can appropriately use energy for general welfare legislation. She commended the National Consumers' League for its splendid efforts to unify and standardize Women in Industry bills, in order that no jokers or ineffective clauses may slip in. She reminded her hearers that law enforcement in this field, as in the matter of prohibition, is as essential a part of good legislation as the care of the new-born babe. Bringing laws into the world and abandoning them is as criminal as bringing homeless and nameless children to a life of neglect or early death.

Mrs. Kelley spoke forcefully and held her hearers to every word. The evident sincerity of her life and purpose finds sympathetic hearing with a serious

(Continued on Page Fifteen)

POLL OF THE PRESS ON PROHIBITION

Prohibition in a Nutshell

In the current number of The Outlook, the editors characterize Sherman Rogers' brilliant epigram—"personal liberty ends where public injury begins"—as the prohibition issue in a nutshell. Is not this striking epigram also an illuminating guide-post as to where the rights of the individual end and where the rights of the community, the state, the nation and humanity begin? Just as personal liberty cannot rightly be carried to the point of injury to a neighbor, so the rights of communities cannot be extended to the injury of other nations. Happily, there is a new consciousness beginning to assert itself in the world, namely, that humanity is its brother's keeper. The age of rights without duties, it is hoped, has seen its worst days, and the age of rights with duties is to take its place.—Macon (Ga.) Telegram.

Prohibition cannot be made effective in two years or three. But if we are firm enough to stand pat under the assaults of the die-hard element of the old liquor ring, we shall see great improvement in the next few years and gradually a general acceptance of the law.—Harrisburg (Pa.) Telegraph.

The liquor question will be with us incidentally for some years, and it will grow less acute each year. The farther Americans get away from the saloon the better they will like it. The saloon has gone for good.—Salina (Kans.) Union.

Nullifying the Volstead Act

Speaking in the Chicago Coliseum six years ago, Elihu Root said: "No people can hope to retain a democratic form of government which refuses to abide by its own deliberate decisions." The Eighteenth Amendment, although adopted shortly after the joint resolution was proposed by Congress to the states, was the result of the deliberate verdict of the country on the saloon, saloon politics, saloon affiliations and saloon influences on its economic, social and political life.

That opinion was embodied in the Federal Constitution. It may be reversed by repealing, not by nullifying, the Eighteenth Amendment. If the Eighteenth Amendment is good, the Volstead act is good. Beer and light wine, if intoxicating, violate both the Volstead act and the Eighteenth Amendment. Their restoration is sought because they are intoxicating, whence we may conclude that the whole agitation in favor of revising the Volstead act upward is a species of anarchy.—Peoria (Ill.) Transcript.

Eating Ice Cream

In looking over some statistics, the Hattiesburg American finds that the amount of money spent for ice cream since the days of the saloon has increased every year. This probably means that the girls and women are having more money spent on them for ice cream, where it formerly went, in this section, for blind tiger liquor for men.

Bootlegging and home-brewing are going out of style. Both will last a few years yet, but their doom is sealed. Neither bootleg booze nor amateurish wines have the appeal they had at first. What the American people really want, apparently, is ice cream. It's a pretty cheerful sign for the health of the community.

Ice cream, on top of a heavy meal, in an overtired person, may have been the cause of an occasional attack of indigestion, but so far as is known, it has never caused any death or blindness. It never produced the state of mind in which a man smashes the furniture or slays his wife and children. Neither did it ever make a man lose his job, neglect his business or fail to pay the mortgage on the home. We never heard of anybody selling the baby's shoes to buy ice cream. On the contrary, the ice cream buyer usually buys shoes all round the family first and tops off the shopping tour with the cheerful cone or the festive sundae—Hatticsburg (Miss.) American.

Prohibition Pays

California was expected to "go wet" this fall if any state in the Union did. Yet it voted for an enforcement law which, by the testimony of the liquor advocates themselves, is more strict in its provisions than the Volstead Act. This result is as interesting economically as it is morally.

California is the greatest grape state in the country. Its prosperity was built to an important extent on its wine industry. Californians not only produced wine but liked wine. They feared the ruin of the grape industry by prohibition. Yet the vineyards have been more prosperous than ever. Raisins and fresh grapes and unfermented grape juice have brought and are bringing far more money than wine ever brought.

That fact certainly had a great deal to do with the majority given for strict enforcement on Nov. 7. And in Ohio, also a big grape state, the same kind of vote was cast on the same day. All moral questions aside, it has been found in both states that prohibition pays in other ways than those usually urged by reformers.

—Oxnard (Calif.) Courier.

Wet Pretense

The Association Opposed to Prohibition, which is trying to bring liquor back, is careful to state that it is opposed to the re-establishment of the saloon. It indicates that it has a plan by which intoxicating liquor might be distributed, under state authority and supervision, without the evils that attended the saloon. The Kansas City Star does not believe that it can be done. It is the Star's opinion that any place where intoxicating liquor is sold is certain to be a saloon and to generate the evils of the saloon, whatever its name may be. The Lincoln Journal is of the same opinion. If there is in operation anywhere on the face of the earth a system of distributing intoxicating liquor which works out even a fairly decent result, the fact has escaped attention, the Lincoln paper affirms. The saloon will not be brought back by any indirect route. Neither will the impossible undertaking of partial prohibition be attempted. But isn't it touching, the perfect hatred that the wets now have for the saloon? Perhaps they will be able to deceive some of us, but the great majority will not be misled by their pretense. Certainly it is the barest pretense. The wets are in a frame of mind now to assent to any kind of regulation if thereby they might have the sale of booze legalized. Their eagerness now to submit to the most stringent regulation would be amusing if the effort to break down prohibition were not so determined.—Sioux City (Iowa) Journal.

Stay on the Prohibition Job

When a fight is about won there is a human tendency to relax. Then is when the enemy gets in the finishing blow.

The prohibition fight is not won. Great strides have been made. But there is a nationwide and well-organized movement for the overthrow not only of the enforcement laws, but of the amendment itself. The enemies of prohibition make no effort to conceal their intent, and, make no mistake, the enemy is strong.

At no time has there ever been more cause for those who rejoiced when the saloon was outlawed to buckle on their armor and burnish their fighting tools. To disarm now in this great moral struggle is to capitulate to the enemy. You may be absolutely certain that the friends of "light wine and beer" are, in many cases, the friends of whisky, and the friends of whisky are the friends of the old-fashioned saloon with all its evils. Wine and beer are the entering wedge; the saloon is the inevitable result if the wedge is allowed to penetrate and destroy the liquor legislation that is now on the law books.

Let every man and every woman who believes in the abolition of strong drink, think prohibition, talk prohibition and work for prohibition, just as strenuously now as when the enemy held the trenches.—Boise (Idaho) Farmer.

Give the Laws a Fair Test

Those who have studied the situation fairly know that prohibition has been successful. Less liquor is being consumed and many evil conditions have been greatly improved. The campaign for enforcement of the law must be continued. To weaken the prohibition laws after only a year or two of their existence would be worse than never to have enacted them. If prohibition should now be abandoned in any material degree, it may be safely predicted that the use of liquor would be more entrenched than ever. It would be much more difficult to inaugurate a movement to eradicate the vice of strong drink in the future. To repeal the laws now would be to announce a lost cause. We must give the laws a fair test, and to do this we must back them up with firm and determined support.—Salt Lake City (Utah) Deseret News.

Booze Taking Refuge Behind the States

The Association Opposed to Prohibition, which has been considering at St. Louis ways and means to bring booze back, is very clear on two points. First, the saloon must remain extinct—the wets simply can't tolerate the notion of its return; and, second, the enforcement of regulatory laws for the sale of booze in the places where it is sought to have it legalized must be by the state and not the Federal authority.

Any place where booze is sold is bound to be a saloon and generate the evils of the saloon, no matter what name the place goes by. It would become in time

(Continued on Page 10)

THE EIGHTEENTH AMENDMENT A MONUMENT TO WHITE RIBBONERS

Federal Prohibition Commissioner Roy A. Haynes

(Tribute given at World's W. C. T. U. Convention).

Granting that enforcement of the prohibition law is difficult, that many complications arise out of efforts to euforce this new law, and that bootlegging has become a natural consequence, affording some criminals a chance to profit by breaking the law of the land, yet it is easy to demonstrate that prohibition is showing itself as a means of pronounced public betterment, of improved living conditions, and of developing healthier and happier human beings.

There will naturally too, be discouraging results at times at the polls, when an unfavorable attitude may be reflected; this may most frequently come about by the involvement of other political issues. We need not expect uninterrupted progress, but after some encouraging ups and discouraging downs, it must be admitted that the prohibition policy is a national policy.

Indeed, as President Harding stated in Washington only a few days ago, to some visitors who had called to discuss this subject: "THE NATION WILL NEVER DEPART FROM THE EIGHTEENTH AMENDMENT."

With such a work in hand, we must remember that we are not dealing with the immediate present but with the future geuerations. Oh, that the Christian citizenship of America might have that faith and vision which fired the Crusaders and which has perpetuated the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and kindred organizations! You good women, with others, may feel at times that our progress has been slow, but when the historian writes of this crucial period he will undoubtedly recall that the progress has been amazing, and he will record that you of the Womau's Christian Temperance Union have made an indelible impress upon our civilization through your coustancy and devotion to principle.

What we do is transacted on a stage of which all in the universe are spectators. What we say is transmitted in echoes that will never cease. What we are is influencing the rest of mankind. Living we act, and dead we speak. The whole universe is the mighty company forever looking, forever listening; and all Nature, the tablets forever recording the ways, the deeds, the thoughts of mankind. Monuments and columns and statues erected to heroes, poets, orators, statesmen are all influences that extend into the future ages, and I like to think of the Eighteenth Amendment as the crowning monument dedicated by the manhood of America—in deed and in fact a fitting tribute to the loyal, devoted and consecrated endeavor of the white ribboners. And the Nineteenth Amendment has brought a dual responsibility in that both men and women now, through their ballots, may come to the defense against all efforts at its nullification and defamation.

With such keeping there need be no fear for the ultimate outcome. So you good women typify in a maximum degree real world benefactors. When all of the gold and glitter and tinsel of life is ended and the unknown and mysterious eternity is spread out before us, it will certainly be a source of everlasting joy to all of you who have by dint of sacrifice and labor and faith, aided by making, through legislation, lives here happier and a great country and world better. None have been too small; none too poor to have been of service. If we work upon marble, it will perish; if we work upon brass, time will efface it; if we rear temples they will crumble into dust, but such a work as you have wrought, time cannot efface, but it will brighten both time and eternity.

The Great Architect has a great plan that is never in its entirety disclosed to the workmen, but with such an Architect the completed edifice must indeed be a great and glorious and beautiful one, and the generation which has given to its making the Prohibition Cornerstone, first in America, then—may we not hope—in the whole world, will have indeed made one of the choicest contributions to the edifice, and my good friends of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, much of the glory will have been yours.

I thank you for your many expressions of confidence. I thank you for your loyal support. I thank you for your cooperation. I thank you for your prayers. You have much work yet to do in helping to defend the ground so nobly won, and I know you are equal to any task that may come to your hands to do, for the world will measure your capabilities by your past glorious accomplishments.

LIVING STONES IN GOD'S TEMPLE

Christine I. Tinling

I very much enjoyed working in the Women's Bible School in Peking. There is something peculiarly appealing about Chinese women. When missionaries spoke of their "dear women," I used to think it was just a pious little way that they had. But now I understand. They love them in a warm, natural fashion, because they are really and truly lovable in a high degree. Partly this is accounted for by their simplicity and trustfulness. One is not a stranger among them more than one day. In spite of the barrier of language, a fellow-Christian is taken right into their hearts. The message is taken in, too, and stored up for future use.

A medical missionary spoke of a certain Bible woman as "just like a sister" to her. This woman is a highly valued worker in Peking, always bright and sunny and remarkable for her fine common sense. She is a product of famine relief effort. When she was starving she came to the mission and was given a bowl of porridge every day. Her mother-in-law objected to her going, for she feared the foreigner. But the younger woman thought it worth the risk, and in addition to the porridge she received the Bread of Life. Afterwards she went every Sunday to hear the gospel, though she had to walk several miles on her little bound feet, carrying her child on her back. Also she was obliged to get through the same amount of field work as usual or take a beating in default. She grew friendly with the preacher's wife, became a Christian, and later went to the Bible School for training. The missionary said, as she told me the story: "Oh, if you could see the pit whence they are digged, you would indeed marvel." Yes, God gets His living stones from some very unlikely quarries! When He can see such possibilities in the lowest, why should we despair of any?

A peddler came round occasionally selling his wares to the missionaries. One of them became interested in him and engaged him as a household servant. His little girl was put into the mission school. She has grown up to be a beautiful young woman and she sings in the church choir. She is an enthusiastic and hard-working student and is loved for her sweet disposition. A scholarship given by a friend in America is affording her an opportunity of qualifying for a useful career. What if nobody had troubled about the peddler? As we wander up and down the highways and byways we doubtless pass with unseeing eyes many a stone that would be highly prized by a geologist. It is lost to us because of our ignorance. And is it not likely that for one life which a winner of souls has stooped to save, there are hundreds equally valuable that no one has noticed or deemed worth while?

During five crowded weeks of work in Peking I saw several different types of institutions. A certain Higher Primary school impressed me with its fine spirit. The Higher Primary corresponds with our grammar grades, but the boys in this building ranged all the way from 10 to 20 years of age, because many of them had only lately had the opportunity of studying. The missionary there seems to have a peculiar gift for dealing with boys as well as a great faith in them. She has representatives of all classes among her two hundred students, from the very poor who pay nothing at all, to the sons of generals, wealthy store keepers and government officials. They are drawn largely from Buddhist homes, but some of them are frankly interested in Christianity, and of last year's graduating class of thirty students, eighteen are decided Christians.

A "bad boy" was turned over to the foreigner by his father, assisted by three other men! He was covered with dust from kicking and struggling all the way there, and his parent warned the missionary constantly to keep an eye on him, as he could scale an eight-foot wall. Within twenty-four hours he was conquered by firmness and love combined. After four days his teacher said he might go home to see his people, but must be back by supper time, and back he was.

Another pupil in this school contrasted strongly with the last in his initial attitude towards study. A little chap in a very poor village home, he had ambitions of his own. He longed for an education, so when he was twelve years old he started off to Peking in search of it. He carried water and even worked at road-mending. Finally

(Continued on Page Twelve)

WHY REAL ESTATE MEN SHOULD BE AMONG THE FOREMOST IN UPHOLDING EIGHTEENTH AMENDMENT

"Prohibition is worth untold millions to property owners," is the statement of William D. Kilpatrick of the Real Estate Board of New York, in an article in the current issue of the Real Estate Record and Builders' Guide. Mr. Kilpatrick says further:

"The immense material benefits flowing out of the results of state or local prohibition in the United States, which advantages undoubtedly helped to bring about national prohibition, were seemingly unknown in New York, and the big, outstanding results of the closing of the New York saloons on Sundays only, by Theodore Roosevelt, as police commissioner, were apparently forgotten.

"The obvious is frequently overlooked, and certainly nothing was more obvious than the fact that if the sale of liquor stopped, a goodly portion of the $700,000,000 spent annually in New York for liquid refreshments would find its way into other and more useful channels. To realty men this should have been more manifest, perhaps, than to other people, for they knew full well the immense loss of rent due to the rent going to the saloon keeper instead of to the seller of housing space.

"Collections were often half cash and half hard-luck stories. The realty men also knew that the daily receipts of the 25-foot saloon were five times and upward as great as those of other 25-foot stores occupied by other lines of business. Facts as prominent as these were entirely disregarded, and large gobs of dense realty gloom surrounded the advent of prohibition. Even such an ordinarily astute, far-seeing body as the Real Estate Board of New York virtually joined in the lamentations of dire disaster. The actual, tangible results of prohibition have been so startlingly salutary and profitable to real estate that the inspired character of the anti-prohibition realty prediction has been clearly revealed.

"The big depression following the wild days of 1919 and 1920 was certainly not reflected in the retail store situation. The benefits of prohibition to the wholesale merchant, jobber and manufacturer were reflected in the rentability of lofts, warehouses and factories.

Rents Paid More Promptly

"Other lines of business, professions and trades, transportations, etc., were likewise indirectly benefited. The change in the collection of tenement rents, in spite of the rent laws, is most marked, rents being paid, as a rule, very promptly. Instead of the old worn-out excuses and subterfuges, the collector gets real coin.

"Since prohibition came, the deposits in savings banks have most heavily increased, which deposits were placed in mortgage loans at the time when they were most needed. To what extent prohibition is responsible for these increased deposits and consequent mortgage money cannot be determined, but certainly it was a most important factor.

"In the matter of income, which determines values, the so-called 'poor sections' are equalling and even outstripping the more pretentious locations. When two 25-foot Second avenue corners, located in the poorest part of that thoroughfare, produce gross annual rentals of $11,000 and $12,000, respectively, the First avenue corner stores rent for $5,000, and inside half stores rent for $150 each, or $3,600 for 25 feet, it becomes a difficult task to reconcile the extreme difference in values between the 'poor' and 'good' neighborhoods.

"Realty men should be foremost in the field to uphold the Eighteenth Amendment from purely selfish motives, and they will be supported by the great body of people, as it begins to be realized more and more that the staggeringly big sums uselessly and harmfully handed over to saloon keepers to enrich a chosen few are now distributed among the people at large, so that millions benefit not only financially but in every possible good and useful manner.

"The abolition of slavery has heretofore been the shining star of the United States of America, but the star now has a rival in the luster and glowing radiance of the star of national prohibition."

Forty-Seven Per Cent Decrease in Population of Massachusetts State Farm

Warren F. Spalding, Secretary of the Massachusetts Prison Association

Much has been said by the opponents of prohibition of the increase in population of the state farm in the past two years. This institution is used almost exclusively for the detention of habitual drunkards, vagrants, tramps and idle and disorderly persons. The male population at the end of each of the last four years under license averaged 1177. In 1914 it was 1300 and the decline to 1018 in 1917 was mainly due to the world war.

There was a decrease to 442 in 1918. The full effect of prohibition was seen in 1919 when the male population fell to 299. In 1920 it was still lower—only 208. From that point the number of inmates increased to 388 on September 30, 1921.

The small population of the prison in 1920 was the real test of prohibition. At that time the bootleggers had not begun their work. In 1921 they had developed it and it has been continued under difficulties, through 1922. That the illegal traffic is making no headway is shown by the fact that up to September 30, 1922, the number of men at the state farm increased only 71 in 1922, compared with an increase of 180 in 1921. Apparently the highest point has been reached.

The number of women prisoners of the state farm decreased from 170 in 1917 to 64, September 30, 1922. The opponents of prohibition compare the number of inmates at the end of 1922 with the number at the end of 1920, showing an increase. The comparisons should be with the number under license at the end of 1917. Such a comparison would show a decrease from 1018 to 459 in 1922—more than one-half. And at this time the illegal traffic is at its worst. The total prison population, September 30, 1914, was 6878. At the same date, 1922, it was 3613—a decrease of 47 per cent.

—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

Ammunition Used by New York City Federation of Women's Clubs in Support of Prohibition

New York State Vital Statistics for 1921 (Tables 2, 3, and 4), compared with average of five "wet" years, 1913 to 1917, show:

New York State:
Increase in population, 8%.
Decrease in total death rate, 19.7%.
Decrease in death rate of children under five years of age, 31%.

New York City:
Increase in population, 10.1%
Decrease in total death rate, 23.3%
Decrease in death rate of children under five years of age, 37.8%.

New York State (Exclusive of New York City):
Increase in population, 5.7%.
Decrease in total death rate, 14.6%
Decrease in death rate of children under five years of age, 22.2%.

Testimony from the Journal of the American Medical Association of July 29, 1922, page 349 (discussing pneumonia):

Dr. Alexander Lambert, N. Y., said: "There has been a great change in the pneumonias in New York City. When we had all the alcohol that was desired in life, in Bellevue Hospital one-third of the 40,000 patients were in the alcoholic wards with or without delirium tremens. That made a strong alcoholic group among pneumonia patients and the death rate was 66% for the alcoholic and 23% for the non-alcoholic group. The type has changed. One does not see the thoroughly poisoned, chronically soaked alcoholic person in the hospital. The change in pneumonia has also been distinct. We had two wards of fifty patients each; in one group, alcohol was given, and the death rate was 40%; in the other group alcohol was not given and the death rate was 14%."

Dr. Russell L. Cecil, N. Y.: "The change in the pnuemonia death rate of which Dr. Lambert spoke is a striking thing. In Bellevue Hospital, the death rate before prohibition was from 40% to 55%; but the present death rate is only 28%."

American Review of Tuberculosis, June, 1922, contained the following statistics by Dr. Haven Emerson: "In the last 50 years the death rate fell 77.9%. In the last 11 years the death rate fell 51%. In the single year of 1921 the death rate fell 18.1%. The greatest factor for this rapid decrease is lessened expenditure for alcohol and more for food; lessened alcoholism with improved financial and living conditions of the poor."

The New York Times, Oct. 18, 1922, contained Comptroller Crissinger's report for year ending June 30, 1922:

National bank savings:
Increase in depositors—764,085.
Increase in amount of deposits over previous year—$88,499,000.

The Union Signal

Official Organ of the
NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

Published Weekly by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union
Evanston, Illinois

Editor-in-Chief - - - Miss Anna A. Gordon
Managing Editor - - Miss Julia F. Deane
Associate Editor - - Miss Vida I. Thompson

Address all letters and manuscripts intended for the editors of The Editorial Department, The Union Signal, Evanston, Ill. Unavailable manuscripts will be returned only when sufficient postage accompanies the request.

SUBSCRIPTIONS

Subscriptions may commence with any issue. No receipt will be sent for remittance of $1.50 or under.

Notice of Expiration is sent to the subscriber two or three weeks before renewal is due, so that by immediate attention to this reminder not an issue need be missed. RENEW PROMPTLY.

Remittances should be made by draft on New York or Chicago, or by Post-office Order. Cash is sent at your own risk unless registered.

Change of Address. Give both your old and your new address when you desire a change.

PRICE, $1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE
Foreign Postage, 52 Cents Additional
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (Monthly) 50c a Year
Foreign Postage, 12 Cents Additional

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL
EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

Entered at Evanston, Ill., post-office as second class matter. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized August 20, 1918.

Evanston, Illinois, December 28, 1922

"Publicity for Prohibition," Our Slogan

The opponents of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Code want the privilege of controlling all publicity on the prohibition question. They fought with a vigor worthy of a good cause the appropriation for the maintenance of the bureau of publicity of the Federal Prohibition Department which publishes facts to offset the anti-enforcement propaganda which is appearing daily in the press. Bravo for our level-headed Congressmen, who by a vote of 98 to 2 defeated their efforts! If the patriotic citizens of the United States, in the same proportion of 98 to 2, would volunteer their services as publicity agents to tell the truth about prohibition, it would be a very short time before there would come a popular enlightenment on the subject and a consequent enthusiasm for the enforcement of the dry law.

Calling the Bluff of the A. A. P. A.

Is there a general "revolt against national prohibition" in the United States? This is a popular topic of conversation in social groups these days. If one's reading has not been limited to the anti-prohibition newspapers, but through other periodicals one has kept in touch with the course of events, the answer to the query will be an emphatic negative. Reasons for this might be multiplied. It will suffice to mention seven outstanding ones.

The wine and beer interests concentrated their forces on the campaign in Ohio in an effort to demonstrate in this key state, which has many big cities and a large foreign population, that the people desired a modification of the Volstead Code.

> The voters of Ohio went to the polls November 7 and snowed under the beer and wine proposition by a 195,000 majority.

The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment and allied societies invested large sums of money and exerted big political influence to defeat the Wright Law enforcement measure in California, the great wine-producing state.

> The citizens of California, by a majority of approximately 34,000, voted for the Wright Law, proving conclusively that the people of that state want the Eighteenth Amendment enforced.

The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment boasted before November 7 of their ability to elect a "wet" Congress, and left no stone unturned to make good their boast.

> The result of the November 7 election was an increase in the dry members of the United States Senate and very little change in the number of drys in the House of Representatives, leaving Congress with a substantial dry majority.

After the election the opponents of prohibition, through their newspapers, endeavored to make the people believe that the President of the United States had lost faith in the present prohibition law and was in favor of modification, and that he had so stated in private letters written to prominent people.

> A denial of this statement came promptly from the White House, and the President in his message read at the opening of the present session of Congress made emphatic declaration of his continued belief in the present law and urged its enforcement. He has since called a conference of the governors to consider more effective enforcement.

The enemies of prohibition endeavored to prevent the adoption by Congress of the Treasury Supply bill, with the item appropriating $9,000,000 for the enforcement of prohibition.

> Their efforts met with no success and the $9,000,000 appropriation was adopted with alacrity.

The wine and beer interests introduced a bill in Congress providing for the raising of the money to pay the soldiers' bonus by a tax on beer.

> This measure received no support from Congress, and the American Legion gave Congressmen to understand that they did not approve of that method of dealing with the bonus question.

The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment appealed to the United States Supreme Court the case of a man who had been found guilty of making, transporting and possessing liquors and had been prosecuted in both a state and a federal court for the same offense, and asked for redress.

> The United States Supreme Court, which in many instances has upheld the constitutionality of the prohibition law, declared, through a decision handed down by Chief Justice Taft, that prohibition violators may be punished by both state and federal courts—a big victory for the drys.

This line-up of events, showing the trend of the times, is not presented that it may act as a sedative to the advocates of prohibition, so that they will lessen their efforts in support of the dry law, but rather is it intended as a tonic to stimulate them to greater energy and zeal in putting over the biggest campaign ever staged for the enforcement of a law that has proven to be one of the big economic, social and moral assets of our national life.

Results of Prohibition Its Best Defense

The incident is told of Ole Bull, the great Norwegian violinist, that when he was in this country he was assailed by much hostile criticism, whereupon, according to the story, he was proffered space in the columns of the New York Herald in which to answer his critics. He declined the offer, however, saying in broken language to the editor, Mr. James Gordon Bennett, "I tink, Mr. Bennett, it is best tey writes against me, and I play against tem."

We cannot help being reminded of our friends, the anti-prohibitionists, who are using their best efforts at this time to traduce the prohibition law and its results. Listening to them, one might well believe that the Eighteenth Amendment was the final plunge made by this country into a gulf of anarchy and woe, and that now prisons, hospitals, insane asylums and morgues are rapidly filling with millions of victims who never drank before prohibition, but who by its enactment have been forced into lives of dissipation. No wonder that people of other lands stand aghast at the ruin wrought by such disastrous legislation!

The desire to "call down fire from heaven" upon these malignists might be almost excusable. Yet such a way of dealing with them would avail nothing. What can we do? Let us follow the commonsense advice of Ole Bull. Let them "write against" prohibition, if they desire, but instead of answering their fire by fire, let us "play against them." In other words, the course already outlined by the wise leaders of the work is the only possible one to pursue. The benefits of prohibition must be persistently and insistently reiterated, the law enforced more and more strictly, the children taught the evils inflicted upon the system by beverage alcohol, and the foreign mother, together with all other women, shown the responsibility laid upon her by the enactment of the Nineteenth Amendment. And as we rehearse again and again, in season and out of season, by tongue and pen, the results effected by the measure of prohibition already attained, the notes of victory will drown out the voices of the critics, till in years to come, perhaps long before we dream, we shall hear a unanimous cry for prohibition in this and all other lands of the globe.

EVANSTON HOLDS COMMUNITY RECEPTION FOR WORLD'S W. C. T. U. PRESIDENT

The classic city of Evanston has been and is the home of many distinguished people, and it carries its honors lightly. But it appears to have taken a special pride and joy in the fact that, through the election of Anna Adams Gordon to the presidency of the World's W. C. T. U., the headquarters of that organization has been brought back to the place where it was founded. Upon her return from Toronto, a community reception was arranged for Miss Gordon, to give Evanstonians the opportunity of publicly congratulating her upon her new office and themselves upon having a world-famous neighbor.

The reception was held in the spacious auditorium of the Woman's Club, of which Mrs. Robert Berry Ennis is president, and was participated in by the ten leading women's organizations of the city. Tributes were paid to Miss Gordon by Mayor Harry Pearsons for the city of Evanston; by Dr. Walter Dill Scott, president of Northwestern University, for that institution; by Dr. Ernest Fremont Tittle for the churches; by Dr. J. M. Stifler, president of the Kiwanis club, for the men's organizations; and by representatives of the various women's societies. Mrs. Flora Kays Hanson, president of the Evanston W. C. T. U., presided. A chorus of children from the public schools gave several delightful musical selections, and a young lad presented to the guest of honor a basket of beautiful flowers. Flags of more than forty countries where the W. C. T. U. is organized, and a globe encircled by a white ribbon gave the occasion a picturesque international aspect.

Dr. Tittle characterized Miss Gordon as an idealist, and declared that the principalities and powers of the world may well fear when a frail-bodied, mighty-spirited woman becomes a practical mystic, champions some righteous cause and leads a great army of women to overcome the strongly entrenched forces of evil. He paid high tribute to the great stroke of statesmanship on the part of the women which made possible the teaching of scientific temperance in the public schools. "Stratford-on-Avon is known only because of Shakespeare," said Dr. Scott; "Ayer only because of Burns; Mount Vernon only because of Washington; Wittenberg only because of Luther; but Evanston is doubly famous as the home of Frances E. Willard and also that of her worthy successor." Dr. Stifler, speaking for the men's organizations, gave credit to the W. C. T. U. and other altruistic agencies for the public-spirited purposes that actuated the popular men's clubs today and led them to throw their influence in favor of every movement for social betterment.

In responding to these neighborly greetings, Miss Gordon graciously accepted the complimentary words as intended for the organization she represents, and not for herself personally. She insisted that the Woman's Christian Temperance Union has through the years been trying to get the nation and the world to keep pace with the Northwestern University, which provided in its charter for a saloonless environment, and with the city of Evanston, which from its earliest history has been dry territory.

In the receiving line with Miss Gordon at the reception that followed were the presidents of the Woman's Club, the Interdenominational Missionary Union, the International Relations Committee, the League of Women Voters, the Federated Council of Parent-Teacher Associations, the Fort Dearborn chapter D. A. R., the University Guild, the Red Cross Society, the Drama Club and the Evanston W. C. T. U.

Milk or Moonshine

At an outdoor meeting an athletic director was expatiating upon the value of milk to one in physical training, when he was interrupted by a moonshiner, who, in a voice of great bravado cried out: "Give us moonshine and we will give you athletes." The speaker stopped short and to the great delight of the crowd invited the champion of booze into the ring. "Do you really mean what you said?" he asked. "Sure," replied the moonshiner. "In that case," returned the speaker, "you get a pint of moonshine and I will get a pint of milk. We will drink it before these people, then put on the boxing gloves and see who is the best man." Immediately the moonshiner protested: "If I drink a pint of whisky, any fool can get away with me." "Oh, so moonshine is not such a friend of yours, after all," said the speaker.

He had proved his point and convinced the audience of the superiority of milk over strong drink.

Governor Baxter's Greeting to the World League Against Alcoholism

Among the greetings sent to the Congress of the World League Against Alcoholism, recently convening in Toronto, was one from the governor of the state of Maine, and therefore of unusual interest. In his message Governor Baxter said of prohibition:

"Our country is now passing through the most difficult years of prohibition, but public sentiment is gradually crystallizing in favor of strict and impartial enforcement, and no backward steps will be taken. . . .

"The noisy minority is small and discredited, and we are proud to hold the position for which we have fought for more than sixty years, which is that of the pioneer prohibition state, where law is respected and enforced."

According to the A. A. P. A. and other like organizations, the people of this nation have tried prohibition and have found it to be a failure. Strange that the states which have tried it the longest, and therefore should know best its lack of value, should be the ones to speak most emphatically in its favor!

Accepting the Challenge

With the purpose of the whole unlawful activity—debauchment and degradation of the youth of the country—daily more apparent, stronger action by the forces of the law is demanded. There is no question that the new plans on the part of the government will have the backing of the decent people of the country.—Lawrence (Kans.) Journal-World.

For God and Home and Every Land

Time of Prayer—Noontide

"It is always noontide somewhere,
And across the awakening continents,
From shore to shore, somewhere,
Our prayers are rising ever more."

My Year

Today I am facing a new year strange;
What Gift will it bring me of joy or change?
I will make it a year of faith and prayer,
A year of high endeavor;
I will crowd it with deeds both brave and fair,
I will act the hero ever.
I will search the world for hearts to bless;
I will fit out my love with wings;
I will fill my days with a tenderness
That thinks and soothes and sings.
I will travel God's path at God's own rate;
I will welcome both gain and loss;
Nor will I rebel when Heaven's gate
Looks tragically like a cross.
And so as I live throughout the strange new time,
The Master will make it a year sublime.

—Herbert Atkinson Jump.

God's Women

Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney makes one of her characters say: "You have got to make up your mind deliberately, when you come to the crest-line of life, in what fashion you will go down into the years. There is a time, no doubt, when it seems sad and hard; when the path first turns; and the eastward heaven of youth lies behind the hill; when the glad little brooks begin to run the other way, instead of leaping to meet you. But go on, like one of God's women. It shall be an easy and tender slope under your feet; the lowering sun shall shine upon your steadfast face to glorify it, and at the foot is the broad, sweet valley, and the river of your full, deep peace."

The women who may thus grow old graciously are those who grow old in noble service—God's women. The faces of aging white-ribboners ought to be among the most beautiful in the world, since W. C. T. U. women know as well as any what it is to serve the need of other souls.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. HEADQUARTERS

GENERAL OFFICERS:

PRESIDENT
MISS ANNA A. GORDON, EVANSTON, ILL.
VICE-PRESIDENT-AT-LARGE
MRS. ELLA A. BOOLE, BROOKLYN, N. Y.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY
MRS. FRANCES P. PARKS, EVANSTON, ILL.
RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. E. PRESTON ANDERSON, FARGO, N. D.
ASSISTANT RECORDING SECRETARY
MRS. SARA H. HOGE, LINCOLN, VA.
TREASURER
MRS. MARGARET C. MUNNS, EVANSTON, ILL.

1730 Chicago Avenue, Evanston, Ill.

REST COTTAGE

RED LETTER DAYS

January 16—Victory Day.
February 17—Frances E. Willard Memorial Fund Day.

SCHOOL OF JOURNALISM FOR W. C. T. U. WORKERS

Rosalind Scott-Dunkin

At the publicity conference, the inauguration of a National W. C. T. U. school of journalism was announced. This "school" will begin on a modest scale and will be on the order of a correspondence course. Leaflets will be prepared by leading journalists and publicity men over the country, and these will be sent to the W. C. T. U. staff publicity women who desire these helps and want to know how the modern working journalist does his job. The course will be enlarged and developed as staff needs seem to warrant.

It is expected that local publicity women will find the suggestions in the leaflets helpful in learning to develop local news stories, writing them and preparing them properly for the newspaper.

It was agreed to continue distributing news stories through the five press women appointed in each state by the state presidents. The state press superintendents will continue to co-operate along organization lines.

A publicity luncheon served in the North Garden at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel followed the conference. One hundred and ten publicity women and their friends attended the luncheon. The speakers were Edward Bok, former editor of the Ladies' Home Journal; Mrs. Ida Clyde Clarke, associate editor of the Pictorial Review, and Dr. Talcott Williams, honorary dean of the School of Journalism, Columbia University.

Mr. Bok recommended the "indirect method" as most effective in journalism, and especially in putting publicity over. He said the best possible kind of publicity would be that of proving through news stories that conditions are better now than they were in pre-prohibition days, rather than sending out stories which have to do solely with the activities of the W. C. T. U.

Mrs. Clarke gave some striking examples of the art of developing local news, and showed how frequently we do not recognize "news" because we are so familiar with local conditions that we do not look for new things close at hand.

Dr. Williams urged the members of the staff to spend a little time in their home towns finding out the facts on prohibition and the changes that have been made in the life of their towns directly due to prohibition. He suggested interviewing leading business men, bankers, ex-saloonkeepers, etc., so as to find out whether the consensus of opinion is that things are better or worse than before prohibition. Dr. Williams expressed it as his opinion that no more valuable service could be rendered the cause than such information, which could be used as a basis for publicity.

"It's Dogged as Does It"

Ida D. Van Valkenburgh

The local president gave me a most cordial welcome, but with much sadness at once told me of the condition of things in that little village, and ended by saying, "You can see for yourself that there is no future for the W. C. T. U. in this place."

It is one of our fourteen points to listen patiently to all discouraging things W. C. T. U. workers care to tell us. Sometimes that is the best way to diagnose their particular complaint.

In the afternoon the organizer spoke in the auditorium of the new school building, and in the evening in the church, where it was announced that a meeting would be held the next afternoon in one of the beautiful homes, and an invitation extended to mothers to bring their babies if they would like to have them consecrated to the temperance cause.

RESULT: After speaking on child welfare, seven white ribbon recruits and fourteen members were secured for the then encouraged union.

MORAL: Every day in every way work to "Win a Million Members." It can be done!

We record here the names of friends and comrades who have recently passed to the higher life.

MRS. ALICE G. YOUNG, of Downs, Kansas, for many years the very capable editor of Our Messenger, the Kansas W. C. T. U. paper. The life of Mrs. Young exemplified the highest type of Christian womanhood. She early consecrated herself to God, and continued in active and earnest service for more than fifty years. She was an able writer, a faithful and loving friend, firm in her convictions of right, and unwavering in her devotion to duty. A distinct sense of personal loss is felt by Kansas white ribboners.

E. M. ADAMS, of Mound City, Kansas, husband of Mrs. Della M. Adams, who for some years was a national lecturer for the W. C. T. U. Prominently identified with the interests of the town up to the time of his death, his place in church and community can not readily be filled.

Poll of the Press on Prohibition

(Continued from Page Five)

all the saloon ever was, and would exercise the same vicious influence in politics and be the same center of attraction for criminals that the saloon was.

But the really touching thing about the action of the Association Opposed to Prohibition is its Constitutional stand on enforcement. Home rule and states' rights always have been the slogans of those anti-public welfare interests that want to be let alone. State governments usually let them alone, which means that state governments are much more easily controlled than the Federal government. The strongest boss machines ever built up in America have been built up on control of state legislatures and of cities. Given such control, and with nothing to fear from Federal intervention, the interests that want booze back would dictate their own regulations.

But fortunately the prohibitory amendment is national and it follows that the laws by which it must be enforced must be national. The Eighteenth Amendment is part of the Constitution, and as such is the supreme law of the land. No state law can be superior to it, and no state line can interfere with its operation. A state legislature cannot repeal a law of Congress, and the Volstead act is such a law. Now that the goal of the Association Opposed to Prohibition is known, and the method by which it seeks to attain it is revealed, the people who want the Constitution and laws of the nation respected will know what to be on guard against.—Kansas City (Mo.) Times.

John Barleycorn has his back to the wall, is fighting for his life all over the world. It is a losing battle, only a matter of time. In the long history of humanity the prohibition movement may prove more important than the world war.—Pueblo (Colo.) Star-Journal.

Request the Removal of Statue of Brewer from Park

In a recent convention, the Berks County Christian Endeavor union adopted resolutions asking the council of Reading, Pennsylvania, to remove from the city park a statue erected in 1885 by the United States Brewers' Association, in honor of its president, who died in 1883. The young people took the view that the statue, in view of prohibition, has no right to remain in the park.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

"I PLEDGE ALLEGIANCE TO MY FLAG"

The reverence of the American soldier for the American flag, the devotion with which he accorded it honors, was a never-ending cause of comment among the soldiers of France and England. It was remarked that the sentiment which the Tommy showed for his king, and the deep feeling which the poilu manifested at the mention of la patrie were no stronger than the emotions which moved the doughboy when he saluted his flag. Too intelligent to make of his flag a mere fetish, nevertheless he looked upon the Stars and Stripes as the embodiment of all his deepest emotions of loyalty and patriotism.

The reason for this patriotic devotion lay largely in the childhood and school training of the millions of young Americans who served in the Army and Navy. The war emphasized that the American flag is the true symbol of American national unity. The school children of other years who had been thrilled by the flag floating above the schoolhouse accorded that flag a full measure of devotion in wartime. And other Americans, young men who had been born in Europe and had lived in this country scarcely long enough to acquire a full understanding of all that America means, also accorded to that flag their devotion.

The lesson taught by the flag in wartime is now being heeded all over the United States. In thirty-six states laws now provide that the flag shall be displayed on all school buildings, and in many states flag ceremonies are required as regular exercises in the schools. The American Legion everywhere has taken the lead in advocating laws for patriotic instruction in the schools, and the Legion's National Americanism Commission, with its branches in the various states, has drawn up most of the laws which have been enacted.

The Flag on the Schoolhouse

Typical of the laws adopted is the following enacted by the Oklahoma legislature through the efforts of the Americanism Committee of the Oklahoma department of the Legion:

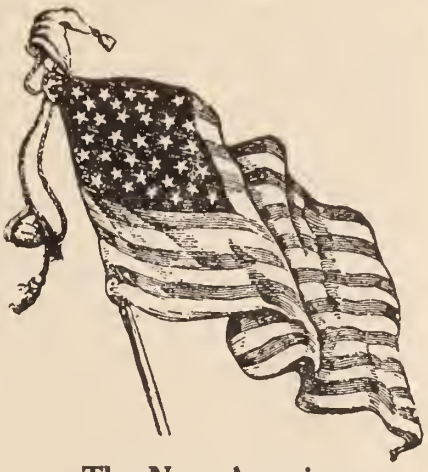
"The American flag shall at all times be properly displayed in every schoolroom, public, private, parochial and denominational, in the State of Oklahoma, and the pupils thereof shall by appropriate ceremonial, to be formulated by the state superintendent of public instruction, be taught the proper reverence and respect for it.

"Any teacher neglecting to display said flag or to carry out said ceremonial and any person forbidding or hindering the display of such flag or the carrying out of such ceremonial shall be subject to discharge or removal and shall be punished by a fine of not less than $100 or more than $500, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than sixty days and not more than six months, or both."

The Nevada law, enacted at the instance of the Americanism Committee of the Nevada department of the Legion, is in slightly different form. It provides:

"The American flag shall be flown from an appropriate flagstaff on each and every schoolhouse in the State of Nevada during every school day, weather permitting. The board of trustees of each and every school district is hereby authorized and directed to appropriate a sufficient sum of money from their respective school funds for the purchase of necessary flags and the erection of an appropriate flagstaff."

The National Americanism Commission has recommended that at least ten minutes daily be devoted to patriotic instruction in all schools, public and private, and is working to have this recommendation adopted by the legislatures of all the states. It also is asking that the teaching of American history and Civil Government be made compulsory in all schools. The Americanism Commission has distributed thousands of copies of a leaflet entitled "Respect the Flag," of which Alvin M. Owsley, national director, says: "This tribute to the flag is offered to the country in appeal to all men and women of all races, colors and tongues, that they may come to understand that our flag is the symbol of liberty, and learn to love it."



The New America

(Tune: "America the Beautiful")

Martha B. Fish

America! America! a radiant morn for thee
When rum was banished from thy shores. What glorious liberty!
America! America! the light of all the world
From every mighty tower of thine be victory's flag unfurled.

Thy yellow fields of waving grain
Thy people now have said
No more shall foam the poisonous cup
But feed this people bread.
Thy fruitful vineyards shall not yield
Their fruits to curse thy youth
That generations yet to come
May know "the way, the truth."

America! America! thy desert lands rejoice;
Thy mountains and thy rippling hills, they, too, lift up their voice
In thankfulness and praise to God
That youth from age to age
Possess a land from rum set free—
A priceless heritage.

America! America! again our voices raise
In humbleness and thankfulness in anthems of thy praise.
America! America! our constant prayer shall be
That lands enslaved in darkness yet thy shining light may see.

A Flag Ritual

The Massachusetts department Americanism Committee has issued a suggested flag ritual for public and private schools, which urges that the raising and lowering of the flag shall be placed in charge of the student body under the supervision of one of the teachers. It is suggested that one student handle the halyards while two others prevent the flag from touching the ground at any point. It is recommended that the flag detail be composed of different pupils each week. Another recommendation is as follows:

The flag shall be displayed on a staff in each classroom and at the beginning of the day's work the pupils shall arise, stand at attention and repeat in unison the national salute to the flag, as follows: "I pledge allegiance to my flag and to the republic for which it stands, one nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

In Mississippi and in Texas schools added interest has been aroused in the daily flag-raising ceremonies by selecting the pupils who raise and lower the flag by a competition in history or civics. Pupils having the highest grades in these subjects are assigned to the ceremonial detail and the competitive spirit thus created has attracted attention even outside the schools.

—American Legion Weekly.

Helps for Sunday Schools

LESSON FOR JANUARY 21, 1923

(All leaflets 2 cents, unless otherwise noted.)

Quarterly Temperance Lesson. The lesson topic outlined; suggested teaching points for all grades in Sunday School; blackboard outline, and suggested lesson applications. Every teacher should have a copy. Price, per 50, 15 cents; per 100, 20 cents.

Lesson Leaflet. Responsive Reading—Purity.

List of Lessons for 1923, with Topics, Program Points, suggestions, etc.

Children's Exercise No. 2.

Each, per 50, 25 cents; per 100. 45 cents.

OTHER HELPS

Watch!

Clean Hands.

An Appeal to Boys.

An Elder Sister's Advice to Girls, No. 3.

Educational Series—Leaflet No. 2.

Each, per 50, 15 cents; per 100. 20 cents.

ENVELOPE LEAFLETS

How He Won.

Real Builders.

The Man With the Twinkling Eye.

How He Signed the Pledge.

Each, per 100, 10 cents.

Order early. (Please send remittance with orders.)

Helps for Local Unions. Supplies for Officers and Members

Treasurer's Book. Prepared especially for the use of W. C. T. U. treasurers. 94 pages. Price, $1.20.

Order Book, 25 cents.

Receipt Book, 15 cents.

Recording Secretary's Book. 96 pages. Price, $1.00.

Pledge Slips (pad). For use in public meetings. 100 slips. Price, 30 cents.

W. C. T. U. Coupon Pledge. Per 100, 45 cents.

Sunday School Pledge. Red, white and blue cards. Per 100, 30 cents.

Loyal Temperance Legion Pledge (folder). Per 100, 85 cents.

Membership Appeal Cards. With vignette and autograph signature of Miss Gordon. Per 100, 50 cents.

W. C. T. U. Removal Cards. Per 100, 50 cents.

Membership Dues. Notification Card. Per 100, 65 cents.

Y. P. B. Invitation Card. Per 100, 50 cents.

Y. P. B. Good American Card. Per 100, 75 cents.

White Ribbon Recruit Card. Per dozen, 10 cents; per 100, 75 cents.

Sunday School Wall Pledge. In colors; size 24x36 inches; space for 190 names. Price, 15 cents; 2 copies. 25 cents.

Flower Mission Cards. Per 100, 15 cents.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois

"Weak" But Mighty

"We are a weak, struggling band, and so far have only paid our dues, but I suppose that helps a little," writes Mrs. S. C. Erwin of Austin, Texas. "Our ages range from seventy to eighty-four, but we all marched to the polls and snowed under the wets with their wine and beer petition, and again marched to the polls in November and laid snugly to rest an undesirable candidate for the office of United States Senator."

New Jersey W. C. T. U. Undismayed in Battle With Wets

Special Correspondence

Undaunted by seeming defeat, the New Jersey women, two days after the election, gathered in annual convention at Camden, buoyant with faith and hopeful courage, though tense with indignation ready to manifest itself on occasion in righteous protest against the disgrace of having our state represented in Congress by "wet" lawmakers, to say nothing of a "wet" governor at home.

Crowded into a session of a day and a half, because of the World's and National meetings so soon to follow, reports and addresses were necessarily greatly condensed but they were all filled with a spirit of daring against the foe. New plans for intensive effort along all lines and extension of the work of some of the departments were adopted during a half-day executive meeting.

The address of the state president, Miss Esther H. Elfreth, setting forth clearly the pre-election methods of the opponents of the Eighteenth Amendment and fortifying the W. C. T. U. with plain and abundant facts to combat such propaganda, inspired her hearers to renewed effort.

The report of Mrs. Isabella H. Demarest again, as for many years, made the "dry bones" of her corresponding secretary's report glow with life!

The welcomes from the city and the churches were eloquent and given with all the more heartiness because of the disappointing election returns. Professor Bryant, superintendent of the city schools, affirmed that scientific temperance teaching in the schools, secured by the W. C. T. U., had been the prime factor in bringing about national constitutional prohibition.

Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith of Iowa was the principal evening speaker. Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp, president of the Kentucky W. C. T. U., had also been expected, but through illness was prevented from being with us.

Professor J. G. Dailey, author of "A Saloonless Nation in 1920," enlivened the program at intervals with drills in the singing of some of his newer prohibition productions.

All officers were re-elected.

Living Stones in God's Temple

(Continued from Page Six)

he ventured to the door of this school and asked to be taken in and allowed to work for his board. He has now graduated and gone on to Middle School. He constantly gets grades of 90 per cent and over, and he is teaching in the Sunday school. He is very grateful for what has been done for him and writes every month to his old principal. With $10 that he had managed to earn he started his little brother in the High Primary. Pretty solid stuff some of these young fellows are made of! One can well imagine the Master saying to them, "Thou shalt be called Cephas," which is, by interpretation, a stone.

China's first college for women was established in Peking seventeen years ago. Its founder was Miss Luella Miner, M.A., D.Litt., and she is still its gracious president. When the World's Student Christian Conference met recently in Peking, sixteen delegates from different parts of China registered as graduates of this college. At the great conference in Shanghai, six women were on the program, and four of these were Yenching alumnae. Yenching is the name of the Christian University of which the Women's College is a part. The word is an old synonym for Peking. So its daughters are evidently giving themselves to a large extent to Christian work.

The present student body is a very interesting group of girls. Here are three examples: Miss W. comes from an official family. She has what the Quakers call a "concern" for improving the conditions of Chinese homes. She hopes to found a school for young married women, in which the leading studies will be home economics, child hygiene and civic sanitation. She enjoys influence and means and will have an entree into Chinese society such as no foreigner could ever hope to obtain. She expects to study abroad before beginning her chosen work.

Miss L. comes from Shensi, and is the first woman who has left that western province to seek a higher education. She is deeply spiritual and is intending to devote her life to missionary work. The Chinese Home Missionary Society has taken the distant province of Yunnan as its special sphere, and thither this girl expects to go. She looks forward to preaching the gospel where no one, either native or foreign, has ever carried it before.

"Icy Heart," is the pseudonym adopted by another of these college girls, who is already a well-known writer. Her magazine articles, short stories and poems have attracted much notice, and some of her work has been translated into Korean and Japanese. She seems to have a literary form that is unusual, a combination of the short story and the philosophical essay. Already she has been offered $250 a month to edit a woman's paper, but she intends to pursue her studies at home and abroad for some time to come. She is an earnest Christian and her influence should mean much for China.

The Hebrew patriot of old expressed the wish "that our daughters may be as corner-stones, polished after the similitude of a palace." In the quiet courts of the Women's College some thorough cutting and careful polishing is going forward. Women are being prepared to fill positions of importance in the New China, and even to be corner-stones on which others may safely lean.

In this institution one did not require the services of an interpreter, and it was a comfort to be able for a few times to speak direct to one's audience. White-ribboners will understand without much telling that the opportunity to present our cause and explain our methods to such a body as this is very valuable. These women will shortly be scattered all over China, and wherever they go they will be leaders in education.

I greatly appreciated the privilege of meeting on some half a dozen successive nights the five hundred boys of the Peking Academy, the preparatory school of Yenching University. Many of these are already actively engaged in Christian work, and willing to use such material as one can bring to them. Every summer a volunteer band of Peking students goes out on a three-months' campaign. They reach young and old alike. In temples and theaters and in the open air these boys talk on themes related to the public welfare, and try to instil patriotic ideals into the masses of the people.

They discuss hygiene and sanitation, and it is in this connection that we offer them our temperance and anti-cigaret information, asking them to embody in their health talks the most important facts about narcotic poisons. They gather the children into day schools and teach them to sing, so that Christian hymns are often to be heard echoing through heathen villages. The Gospel Team, with banners and drums, magic lantern, music and free literature, soon has the country church crowded to the doors with an interested audience, listening many of them for the first time to the glad tidings of great joy. A faithful pastor may have preached for years to a small congregation, but when the Peking boys come along, fresh from the great city, with all the enthusiasm of youth, they gather such a crowd as the good man never saw before, even in his dreams. And God blesses them to the salvation of souls.

As one is privileged to meet with many fine examples of the divine workmanship, one thinks of them, not singly, but in relation to that temple of the Most High that we call the Universal Church. One by one these living stones are gathered, some from the east and some from the west, and some from the Land of Sinim. Very quietly they are being assembled; the great result cometh not with observation. It is easy to miss what God is doing, easy to see everything except what is most worth while. Of old, "the house when it was in building, was built of stone made ready before it was brought thither, so that there was neither hammer nor axe nor any tool or iron heard in the house while it was in building." Even so it is today. But realized or unrealized, the work is going forward, and who shall say that it is not nearly done? And when it is completed to the everlasting glory of God, there will be found in that wonderful assemblage from all earth's divers regions, not a few of "The Stones of Peking."

Articles of Interest in Current Periodicals

"Enemies of Prohibition," by Charles A. Selden; "The Club Citizenship Program," by Alice Ames Winter; "Grandma's Gone Fishing" and "Harnessing Industry With the Vote," by Elizabeth Fraser, who says: "When the women of America know what laws are needed they can get them;" in the Ladies' Home Journal for December.

"Child Labor Must Be Stopped," by Raymond G. Fuller; "Letters from a Senator's Wife," by Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes; and "Christmas as It Seems to Me," by Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, in the December Good Housekeeping.

"Your Child's Allowance," by Angelo Patri, in the Delineator for January.

"Rarely is money understood for what it is: a useful and rather troublesome tool that one must know how to use in order that he may carve out comfort and happiness for himself and his family. To hoard it or waste it is stupid. To value it for itself, to scamper a lifetime in pursuit of it, is pitiful. The best way is Stevenson's: 'To earn a little, spend a little less.' An allowance is the best way I know of accomplishing all the fine things that grow out of earning and spending in wise ways. Yes, I think every child should have an allowance."

Florida Will Work to Inspiring Program New W. C. T. U. Year

Special Correspondence

Place, Kissimme; attendance, 115 officers and delegates; speaker, Mrs. Nelle G. Burger, president of the Missouri W. C. T. U. "Nuff said." Of course it was a good convention. Just the enthusiasm and inspiration brought by Mrs. Burger sent every delegate home to her local union desiring to do her best to make its work one hundred per cent efficient. Our Missouri friend carried us, in a most realistic manner, to the days of the Crusade, then on through the struggle for national prohibition, to its attainment, and made us realize that our work is not completed; that we have yet to instill into the hearts of the American people the spirit of loyalty to the Constitution through law observance and enforcement, patriotism and Americanism. No other organization, Mrs. Burger said, has so much sacrificial love devoted to it, no other touches life in so many places. We have ascended one of the mountains of difficulty, through national prohibition; we must hold on and fight for a better administration of the law, which is sure to come. Insidious newspaper propaganda, corrupt and spineless officials, added to avarice and appetite, and the formation of various organizations to bring back license in the guise of light wines and beer challenge the W. C. T. U. now as much as pre-prohibition days.

The address of our state president, Miss Minnie E. Neal, gave us much to think about and to work for. Among other things, she emphasized the need for every member of the union to be able to give scientific reasons why alcohol is harmful.

The resolutions adopted urged, among other things, the combating of the propaganda of the enemies of prohibition, through publication of the true facts regarding its benefits, and the direful results with wine and beer back; new emphasis on the practice and teaching of total abstinence; efforts to conserve our Christian Sunday; petitions for kindergartens in the public schools; appointment of a woman as one of the Federal prohibition directors of Florida (Miss Minnie E. Neal, the choice for that office); that the legislature be petitioned to pass an amendment to the law regulating the selection of jurors, thus making it possible for women to be called to jury service.

The officers for the coming year are: President, Miss Minnie E. Neal; vice-president, Mrs. Ida M. Flower; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Lottie M. Smith; recording secretary, Mrs. Mabel Perkins Dean. Mrs. Thelma De Witt Ivy will serve as Y. P. B. secretary, and Mrs. Elsie N. Green as L. T. L. secretary.

"Dry Republicans League" Latest in Political Field

"Samuel Adams of Chicago, head of an editorial association embracing many farm journals, who has been attending the governors' conference at White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia, went today to Washington to organize the 'League of Dry Republicans,'" states the Chicago Tribune. "He said organization of the league had been discussed with a number of senators and representatives and that it would be active in the 1924 campaign."

For the Great Meetings on January 16, Secure the Popular Eighteenth Amendment Song "It Is There To Stay."

The great throngs at the National Convention were thrilled and inspired by the author's rendition of this song. Use it in your meetings. Per copy, 15 cents; two copies, 25 cents.

Add these also to your repertoire:

Victory. Soprano solo. Per copy, 15 cents; two copies to one address, 25 cents.

He's Only Changed the Place of His Address.

Over the Whole Wide World.

The Land Where Old Glory Waves.

Hats Off to the Flag.

The U. S. A. for Me.

Each, per copy, 25 cents; two copies to one address, 40 cents.

You Will Need Posters

FOR DISPLAY JANUARY 16

We suggest these:

For Their Sake Enforce the Law.

Forge a Chain.

—

Lincoln on Reverence for Law.

Lincoln's Prophecy.

(Each with portrait of Abraham Lincoln)

—

Guard Their Future.

The Eighteenth Amendment (Stand by the Flag and the Constitution).

Booze Stands Between—

The American's Creed.

Listen! Milk or Beer.

Price each per copy, 10 cents; per dozen, one kind or assorted, $1.00. Decorate meeting places with posters and put them on display wherever possible. They will help.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

W. C. T. U. Novelties

White Ribbon Place Card for W. C. T. U. Banquets, Luncheons, Picnics and Dinners. Neatly designed bow on bristol card with letters "W. C. T. U." Must be seen to be appreciated. Price per dozen, 20 cents; per 50, 75 cents; per 100, $1.25.

W. C. T. U. Crepe Paper Napkins. Three designs—white and gold—white with violet border, and white with pink rosebuds. W. C. T. U. monogram in gold. Excellent quality. Price, per 25, 20 cents; per 100, 75 cents.

W. C. T. U. Seals. Monogram with wreath of trailing arbutus in colors.

Price, per package containing 50 seals, 15 cents.

Daily Food: Scripture text and quotation for every day in the year. Dainty and always appropriate. Price, 40 cents.

New Songs for the Children

Patriotic Prohibition Song for Children Everywhere, "When We All Grow Up to Be Twenty-One." Words and music. The same sheet carries also "The New Day Coming" and "Prohibition Here to Stay."

Price per copy, 5 cents; per 100, $2.00.

Also a marching song entitled "Loyal Temperance Soldiers." Price per copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents; per 100, $1.00. These songs will be found very effective for use in public meetings, L. T. L. and Prohibition Guard gatherings, and for Sunday school and public school work.

(Please send remittance with orders).

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois

Important

Do not fail to secure for your own use, and for distribution, the notable address delivered by the president of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Anna A. Gordon, at the great convention recently held in Philadelphia. This invaluable document should be a handbook for our own members and placed for ready reference upon the desk of pastors, teachers, clubleaders and others interested in the three-fold goal of World Prohibition, World Purity and World Peace. Price, per copy, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents; per 100, $4.00. (Please enclose remittance with order).

Work for Total Abstinence Must Be Continued

We offer you a fine assortment of Total Abstinence literature for public school work, for study in women's clubs, local W. C. T. U. and similar meetings, and for general distribution.

Beer as a Cause of Alcoholism.
Wine as a Cause of Alcholism.
Beer Is Drunk for Its Alcohol.
When Is a Man Intoxicated?
He Was Not Drunk, But—
Primary Lesson on Beer.
Beer and Home Brew.
The Soldiers' Opinion of Alcohol.
For Your Son—Which?
Disease and Degeneracy the Heritage of Drinkers' Offspring.
Words That Count.
Danger to Seamen.
How to Make a Winning Ball Team.
Self Information on the Truths of Science.
Why Sign the Pledge?
Babies or Brewers?

Price, per 50, 15 cents; per 100, 20 cents.

Is the Moderate Drinker a Safe Citizen?
Dangers in the Use of Fermented Drinks.
Beer Quantities of Alcohol Injurious.
The Persistent Beer Fallacy.
A Story of Root Beer.
Beer a Bluffer.
Teachings of the Divine Saviour Concerning Wine.
Wine—What Is It?
What Benjamin Franklin Said About Beer.
Is Beer Intoxicating?
Prenatal Effects of Alcohol.
Wine.
Alcohol and the School Child.
Blackboard Exercise—No Beer, No Wine.
A New Basis for Estimating Effect of Alcohol.
Man or Beer?
Children's Exercise No. 1.
Blackboard Exercise—The Total Abstainer on Safe Ground.
Temperance Talk—Beware of the Wine Cup.
Temperance Talk—Watch! The Thief Is Alcohol.
Facts About Beer.

Price, per 50, 25 cents; per 100, 45 cents.

Alcohol in Experiment and Experience. Y. P. B. Study Book. Valuable also for S. T. I. work. By Cora Frances Stoddard. Pamphlet. Per copy, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.50.

Outlines for Health and Temperance Teaching in the Public Schools. By Cora Frances Stoddard. Pamphlet. Per copy, 15 cents; per dozen, $1.25. See that all teachers are supplied with above helps.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U. PUBLISHING HOUSE, Evanston, Illinois.

The Paper That Put "Pep" Into the Union

Frances L. Johnson

Mrs. Runyan sighed deeply as she took a seat at the W. C. T. U. conference. She was late in getting to this rather informal gathering, which had progressed to the point where everyone was free to have her say, provided she didn't interrupt someone else.

Mrs. Morrison, a co-member, noticed the sigh and inquired, "What is wrong, Mrs. Runyan?"

"Everything," was the answer. "I didn't know whether to come or not. I had an appointment with the dentist and couldn't be on time, and at any rate, I felt like staying at home and letting the country go to destruction, if it wants to."

"What do you mean?" asked Miss Gray, unable to account for Mrs. Runyan's unusual dejection.

Mrs. Runyan sat up straight and began to speak very rapidly, and a trifle louder than was necessary.

"Didn't you read in yesterday's paper about that officer who was supposed to be working to enforce the prohibition law, but who has really been doing everything against it? And that isn't the first report of that kind I've read, either."

"That is true," replied Mrs. Gibson, the president of the union, "but these officers have been caught at their tricks, so I really think the newspaper reports are encouraging, rather than otherwise. These men won't be allowed to continue their evil ways, so I believe it is a real gain for our cause to have such publicity."

"Well, if that is the way you look at it, I suppose the more news of that nature you read, the more encouraged you will feel." Mrs. Runyan evidently was not convinced of the soundness of the president's reasoning. "For my part, I feel like giving up entirely. What is the use of trying? The little we can do won't amount to anything in the face of these conditions."

"I wouldn't say that," said gentle Mrs. Stephens. "We never can know how much good will result from our efforts, and I don't think God meant that we should. We can only do our best at our own particular task."

"That is easy to say, but I can't see any sense in working hard and raising money, just to have it wasted."

"It isn't wasted," the president put in quickly. "The officers whom we have helped employ are doing their work conscientiously. What we need now, more than anything else, is patience. No great reform was ever carried through in a day."

Mrs. Voorhees, who was a thoughtful woman, spoke up eagerly. "Our president is right. We are annoyed too easily. Because we can't see big results at once is no reason why we should think our work doesn't count. I'll admit that there are factors in this fight for prohibition enforcement that are discouraging, but we have many reasons for encouragement, and I think we should lay stress on those."

"Perhaps, Mrs. Nelson's paper she has prepared for today will be some help to us along that line," Mrs. Gibson suggested. "We waited for you, Mrs. Runyan, before having it read. Mrs. Morrison told us you were coming. I believe the paper we are to hear bears on what we have been discussing."

Tapping the bell, she called the meeting to order, and Mrs. Nelson took the floor.

JERSEY CROWN
FLAVORING POWDER
Non-Alcoholic

The Master Vanilla Compound, Prepared and used like any extract, Rich and Lasting Flavor. Costs less, goes further, gives better results than any other. Unions, Church organizations and Individual members are selling Jersey Crown with marked success. We want representatives everywhere and offer unequaled inducements. Send no money. We furnish you the Powder. You pay when you sell it. Write at once for our 30-Day Proposition. Jersey Crown Vanilla Co., Dept. S., Valparaiso, Ind.

She laughed a little as she unfolded her paper, and remarked, "I'm glad I had this prepared for today, for I'm afraid if I had read it at a later meeting, Mrs. Runyan would have thought I had her in mind. The truth is," she added, more seriously, "I have felt a little discouraged myself, at times, and this explains why I chose the subject I did."

Turning, to get the full benefit of the light, Mrs. Nelson began to read her paper—"Rebuilding a Bad Road."

People have several ways of looking at a bad road. As they travel over it they express their opinions frankly, and if one could accompany the different ones, he would make the following observations:

Mr. Brown, who is out for a ride with his family, drives his car carefully, avoiding as far as possible the many bumps and holes in the road. As he plunges down into a deep declivity, that the most skilful driver could not have steered clear of, he exclaims emphatically, "This road must be attended to, and no repairing will do, this time. It will have to be rebuilt from the bottom up." His family agrees with him; and so does many another person.

Mr. Smith drives over the same road. Being a rather slothful man, and a selfish one, he proceeds carelessly, unmindful of the discomfort to the other passengers that such a rough road must bring—also neglectful of his car.

"This road is pretty bad," he remarks, "but it means so much work to build it over, and everything is always in such a mess while it is being done, that I hate to see it started, so I shall not complain." There are many who are of the same belief, for they are contented to keep on traveling over a poor road, because a detour sign would mean inconvenience to them while the road was being rebuilt.

Mr. Jones also drives over the bad road. But he is a different type of man from the other two. He has no serious objection to the inconvenience that the building of a new road would mean; in fact, he would like a good road—if it could be built without money.

So, as he bumps and bounces and slides along, he growls impatiently, "This road is impossible, but it will cost

"THE WORDS THAT WE DID NOT SAY"

A beautiful song. I furnish with it seven other specials, five solos, duets, etc., worth, at 25 cents each, $2.00, but I furnish the eight for only 25 cents, or 3 sets and a copy of the great patriotic 25 cent sheet song, "The U. S. A. For Me," and very helpful plan for preserving your eyes, all for only 60 cents.

Rev. L. L. Pickett,
Wilmore, Kentucky.

altogether too much to fix it up right. They'd never rebuild it if I could stop them; a few loads of dirt and stone would have to answer." This point of view is also shared by many another.

Fortunately for all concerned, those of Mr. Brown's opinion usually win. The road is rebuilt, although the work is held back for a time because of the indifference and opposition of the others.

All reforms are brought about in a similar way. People see the need, but for reasons not unlike those given in connection with the road, many refuse to help bring the thing about. They don't want the work; they don't want the mess; they don't want the expense—or they are against it altogether. So they are willing to put up with evil, closing their eyes, as far as possible, to the dangers which it brings to themselves and their fellows.

The liquor traffic can well be likened to a bad road—a horribly bad road—which no amount of repair could make safe. It needed to be done away with and a good road made in its place. The prohibition law has provided the right to do this.

The tearing away of this road is a tremendous task, and one that will require time. It calls for a great army of consecrated workers, and much that is hard and discouraging must be contended with. But since we know that the work is being done under the guidance and direction of our Overseer, Who sees the finished work, should we drop our tools and leave our post, simply because we have obstacles to overcome?

Rather, we should accept these difficulties as part of the work, and let them act as an incentive to greater efforts, for the cause of prohibition is a righteous cause and must surely win. The following lines by F. W. Faber well express this:

"For right is right, since God is God;
And right the day must win;
To doubt would be disloyalty,
To falter would be sin."

There was a rather long silence after Mrs. Nelson finished reading. Then Mrs. Runyan said, laughingly, "I certainly would have thought you were preaching at me, Mrs. Nelson, if you had read that paper at the next meeting. But since you had it all prepared, I can't very well take offense. There is a lot of truth in what you have said. I suppose it will take time to right things, and that we should expect a few drawbacks."

"I wonder what my 'job' on this road can be likened to," Miss Smith remarked, with a thoughtful frown. "A pickax job, I'm afraid."

"The pickax is a necessary tool," the president assured her, "and the one who handles it faithfully in the end accomplishes a good deal. No necessary part of the work is to be despised, however humble it may be."

"I think Mrs. Nelson has made us all feel like buckling our armor on tighter, and I move that we give her a vote of thanks," said Mrs. Stephens.

This was done, then Mrs. Morrison made a suggestion:

"I have been doing a lot of thinking," she began, "and I've concluded that it would be of great help to us if we could have regularly a paper such as Mrs. Nelson read today. It would add interest to the meeting, and encourage us to learn more about the work."

"That is a fine idea," Mrs. Gibson declared. "Who will volunteer to prepare something for us next month? Won't you, Miss Smith?"

"I'll do my best," that lady consented, "but don't expect too much of me. My paper is apt to have a pickax flavor, you know."

All laughed, but Mrs. Stephens expressed a big truth when she said, "Individuality is what is wanted in all kinds of work. If you prepare your paper in your own way, Miss Smith, I am sure no one could ask for anything better."

Mrs. Gibson announced the closing song, and this was followed by the Aaronic benediction, repeated in unison. The meeting adjourned, different groups going their different ways. But the work which Mrs. Nelson had put upon her paper was not lost; she had given each member a new thought to take home, and one which inspired to greater and better endeavor.

Legislation, Law Enforcement and Substitutes for Beer

(Continued from Page Four)

Woman's Christian Temperance Union audience.

The following prizes were given in the "Wanted! Pictures" contest for the best pictures showing the activities of local unions in Women in Industry work:

The first prize of $5.00 was awarded to the Loyal Patriots Women in Industry union of Huntingdon, Pa., its twenty-two members (all employed in the silk mill) under the leadership of Mrs. Ella M. Funk, president, for carrying on the department and organization program. (The winning picture appeared on the cover page of THE UNION SIGNAL for June 29, 1922.)

The second prize of $3.00 goes to the Albany (N. Y.) union for its action in furnishing the attractive Frances E. Willard room for two women in industry, in the Martha Washington Home. (This picture appeared in THE UNION SIGNAL October 27, 1921. It was sent in by Mrs. Carolyn P. Lindsay, national superintendent of exhibits, and member of the Albany union, and is responsible for starting the contest.)

The third prize of $2.00 goes to the Schenectady (N. Y.) union for the picture sent in by Mrs. Clowe, vice-president of the Schenectady union, which shows members of the union at work in the General Electric plant, but finding time to talk prohibition to their comrades between times. (This picture also appeared in the June 29, 1922, UNION SIGNAL.) The contest will be continued for 1923. For conditions, send two cents for the leaflet, "Wanted: Pictures!"

Instead of the one lone state Women in Industry superintendent, who attended the San Francisco convention, there were representatives from sixteen states at the Philadelphia meetings.

MAJOR'S CEMENT

Unexcelled for repairing china, glassware, earthenware, furniture, vases, books, etc. Famous since 1876. Major's rubber and Leather Cements are good.

Three kinds, 20c per bottle at dealers, or write us.

MAJOR MFG. CO., NEW YORK

WHOOPING COUGH

Asthma, Spasmodic Cough Bronchitis, Coughs & Influenza

The most widely used remedy for whooping cough and spasmodic croop. The little lamp vaporizes the remedy while the patient sleeps.

Introduced in 1879 Vapo-Cresolene "Used while you sleep"

Send for Descriptive Booklet 44A Sold by Druggists

VAPO-CRESOLENE CO., 62 Cortlandt St., New York

W. C. T. U. Badges. Made of mother of pearl. Price 25 cents each. Address treasurer W. C. T. U., Jerusalem, Palestine. P. O. Box 443.

Study God's Book and Let It Mould Your Destiny

How are you to realize those deep longings and aspirations of your heart to make your life one of real service and rich blessing to many? The answer is, through reverent, systematic, enlightening study of the Bible.

It is your book, given to you by God for your learning, that you may know the answers to life's greatest questions, and have wisdom and power for all your life problems. Study of it is made easy under the guidance of the

MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE
CORRESPONDENCE DEPARTMENT

and you will be delighted by the progress which will reward your faithful effort.

A great university educator, who writes of the Bible merely as literature, has testified recently that knowledge of the Bible without a college course is more valuable than a college course without the Bible. More than 7,000 students of nearly all ages and about 40 different occupations are now taking one or more of the Institute's eight different Courses: Synthetic Bible Study Course; Scofield Bible Correspondence Course; Bible Doctrine; Bible Chapter Summary; Practical Christian Work; Introductory Bible Course; Evangelism; Christian Evidences.

Personal direction is given every student by the Correspondence Department. Time, place and amount of study are under your own control. The Courses are not sold for profit—the prices are below cost—surprisingly low. Every day is precious. Take advantage of this unequaled privilege now. Mail coupon today.

THE MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE
Dept. 4059 153 Institute Place, Chicago, Ill.

Send me your prospectus giving complete information regarding your eight courses in Correspondence Bible Study.

Name .....

Address .....

CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT

THE UNION SIGNAL ..... $1.50 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance (monthly).....50c a year
Single Copies, 5c each; per 100 .....$2.75
Club rate for ten or more Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition subscriptions, 40c a year. No other premium allowed.

THE YOUNG CRUSADER ..... 35c a year
Single Copies, 3c each; per 100 .....$2.00

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES

THE UNION SIGNAL .....$2.00 a year
Law Enforcement and Scientific Temperance Edition (monthly) .....62c a year
THE YOUNG CRUSADER .....47c a year

Address all business communications to
THE UNION SIGNAL Evanston, Illinois

The Circus Man's Story

One evening the latter part of the first prohibition year a group of church people were holding a prohibition dinner conference. Different individuals rose and told what church they represented. Suddenly a long, lean, lank man got slowly up from his chair, and in a drawling tone of voice, said: "I ain't come from no church, I belong to the circus."

Naturally he had at once the attention of the group, and he continued: "I saw out here a prohibition meeting was going on, and so I come in to tell my story.

"Last year when the saloons were running in Chicago, our circus come to town; one of our men got hurt and we took him to the County hospital. The superintendent showed me over the hospital and finally took me into the morgue. There was a shelf about six feet wide running all the way round the walls, and on that shelf were dead bodies wrapped up in sheets with only their heads showing.

"I looked all around and I see many of them were young girls, and so I counted—and there were thirty! I grabbed the arm of the superintendent and said, 'In the name of God, how does this come?' and he said—'Booze.'

"And I thought about my little girl at home, a little 15-year-old curly-headed thing that I love better than my life, and right then and there I swore before Almighty God that I would fight the stuff to the last day of my life.

"Yesterday our circus come back to Chicago, and I went over to the County hospital and I said, 'Let me go into the morgue.' I went in and looked all around on the shelves and I didn't see a single dead girl. And I said to the superintendent: 'Where are all the girls?'—and he said, 'We don't have them now.' I said 'Why?' and he said—'Prohibition.'"

I think this is a good answer to thoughtless and unfounded statements charging prohibition with being harmful to young girls.

—Lena B. Mathes, in the Chicago Post.

Help the Armenian Refuges

BUY HAND MADE LACE

Jerusalem Lace Work made by hand. Latest patterns of yokes from $1.40 to $3.75. Narrow lace, 15 to 35 cents a yard. Wide lace (5⅝ in. width and over) to 75 cents a yard, edging or insertion. Medallions, round or square, 45 to 75 cents a dozen. Wide edging for underclothes $1.90 to $4.55, a set of 3 pieces. Lace will be sent in registered envelopes. Postage free. Apply to Misses Farah, Box 287, Jerusalem, Palestine.

TRIO TEAM COUNTY HONOR ROLL

1. Jackson County, Iowa.
2. Grady County, Georgia.
3. Boone County, Illinois.
4. Barton County, Kansas.
5. Harper County, Kansas.
6. LaPorte County, Indiana.
7. Norfolk County, Mass.
8. Jewell County, Kansas.
9. Washington County, Kansas.
10. Ohio County, West Virginia.
11. Dukes County, Mass.
12. Dubuque County, Iowa.
13. Shawnee County, Kansas.
14. Big Stone County, } Dist.
15. Stevens County, } No. 12
16. Traverse County, } Minn.
17. Winnebago County, Wisconsin.
18. Walworth County, Wisconsin.
19. Strafford County, N. H.
20. Wayne County, Georgia.
21. Dunn County, Wisconsin.
22. Faribault County, Minn. (District No. 27)
23. Winnebago County, Iowa.
24. Hamilton County, Kansas.
25. Ottawa County, Kansas.
26. Woodson County, Kansas.
27. Martin County, } Dist.
28. Watonwan County, } No.
29. Jackson County, } 3
30. Cottonwood County, } Minn.
31. Cheyenne County, Nebraska
32. Kimball County, Nebraska.
33. Norton County, Kansas.
34. Clark County, Kansas.
35. Marion County, Kansas.
36. Highland County. Ohio.
37. Upshur County, W. Va.
38. Payne County, Oklahoma.
39. Stanislaus County, California.
40. Merced County, California.
41. Deuel County, South Dakota.
42. Mills County, Iowa.
43. Union County, Iowa.
44. Dakota County, } Dist.
45. Goodhue County, } No. 26
46. Rice County, } Minn.
47. Olmsted County, } Dist.
48. Dodge County, } No.
49. Steele County, } 2
50. Waseca County, } Minn.
51. Crawford County, Kansas.
52. Cass County, Iowa.
53. Polk County, } Dist.
54. Marshall County, } No.
55. Pennington County, } 14
56. Norman County, } Minn.
57. Edmunds County, South Dakota.
58. Mower County, } Dist No.
59. Freeborn County, } 30, Minn.
60. Bell County, Kentucky.
61. Chippewa County, Wisconsin.
62. Eau Claire County, Wisconsin.
63. Blair County, Penna.
64. Ness County, Kansas.
65. Blue Earth County, Minn. (District No. 21)
66. Dawson County, Nebraska.
67. Ellis County, Kansas.
68. Woodbury County, Iowa.
69. Kingman County, Kansas.
70. Lincoln County, Montana.
71. Bay County, Florida.
72. Glades County, Florida.
73. Highland County, Florida.
74. St. Lucie County, Florida.
75. Yamhill County, Oregon.
76. Creek County, Oklahoma.
77. Grant County, Wisconsin.
78. Tulsa County, Oklahoma.
79. Loban County, Oklahoma.
80. Dallas County, Iowa.
81. Osceola County, Florida.
82. Buchanan County, Missouri.
83. Ramsey County, } Dist. No.
84. Washington County, } 23, Minn.
85. Allen County, Kansas.
86. Fayette County, Kentucky.
87. Cedar County, Iowa.
88. Morgan County, Indiana.
90. Sedgwick County, Kansas.
91. Santa Barbara County, California.

Drink Bill Cut Down

The prohibitionists say that the question where all the money that is used to buy automobiles comes from may be answered by the statement that it is, in large measure, money formerly used to buy liquor.

While, of necessity, the subject is one in regard to which it is impossible to cite definite data, there is, no doubt, a great deal in this contention. The manner in which the country continues to buy automobiles is a surprise to itself, no less than to the manufacturers. Despite the fact that many of the cars bought are not actually needed in the work of the world, the automobile industry had one of the briefest periods of prostration of any, and made the most surprising comeback after the post-war depression.

It has been very prosperous, indeed, the past year, and the manufacturers expect the 1922 record to be largely exceeded in 1923. With due allowance for the increased wealth and increased income of the country, it is perhaps to be doubted whether this could be true if the people were also paying the drink bill they paid in the years before prohibition became effective. If the truth could be definitely known. it would doubtless be shown that much of the money formerly spent for liquor is now being spent for automobiles. and the no less important outlay required to keep them going.—Marquette (Mich.) Journal.

The Midnight Sun

All the way from Norway is brought the health-building, vitamine-bearing cod-liver oil used in rich, nourishing

Scott's Emulsion

If you are rundown in strength, remember it is the mission of Scott's Emulsion to refresh the system and restore strength.

Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J. 22-47

Postmaster-General Work Says:

"It requires the use of about thirty-six muscles to smile and of ninety-seven to frown. Why work overtime?"

Little Robert while out walking with his nurse saw a blacksmith shoeing a horse and upon returning home said: "Mamma, I saw the man who makes horses today."

"Are you sure you did?" asked the mother.

"Of course I am," replied Robert. "He had one nearly finished when I saw him. He was just nailing on its behind feet."—Chicago Daily News.

"I'm going into politics when I grow up," declared Bobby.

"I thought you were goin' to be an engineer and drive an engine," said Billy.

"Aw, I've changed my mind about that. Pop has had a lot of men around the house talking politics lately, and they're always talking about parties and candy-dates, and that's what I like!"—Exchange.

DO NOT CIRCULATE

3 1430 02937409 9

a31430029374099b

UNIV. OF MD. COLLEGE PARK